PUBLISHER'S PREFACE TO THE REVISED EDITION

WHEN THE MUSIC LOVERS' ENCYCLOPEDIA was first compiled it was Rupert Hughes' effort to make it the most nearly complete desk reference work of its kind. In this he succeeded admirably. Time has, however, changed the whole world gallery of musicians and music lovers and we have therefore invited the outstanding authority in the field, Mr. Deems Taylor, to work with Mr. Russell Kerr, of Musical Courier, in the present complete revision of the book which has been the standard desk reference book on Music for thirty-five years.

We wish to make particular acknowledgment to Simon and Schuster for permission to reprint THE MONSTER by Deems Taylor, an excerpt from OF MEN AND MUSIC, and to acknowledge that RECOLLECTIONS OF MY LAZY CHILDHOOD by Maurice Ravel is copyrighted by Opera Mundi, Paris. For permission to reprint a short passage from THE MAGIC MOUNTAIN by Thomas Mann we make acknowledgment to Alfred A. Knopf, Inc., New York, and Martin Secker and Warburg, Ltd., London. For the permission to quote from THE STORY OF MUSIC by W. J. Henderson we make acknowledgment to Longmans, Green & Co.

We have included the synopses of ninety operas. These, because of exigencies of space, represent the barest outline of plot. We therefore encourage the reader to refer to the complete librettos (in English) available from the following music publishers:

Chas. E. Burden for Carmen, Lucia di Lammermoor, Hérodiade, The Tales of Hoffmann; Oliver Ditson for Mefistofele, La Gioconda, Lakmé, Romeo and Juliet, Les Huguenots, The Tales of Hoffmann, Don Giovanni, The Marriage of Figaro, Mignon, The Flying Dutchman, Der Meistersinger, Martha, La Juive, Tristan und Isolde, Tannhäuser, Das Rheingold, Die Walküre, Götterdämmerung, Parsifal; J. Fischer, The King's Henchman, Peter Ibbetson; Ricordi for La Bohème, Tosca, Madame Butterfly, The Girl of the Golden West, Gianni Schicchi, La Rondine, Turandot, L'Amore dei Tre Re, Falstaff, Manon Lescaut; F. Rullman for Fidelio, Norma, La Sonnambula, Ariadne and Bluebeard, Orfeo et Euridice, Faust, Hänsel und Gretel, Königskinder, Cavalleria Rusticana, Manon, L'Africaine, Le Prophète, The Magic Flute, The Barber of Seville, William Tell, The Bartered Bride, Salome, Aida, Otello, Rigoletto, La Traviata, Il Trovatore, Lohengrin, Siegfried, Der Freischütz, Werther, Prince Igor, Emperor Jones, La Juive, Boris Godunoff, Così fan Tutte, L'Heure Espagnole, Sadko, Simon Boccanegra, Schwanda, The Snow Maiden, Le Coq d'Or, Le Rossignol; G. Schirmer for The Jewels of the Madonna, Le Donne Curiose, I Pagliacci, Secret of Suzanne, The Man Without a Country, Cyrano, Natoma, Marouf; Steinway & Sons for Louise, Pelléas et Mélisande, Le Jongleur de Notre Dame, Thaïs, Elektra, The Tales of Hoffmann.

For the use of the Bach Family Tree facing page 482, we make acknowledgment to the Macmillan Company, publishers of Dictionary of Music and Musicians, by Sir George Grove, edited by J. A. Fuller Maitland.

INTRODUCTION

By Deems Taylor

ONE OF MY EARLY recollections is that of poring delightedly over the pages of my father's encyclopaedia. It was entitled, as I recall, Chambers' Library of Universal Knowledge, and had been published, in several volumes, some time in the early seventies. My father had acquired it as a young man. I mention it here because of a phrase from it that still sticks in my memory. It occurred in the course of the article on appendicitis, conveying the information that the only remedy for this malady was "the application of leeches to the abdomen."

Which statement is, I think, a fairly vivid illustration of the reason why it is advisable, from time to time, to issue revised editions of reference works. Not, I hasten to add, that the earlier editions of the Music Lovers' Encyclopedia contained such howlers as the one I have quoted. Music is a vaguer and at the same time more exact science than medicine. Its laws may be more intuitive than rational, but they are less liable to repeal. An elder generation of musicologists seldom needs to blush in the presence of its juniors.

None the less this work has needed revision in order to repair, not its mistakes, but its omissions. Lamentable as these omissions were, they are pardonable, in view of the fact that the events that should have been chronicled had not yet occurred. Musical history has moved fast during the past thirty years. In 1903, the year the first edition of this book appeared, Verdi had been dead just two years. Giacomo Puccini had finished his sixth opera, based on John Luther Long's play, "Madame Butterfly," and was arranging for its production at La Scala in Milan; Richard Strauss had started work on an operatic version of Oscar Wilde's Salome; and Claude Debussy had just written to his publishers that he was busy with a trio of symphonic sketches to be called La Mer. Arnold Schönberg, who was later to horrify the conventional musical world with his harmonic theories, had not yet composed his pleasant but innocuous "Verklärte Nacht"; Jan Sibelius had published his first symphony two years before; and a young Russian named Igor Stravinsky was studying orchestration with Rimsky-Korsakov.

Even in 1912, when the second edition appeared, Strauss's "Der Rosenkavalier" existed only as a mass of sketches; Montemezzi's "L'Amore Dei Tre Re" was promised for the following year, but no one had heard it. Maurice Ravel's "Daphnis et Chloë" had just had its first performance, in Paris, by the Diaghileff Ballet Russe. The young Russian, Stravinsky, was putting the finishing touches to another ballet for Diaghileff, "Le Sacre du Printemps," that was destined to make musical history. Jan Sibelius had just published his fourth symphony. Phonographs were using a mechanical pickup; the sound-film was unthought-of, and radio was a dream.

Hence the need for this new edition of a work that has been proving its usefulness for many years. As in the earlier editions, it is divided into two main sections: a dictionary of musical terms, and a biographical dictionary of musicians. This seems to me to be a sensible and convenient differentiation. One is not likely to be anxious for information concerning "Mendelssohn" and "metronome" at the same instant. The bulk of the revision, naturally, has been done in the biographical section; and in this department the revised edition of the Music Lovers' Encyclopedia may venture to claim to be the most completely up-to-date work in this or any other country. Seven hundred new names have been added, making the chronology and necrology complete up to the death of Maurice Ravel in December, 1937.

As a rule, biographical dictionaries grade musicians according to their purely academic importance. This practice results in the inclusion and over-emphasising of many persons whose work is no actual, important contribution to music as a living art. In this edition we have attempted to include new personalities that are playing an important part in the modern world of music, not only in the field of composition, but also in that of production and performance.

I say "we." As a matter of fact, the merits of the revised biographical dictionary are almost entirely due to the extraordinarily conscientious and expert labours of Mr. Russell Kerr, of the staff of the New York Musical Courier, and whose share in the production of this work is hereby gratefully acknowledged.

The charts and tables of the earlier editions have been retained and revised. They should be useful, particularly the table showing the pronunciation of the various letters of the alphabet as they occur in sixteen modern languages. There may be a similar chart published elsewhere; if there is, I am unfamiliar with it. Likewise retained, verbatim, is the prefatory An Introduction to Music, by this book's first editor, Rupert Hughes. Mr. Hughes, who is chiefly known to the world as a novelist, is a musical amateur in the finest sense of the word, a music-lover who has studied and practiced the art of music all his life, purely for the fun of it. To realise that profound scholarship can be coexistent with an amateur standing, you have only to read his chapter. Naturally the science of music has progressed. The past quarter of a century has seen the development of theories concerning harmony, counterpoint, melody, and rhythm that were unthinkable in 1903. Nevertheless the fundamentals of music remain constant, and almost any literate and intelligent lay music-lover should be able to obtain the foundation of a musical education by reading this Introduction to Music. Written thirty-five years ago, it remains a sound and useful little treatise.

The section entitled Stories of the Operas originally contained synopses of the plots of sixty operas in the standard repertoire. Since the last edition of this book was published, a few have so definitely joined the limbo of forgotten things that there seemed to be no further use in including them. They have, accordingly, been dropped from the present roster. "In revenge," as the French say, we have added the stories of thirty-four additional operas that have been either added or restored to the repertoire during the past twenty years.

One of the most admired features of the Music Lovers' Encyclopedia has been its series of contributed essays by eminent musical authorities, discussing various branches of music and the lives of famous composers. The best of these have been retained, and many more added. Moreover, instead of being scattered alphabetically through the dictionary sections of the book, they have been brought together in two special sections of their own, to the great enhancement of their readability and accessibility.

"The marriage of completeness with conciseness," writes Rupert Hughes in his preface to the first edition of this book, "is a hard knot to tie." That statement has lost none of its truth. It is manifestly hopeless, in a single volume, to cover every phase of music in the detail that is offered by the great musical encyclopaedias and the countless biographies of individual composers that have appeared within the past decade. On the other hand, we offer discussions of more subjects, biographies of more musicians, than any other single volume that I know. Our definitions and biographical sketches may be brief, but they present the main facts; and they are, so far as is humanly possible to make them so, accurate. It is our hope that this new edition of the Music Lovers' Encyclopedia may continue to be what it has always been, a storehouse of information to the layman, and a useful reminder to the expert.

MUSIC LOVERS' ENCYCLOPEDIA

AN INTRODUCTION TO MUSIC FOR THE UNINITIATED

A Free Translation of its Technicalities into Untechnical Language (especially for those who do not Read Music and do not Care to Study it).

By Rupert Hughes

THERE is almost as much humbug about the mysteries of music as there was about the oracles of Delphi. And the vast majority of music-lovers have as meek and uninquiring a dread of the inner art and science of composition as the old pagans had of priestcraft.

There is no deeper mystery about the tools and the trade of music than about those of any other carpentry and joinery. It is far easier for some people to write a melody than to drive a nail straight. But anybody who will earnestly try, can learn to do the one as easily as the other. And there are thousands of professional composers who ought to be earning honest livings driving nails home instead of starving to death dishonestly driving audiences home.

The one mystery of music is the one mystery of all art and all other human intercourse—personality. Everybody can write a novel or a play. Almost everybody does. So everyone can write a sonata or a string-quartet. But the number of those who possess the spark (divine, prenatal, accidental or howsoever secured)—the spark of magnetism, felicity, and eloquence, that number is small and is no more superabundant than on the day when little Hermes found the old tortoise-shell and made the first harp out of it.

The reason the Editor is desirous of taking the veil from certain of the arcana of music is not that he wishes to increase the number of composers—Heaven forbid! The one object is to increase the number of those who will listen to music intelligently and know just what they are hearing, and pretty well why they like this and dislike that. For like and dislike by pure instinct are relics of mere animalism.

The open highway to the enjoyment of so-called classic music is the hearing of it in large quantities. There is a short cut for those who lack the time or the inclination for this long training—and it is by way of learning the elements of musical form. For it is the crystallisation of human passion into some graceful and powerful form that gives music long life. Many wretched pedants think that the number of forms is limited; but this is a fallacy that is disproved every day.

Some form, however, is as necessary in music as in sculpture. And though the number and variety of forms available are as infinite and illimitable in music as in sculpture, still some definite shape must be in the artist's mind and must be discoverable by an unprejudiced, attentive, and educated audience.

If you do not already know the skeleton that underlies the shapely contours and full, fair flesh of melody and harmony, you can find some enlightenment in the anatomical lecture that follows, provided you will use your own scalpel, and carry out the suggestions made. It is not easy to avoid asking the reader to master the language and symbols of music, but much that is important can be learned from the following, without this long special study, if an occasional general truth will be allowed to stand without stating its exceptions, and if permission be granted to arrive at certain facts in a homely and button-hole manner.

I

FIRST, turn to a piano or organ—either of these is more convenient for illustration than a bow or wind-instrument. The highly-organized instrument before you is the result of centuries of blind groping in the dark, of unnumbered great failures for every little triumph. This is true not only of the mechanism of strings, hammers, keys, shape, size and materials of wood and metal, but of the very music the instrument is intended to send out upon the air.

If you will simply glide your finger-nail along the white keys you will produce a scale which in itself is the result not only of ages of experiment but of the bitterest conflict between scholarly musicians,—a conflict still raging. But this cannot be discussed here. Let us for the present take the instrument as we find it.

On page 879 of this book will be found a chart of the middle portion of the key-board, with the letter-names that have been, for convenience' sake, given to the tones marked on it. They are easily recognisable by the alternation of the black keys in groups of twos and threes. For convenience it might be well to transfer the letter-names to the white keys with ink, which will be easily washed off with a wet cloth.

The first thing noteworthy about the diagram is that this series of letter-names is made of only seven letters and begins over again at every eighth tone. This is because the eighth tone (or octave) is produced by a string or a column of air making just twice as many vibrations as the original tone; the 15th tone by 4 times as many, etc., and because each group of seven steps plus the octave or 8th step, is built on a uniform model of ratios. The series from one letter-name to its reappearance, as from c to c', is subdivided into 12 half-steps or semitones.

This extended series of tones thus divided into octaves is the material from which all European and American music is made. Save for a few changes and choices made for convenience, this scale is based on human nature and physical law, and is not likely to be materially altered in our generation. Other fundamental facts will be discovered on studying this array of whole-steps (white keys—except e to f and b to c) and half-steps (from a black key to the next white—also from b to c and e to f).

You will observe that the black keys carry the same names as the white keys they interpose between, except that the letter-name carries the symbol # ("sharp") for the key next below or the symbol b ("flat") for the key next above. The same black key represents two white keys. If you are advancing from f to g, for instance, the black key between is a half-step above f; it is said to "sharpen" the note, by a half-step (or a "chromatic" degree); if, however, you are moving down the scale from g to f the black key is said to "flatten" the note g by a half-step (or a "chromatic" degree). The same black key serves conveniently then both as ff (f "sharp") and gb (g "flat") in our system of music. Tones not thus "chromatically altered" by a sharp or flat are said to be "natural." If you have struck gb or ff and wish to reassert the white key, the tone is now called gn (g "natural") or f natural.

The signs, #'s, b's and n's are called "sharps, flats and naturals," or in general "chromatics."

Put your finger at random on any of the white keys and move downwards on the white keys in strict succession. You will find (if you have a normal ear) that, whatever the tone you sounded first, you do not feel a willingness to stop till you reach a certain tone or one of its octaves. That tone will invariably be one of the notes lettered C.

If now you begin at random on any note and move upward keeping to the white keys except in the case of f, for which you substitute f♯, you will find that the letter c no longer gives a sense of repose, but that you unconsciously desire and demand one of the letters marked g.

If you run a scale on all the white keys except b, and substitute for this note the b♭, you will find no resting-place except upon one of the letters marked f.

It is a physical fact, then, that a scale with neither sharps nor flats finds its end on the note c; a scale with one sharp (which is always f) is based on the note g; a scale with one flat (b flat) is based on the note f. Hence one speaks of the scale of C, or of G, or of F.

If you try the substitution of some other single sharp or flat for the f sharp or b flat, you will get no satisfactory point of repose at all. But by keeping b flat and adding e flat you will find b flat a comfortable pausing-place; by adding a flat to the b♭ and e♭, you will find a pleasant scale ending on e♭. By adding flats in the following order (and only in the following order), b, e, a, d, g, c, you will construct symmetrical scales reposing always on the next to the last flat added.

By substituting sharps for the natural tones of the original scale of C, you build scales satisfactorily only by heaping up sharps in the following order, f, c, g, d, a, e, which scales are based respectively on the notes g, d, a, e, b, f, the point of repose being in each case a half-tone above the last sharp added.

The scales take their names from the note of repose. A scale together with all the chords that can be built upon its notes is called a key. The word "key" is often loosely used (and has been used in this essay thus far) to indicate a finger-lever which causes a string to sound; this is better called a "digital." From now on the word "key" will be used only to designate a group of harmonies and a scale belonging to some series of progressions ending on a certain note, as the "key of C," the "key of G" (which contains f sharp), the "key of D" (which contains f sharp and c sharp), the "key of E flat" (which contains b flat, e flat and a flat), and the others.

Since practically every musical composition has some principal key to which it harks back as its home, however far or often it may wander away, so you will find at the beginning of every new line of a composition a list of the sharps or flats in that key which predominates, and these sharps or flats affect every tone not otherwise marked throughout the composition. This group is called the key-signature.

A convenient trick of deciding the key from the number of sharps or flats is as follows: where there are flats the key is next to the last flat; where there are sharps the key is always the next letter-name above the last sharp. This is true of every key except three which are easily remembered, F with one flat, G with one sharp, C with neither flats nor sharps.

Before studying chords, it will be necessary to have another look at the diagram of the key-board. We have spoken of half-steps and whole steps. But it is possible also (and often desirable) to desert the monotonous progression of whole and half-steps and skip several steps, as one does in singing a tune. The space covered by a skip is called an interval. As geography has its imaginary equator, and as geometry has its imaginary lines without breadth and its planes without depth, so music has one imaginary interval which is no interval at all, but identity. The distance from a note to the very same note is called a prime. (This is sometimes useful when speaking, for instance, of $a\flat$ and $a\sharp$, which are a prime apart, and are called primes of each other.) The interval from one white digital to the next white digital is called a second, the skip to the next but one is called a third (the original note being always numbered one), the skip to the third white digital is called a fourth, and so on; the interval of an eighth being called an octave. Also the tones separated by an interval may be called by the names of the interval as c and g, or d and a are called fifths; f and d, or g and e are called sixths, etc.

It will greatly clear the belt of fog we are now going through if you will pick out the examples on the key-board.

The skip from a white to a black digital results in an interval which is either greater or less than the nearest interval on the white digitals alone. The normal or greater of two similarly named intervals as c to e is called a major third, while c to $e\flat$ is called a lesser or minor third. C to $e\sharp$ is greater even than the major and is called an augmented third, while c to $e\flat\flat$ ("double flat") is a diminished third.

Owing to the elasticity of the letter-names of the notes, an interval may be expressed or spelled in different ways, thus c to $e\flat$ is called a minor third, but the very same tones may be called c to $d\sharp$, an augmented second, $c-\flat\flat$ a diminished fourth, $b\sharp-d\sharp$ a major third, etc. The name of the interval depends upon the key we happen to have most in mind at the time.

It is a curious fact that all major scales are made up of exactly the same intervals in the same order. Try over any of the scales you wish, and you will find that you move upward by the following degrees, in the following order: (1) a whole step, (2) a whole step, (3) a half-step, (4) a whole step, (5) a whole step, (6) a whole step, (7) a half-step; this last bringing you to the octave of the note you started from.

As earnestly as the soul demands that in the last act of a play we shall see the villain sent to prison and the hero and heroine locked in each other's arms, so our nature demands this arrangement of tones, and when it says half-step or whole step we must move so, or leave the key we started in and take up another.

This explains why there is no black digital between the notes, b-c, and e-f: the scale of C, which has no sharps or flats, must still have its two half-steps at these points; there is accordingly no sharp or flat to be put there.

II

WE HAVE now had a bird's-eye view of the natural arrangement of tones, one at a time. But we grow tired of one note at a time. Four men singing along a midnight street or a picnic group riding home in a moonstruck mood fall to singing favourite melodies and naturally avoid singing in unison. They spontaneously sing in chords. These chords are formed individually and succeed one another according to certain fundamental demands of the ear just as noticeably as the tones of the scale followed a rigid pattern.

First, let us combine various tones. Take the middle c' and strike this tone with the right thumb while another finger strikes another tone above. c' and c'# do not sound well together, nor yet c' and d'; c' and d'# (or e'b) is not unpleasant, but rather sombre (it is indeed a minor harmony, the interval c'-e'b being a minor third); c' and e' make a pure, sweet concord, however. Let us keep c' and e' and see if we can add another tone, c' + e' + f' is very bad; c' + e' + f'# is also rough; c' + e' + g' is very comfortable. We have now a three-tone chord, which we may call a triad; it happens to be based on the 1st, 3d and 5th degrees of the scale.

Let us see if we can build triads on other tones of the C scale. We find by trying all the combinations on the note d', that while the triad $d'-f'-a'$ is pleasant but sombre (it is minor), the only clear harmony is $d'-f'\sharp-a'$; but as $f\sharp$ does not belong to the scale of C, we cannot include it. On the note e' we find $e'-g'-b'$, minor, and $e'-g'\sharp-b'$ pleasant; this again is outlawed by the $g\sharp$. On f' , however, we can form a triad $f'-a'-c'$, which has no foreign chromatics and is yet satisfying. On g' we find another triad, $g'-b'-d''$, which is native to the C scale and which impels us strongly to substitute the e'' above for the d'' , and c'' for the b' ; when we have done this we find we have the chord $c'-e'-g'$ again, only now arranged differently, as $g'-c''-e''$.

If we rearrange the chord on g' differently, as $b'-d''-g''$, we shall be impelled to move on to $c''-e''-g''$, which is again our old friend the original triad on c' in its original form.

This hankering after the original triad on the key-note whenever we form a triad on the fifth tone of the scale, is one of the most noteworthy and inescapable factors of the chord-world.

But let us proceed with our triads; on a' we find $a'-c''-e''$ to be minor; the major chord $b'-d\sharp''-f\sharp''$ is doubly ruled out; while $b'-d''-f''$ is doubly minor, the fifth ($b'-f''$) being imperfect and the third ($b'-d''$) being minor.

It may be well to state here a handy way of telling the majority or minority of intervals; imagine the lower note to be the key-note; if the upper note would occur in a major scale on that key-note its interval is major or diatonic. Thus on b : the key of B has 5 sharps, f , c , g , d , and a ; both d and f are sharp, therefore $b-d\sharp-f\sharp$ has neither interval major.

Looking back over the chords of the scale of C, we find the only major triads to be those on c' , f' and g' . Since that on g' is so urgent in demanding the main triad on C, it is called the dominant triad, and the tone g is called the dominant of the scale of C. f' being beneath it is called subdominant, and its chord the subdominant chord; the note c being the foundation note of the whole scale and key is called the tonic (tonus being an old name for scale).

The principal chord-material of any scale is, then, made up of the triads on the tonic (or 1st), the dominant (or 5th) and the subdominant (or 4th).

Try another Key, F for instance, which has $b\flat$. After testing all the combinations on the key-note or tonic f' we find only $f'-a''-c''$; on g' the triad, to be in the key, must be $g'-b'\flat-d''$ (since $b\flat$ is a characteristic of the key of F), and this is a minor chord; $a'-c''-e''$ is also minor, but $b'\flat-d''-f''$ is a major triad; it is indeed a chord on the subdominant. We should expect also to find a major triad on the dominant (which, in the key of F, is the tone c), and so we find c''-e''-g'', which we recognise as the tonic chord of the scale of C. But strange to say it offers no repose in its new environment with the other chords of the key of F; on the contrary, we have an irresistible desire to move on from it to c''-f''-a'' (the same as the key-chord or tonic chord, f'-a'-c'', where we feel at home). The two remaining tones of the scale of F offer no satisfactory chords.

Let us try a key with one sharp in it, that is to say, the key of G. Beginning on g' we find after groping about that the only chord endurable is g'-b'-d''. Building triads on all the other tones, a, b, c, d, e and f#, we find all of them outlawed as unpleasant or at least minor, except two, which again are on the subdominant and the dominant tones of the key of G, and are c''-e''-g'', and d''-f''#-a''.

Taking the sum-total of the chords of these three keys, c, f, and g, we have the following chords: (C) c-e-g, f-a-c, g-b-d; (F) f-a-c, bb-d-f, c-e-g; (G) g-b-d, c-e-g, d-f#a. You will see that each of the two subordinate keys has two of the chords of the key of C. This will be found the case with any group of three keys similarly differing only by one sharp or flat, that is to say, having their tonics a fifth above or below. On this account the keys based on the dominant and subdominant tones of the scale of any given key are said to be closely related in the first degree of relationship.

Add another flat and another sharp, that is, take the key of Bb and the key of D, and we find the following principal chords: (Bb) bb-d-f, eb-g-bb and f-a-c; (D) d-f#a, g-b-d, a-c#-e. Each of these keys has only one of the chords belonging to the key of C. These keys are then related, but only in the second degree.

If we add three flats or three sharps and study the keys of Eb and A we find the chords (Eb) eb-g-bb, ab-c-eb, bb-d-f; (A) a-c#-e, d-f#a, e-g#-bb. None of these chords occur in C, and these keys are said to be remote from it. On the other hand comparing Eb with the key which had only 2 flats (Bb), we find that Eb has two chords belonging to Bb. We also find that A has two of the chords belonging to the key with one sharp less, viz., D. We may generalise, then, by saying that the most closely related keys are those that differ by one flat or one sharp; the next nearest relations are those differing by two flats or sharps.

III

WHILE we are on the subject of heredity take another point of view of this family-tree:

The tone f' , which is four steps above c' , is called its subdominant; on looking below the note c , we find another f , but where it was four tones above, it is five tones below. The key of F has added one flat to the key of C . Counting five more whole steps down (always counting the note you began on as first) we find the note $B\flat$. The scale on that tone has yet another flat, two more than C . The tone a full fifth below ($E\flat$) has three flats. So we find that moving downward by fifths we add one flat every step. $A\flat$ has 4, $D\flat$ has 5, and $G\flat$ has 6 flats.

Now counting upwards from our starting point on c' , we find that the key based on the fifth (g') adds one sharp; a fifth above G is D , a key with two sharps; a fifth above is A with three sharps, a fifth further is E with four sharps, and, as we continue, B with five sharps and $F\sharp$ with six sharps.

But the key of $F\sharp$ on our piano or organ passes over the very same digitals as the key of $G\flat$, is identical with it in fact. We have therefore been personally conducted through the grand tour of keys by way of the circle of fifths, twelve in all.

We see therefore that all keys are related, and by careful procedure in chords a player can move through them all in succession with the greatest smoothness. The more modern the composition the more widely does it rove from key to key until in some works, Wagner's for instance, it is sometimes hard to say just what key we are driving at. Instead of keeping to the iron rails of one key as earlier music aimed to do, and only leaving the main line at certain definite set switches, the art has recently left the hard and fast railroad and taken to the pathless waters where, to use Wagner's words, it "swims in a sea of tone."

Some very formal minds grow speedily sea-sick and prefer the rigid grooves of the older school. Each one to his tastes. But the broadest mind will find pleasure both in land-travel and sea-change, insisting only that the composer shall have a plan and know what he is about, and not send his locomotives slashing and sinking in the buxom waves, nor drag his yacht gratingly along the hard ground. Live and let live is the best art motto.

One more point is worth noting in this increasingly important subject of key-relationships. Reverting for a moment to the key of C with its first cousins f and g, we find if we take the tonic triads of the three keys and arrange them as follows:

These tones include the complete scale of C. So it will be found of every key-scale that it contains within itself the tonic triads of itself, of its subdominant and its dominant keys.

This scale and key principle is further justified by a study of the mathematics and physics of music. And the Relationship of Keys is given a still greater importance in the more recent writers on the theory of music, especially in Riemann's beautiful theory of clang-keys (see this word in the Dictionary of Definitions).

IV

NOW that we have laboriously picked out our triads, they will be found more elastic than they look. Take the triad c'-e'-g', the tonic triad of the key of C, which is now said to be in the root or first position, c' being the root or generator of the triad. We can place the c' uppermost and have e'-g'-c'', which is in effect the same chord, though a chord is said to be inverted when any note except its root is in the bass. The second inversion places the fifth in the bass, as g'-c''-e'' or g-c'-e'-g' or g-e'-g'-c''. These 3 positions are all we have for a 3-tone chord or triad. They can be sounded anywhere on the key-board, however.

Still another possibility is to repeat some of these letter-names, as to sound the triad c'-e'-g' with the right hand and touch the tone c an octave below with the left hand; or the tones c-g with the left hand and e'-g'-c'' with the right. This process called doubling may be carried on indefinitely. In a piano-duet, sometimes twenty notes or more are struck, all of them repetitions of the inner kernel or triad of three notes.

Strike the left-hand note c first, then the right-hand triad c'-e'-g' twice; then strike the note f with the left hand and the subdominant triad c'-f'-a' twice, now c and the tonic triad again; then strike g with the left hand and the dominant triad b-d'-g' twice; and return finally to C and the tonic triad. This little plot in three instalments constitutes the whole harmonic accompaniment of many a modern popular song and many an old work of classic reputation.

You can usually tell the key of a song by humming it and picking out on the piano or organ its very last note; nine times in ten this will be the tonic or homenote of the composition. Suppose this to be B \flat . How shall one find chords to accompany it? Build a major triad on b' \flat ; it will be b' \flat -d'-f'; build a triad on the dominant or fifth (f), f'-a'-c''; build another on the subdominant or fourth (e \flat), e' \flat -g'-b' \flat . Play these three notes (B \flat , f, e \flat) with the left hand, and use triads with the right, rearranging the three notes in any of the inversions as they run most smoothly into one another. Your ear will help you find the right order of the chords. This will serve as a recipe for easy accompaniments.

More elaborate songs rove through so many keys with so little warning that only trained ears and hands can pick out their accompaniment; but it will clear up a deal of the construction of music if you will take some simple tune and study out its accompaniment on these lines, however painful the operation may be to yourself and your neighbors. (Familiar songs requiring only these three chords are "The Star Spangled Banner," "God Save the King," "Home Sweet Home," "Suwanee River," "Dixie," etc., and most of the hymn-tunes.)

BUT the simple triads grow monotonous, and it is desirable, if possible, to enrich them. Take the all important dominant triad of the key of C (namely, g'-b'-d'') and see if we can lay another third on top of it like a musical brick. The next major third above d'' is f'' \sharp . But f'' \sharp does not belong to the key of C. The minor third f'' \natural does beautifully, however, and we have a warm rich chord which more than ever goads us on to the tonic triad; the g' holding over, the b' and the d'' both merging into c'', and the f'' subsiding blissfully into e''.

A chord of 4 tones is called a chord of the seventh or seventh chord, because the interval between the first and last tones is a seventh (g'-f''). This chord, g'-b'-d''-f'', is a dominant 7th, then. If we wish, we can add another third, a'', and make a chord g-b-d-f-a, called a ninth chord. The dominant 7th, however, is far the more useful. In fact it is the most energetic chord in all music, and whatever key you may be in, if you stray into the dominant seventh of a foreign key, it drags you along eagerly and hales you into that foreign key to which it belongs and for which it is a most eager usher.

This seventh chord, pleasant as it is, is only a go-between, it offers no point of repose, but requires an almost immediate dissolution into another chord. The musical term for one of these restless chords is dissonance; the musical term for the necessity and process of merging it into another is called resolution. The word dissonant does not necessarily mean "ugly" or "harsh" in music, but merely implies lack of stability.

This dominant 7th chord has magical powers for transition. Take the tonic triad of the key of C major in the second inversion, that is, touch g with the left hand and e'-g'-c'' with the right. Now lift the finger off the upper g' and place it on b'b. Instantly you find it undesirable to go back to the c'-e'-g' triad and you are impelled to lower that b'b to a', bring the e' up to f', keep the c'' where it is and lower the g in the left hand to f. Now you feel at rest; if you will pause and look, you will find that the b'b, which is characteristic of the key of F, has led you into the triad f'-a'-c'', which is the tonic triad of the key of F. If you revert to the state of affairs existing when that foreigner b'b entered the peaceful key of C, you will find that the chord formed by its entrance could be arranged to read c'-e'-g'-b'b. This is a 7th chord on the tone c. But while the tone c' is tonic of the key of C, it is the fifth or dominant of the key of F. Yet, though this 7th chord was built on the tonic of C, as it happened to be the dominant of F, it forced the key over into the tonality of F. This is the case with every dominant 7th chord.

It is possible by a slight diversion to throw the resolution of the chord into other keys, but this always comes as a surprise to the hearer. It may be justified and it may be pleasurable, but it is a surprise, and in a sense abnormal.

Going back to the first formation of the 7th chord, it will be found that the 7th chord, on other tones than the dominant, are rather murky or even distressing. These are called secondary 7ths and must be handled in gingerly manner.

VI

NOW if we take our dominant 7th of the key of C, that is, $g'-b'-d''-f''$, and raise the g' a half-step so that the chord reads $g'\sharp-b'-d''-f''$, it will most naturally resolve itself into this chord, $a'-c''-e''$, a sombre chord which is minor because its third from $a-c$ is minor (the major third being $a-c\sharp$, as $c\sharp$ would be characteristic of the key of A). This chord, $a'-c''-e''$, has the look of a chord in the key of C, but it seems to offer a sense of dejected repose and makes no demand for progress to the tonic chord, $c'-e'-g'$. We arrived at this chord by way of a curious chord with $f\sharp$ but $g\sharp$. The chord $g'-b'-d''-f''$ had been a minor 7th (the interval from g' to f'' being less than the major interval, which would be g' to $f'\sharp$), but this chord, $g'\sharp-b'-d''-f''$, is even narrower than minor. It is hence called a diminished 7th chord.

We have been led to believe that the first sharp of a major key was f , and that c followed, then g . This is true of a major key, but here we are under a different flag. You can construct a scale out of these two chords, the diminished 7th and its resolution, and $g\sharp-b-d-f$; $a-c-e$ gives us $a-b-c-d-e-f-g\sharp-a$ as an octave scale. This scale, which is closely related to the C major scale, is founded on a' , which is a minor third below c'' . So it will be found that every major key has one of these disappointed relative keys a minor third below and differing from it, for harmonic purposes, only in the fact that the 7th tone of this minor scale is raised a half-step above the tone of the same name in the major scale (in the scale of A minor, the 7th tone, $g\sharp$, is the only tone foreign to the scale of C major, and it is a half-tone higher than the tone g ; the key of C minor corresponds exactly with the major key a minor third above, that is $E\flat$, except that where b is flattened in the key of $E\flat$ major, it is made natural in the scale of C minor). This is the case with every major and minor key; the related minor key is a minor third below and raises the 7th tone of its major scale a half-step (as g to $g\sharp$; $e\flat$ to $e\natural$). Thus far we have concerned ourselves only with major scales, keys and intervals. But life would be very monotonous if it were all sunshine, blue sky and laughter. Music could not represent or stimulate human emotion, as it does, without a large armoury of sombre colours, bitter dissonances and, in place of a sense of cheerful repose, a feeling of resigned despair. These purposes are subserved by the minor key.

In looking at scales and intervals we find that certain of the intervals were to be distinguished as "greater" and "lesser." The Latin words meaning greater and lesser are major and minor. (And as the mediæval Latinity of the Catholic Church was the fountain-head of modern music, many of its terms persist.) On the major scale there were indeed four minor triads to only three major. There is abundance of minor material then in music. Its arrangement into scales and keys cannot be so easily explained as that of the major mode; indeed upon this subject scientists are mutually discordant and commonly as "troubled" (betrübt) as the great musical scientist Helmholtz found the minor scale itself.

Where doctors disagree, the layman would do best to pass by on the other side. Let us take the minor keys as we find them and thank Heaven for their existence as mirrors to the chillier, grayer moods of the mind. Music has indeed laid up something for a rainy day.

To go any further into the construction of chords would be to write a text-book on Harmony.

Those who wish to pursue the subject of chord construction and progression will find further information in such articles as Chord, Harmony, Thorough-bass, Parallel, Covered, Anticipation, Suspension, Interval, Altered, etc., in the Dictionary of Definitions.

GIVEN the scales for melody and the chords for harmony, with an unlimited variety of progressions, the subject of rhythm enters. There was a time when the music of the scholars was all in notes of equal length; such music was well called plain-song (planus meaning literally "smooth"). But popular instinct and popular music still had drum-rhythms and dances and finally forced the music of the scholars to return to humanity; and so-called mensurable (i.e., measurable) music began.

The definition of rhythm is so native and instinctive in everyone that it would be impertinence to foist it on the reader. It is to be noted, however, that in music it depends on the relative accent and duration of notes following a pattern more or less closely. The rhythm of a composition can be expressed by thumping it on a table with your fingers, for rhythm is independent of height or lowness of the tone and the volume of sound. Strum out in this way such tunes as "Comin' Thro' the Rye," "Yankee Doodle," "We Won't Go Home Until Morning," or the like, or airs of more dignity. If you mark the accents forcefully, the regularity of the rhythmical pattern becomes evident, and almost as monotonous as certain styles of wall-paper. If you tap with the left hand a regular beat like a clock's, only faster, the rhythm of the air will assume new vividness.

Take "Comin' Thro' the Rye" for example, the rhythm could be expressed by underlining with the right hand a series of numbers to be ticked off by the left hand:

If a bod-y meet a bod - y com - in' thro' the rye————
1-2, 3, 4-5, 6, 7-8, 9, 10-11, 12, 13-14, 15, 16-17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24,

If a bod-y kiss a bod-y need a bod-y cry————
25-26, 27, 28-29, 30, 31-32, 33, 34-35, 36, 37-38, 39, 40-41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48

This covers two lines of the song, the rest of which follows the same model. We find 48 beats in the two lines of verse, 24 to each line. The rhythm is almost exactly stencilled all the way through; it begins over again, after every sixth count, each 7th count having a marked accent, the 4th of each group of 6 having a lighter accent. If, since the rhythm is the same, we simply repeat the first 6 numerals and cut off with a line every group of 6, we shall have the song pictured in as simple a pattern as that of the maid's own print gown.

 / 1-2, 3, 4, 5, 6 / 1-2, 3, 4-5, 6 / 1-2, 3, 4-5, 6 / 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6 /

Call each of these groups a measure, the slanted line a bar, take a certain time or note-value as the unit in place of these numbers and you will have the musical terminology. As the notes are short the quick eighth note (one-eighth of a whole note) may be taken as the unit; there are 6 of these in each measure, and the time of the song is said to be six-eighths or 6-8 time. This is a combination of triple and duple rhythm, for, while each measure contains 6 counts, these counts are divided into two groups of three each and there are two accents to each measure, consequently 6-8 time is sometimes used for marches.

But the typical march time for marches (as well as for many other moods, as "Auld lang syne," etc.) is, as you will find, divisible into measures of 4 counts each, with two accents to each measure. As the whole note is taken as the whole extent of each measure, the presence of four beats to the measure gives each beat a fourth or quarter-note value. It is therefore called 4-4 time, or simply common-time. Very quick marches are sometimes written in 2-4 time with one beat to the measure. Waltzes are written with 3 beats and only one accent to the measure. This time is called 3-4 time. Other rhythms are 3-2, a slow time (with 3 half-notes and 3 accents to the measure); 3-8 time (a light quick time with 3 eighth notes and one accent to the measure); 6-4 time (a slower form of 6-8 measure, differing from 3-2 only in having two accents to the measure); 9-8 (with 9 eighth notes and 3 accents), &c. (v. article on Time).

VIII

NO WAY of submitting music to the all-devouring decimal system has yet been brought into play. The measure-notes are all multiples of 2 and 4: whole notes, half, quarter, 8th, 16th, 32d, and 64th notes.

The larger divisions of music also fail to follow the decimal system. In the analysis of "Comin' Thro' the Rye" the measures themselves can be collected into groups of 2, 4 and 8. There is a slight pause after every other measure, a perceptible pause at the end of the 4th measure, a longer pause at the end of the 8th. The next group of 8 measures is likewise divisible into groups of 2 and 4.

This quality of divisibility into 4 and 8 measures is a fundamental law of musical structure. Because it is such a law many composers strive to hide its nakedness or re-shape it to special purposes, but these are exceptions which by their very sense of novelty and oddity prove and emphasise the general rule.

A group of eight measures is called a period; this period contains two phrases of four measures each; each phrase contains two sections, of 2 measures; and each section is generally divisible into its melodic or rhythmic motive or subject. The song "Comin' Thro' the Rye" is especially clean-cut in its divisions. They correspond in spirit to the comma, semicolon, colon and period of ordinary prose, but occur with far more regularity. Frequently the periods themselves can be collected into larger groups or compound periods corresponding to paragraphs. The first accent of a measure has a stronger accent than the second or third. So the first accent of the first measure of a period should receive a greater stress than the first accent of the first measure of a phrase, and so on. In the proper distribution of accents lies the larger part of musical punctuation, or, as it is called, phrasing.

IX

IN THE first group of 8 measures of "Comin' Thro' the Rye" there is a general upward tendency to the melody. The second period begins on a high note (at the words "Ilka body") and has a downward tendency. This desire for a contrast is at the root of all musical form. This song is condensed even beyond the usual popular form, partly because of the stanza-form of its poetry. "The Last Rose of Summer" fulfils the typical song-form which contains a theme of one or more periods, followed by a contrasting or subsidiary theme of one or more periods, the song concluding with a repetition of the first or principal theme. Practically the same idea governs the typical dance-form though the themes are likely to be more elaborate and the second theme is still stupidly called a trio (from the fact that it was actually in old times given to a trio of instruments in order to contrast its simple song-like manner with the more ornate and broken progress of the principal theme).

It would naturally occur to composers seeking variety, to put this subsidiary theme into a different key, to emphasise the contrast. The key naturally chosen would be a closely related key. This is usually the case, and the contrast of keys is a most important part of classic forms.

The elaboration or variation of the themes in a way to show off the composer's scholarship and cleverness, was also as inevitable as human pride in skill.

The word variations has, in the general mind, a thought of "The Old Oaken Bucket" and "Nearer, My God, to Thee" "with variations." "Variations" is an incorrect word here; the proper term for these cheap and gaudy works being embellishments, for the air is simply made a trellis for all manner of running vines and frippery.

The true variation of a theme is its genuine manipulation. Take the first 2 measures of "Comin' Thro' the Rye" as a theme; i.e., the notes to the words "Gin a body meet a body," sit down again before the piano and play this theme, picking out the notes as indicated from their letter-names as shown in the Chart.

Suppose the notes to be placed—

/c' c' c' e'/ d' c' d' e'/g g a g/c'.

If with the right hand you play the theme as indicated, and shortly after follow in with the left hand (as you would follow the leading voice in singing such a round as "Three Blind Mice"), you will use the frequent device called for evident reasons imitation, as here:

Right hand / c' c' c' e' / d' c' d' e' / g g a g / c' - - - / &c.

This is imitation at the octave and at two measures' distance; imitation may be at a different interval and distance, at the fifth, for instance:

Imitation need not be so strict as this; it may be free, the intervals being slightly changed to enrich the harmony, for it is not every air that can be treated smoothly and strictly at the same time. Here, for instance, the a in the left hand might be reduced to a g. Imitation in the orchestra has vast scope. The trombones may proclaim a splendid phrase which the oboes will cackle over ludicrously, the flutes whistle gaily, the clarinets echo gurgingly, the 'cellos bemoan nasally, and the violins murmur deliciously.

But in piano or organ composition, imitation is more restricted. Sometimes a composer in mathematical mood will set an elaborate air jogging, and when it has gone a few spaces along, will start after it its very double. The two will race like twin snakes.

When the imitation is exact, whole step by whole step, skip by skip, whole note by whole note, and half-note by half-note, the composition is said to be a canon. The canon may set more than two snakes wriggling swiftly along at always the same distance from head to head. Fugue is only a special form of composition in which the canon plays a large part, the word "fuga" meaning "flight."

THE devices for varying a theme are infinite. It can be played in longer notes while another theme chosen from another part of the song ripples about it; or the duration of the notes can be shortened. The new treatment of a theme by lengthening its notes is called augmentation; the shortening of the notes is diminution.

The upper of two themes can be made the lower at different intervals than the octave; this is called inversion. Another form of inversion is the turning of a theme upside down, so that whenever it went up before, it goes down now, and vice versa; this is imitation by contrary motion.

A theme can be picked to pieces and different fragments of it tossed to and fro with the skill of a juggler (and about as much importance). The first 4 notes of "Comin' Thro' the Rye" could be taken as a figure and repeated. Thus:

$c' c' c' e', e' e' e' g'\sharp, g'\sharp g'\sharp g'\sharp b',$ etc.

This would be called a sequence. The themes could be played in octaves, or in varied and key-changing chords as:

If
 $\underbrace{e\flat-g-c^1}, \underbrace{f-a\flat-c^1}, \underbrace{g-b\flat-c^1}, \underbrace{g-b\flat-e^1}$

It could be ornamented as:

If

In fact, there is no hinting here the dissection and reconstruction of which a theme is capable. As opposed to a melodious or lyric treatment, this method is called thematic. Common names for this sort of treatment are "development, elaboration, variation, working-out, free fantasy," &c., &c., the Germans calling it Durchführung, "going through."

XI

THE highest and noblest form of strictly academic and formal composition is the sonata, for the symphony is only a sonata for orchestra. We have now arrived hastily at a point where a rough explanation of this form is possible.

This is the way you should set about writing a sonata, or rather, one of the ways, for the sonata is elastic and has some room for individual tastes.

First you select a melody, one with an elocutionary and sententious manner, and containing many good texts to develop. You write it out plainly and emphatically in the key that suits it best. As a sidelight and a foil you select some more lyrical and song-like air, and for contrast you put it in another key, naturally one of the related keys, most naturally the nearest related key, or the dominant. Or you might put the second melody in the relative minor. Having stated your two subjects, you may choose to repeat them word for word, or note for note, so that there shall be no mistaking them; you may then add a concluding reflection more or less elaborate. This is the first section of the sonata.

Having stated the two texts, the principal and the subsidiary, you now propose to show their true profoundness, and your own true skill as an orator. You employ the devices of elaboration mentioned above, and you play battledore and shuttlecock with the two themes in all the keys you wish till they fly to pieces; then you juggle the pieces; you modulate from grave to gay; from cold to tropical, from whisper to shriek, from insinuation to fervid appeal, from metaphor to homely paraphrase; in fact, you invoke every art and artifice you can borrow from the schools or can find in the promptings of your own emotions. When you have exhausted all the devices propriety or your knowledge permits, you have finished the second section of the sonata, the so-called Working-out, or Development, or Free Fantasy, or Elaboration.

The third section consists of a re-statement of the first theme in the original or tonic key, followed by the second theme, not in its related key, but now in the same key as the first theme, in order that a definite key may be left in the mind to give an effect of unity. A short peroration or coda ends the sermon like a welcome benediction.

This is what is strictly called the sonata form. It is reasonable and based on a natural and artistic arrangement of ideas and their development.

The sonata is not complete in this one composition, or movement as it is called. Three or usually four contrasted movements are strung together. They usually have some faint suggestion of similarity of theme, but variety of mood and key is the chief endeavor. A slow movement (called from its slowness by one of the Italian words meaning "slow"—Andante, lento, largo), marked by deep pathos or tragedy, usually follows the passionate outburst. Then comes a lighter mood in one or two movements in the form of (a) an optimistic and prettily braided Rondo with one chief theme and two attendant themes; (b) a gallant Minuet; or (c) a witty and jocose scherzo.

The sonata ends with a Finale of stormy and brilliant character generally built on the same scheme as the first movement and written in the same key.

The whole group of three or four movements makes up a sonata. The first movement of the sonata is often also called the "sonata-form."

An overture (excepting one that is a medley of airs) is merely the first movement of a sonata, written out for an orchestra. A symphony is merely a whole sonata written to take advantage of the enlarged opportunities of a great orchestra of from 50 to 120 instruments. The sonata-formula is also the basis of the string-quartet, -quintet, etc., and of concertos for solo instruments with orchestra.

A symphonic poem is a symphony only in the breadth of its orchestration and its high demands. Like many smaller forms it forsakes the somewhat rigid arrangement of the sonata and other classical forms and lets the moods or the story it tells furnish the programme of musical events. A composition which has some programme other than the classic arrangement of keys and sections;—a programme for instance representing musically a storm or the tragedy of “Romeo and Juliet”—such a composition is said to be programme music. In its worst form, when programme music descends to cheap and unconvincing imitations of natural sounds instead of contenting itself with an artistic suggestion of them to the hearers’ imagination, such music, if music it can be called, becomes quite as hopeless trash as that school of music which stoops to cheap and unconvincing imitations of classical masters and parrots devices which only the original spontaneity of the old master himself can keep alive. But generalisations are vain. What is poison as one man serves it up, is meat from another’s hands. One failure or one triumph no more makes a rule than one bluebird brings the spring.

This hasty and incomplete sketch will have failed in its purpose if it leads its reader to the delusion that he need investigate no further the real mysteries of the art of music; if it lead to the delusion that because the art is founded on certain physical laws of inner and outer nature, the artistic imagination is to be hobbled to them; or if it lead to the delusion that any one form, symmetrical or natural soever, can suffice for all generations or all moods, or that any school of masters can hope to embody all that is good and solid in the art.

The classic masters were once living, breathing, passionate young artists, impatient of precedent and breaking rules for sheer pleasure as wanton boys smash windows. He who approaches them with intelligence and sympathy will find them still made of bone and blood, sinew and spirit. But once he has had the inestimable delight of their acquaintance, he must, above all things, avoid the belief that art and glory died with them. He should approach every new work, howsoever startling, with a readiness to be convinced that the new trumpeter, standing on the outer hilltop which we thought was the rim of the art, may, after all, be looking into a further world and be proclaiming to us new fields and streams, and a new horizon. And though his music may seem strange, blatant and incoherent to us at first, perhaps the fault is not with him, nor with us, but only with the great new wonder-land he sees beyond.

Music, like any other living speech, is always growing and must always be newly studied. If we would not have it a dead language we must be prepared for change, and be willing to learn.

BIOGRAPHICAL DICTIONARY OF MUSICIANS

N.B. The German modified vowels ä, ö, ü, are often spelled ae, oe, ue. For convenience they will here be arranged alphabetically as if a, o, u.

For the system on which given names are abbreviated, and for their pronunciation, see the pages devoted to them.

The word "Gerbert," or "Coussemaker" in a parenthesis means that some of the composer's works are in the great collections of Gerbert or Coussemaker (q. v.). Where not otherwise stated the man is a composer.

Aaron (ä'-rön), (1) d. Cologne, 1052; abbot and theorist. (2) (or Aron), Pietro, Florence, 1480 or '90—bet. 1545-62; theorist.

Abaco (dél ä'-bä-kö), E. Fel. dell', Verona, July 12, 1675—Munich, July 12, 1742; court-conductor and composer.

Abbä-Cornaglia (äb-ba' kôr-näl'-yä), Alessandria, Piedmont, 1851—1894; composed operas and church-music.

Abbadia (äb-bä-dē'-ä), (1) Natale, Genoa, 1792—Milan, ca. 1875; dram. and ch. composer. (2) Luigia, daughter of above, b. Genoa, 1821; mezzo-soprano.

Abbatini (äb-bä-tē'-nē), A. M., Cas-tello, ca. 1595—1677; composer.

Abbé (äb-bä), (1) Philippe P. de St. Sevin, lived 18th cent.; 'cellist. (2) Pierre de St. Sevin, bro. of above; 'cellist.

Ab'bey, (1) J., Northamptonshire, 1785—Versailles, 1859; organ-builder. (2) Henry Eugene, Akron, O., 1846—New York, 1896; impresario; manager of Met. Op., N. Y., 1883-4, 1891-2, and 1894-6.

Ab'bot, (1) Emma, Chicago, 1850—Salt Lake City, 1891; operatic soprano; toured America with great popular success. (2) Bessie (Pick-ens), Riverdale, N. Y., 1878—New York, 1919; soprano; pupil of Mrs. Ashford. N. Y., and of Koernig, Paris; début 1902 at the Opéra there, after singing in ballad concerts in England; 1906, U. S.

Abeille (ä-bi'-lè), Jn. Chr. L., Bay-reuth, 1761—Stuttgart, 1838; com-poser and court-conductor.

Abel (ä'-bél), (1) Clamor H., b. West-phalia 17th cent.; court-mus. (2) Chr. Fd., gambist at Köthen, 1720-37. (3) Ld. Aug., b. Köthen, 1717, son of above; court-violinist. (4) K. Fr., Köthen, 1725—London, 1787; bro. of above and the last virtuoso on the gamba. (5) L., Eckartsberga, Thuringia, Jan. 14, 1834—Neu-Pasing, Aug. 13, 1895; violinist.

Abell', J., London, ca. 1660—Cam-bridge (?) ca. 1724; alto (musico) and lutenist; collector and composer.

Abendroth (ä'-bënd-röt), Hermann, b. Frankfurt, Jan. 19, 1883; conduc-tor; pupil of Thuille; cond. in Munich, 1903-4; Lübeck, 1905-11; Essen, 1911; after 1915, civic music dir. and head of Cons. at Cologne; in 1922-3 also led concerts of Berlin State Op. and as guest in London and other European cities; cond. Gewandhaus Orch., Leipzig, after 1934.

Abenheim (ä'-bën-him), Jos., Worms, 1804—Stuttgart, 1891; conductor and violinist.

Abert (ä'-bért), (1) Jn. Jos., Kocho-witz, Bohemia, Sept. 21, 1832—Stuttgart, April 1, 1915; double-bass virtuoso and important composer for the instr.; also composed operas, etc. (2) Hermann, Stuttgart, March 25, 1871—Aug. 13, 1927; son of (1); noted musical historian; Ph. D., Tübingen Univ.; 1902, docent in mus. science, Halle Univ.; 1909, prof.; 1919, do., Heidelberg Univ.; 1920, Leipzig Univ. (vice Riemann); 1923, Berlin Univ.; author of biog. of Schumann and large number of important historical and scientific works on music; after 1914 ed. the "Gluck-Jahrbuch."

Aborn (ä'-börn), (1) Milton, Marysville, Cal., May 18, 1864—New York, Nov. 13, 1933; impresario; early in life an actor; after 1902 managed Aborn Op. Co., in productions in English; 1913-15, seasons at Century

- Theat., N. Y.; later Gilbert and Sullivan productions. (2) Sargent, b. Boston, 1866; brother of Milton, assoc. in his work as impresario and in Aborn Op. Sch., N. Y.
- Abos (ä'bōs) (or Avos, Avos'sa, Gir., Malta, ca. 1708—Naples, 1786 (?); composer of operas, etc.
- A'braham, (1) Jonn. Vide BRAHAM. (2) (Dr.) Max. Vide PETERS, C. F.
- Abrányi, (1) Kornel, d. Budapest, Dec. 20, 1903; nobleman; editor and composer. His son (2) Emil, b. Budapest, Sept. 22, 1882; c. operas Monna Vanna (Budapest, 1907), Paolo and Francesca (do. 1912), etc.
- Abt (äpt), Franz, Eilenburg, Dec. 22, 1819—Wiesbaden, March 31, 1885; court-conductor at Bernburg, Zurich and Brunswick; visited America, 1872; immensely popular as a writer in the folk-song spirit, of such simple and pure songs as "When the Swallows Homeward Fly," etc.; c. 500 works comprising over 3,000 numbers (the largest are 7 secular cantatas) and numerous choruses and other cantatas.
- Ab'ygdon, Henry, d. Wells, England, 1497; composer.
- Achenbach. Vide ALVARY.
- Achron (äkh'-rōn), Joseph, b. Losdseye, Russia, May 1, 1886; composer; studied Petrograd Cons., violin with Auer (grad. gold medal), harmony with Liadof, orchestration with Steinberg. Toured Russia at age of 11; head of vln. and chamber music, Kharkov Cons., 1913-16; later toured widely, Russia, Palestine and Europe. Since 1925, res. in New York. C. chamber music and vln. works.
- Achscharumov (äsh-tshä'-roo-mōf), Demetrius Vladimirovitch, b. Odessa, Sept. 20, 1864; violinist and c.; pupil of Auer.
- Ack'ermann, A. J., Rotterdam, April 2, 1836—The Hague, April 22, 1914; composer.
- Ackté (äkt'-tä), Aino, b. Helsingfors, Finland, April 23, 1876; soprano; sang at Paris Opéra; 1904-5, Met. Op., New York.
- Ac'ton, J. B., b. Manchester (?), 1863; singing-teacher and composer.
- Adalid y Gurráa (ä-dhä'-léd h-ä-goo-rä'-ä), Marcel del., Coruna, Aug. 26, 1826—Longara, Dec. 16, 1881; pianist; pupil of Moscheles and Chopin; c. opera, etc.
- Adam (äd-än), (1) Louis, Muttersholtz, Alsatia, 1758—Paris, 1848; teacher and composer. (2) Adolphe Charles, Paris, July 24, 1803—May 3, 1856; son of above; c. many successful operas; Pierre et Catherine (1829), Le Châlet (1834), Postillon de Longjumeau (1836), Le Fidèle Berger, Le Brasseur de Preston (1838), Le Roi d'Yvetot (1842), La Poupée de Nuremberg, Cagliostro, and Richard en Palestine (1844), the ballets Giselle, Le Corsaire, Faust, etc.; in 1847 he founded the Théâtre National, but was made bankrupt by the revolution of 1848, and entered the Conservatoire as prof. of composition to succeed his father.
- Adam (ät'-äm) K. F., Constappel, Saxony, Dec. 22, 1806—Luisin, 1867; cantor and composer.
- Adam de la Hale (or Halle) (äd-än dü lä ä), Arras, ca. 1240—Naples, 1287; called "Le bossu d'Arras" (Hunchback of Arras); a picturesque trouvère of great historical importance; c. chansons, jeux (operettas) and motets; his works were pub. 1872.
- Adamberger (ät'-äm-bërkh-ër), Valentin (not Joseph), Munich, 1743—Vienna, 1804; dram. tenor; assumed name "Adamonti"; Mozart wrote the rôle of Belmonte, etc., for him.
- Adami da Bolsena (or da Volterra) (ä'-dä-mē dä bōl-sä'-nä), And., Bologna, 1663—Rome, 1743; theorist.
- Adamon'ti. Vide ADAMBERGER.
- Adamowski (äd-ä-mōf'-shkt), (1) Timothée, b. Warsaw, March 24, 1858; violinist and composer; pupil of Kontchi, Warsaw Cons. and Mas-sart, Paris Cons.; 1879 travelled to America as soloist with Clara Louise Kellogg, and later with a company of his own 1885-86; teacher, New Engl. (3) Isaac, Camprodon (Gerona), Spain, May 29, 1860—Cambo-les-Bains, June 16, 1909; eminent composer; a leading representative of the "New Spanish" school of nationalistic composers. He was markedly precocious as a child and appeared as a pianist at the age of 4 in Madrid. At 6 he was taken to Paris, where he studied with Marmontel, and from 11 to 15 appeared as a concert player in North and South America. He attended the Leipzig Cons. for a short time, and later the Brussels Cons. with the aid of funds provided by Alfonso XII. He studied at various times with Brassin and Jadassohn, and also with Liszt at Weimar and Rome. His life was one of continuous uncertainties. As a composer he was prolific, his compositions falling into two separate groups, the first extending from 1883 to about 1890, during which time he composed over 200 piano works including concertos and sonatas and many smaller pieces; after 1890 he undertook the study of composition in Paris with d'Indy and composed the operas "Pépita Jimenez," "Henry Clifford," a trilogy "King Arthur," and the orch. suite "Catalonia." Among other compositions are "Iberia" suite for piano (several numbers orch. by Arbos), an oratorio "Cristo," and many songs. His piano music carries on the traditions of Chopin and Liszt, but is endowed with quite individual folk-colour and intensity of feeling, and also has many impressionistic influences. His trilogy "King Arthur" was left unfinished at his death. In 1923 his "Pépita Jimenez" was restored with success at the Paris Op.-Comique.

Bach (bäkh), the name of a Thuringian family prominent for two centuries in music and furnishing so many organists, Kapellmeisters and cantors that town musicians were called "the Bachs," after them. Outstanding were: (1) Bach, Jn. Sebastian, Eisenach, March 21, 1685—Leipzig, July 28, 1750; youngest son of Jn. Ambrosius B. and Elizabeth (née Lammerhit), of Erfurt; early left an orphan; both parents died when he was 10, his father having begun teaching him the violin. He went to the home of his brother Jn. Christoph, who taught him the clavichord, but forbade him inspection of a MS. vol. of works by Froberger, Buxtehude, etc., obtaining it secretly B. copied it by moonlight for 6 months, though near-sighted, with results fatal to his eyes in later life. This desire to study other men's work characterised his whole career. At 15 his fine soprano voice secured him free tuition at St. Michael's Ch. in Lüneberg (he having already attended the Ohrdruff Lyceum). He went on foot on holidays to Hamburg to hear the great Dutch organist Reinken, and at Celle he heard the French instr. music used in the Royal Chapel. He studied also the work of Böhm, organist at Lüneberg, and practised violin, clavichord and org. often all night; 1703, in the Weimar ct.-orch.; 1704, organist at Arnstadt; 1705, walked 50 miles to Lübeck to hear Buxtehude, and stayed till a peremptory recall from the Church at Arnstadt; 1707, organist at Mühlhausen. On Oct. 17, he m. Maria Barbara Bach, his cousin, who bore him 7 children, of whom 4 died, leaving a daughter, Wm.-Friedemann, and K. P. E. (See below.) 1708, he played before the Duke at Weimar, and was made ct.-organist; 1714 Konzertmeister. In his vacations he made clavichord and org. tours. 1714, he furnished the organ-music for a service conducted in the Thomaskirche, Leipzig, and produced a cantata. Dresden, 1717, he challenged Marchand, a French organist of high reputation, who was afraid to compete. 1717 Kapellmeister to Prince Leopold of Anhalt, at Köthen, and composed much orch.- and chamber-music. In 1719 he revisited Halle, to meet Händel, but he had just gone to England. 1720, his wife died. He applied for the organ of the Jacobskirche, Hamburg. B. was now famous, but a young rival offered to pay 4,000 marks for the place and got it. In 1721 he m. Anna Magdalene Wülken, daughter of the ct.-trumpeter at Weissenfels. She bore him 13 children, 9 of them sons, of whom only 2 survived him: Jn., Christoph, Fr., and Jn. Christian. His second wife had a fine voice and musical taste, and wrote out the parts of many of his cantatas; for her he prepared 2 books of music. In May, 1723, cantor at the Thomasschule, Leipzig, vice Jn. Kuhnau; also organist and dir. of mus. at the Thomaskirche and the Nicolaikirche, continuing as "Kapellmeister vom Haus aus." to Prince Leopold. He was made, 1736, hon. cond. to the Duke of Weissenfels, and court-composer to the King of Poland, and Elector of Saxony. He kept his place at Leipzig for twenty-seven years, and there wrote most of his sacred music. He often visited Dresden, where he could hear the Italian opera, cond. by Hasse. Frederick the Great having asked to hear him, on May 7, 1747, with his son Wilhelm Friedemann,

B. arrived at Potsdam. He improvised upon the various Silbermann pianos in the palace, followed from room to room by the king and his musicians. The next day he tried the principal organs in Potsdam, improvising a 6-part fugue on a theme proposed by the king. He afterward wrote a 3-part fugue on this theme, a Ricercare in 6 parts, several canons inscribed "Thematis regii elaborationes canonicæ," and a trio for flute, violin, and bass, dedicating the "Musikalisches Opfer" to the king. 1749, two operations to restore his sight, weakened by copying his own and other men's works and engraving his "Art of Fugue," left him totally blind and ruined his previous vigour. His sight was suddenly restored, July 10, 1750; but 10 days later he died of apoplexy. He dictated the choral "Vor deinen Thron tret' ich hiemüt," shortly before his death.

Among his distinguished pupils were Krebs, Homilius, Agricola, Kirnberger, Goldberg, Marpurg; J. Kasper Vogler; Altnikol, his son-in-law, and his sons for whom he wrote the "Klavierbüchlein," and the "Kunst der Fuge." He engraved on copper; invented the "viola pomposa" and the "Lauten-Clavicembalum"; he advocated equal temperament (vide D. D.), tuning his own pianos and writing "Das Wohltemperirte Klavier," to further the cause. This work (known in English as "The well-tempered Clavichord," or "The 48 Fugues") is a set of 48 preludes and fugues, two of each to each key, major and minor. The works are very chromatic and use the keys enharmonically. Some of his improvements in fingering still survive. Bach was little known as a composer during his life, and few of his works were published then. He was not indeed established on his present pinnacle till Mendelssohn took up his cause, in 1829; Franz was also an important agent in preparing his scores for general use. In 1850, a hundred years after his death, the BACH-GESELLSCHAFT began to publish his complete works. Many other Bach societies now exist. B's. enormous list of works includes: VOCAL, 5 sets of church Cantatas for Sundays and feast-days, "Gottes Zeit ist die beste Zeit," etc., various secular cantatas, 2^d comic cantatas, the "Bauern Cantate" and "Coffee-Cantate," a protest against the excessive use of the beverage, and Trauerode, on the death of the Electress of Saxony; 5 Passions, incl. the St. Matthew, the St. John, and the St. Luke (doubtful); a Christmas Oratorio, in 5 parts; 4 small masses and the Grand Mass in B min.; motets; 2 Magnificats; 5 Sanctus. INSTRUMENTAL, numerous pieces for clavicord: inventions in 2 and 3 parts; 6 "small" French suites; 6 "large" English suites; Preludes and Fugues, incl. "Das Wohltemperirte Klavier"; the remarkable "Goldberg Variations"; pf.-sonatas with instrs., incl. 6 famous sonatas for pf. and vln.; solo sonatas for vln. and 'cello; solos, trios, etc., for various combinations of instrs., concertos for 1 to 4 pfs. vln. and other instrs., concertos with orch.; 6 notable "Brandenburg" concertos; overtures and suites, and fantasias, toccatas, preludes, fugues, and chorale-arrangements for organ. The modern-minded musicians of the twentieth century have found new formal and harmonic interest in B's. works, and an entire school has used as its slogan, "Back to Bach," in an effort to throw off the influence of Romantic styles of thought and feeling. Such a work as his monumental "Art of the Fugue" has gained wide popularity in the concert-room, the latter arr. for orch. by W. Graeser, heard in Europe and U. S. often after 1926. The best biography of B. is by Spitta (Leipzig, 1873-80, 2 vols.; Eng. transl., London, 1884-85). Other memoirs by Forkel, Schweitzer, Parry, Pirro, C. S. Terry, Boughton, Buhrman and C. F. A. Williams. The Bach "Jahrbücher," pub. by Breitkopf & Härtel, also hold much material of value. Books on B's. music have been issued in great numbers, incl. works by Fuller-Maitland, Grace, Iliffe, Prout, Riemann, Schweitzer, Whittaker and C. S. Terry. (See article, page 482.)

zig and Frankfort; cond. a singing society at Frankfort; for which he composed. 1737 (38?) in Berlin. Chamber-mus. and clavecinist to Frederick the Great, 1746-57 [or 1740-67?]. 1757 Hamburg as Ch. mus.-dir.; 1767 as Musik-director of the principal church there, vice Telemann, a position held till death. He was one of the chief virtuosos of the day. He was the founder of the modern school of piano-playing, and a pioneer of greatest importance in the sonata and symphony-forms and orchestration, his works having a graceful modernity not possessed even by most of his father's. He wrote "Versuch über die wahre Art das Clavier zu spielen" (2 parts, 1753-62), an important work containing detailed explanations concerning ornaments. His very numerous comps. include 210 solo pieces; 52 concertos with orch.; quartets, trios, duets, sonatas, sonatinas, minuets, polonaises, solfeggi, fugues, marches, etc., for clavier; 18 symphonies; 34 miscellaneous pieces for wind-instrs., trios; flute-, 'cello-, and oboe-concertos; soli for flute, viola di gamba, oboe, 'cello, and harp, etc., and 2 oratorios ("Die Israeliten in der Wüste," and "Die Auferstehung und Himmelfahrt Jesu"), 22 Passions; cantatas, etc.

Beethoven (bät'-hö-fën, not bā-tō'-vën), Ludwig van, b. Bonn-on-Rhine, Dec. 16 (baptised, Dec. 17, 1770) (Beethoven said Dec. 16, 1772), d. Vienna, March 26, 1827; grandson of Ludwig van B. (a native of Maestricht, bass singer, opera composer, and conductor to the Elector Clemens August, at Bonn), 2d child of Jn. van B. (a tenor singer in the Electoral choir), who had m. a widow, Magdalena Laym (née Keverich), a daughter of the chief cook at Ehrenbreitstein. B. studied at the public schools at Bonn till 14. From his fourth year, his father taught him music with great severity till 1779. He played the vln. well at 8; at 11 he knew Bach's "Wohltemperirte Clavier." Became pupil of Pfeiffer, a music-dir. and oboist; and Van der Eeden, court-organist, who predicted that he would be "a second Mozart"; 1785, studied vln. with Franz Ries; 1787, took a few lessons of Mozart; 1792, Haydn, passing through Bonn, praised a cantata of his (now lost). The Elector sent B. to Vienna, where he studied cpt. with Haydn, who seemed to neglect him, so that he secretly studied with Schenck; later he went to Albrechtsberger, who said "he has learnt nothing, and will never do anything in decent style"; he studied the vln. with Schuppanzigh and consulted Salieri and Aloys Förster; 1781, he is believed to have written a Funeral Cantata in memory of the English chargé d'affaires at Bonn, who had advanced money to the family; 1781 (1782?), his first publication, 3 pf.-sonatas, 1782; deputy organist, 1783; cembalist for rehearsals of the opera-orch., without compensation 1784-92; asst. organist at an annual salary of 150 florins (about $63); from 1788 also 2d viola of the theatre orch. Visited Vienna, 1787, and made a sensation by extemporising, Mozart exclaiming "He will make a noise in the world some day." In July his tender-hearted mother died of consumption; his father lost his voice and became a sot. B.'s only home was in the family of the widow von Breuning, to whose daughter and son he gave lessons. Here he acquired his passion for English literature. He now made acquaintance of young Count Waldstein, who became his life-long patron, and in 1792 sent him to Vienna, where he henceforward lived. The decade 1782-92 does not show much fertility in composition, half a dozen songs, a rondo, a minuet, and 3 preludes for pf., 3 pf.-quartets, a pf.-trio, a string-trio, op. 3; 4 sets of pf. variations; a rondo for wind; the "Ritter Ballet" with orch. (pub. 1872); "The Bagatelles," op. 33; 2 vln.-rondos, op. 51; the "Serenade Trio" op. 8; the lost cantata, a lost trio for pf., flute, and bassoon, and an Allegro and Minuet for 2 flutes. 1792, he was sent to Vienna by the Elector, who paid him his salary for 2 years; he had growing royalties from his comps., also 600 florins annually from Prince Lichnowsky, his warmest admirer. March 29, 1795, he played his C major pf.-concerto in the Burgtheater, his first public appearance; 1796, he played before King Fr. Wm. II.; 1798, at Prague, he gave 2 sensational concerts and met two piano virtuosi: Steibelt who challenged B. to extemporise and was sadly worsted, and Wölfl, who became his friend. 1800 ends what is called (after von Lenz's book "B. et ses trois styles") his "first period" of composition; the "second period," extending to 1815; the "third" to 1827. This first period includes op. 1-18, pf. and string-trios, string-quartets, 9 pf.-sonatas, 7 variations on "God Save the Queen," and 5 on "Rule Britan- nia," the aria "Ah perfido," etc. Now a severe and early venereal trouble affected his liver, and began to ruin his hearing, which by 1822 was entirely gone. Though he had always been brusque (especially with the aristocracy, among whom he had an extraordinarily long list of friendships and love-affairs), his former generosity and geniality speedily developed into atrocious suspiciousness and violence toward his best friends. The wild life of a nephew whom he supported brought him great bitterness. Until the beginning of the "third period," however, he had large stores of joy in life, open-air Nature, and the details of his compositions which were worked up with utmost care from "sketch-books," always carried with him, and still extant as a unique example of genius at work. In the arbitrary but somewhat convenient von Lenz classification the 2d period includes the symphonies III—VIII; the opera "Fidelio"; the music to "Egmont"; the ballet "Prometheus"; the Mass in C, op. 86, the oratorio "Christus am Oelberg" (1803); the "Coriolanus" overture; 2 pf.-concertos, 1 vln.-concerto; 3 quartets; 4 pf.-trios and 14 pf.-sonatas (among them op. 27, op. 28, 31, No. 2, 53, 57, and 81); the "Liederkreis," etc. The "third period" incl. the five pf.-sonatas, op. 101, 111, the "Missa solennis," the Ninth Symphony, the overture "Ruins of Athens," the overtures op. 115, 124; the grand fugue for string-quartet, and the string-quartets op. 127, 130, 131, 132, 135 (F).

"Fidelio," first named "Leonore," was prod. Nov. 20, 1805, just a week after the French army entered Vienna. It was withdrawn after three consecutive performances; revised and prod. March 29, 1806, but withdrawn by B. after two performances. Once more revised, it was revived in 1814, very successfully; the present overture is the result of various versions known as the Leonore overtures 1, 2, and 3. The "Eroica" symphony (No. 3) was called "Sinfonia grande Napoleon Bonaparte" in honour of his advocacy of "liberty, equality, and fraternity." When Napoleon proclaimed himself emperor, B. tore up the title-page in wrath and changed the name to "Sinfonia eroica composta per festeggiare il sovvenire d'un gran uomo." (Heroic symphony, composed to celebrate the memory of a great man.) In the Ninth Symphony, a choral Finale is used as the final addition to the orchestral climax of ecstasy (the words from Schiller's "Hymn to Joy"). In 1809 Jerome Bonaparte invited B. to become conductor at Cassel with a salary of 600 ducats (about $1,500); but his Viennese patrons Archduke Rudolf and the Princes Lobkowitz and Kinsky, settled on him an annuity of 4,000 florins ($2,000). Dec., 1826, a violent cold resulted in pneumonia; dropsy followed, B. saying to the doctors who tapped him three times and drew out the water, "Better from my belly than from my pen." After an illness of 3 months he took the Roman Catholic sacraments, a two-days' agony of semi-consciousness followed and he died, just after shaking his clenched fist in the air, during a terrific thunderstorm, the evening of March 26, 1827. 20,000 persons attended his funeral.

His complete works comprise 138 opus-numbers and about 70 unnumbered comp. The following are those published. INSTRUMENTAL.—9 Symphonies—No. 1, op. 21, in C; 2, op. 36, in D; 3, op. 55, in E \flat (the "Eroica"); 4, op. 60, in B \flat ; 5, op. 67, in C min.; 6, op. 68, in F ("Pastoral"); 7, op. 92, in A; 8, op. 93, in F; 9, op. 125, in D min. vocal canons. 7 books of English, Scotch, Irish, Welsh, and Italian songs, with pf., vln. and 'cello. A symphony supposed to be a youthful work of his was discovered 1911 in the library of the University of Jena, by Prof. Fritz Stein, was performed there Jan. 17, 1910, and published 1911; performed in Leipzig, Nov., 1911, and by Boston Symph., 1912. It is not generally accepted as Beethoven's but is found weak and uninteresting, of Haydnlike simplicity, with echoes of Mozart. The best biography is Alex. W. Thayer's. Partial collections of Beethoven's letters are pub. and his sketch-books are discussed in Ignaz von Seyfried's "Ludwig van Beethoven's Studien im Generalbass, Kontrapunkt und in der Kompositionslehre." Selections from these have been published; a complete edition projected (1935) in Germany. Biogs. also by Schindler, Nohl, Crowest, etc. Wagner wrote an estimate. The vast Beethoven literature includes studies of the composer by Bekker, Grace, Grove, Kalischer, Kerst, Herriot, Kullak, Mason, d'Indy, Mies, Newman, Roland, Marion Scott, Sonneck, Specht, J. W. N. Sullivan, Ernest Walker, etc. Studies of his sonatas by Behrend, Elterlein, Harding, Marx, McEwen, Milne, Shedlock and Tovey; of the symphonies, by Berlioz, Edwin Evans, Sr., Grove, Tovey, and Weingartner; the string quartets by J. de Marliave (1928). A thematic index of his works was made by Nottebohm. (See article, page 485.)

Bellini (bél-lē'-nē), (1) Vincenzo, Catania, Sicily, Nov. 3, 1801—Puteaux, near Paris, Sept. 23, 1835; opera composer; son and pupil of an organist; a nobleman sent him (1819) to the Cons. at Naples; studied under Furno, Tritto, and Zingarelli, until 1827; privately studied with Haydn and Mozart, and chiefly Pergolesi; as a student composed a symphony, 2 masses, several psalms, a cantata, etc.; his first opera, "Adelson e Salvini," was performed by Cons. pupils, 1825, whereupon the manager of La Scala, Milan, commissioned him to write an opera; 1826, "Bianca e Fernando" was prod. with succ.; 1827, "Il Pirata"; 1829, "La Straniera." The librettist of the latter 2 was Felice Romani, who wrote the books of all B.'s operas, except "I Puritani," "Zaira" (1820) was a failure; "I Capuleti e Montecchi," written in forty days (1830), was a great succ.; "La Sonnambula," and "Norma" (1831), with Malibran in the title-rôle, established his fame; "Beatrice di Tenda" (Venice, 1833) failed; "I Puritani" (libretto by Count Pepoli), written to order 1834, for the Théâtre Italien, Paris, was a great success, and his last finished work. B.'s work abounds in delightful, spontaneous melodies, though the lack of variety in his rhythmic scheme and orchestral accompaniments makes his scores today sound rather pale; Norma remains a great rôle for sopranos of a heroic vocal equipment. He died youngest of all prominent composers—at the age of 33, from dysentery due to overwork. Biog. by Scherillo (Milan, 1885), Pougin (Paris, 1868), etc. Other studies by Cicconetti, Amore, Voss, Lloyd and Parodi; collections of B.'s letters ed. by Scherillo and Salvioli. Mat., Colmar, Alsatia, 1785—Strassburg, 1852; violinist, pianist, and writer. (5) Alban, Vienna, Feb. 7, 1885—Dec. 24, 1935; eminent composer; studied with Schönberg, 1904—08, whose radical doctrines in harmony and tonality he combined in his work with an original capacity of expression that makes him the outstanding member of that composer's school; served as director of concerts given by Private Performing Society organized by Schönberg in Vienna; c. piano sonata (1908); string quartet (1910); songs with piano and orchestra (1908—09); four pieces for clarinet and orchestra (1913); three orchestral pieces (1914); chamber concerto for piano, violin, and 13 wind instruments (1924); the expressionistic music-drama "Wozzeck" (based on play by Georg Büchner, nineteenth-century German poet), which is written in novel style, partly atonal, and utilizing antique forms such as suite, passacaglia, etc., in its operatic texture (première after many rehearsals evoked sensational impression at Berlin State Op., Dec. 14, 1925); Lyric Suite for string quartet (1926); concert aria, "Le Vin," for soprano and orchestra (1929); partially completed music drama, "Lulu" (based on Wedekind dramas, "Erdgeist" and "Pandora's Box"), which after his death aroused wide interest when premiered, Zurich, 1937; also posth. violin concerto (Barcelona, 1936, Intern. Society for Contemp. Music Festival). One of the most original figures in early twentieth-century music, B. in his "Wozzeck," relates the heart-rending tragedy of an ignorant soldier who, oppressed by his superiors, murders his sweetheart and drowns himself; this work made a definite contribution to post-Wagnerian music drama. The opera was given its American première by the Philadelphia Orch. and Grand Opera Co., under Stokowski, both in Phila. and N. Y., with impressive effect in 1931. B. also served as editor of the Vienna publication "Musikblätter des Anbruch," for a period after 1920.

several years before the war; has since c. more elaborate scores for musical comedies and the radio; pres. of his own publishing firm, Irving Berlin Inc., New York; m. Ellin Mackay, daughter of Clarence H. Mackay.

Berlioz (bār-lĭ-ōs not bār-lĭ-ō), Hector (Louis), Côte-Saint-André, near Grenoble, France, Dec. 11, 1803-Paris, March 9, 1869; "Father of modern orchestration"; conductor, critic, writer of verse and electric prose; sent to Paris to study medicine, he accepted disinheritance and took up music, though he could never play any instr. save the guitar and flageolet; while pupil at the Cons., he earned a bare living; joined the chorus of the Gymnase Dramatique; left the Cons. in disgust with Reicha's formalism, and plunged with characteristic energy—or rather fury—into the cause of romanticism; 1825, an orchestral mass given at St. Roch brought the ridicule he usually had in France where he was little thought of as a composer though admired as a writer; 1828 saw the production of two overtures, "Waverley" and "Les Francs-Juges," and a Symphonie fantastique, "Épisode de la vie d'un artiste"; 1829, his "Concerts des Sylphes," publicly produced at 26, show him an ardent believer in programme-music (vide p. D.) and a marvellous virtuoso in instrumentation. He reentered the Cons. under Lesueur, in spite of Cherubini, who fought his admission; 1830, he took the Prix de Rome with a cantata, "Sardanapale"; after 18 months in Italy he returned to Paris and took up journalism with marked success. His symphony "Harold en Italie" (1834), the "Messe des Morts" (1837), the dram. symphony "Roméo et Juliette," with vocal soli and chorus (1839), and the overture "Carneval romain," were well received, but the 2-act opera semi-seria "Benvenuto Cellini" failed both in Paris and in London, 1838. In 1839 he was made Conservator of the Cons.; librarian, 1852, but was never made professor as he desired. Concert tours through Germany and Russia, 1843-47, were very successful and are described in his book "Voyage musical." London (1852) he cond. the "New Philh. Concerts"; prod. comic opera "Béat

- rice et Bénédicte* (1862, Baden-Baden); 1865, member of the Académie, and decorated with cross of Legion of Honour. He m. Henrietta Smithson, an Irish actress who made a sensation in Paris in Shakespearian rôles, but later was hissed off, and became a peevish invalid. His opera, "Les Troyens à Carthage," (1863) was a failure. His son Louis died 1867. "Les Troyens," in two parts; "La Prise de Troie," 3 acts, and "Les Troyens à Carthage," in 5 acts was given complete for the first time, at Carlsruhe, 1897. His most succ. work was his "oratorio," "La Damnation de Faust" (1846). His "Traité d'instrumentation" is a classic in orchestration, though its then sensational modernity is lost. B. strangely despised Wagner, who, however, confessed his large indebtedness to B. Other books are "Soirées d'orchestre" (1853), "Grotesques de la musique" (1859), "A travers chants" (1862), and an autobiography, "Mémoires," from 1803-65. In original verse are the text to the sacred trilogy "L'Enfance du Christ" (Part I., Le songe d'Hérode; II., La fuite en Égypte; III., L'Arrivée à Saïs); and his operas "Les Troyens" and "Béatrice et Bénédicte." He composed also a "Te Deum" for 3 choirs, orch. and org.; a "Grand symphonie funèbre et triomphale" for full military band, with strings and chorus ad lib.; overture to "Le Corsaire"; "Le Cinq Mai," for chorus and orch. (on the anniversary of Napoleon's death), etc. Recent studies of B. have been published in English by W. J. Turner (1934) and Tom S. Wotton (1935); coinciding with a resurgence of interest in this composer on the part of a modern-minded coterie of musicians in Britain. Revivals of Berlioz operas have also taken place, notably of "Les Troyens," and "Béatrice et Bénédicte" at Glasgow. (See article, page 488.)

Boïeldieu (bō-ëld-yū), (1) Fran. Adrien, Rouen, Dec. 16 (not 15), 1775—Jarcy, near Grosbois, Oct. 8, 1834; son of secretary of Archp. Laroche-foucauld and a milliner; apprenticed to the intemperate, brutal cathedral organist Broche, he ran away, at 12, and walked to Paris, but was brought back. He is not known to have had other teaching. At 18, he prod. succ. "La fille coupable" (Rouen, 1793); 1795, "Rosalie et Myrza," text of both by his father. Discouraged in a planned Cons. at Rouen, he again walked to Paris, and subsisted as teacher and piano-tuner to Erard. The tenor Garat sang his still pop. songs, in public, and won him a publisher. 1796, "La Dot de Suzette," in one act, was prod. with succ. (Opéra-Com.); 1797, "La famille Suisse" (ran 30 nights at the Th. Feydeau); 1798, he pub. sonatas, and a pf.-concerto, etc.; 1800, prof. of piano, Paris Cons. "Zoraimé et Zulnare" (1798), "Beniowski," and "Le Calife de Bagdad" (1800) were succ. and ended his first period, one of light gracefulness. He now studied cpt. seriously, probably with Cherubini, who had criticised him. After 3 years' silence, he reappeared with enlarged powers, succ. in "Ma Tante Auroré" (Th. Feydeau, 1803). In 1802 he m. Clotilde Mafleuroy, a ballet-dancer; 1803, he went to St.

Petersburg, partially perhaps (but not surely) because of domestic unhappiness, and became cond. of the Imperial Opera, writing by contract 3 operas annually and a number of marches. He returned to Paris, 1811; had immense succ., particularly with "Jean de Paris," 1812; 1817 prof. of comp. at the Cons. and member of Institut; 1821, Chévalier of the Legion of Honour; 1818, "Le Petit Chaperon rouge" was succ., followed, after 7 years' silence, by "La Dame Blanche," his masterpiece. His last opera, "Les Deux Nuits" (1829), failed. His wife d. 1825, and 1827 he m. Mlle. Phillis, a singer, who was a devoted wife. The poverty of their last years was relieved by Thiers, minister of Louis Philippe, who made him an annuity of 6,000 francs. He died at his country-home, of pulmonary trouble. B.'s work has great vivacity and vitality combined with musical sweetness, and rhythm without jingle. His large gifts in the construction of ensembles are seen in the septet and chorus at the end of the 2d act of "La Dame Blanche," which up to 1875 had been performed 1340 times at the same theatre; its libretto is a combination of 2 of Scott's novels "The Monastery" and "Guy Rannering." He collaborated with Cherubini in "La Prisonnière" (1799); with Méhul, Kreutzer, and others, in "Le Baiser et la Quitance" (1802); with Cherubini, Catel, and Niccolò Isouard, in "Bayard à Mézières," with Kreutzer in "Henri IV. en Voyage" (1814); with Mme. Gail, in "Angela" (1814); with Hérold in "Charles de France"; with Cherubini, Berton, and others, in "La Cour des Fées" (1821) and "Pharamond"; with Auber, in "Les Trois Genres"; with Berton, and others, in "La Marquise de Brinvilliers." Biog. by A. Pougin, 1875. (2) Adrien L. V., b. Paris, 1816—near Paris, 1883; son and pupil of above; dram. composer.

Pupil, 1853-62, of Milan Cons., almost dismissed for mus. incompetence (cf. VERDI); composed 2 cantatas, "Il 4 di Giugno" (1860), and "Le Sorelle d'Italia" (1862), in collab. with Faccio; they met with such great succ. that the Govt. gave F. and B. funds for 2 years in Paris and Germany. B. had already taken up Goethe's "Faust," long before Gounod, at the suggestion of his bro. Camillo, an eminent architect. B. brought back from Germany a passion for Beethoven, then little heeded in Italy. 1867 at Paris, as journalist; then Poland, where he sketched out text and music of "Mefistofele," which was prod. at Milan, 1868 (La Scala), after 52 rehearsals, and with great hopes; but it was then in a rather shapeless state, and Gounod's "Faust" having meanwhile been prod. at Milan with succ., B.'s work was hissed by some, and having provoked riots and duels was withdrawn by order of the police. It was remodelled with more attention to stage requirements and prod. with great succ. at Bologna, Oct. 4, 1875. An earlier opera, "Ero e Leandro," was never prod., B. lending his own libretto to Botte-
- sini, and later to Mancinelli. Other libretti of his are, Ponchielli's "Gioconda," Verdi's "Otello" and "Falstaff," Faccio's "Amleto" and Coronaro's "Un Tramonto." His opera, "Nerone," on which he worked for many years and which was repeatedly announced for production, finally saw the stage posthumously when Toscanini cond. the work at La Scala, with great scenic splendour of production, May 1, 1924, before a distinguished international audience. Its succ. proved not to be lasting. B. translated 2 of Wagner's libretti into Italian, and wrote often under the pseud. "Tobia Gorrio." The King made him "Cavaliere" and "Commendatore"; 1892, Inspector-Gen. of Technical Instruction in the Italian Cons. and Lyceums; 1895 Chevalier of the Legion of Honour.

- Braham (rightly Abraham), J., London, 1774—Feb. 17, 1856; noted tenor; compass 3 octaves; composed pop. ballads.
- Brahms (bräms), Johannes, Hamburg, May 7, 1833—Vienna, April 3, 1897; son and pupil of a double-bass player in the Hamburg City Theatre, later studied with Marxsen of Altona; début Hamburg, at 14, playing his own variations on a folk-song; 1853, toured with Remenyi. Joachim heard him and sent him to Schumann, at Düsseldorf. Schumann, with characteristic openness of mind and enthusiasm, pub. an article in the Neue Zeitschrift für Musik, greeting B. as the new Messiah of music, a welcome that was a mixture of blessing and bane, embarrassing the young Brahms with a mission that was a white elephant on his hands; for he forsook the romanticism which Schumann, and later Liszt expected of him, and took up a determined classicism in the matter of form, in which, however, he made many modifications to suit his enormous intellectuality and technical resource. This early welcome also gave him over to be bandied between believers like Hanslick who were frantic to find an opponent to the progress of Wagner, and sceptics who would not have him praised for any quality. Schumann's advocacy did not save B.'s publication and concert performance of his 3 pf.-sonatas and 3 books of songs from failure. After serving for a time as cond. to the Prince of Lippe-Detmold, he retired for study to Hamburg, 1858-62. 1862 Vienna; 1863-64 cond. of the Singakademie there; 1864-69 Hamburg, Zurich, Baden-Baden, etc., and made tours with Stockhausen; 1869, Vienna, which was afterward his headquarters. In 1871-74, cond. "Gesellschaft der Musikfreunde." In 1877 Cambridge University offered him the degree of Mus. Doc., which offer he ignored, accepting, 1881, Dr. Phil. from Breslau and writing in acknowledgment the "Akademische Festouvertüre"; 1886, a knight of the Prussian Ordre pour le Mérite, with voting privilege, and a member of the Berlin Acad. of Arts. 1889 presented with the freedom of Hamburg. His "German Requiem," op. 45 (the first 3 choruses given in Vienna, 1867), was given complete in the Bremen cathedral, April, 1868, and established him on a peak where he has since remained while the storms of debate rage below him. He wrote in almost every form but opera (he had considered that at one time) but admitted he "knew nothing about the theatre." He valued Wagner's scores, and owned several Wagner autographs; Wagner, however, said "Brahms is a composer whose importance lies in not wishing to create any striking effect." His first symphony, on which he had spent 10 years, made a sensation when prod. 1876. His vln.-concerto when first shown to Joachim was so impossible to the vln. that J. laughed at it till tears poured down his cheeks; he is said to have materially assisted in its revision. Brahms was a brilliant pianist in his youth; in his 20th year, at a concert with Remenyi, the piano was discovered to be a semitone below concert-pitch; B., playing without notes, transposed the accompaniment to Beethoven's "Kreutzer Sonata," a semitone higher throughout. (Beethoven similarly transposed his own concerto in C to C# at a rehearsal.)

COMPOSITIONS (exclusive of Songs for one voice with pf.). For orch. He arranged the old Hebrew melody Kol Nidre, and composed a cantata "Das Feuerkreuz" (op. 52, 1888); three symphonies; oratorio, "Moses" (1895); 3 vln.-concertos, which have won great popularity; secular oratorio, "Gustav Adolf"; "Nal und Damajanti"; "Die Macht des Gesanges," for barytone, mixed chor. and orch., etc.
- Brückler (brük'-lër), Hugo, Dresden, 1845—1871; composer.
- Bruckner (brook'-nër), Anton, Ausfelden, Upper Austria, Sept. 4, 1824—Vienna, Oct. 11, 1896; eminent composer; mainly self-taught as organist; 1867, court-organist at Vienna; prof. of org., harm. and cpt. at Vienna Cons.; 1875, "Lektor" of music at Vienna Univ.; 1891, Dr. hon. causa; noted organ-virtuoso and a disciple of Wagner; he composed nine symphonies: 1, C minor (1868); 2, C minor (1873); 3, D minor (1877); 4, E flat, known as the "Romantic" (1881); 5, B flat (1894); 6, A (1899); 7, E (1884); 8, C minor (1892); 9, left incomplete but often played with his "Te Deum" as concluding choral movement.
- In 1936 the publication of the original version of Bruckner's symphonies by the Musikwissenschaftliche Verlag, Vienna, led to a controversy as to whether the previously known copies had been indefensibly altered and ed. by his pupils Ferdinand Loewe and the brothers Franz and Josef Schalk. But evidence was adduced to show that B. approved these changes.

His choral works include three Grand Masses, a "Te Deum," a Requiem, motets, psalms, and various church music, pcs. for male chorus. C. also a string quintet.

The fame of B. has grown to great proportions since his death, not only in Germany and Austria, where he is considered a classic in the great line of Romantic composers, but also in other countries. An International Bruckner Soc. devotes itself to furthering perms. of his music. The best passages in his works are undoubtedly of noble fervour and breadth, some even approaching sublimity, but other pages are clumsy, repetitious, and lacking in contrast. The influence of Wagner is evident in his scores.

- Chopin (shô-păn) (François) Frédéric, Zelazowa Wola (Jeliasovaya Volia), near Warsaw, Feb. 22, 1810—Paris, Oct. 17, 1849; eminent composer for the piano; son of Nicholas C. (a native of Nancy, France, who was at first bookkeeper in a cigar factory, then teacher in the Warsaw Gymnasium), and a Polish woman (née Justine Kryzanowska). C. studied at his father's private school, among young Polish noblemen; Albert Zwiny taught him pf. and Joseph Elsner, harm., etc. At 9 he played in public a pf.-concerto and improvisations; c. polonaises, mazurkas, and waltzes; in 1825, pub. as op. 1 a rondo; op. 2 a fantasie with orch. He played in German cities and had at 19 an individual style of comp., having written his 2 pf.-concertos, mazurkas, nocturnes, rondos, etc. He started for London, and played in Vienna, 1829, with such success that a critic called him "one of the most remarkable meteors blazing on the musical horizon": and at Paris he had such succ. in his first concert, 1831, that he settled there for life as a teacher of the pf. and occasional giver of concerts. His pupils were of the most aristocratic, and his friends included Liszt, Berlioz, Meyerbeer, Bellini, Balzac, and Heine. Schumann with typical spontaneity (cf. BRAHMS) was moved in 1831 by Chopin's op. 2 to say, "Hats off, gentlemen:—a genius"; and in 1839, in reviewing certain of his preludes, mazurkas, and waltzes, to say "He is and remains the keenest and staunchest poet-soul of the time." C.'s liaison with Mme. Dudevant ("George Sand"), begun in 1836 and ended in 1844, has caused endless controversy. In 1838 an attack of bronchitis drove him to Majorca, where she seems to have been a devoted nurse, but the peevishness and weakness due to his developing consumption caused bitter quarrels, and she is believed to have caricatured him as Prince Karol in her novel "Lucrezia Floriani." Concert tours and social life in England and Scotland in 1841-49 destroyed his strength. His comps. include beside those mentioned (74, with opus-number 12 lacking): "Don Giovanni," fantasia, op. 2; "Krakowiak," rondo, op. 14; Ép. Polonaise, op. 22; and a fantasia on Polish airs for pf. with orch; duo concertant on themes from "Robert le Diable"; an introd. et Polonaise, op. 3, and a sonata, op. 65 for pf. and 'cello; pf. trio, op. 8; and a rondo for 2 pfs. op. 73. FOR PF. - Debussy (dü-bü'-sē), Claude Achille, St. Germain-en-Laye, Aug. 22, 1862—Paris, March 26, 1918; one of the most important composers of recent times, and the instigator of the entire "modern" movement in music; already acknowledged to be a classic, D. has had a profound influence on creative musicians of every country. He came from a family of tradespeople with no musical background. At 11 he entered the Paris Cons. where he won several prizes for piano and studied with Massenet, winning the Prix de Rome with his cantata, "L'Enfant Prodigue." During his sojourn in Italy, his originality began to assert itself, so much so that his orch. suite, "Printemps," shocked the conservatives by its harmonic audacities; he also c. a work for two women soloists and female chorus, "La Demoiselle Élue," at this time. Returning to Paris, he was attracted by the school of the poetic Symbolists and frequented their circle, composing meanwhile his "Arabesques" for piano, "Suite Bergamasque" (do.), "Ariettes Oubliées," etc.

His early works were influenced by the French school of Massenet, Chabrier, Lalo, Fauré, and by Wagner, but he soon developed an original style which came to be known as "impressionism" and consisted in painting with brilliant but rare and elusive tonal colours, applied in little, independent units, as the painters of the "pointillist" school were doing. His Prelude to "L'Après-midi d'un Faune," based on Mallarmé's cryptic nature poem, was completed 1894 and created a deep impression, entirely revising the possibilities contained in orchestral tone-colour. D's. use of distantly related overtones widened harmonic boundaries, and his use of chords not as a part of a continuous structure, but as individual entities introduced a new principle into modern music.

He carried on this revolutionary work with a string quartet (1893), "Proses Lyriques" for voice to his own text, the "Chansons de Bilitis," and the 3 "Nocturnes" for orch. ("Clouds," "Festivals" and "Sirens," the last employing a wordless women's chorus.)

D's. masterpiece is commonly acknowledged to be his music drama, "Pelléas et Mélisande," a setting of Maeterlinck's symbolic play, which had its première at the Paris Op.-Comique in 1902 before a somewhat irreverent audience. Here, as in most of his works, D. creates an atmosphere of half-lights, mystery and poetry by the use of an original harmonic system in which dissonance takes the place of consonance; old church modes are used or suggested; as are the whole-tone scale and other exotic progressions. The voices employ a form of recitative; all climaxes are rigidly restrained. The popular following developed by this singular but highly artistic work came a few years later.

The most important productions of D's. final period include music for D'Annunzio's "mystery," "The Martyrdom of St. Sebastian," the ballet "Jeux," written for Diaghileff's company; and the notable orch. works, "La Mer," "Rondes de Printemps" and "Iberia," in which his original art of novel form, orchestration and objectivity of impression reach their climax. His final period saw the production of many works for chamber combinations, piano, etc., but with a slight growth of austerity in his manner.

His compositions include also: (voice and orch.) "Le Jet d'Eau"; (vocal quartet) "Trois Chansons"; (orch.) "Images"; (Harp and orch.) "Danse Sacrée et Danse Profane"; (voice) "Cinq Poèmes"; "Mandoline"; "Fêtes Galantes"; "Trois Chansons de France"; "Trois Ballades de François Villon"; "Le Promenoir des Deux Amants"; "Trois Poèmes"; "Noël des Enfants qui n'ont plus de Maison"; (piano) "L'Isle Joyeuse"; "Estampes"; "Masques"; "Images" (2 series); "Children's Corner"; "La Plus que Lente"; 2 series of 12 preludes each; "La Boîte à Joujoux"; "Berceuse Héroïque"; 12 études; (piano, four hands) "Marche Écossaise"; "Petite Suite"; 6 "Épigraphes Antiques"; (2 pianos, 4 hands) "En Blanc et noir." Many of his piano works have been orchestrated.

The Debussy literature is a large one, with the composer's own critical writings appearing under the title "M. Croche, Anti-Dilettante" (1923). D.-studies have been pub. by Daly Liebig, Laurencie, Laloy, Sartoliquido, Caillard and De Bérays, Setaccioli, Rivière, Séré, Rolland, Chennevière, Paglia, Jean-Aubry, Cortot, Boucher, Dumesnil, Gilman, Shera, etc. Léon Vallas has issued a thematic catalogue, and countless magazine articles exist on his music. He was received with honour by various princes, and was court-musician to Louis XII., many amusing anecdotes of his musical humour being told. He finally returned to Condé as Provost of the Cathedral Chapter. Burney called him "the father of modern harmony." The florid and restless cpt. of his church-works and the secular cantus firmus (v. D. D.) that was the basis of most of them, brought his school into disfavour and disuse when the revolutionary Palestrina appeared. But he was at least the culmination of his style, and his erudition was moulded into suave and emotional effects, so that Ambros says that he was the "first musician who impresses us as being a genius." His period coinciding with the use of movable types for music, his works are preserved in large quantities in volumes and in the collections of Petrucci and Peutingier. His French chansons were pub. by T. Susato, 1545, P. Attaignant, 1549, and Du Chemin, 1553; excerpts in modern notation are in the "Bibliothek für Kirchenmusik," 1844; in Commer's "Collectio," Rochlitz; "Sammlung vorzüglicher Gesangstücke," 1838, Choron's "Collection," and in the histories of Ambros, Burney, Hawkins, etc.

A peculiarly lovable figure in music, F. has gained a great discipleship since his death both among musicians and the general public. His modesty and nobility of soul were allied with a highly original musical equipment, in which the sensuous and mystical elements are balanced by a strong sense of form. He entirely revolutionised the pattern of French instrumental music by reviving the polyphony which had long ceased to be a prominent factor in it; his harmonic modulations were also much freer than those previously in vogue in France. Through his disciple, d'Indy, he set in motion a whole school of "Francikists," who were opposed in aim to the extreme modernists who took their start from Debussy. These two tendencies are still warring in French music. (See article, page 496.) (4) Eduard, Breslau, 1817—Berlin, 1893; professor and composer. (5) Jos., Liège, 1820—Paris, 1891; bro. of (3); organist and teacher, Paris; pub. "Ode to St. Cecilia" (with orch.); cantatas, etc.

Gluck (glook), (1) Christoph Willibald (Ritter von), Weidenwang, near Neumarkt, Upper Palatinate, July 2, 1714—Vienna, Nov. 15, 1787; son of head-gamekeeper to Prince Lobkowitz; at twelve sent to the Jesuit Coll. at Komotau (1726-32), where he learnt the violin, clavier, and organ, and was chorister in the Ch. of St. Ignaz; at eighteen he went to Prague, earning a living by playing at rural dances, giving concerts and singing and playing in various churches; under the tuition of Father Czernohorsky he mastered singing and the 'cello, his favourite instr.; 1736 entered the service of Prince Melzi, Vienna, who took him to Milan and had him study harm. and cpt. with Sammartini. After four years' study he prod. "Artaserse" (La Scala, 1741) with great succ. and was commissioned to c. for other theatres; prod. 8 operas 1742-45. On invitation he went to London 1745 as composer for the Haymarket, in opposition to Händel. "La Caduca dei Giganti" was given on the defeat of the Pretender, 1746,

"Artamene," followed by "Piramo e Tisbe," a pasticcio of his best arias, had no succ. and led Händel to say that the music was detestable, and that Gluck knew no more counterpoint than his cook. The operas G. had written up to this time were thoroughly Italian. The influence of Händel and Rameau's works heard at Paris awakened him, and led him to that gradual reform which made him immortal, though it brought on him the most ferocious opposition. "La Semiramide Riconosciuta" (Vienna, 1748) began the change to more serious power. 1750-62 he prod. "Telemaco" (Rome, 1750), "La Clemenza di Tito" (Naples, 1751), and 4 others. 1754-64 he was dir. court-opera Vienna and prod. 6 more works. He made great succ. in spite of opposition with "Orfeo ed Euridice" (1762), "Alceste" (1767), "Paride ed Elena" (1769), libretti by Calzabigi. 2 other inferior works were performed by members of the royal family (1765). In the dedicatory prefaces to "Alceste" and "Paride ed Elena," G. expressed his protest against the Italian school, and declared for dramatic consistency unhampered by rigid formulæ for arias, duets, etc., and interpolated cadenzas. He had such harsh criticism at home and such encouragement from du Rollet of the French Embassy at Vienna in 1772 that he went to Paris. But here also he met such opposition that all his diplomacy and all the power of his former pupil, Queen Marie Antoinette, hardly availed to bring about the presentation of "Iphigénie en Aulide" (1774); its great succ. was repeated in "Orphée" (Aug., 1774), "Alceste" (1776), and "Armide" (1777). Piccinni was brought to Paris as a rival, and prod. "Roland" while Gluck was preparing the same subject. Gluck burned his score and published a letter which precipitated an unimaginably fierce war of pamphlets. Both men now set to composing "Iphigénie en Tauride"; here Gluck forestalled his rival by two years (1779), and Piccinni's work on appearing was not a succ., while Gluck's succeeded enormously. His last opera, "Echo et Narcisse," was not succ. (Sept. 21, 1779); 1780, he retired to Vienna and lived on his

- well-earned wealth, till apoplexy carried him off. He wrote a De profundis for chorus and orch., 6 overtures and an incomplete cantata, "Das Jüngste Gericht," finished by Salieri, and 7 odes for solo voice and pf. Biog. by A. Schmidt (1854); Marx (1863); Desnoiresterres (1872); also studies of his operas by Berlioz and Newman. - Grétry (grä-trwë), (1) André Ernest Modeste, Liège, Feb. 9, 1741—Montmorency, near Paris, Sept. 24, 1813; dram. composer; son of a violinist. Chorister at 6, but dismissed for incapacity at 11, then pupil of Leclerc and Renekin. R. failing to keep him to the strict course of cpt. Moreau later tried with equal failure; 1758 he prod. 6 symphonies at Liège; 1759 a mass for which the Canon du Harlez sent him to study in Rome, to which he walked; he studied cpt. and comp. with Casali and Martini for 5 years, but was again dismissed as impossible; a dramatic intermezzo, "Le Vendémiaire," was succ. 1765, but reading Monsigny's "Rose et Colas," he decided that his restless dramatic longings were best adapted for French opéra comique. He was a long time finding a fit librettist (Voltaire declining his invitation). He reached Paris slowly via Geneva, where he taught singing a year and prod. the succ. 1-act "Isabelle et Gertrude." In Paris after 2 years' hardships his "Les Mariages Samnites" was rehearsed, and though not prod., won him a patron in Count Creutz, the Swedish Minister, who secured him as libretto Marmontel's comedy "Le Huron." This was prod. (Op.-com., 1768) with a great succ., enjoyed also in extraordinary degree by an astounding series of works, mostly comic and mostly successful, the best of which are "Lucile," "Le Tableau Parant" (1769), "Les Deux Avides," "Zémire et Azor" (1771), "Le Magnifique" (1773); "La Rosière de Salency" (1774); "La Fausse Magie" (1775), "Le Jugement de Midas" (in which he satirised the old French music and its rendition at the Académie), and "L'Amant Jaloux" (1778); the grand opera "Andromaque" (1780) (in which the chief rôle is accompanied by 3 flutes throughout); "La Double Épreuve" (or "Colinette à la cour") (1782); "Théodore et Pauline" (or "L'Épreuve villageoise"); and "Richard Cœur de Lion" (his best work, still played in Paris); the gr. opera "La Caravane du Caire" (1785) performed 506 times; (libretto by the Comte de Provence, later Louis XVIII.); "La Rosière Républicaine" (1793); "La Fête de la Raison" (prod. 1794 during the Revolution); "Lisbeth"; "Anacreon chez Polycrate" (1797); c. 50 operas in all, remarkable for spontaneity, grace and fervour of melody, dramatic effect and general charm, but open to serious criticism as works of formal art. He was called "the Molière of music." Mozart and Beethoven wrote Variations on themes of his. Once launched, his progress was a triumph of honour of all kinds; in 1802 Napoleon made him Chevalier of the Legion of Honour with a pension of 4,000 francs. He bought Rousseau's former residence at Montmorency and retired there; wrote Memoirs, etc. He had several children, including the gifted Lucille (v. infra), all of whom he outlived. He left 6 unprod. operas and c. also 6 symphonies; 6 pf.-sonatas, 6 string-quartets, church-mus., etc. Biog. by his nephew, A. J. G. Handel (or Händel, Handl). (1) Vide GALLUS. (2) Vide HÄNDEL.

Händel (hënt'-l) (Hendel, Hendeler, Handeler or Hendtler), Georg Friedrich (at first spelt Hendel in England; later he anglicised it to George Frederic Handel (hän'-dël, the form now used in England), Halle, Feb. 23, 1685—London, April 14, 1759; son of a barber (afterwards surgeon and valet to the Prince of Saxe-Magdeburg) and his second wife Dorothea Taust. Intended for a lawyer; in spite of bitter opposition he secretly learned to play a dumb spinet. At 7 on a visit to his elder step-brother, valet at the court of Saxe-Weissenfels, Händel while playing the chapel-organ was heard by the Duke, who persuaded the father to give the boy lessons. Zachau, organist of Halle, taught him cpt., canon and fugue, and he practised the oboe, spinet, harpsichord and organ; he soon c. sonatas for 2 oboes and bass, became assist. organist, and for 3 years wrote a motet for every Sunday. In 1666 his skill on organ and harpsichord won him at Berlin the friendship of Ariosti and the jealousy of Bononcini. The Elector offered to send him to Italy; but his father took him back to Halle; the next year his father died, and he went to Halle Univ. (1702-03) to study law, at the same time serving as organist at the cathedral at a salary of $50 a year. 1703 he went to Hamburg as violino di ripieno. He fought a duel with Mattheson, later his friend and biographer, and was saved by a button. When Keiser the dir. fled from debt, H. was engaged as clavichordist. He c. a "Passion" and prod. 2 operas, "Almira" (succ.) and "Nero" (1705); he was also commissioned to write "Florindo und Daphne" (1708), an opera filling two evenings. In 1706, with 200 ducats earned by teaching, he went to Italy and made success and powerful acquaintances, incl. the Scarlattis. In Florence (1707) he prod. with succ. "Rodrigo" (Venice, 1708), and "Agrippina" with great succ. In Rome he prod. 2 oratorios, and in Naples a serenata, "Act, Galatea e Polifemo," in which is a bass solo with a compass of 2 octaves and a fifth. 1709, in Germany as cond. to the Elector of Hanover; 1710 visited England on leave of absence. In 2 weeks he c. the opera "Rinaldo," a pasticcio of his older songs. It was prod. at the Haymarket Th. with great succ.; 1712 he returned to London on leave; but stayed. His first two operas were not succ.; but an ode for the Queen's birthday, and a Te Deum and Jubilate in celebration of the Peace of Utrecht won him royal favour and an annuity of £200; 1714 his Hanover patron became George I. of England, and he was for a time out of that monarch's good graces, but had already been restored when, at the request of Baron Kilmanseck, he produced the delightful 25 pieces called the "Water-Music," at a royal aquatic fête. 1716-18 he went to Hanover with the King. He there c. his only German oratorio, the "Passion"; 1718 cond. to the Duke of Chandos and c. the English oratorio "Esther," the secular oratorio "Acis and Galatea," and the Chandos Te Deums and Anthems. He taught the Prince of Wales' daughters, and c. for Princess Anne "Suites de Pièces" for harpsichord (The Lessons) including "The Harmonious Blacksmith."

He was dir. of new R. A. of M. 1720 prod. the succ. opera "Radamisto" (prod. 1721 in Hamburg as "Zenobia"). Now Bononcini and Ariosti appeared as rivals and a famous and lasting feud arose around the three after they had prod. one opera, "Muzio Scaevola," in which each wrote an act. B. had rather the better of it, when he was caught in a plagiarism (a crime not unknown in Händel's works (v. LORTI). B. left England without reply (1731). Up to this time H. had prod. 12 operas.

1726 he was naturalised. 1729-31 he was in partnership with Heidegger, proprietor of the King's Th., where he prod. "Lotario" followed by 4 more operas. 1732 he prod. his two oratorios revised; 1733 the oratorios "Deborah" and "Athaliah" at Oxford, when he was made Mus. Doc. h.c. 1733 he began a stormy management of opera, quarrelled with the popular singer Senesino, and drove many of his subscribers to forming a rival troupe "The Opera of the Nobility," with Porpora and afterwards Hasse as composer and conductor; 1737 the companies failed, H. having prod. 5 operas; the ode "Alexander's Feast" (Dryden), and the revised "Trionfo del Tempo e della Verità." Over-exertion brought on a stroke of paralysis in one of his hands and he went to Aix-la-Chapelle, returning to London with improved health. He now prod., under Heidegger, 5 operas, incl. "Faramondo," "Serse" (1738), and "Deidamia" (1741). Now he abandoned the stage and turned to oratorio, producing "Saul," and "Israel in Egypt" (1739); the "Ode for St. Cecilia's Day," and in 1740 "L'Allegro and Il Penseroso" (Milton), and a supplement "Il Moderato," written by Chas. Jennens, who also wrote the text of the Messiah. 1741 he visited Dublin and prod. there his masterpiece the "Messiah," April 13, 1742. This re-established him in English favour and raised him from bankruptcy. It was followed by "Samson," the "Dettingen Te Deum," "Semele," "Joseph" (1743), "Belshazzar," and "Heracles" (1744). His rivals worked against him still, and in 1745 he was again bankrupt, writing little for a year and a half, when he prod. with renewed success and fortune his "Occasional Oratorio," and "Judas Maccabaeus" (1746); "Joshua" (1747), "Solomon" (1748); "Susannah" (1748); "Theodora" (1749); "The Choice of Hercules" (1750); and "Jephthah" (1752), his last. During the comp. of "Jephthah" he underwent three unsuccessful operations for cataract. He was practically blind the rest of his life, but continued to play org.-concertos and accompany his oratorios on the organ up to 1759. He was buried in Westminster Abbey. His other comp. incl. the "Forest Musick" (Dublin, 1742), etc., for harps.; the "Fireworks Musick" (1749) for strings; 6 organ-concertos; concertos for trumpets and horns; and for horns and side drums (MS.); sonatas for vln., viola and oboe, etc. A complete edition of his works in 100 vols. was undertaken in 1856 for the German Händel Soc. by Dr. Chrysander as editor. Biog. by Mattheson (1740); Mainwaring (1760); Forstemann (1844); Schölicher (1857); Rockstro (1883); Chrysander (unfinished at his death), Leichten-tritt and Müller-Blattau (in German). Various aspects of Händel's life and art are considered in studies in English by Benson, Davey, Flower, Marshall, Romain Rolland, Streatfeild, C. F. A. Williams.

Händel as an opera composer has been rediscovered by the 20th cent., after the long dominance of his oratorios. Esp. in Germany there occurred a remarkable "H. Renaissance" from about the year 1920, centring in the Univ. of Göttingen, where German adaptations of such works as "Rodelinda," "Ottone," "Giulio Cesare," etc., were staged in annual fests. Productions also took place in Berlin, and in America at Smith Coll., Northampton, Mass.

Haydn (hid'-n), (1) (Fz.) Josef, Rohrau-on-Leitha, Lower Austria, March 31, 1732—Vienna, May 31, 1809; second son of a wheelwright who was the sexton and organist of the village church, and a fine tenor, and whose wife, Maria Koler, had served as cook for Count Harrach. She sang in the choir. At 5, H. was taken to the home of a paternal cousin, Frankh, who taught him Latin, singing, the vln. and other instrs. He was engaged as a chorister for St. Stephen's, and taught by Reutter the cond., who gave him no encouragement and dismissed him in 1748. At 8, he went to Vienna, and studied singing, vln. and clavier, with Finsterbusch and Gegenbauer. He studied harmony chiefly from Fux' "Gradus ad Parnassum" and Mattheson's "Vollkommener Kappell- meister." At 13 he c. a mass. He obtained a few pupils, and a Viennese tradesman lent him 150 florins, with which he rented an attic-room and an old harpsichord. He practised C. P. E. Bach's first 6 sonatas and the vln.; Metastasio taught him Italian, and recommended him to a Spanish family as teacher for their daughter, who was studying with Porpora. From Porpora, in return for menial attentions, H. received some instruction in comp. and a recommendation to the Venetian ambassador for a stipend of 50 francs a month. At 20, he had c. 6 trios, sonatas, his first mass, and a comic opera "Der neue krumme Teufel" (Stadttheater, 1752), a satire on the lame baron Affligi the ct.-opera dir.; this work was suppressed but revived afterwards, and he received 24 ducats for it. He began to make powerful friends, and became Musikdirektor and Kammercompositour to Count Fd. Maximilian Morzin. 1759 Prince Paul Anton Esterházy heard his 1st symph. and 1760 took him into his service as 2d (later 1st) conductor; the same year H. m. Maria Anna, the elder sister of the girl whom he loved and who had entered a convent. This marriage was as unhappy as one would expect. Prince Nikolaus Esterházy, who succeeded his bro. in 1762, retained H. as conductor and in his service H. c. 30 symphonies, 40 quartets, a concerto for French horn, 12 minuets, most of his operas, etc. He was soon very pop. through Europe, and royalty sent him gifts. 1785 commissioned to write a mass, "The Seven Words on the Cross," for the Cath. of Cadiz; in 1790 Prince Nikolaus was succeeded by his son Anton, who kept H. as cond. and increased his stipend of 1,000 florins to 1,400. In 1791 on a pressing invitation brought by Salomon, he went to England and was for 18 months the lion of the season. Oxford made him Mus. Doc.; and he c. the so-called "Salomon Symphonies," for his concerts. On his way home, he visited his native place to witness the unveiling of a monument erected in his honour by Count Harrach. In this year Beethoven became his pupil. 1794, he revisited London, with renewed triumph, the King urging him to stay, but, at the invitation of a new Prince Esterházy, he returned. 1797, he c. the Austrian national anthem. At 65, he prod. his great oratorio "The Creation" ("Die Schöpfung"); in 1801 "The Seasons" ("Die Jahreszeiten"). His health failing he went into retirement, appearing in public only once in 1808, when he was carried in a chair to hear a special performance of the "Creation." His agitation was so great that he had to be taken away after the first half; the throng giving him a sad farewell, and Beethoven bending to kiss his hands and forehead. In 1809, his death was hastened by the shock of the bombardment of Vienna by the French. His astounding list of works includes besides those mentioned, 125 symphonies and overtures, incl. the "Farewell" ("Abschiedssymphonie," 1772), the "Fire S." ("Fuersymph., 1774), the "Toy S." ("Kindersymph."), "La Chasse" (1870), the "Oxford" (1788), the "Surprise" ("S. mit dem Paukenschlag," 1791); "S. with the drum-roll" ("S. mit dem Paukenwirbel," 1795); 51 concertos for harpsichord, vln., cello, lyre, barytone, double-bass, flute and horn; 77 string-quartets; 175 numbers for barytone; 4 vln.-sonatas; 38 pf.-trios; 53 sonatas and divertimenti; an oratorio "Il Ritorno di Tobia"; 14 masses; 4 operas; 4 Italian comedies; 14 Ital. opere buffe, and 5 marionette-operas; music to plays; 22 arias; cantatas, incl. "Ariana a Naxos," "Deutschlands Klage auf den Tod Friedrichs des Grossen," "The 10 Commandments" in canon-form; 36 German songs; collections of Scotch and Welsh folk-songs, etc. Biog. by S. Mayr, 1809; K. F. Pohl (Leipzig, 1875, 1882; completed by E. von Mandyczewski). Haydn's diary is quoted from extensively in Krehbiel's "Music and Manners" (New York, 1898). Studies of Haydn have been published by Brenet, Hadden, Hadow and Runciman. (2) Jn. Michael, Rohrau, Sept. 14, 1737—Salzburg, Aug. 10, 1806; bro. of above; soprano chorister, with compass of 3 octaves, at St. Stephen's, Vienna, replacing his brother Josef. burg; 1777, organist of the Cath. and St. Paul's Ch. He m. Maria Magdalena Lipp, an excellent soprano; 1880 he lost his property, by the French occupation, but was aided by his bro. and 2 others, and the Empress Maria Theresa rewarded him for a mass c. at her command, in which she sang the soprano solos. He founded a school of composition, and had many pupils, incl. Reicha and Weber. Prince Esterházy twice offered to make him vice-cond.; but H. refused, hoping to reorganise the Salzburg Chapel. His best works were sacred music, which his brother esteemed above his own. He declined publication, however; c. 360 church-comps., incl. oratorios, masses, etc., 30 symphonies; operas, etc. Biog. by Schinn and Otter (Salzburg, 1808).

Liszt (list), Franz (originally Ferencz), Raiding, near Oedenburg, Hungary, Oct. 22, 1811—Bayreuth, July 31, 1886; in many ways the most brilliant of all pianists, and a composer whose poorest works are too popular, while he is not granted the credit due his more solid achievements; as great a patron of art, also, as he was creator. Son and pupil of an amateur; at nine played in public, at Oedenburg, Ries' E♭ concerto. A group of Hungarian counts subscribed a 6 years' annuity of 600 florins, and the family moved to Vienna, where L. studied with Czerny (pf.), and Salieri (theory) for 18 months. Beethoven hearing him play his trio op. 97, embraced him. At 12 he gave v. succ. concerts in Vienna and his father took him to Paris, where he was refused as a foreigner because of Cherubini's objections to "infant phenomena;" hereafter L. was his own teacher, except in comp. which he studied with Paër and Reicha. At 14, his 1-act operetta, "Don Sancho" had 5 performances at the Acad. royale de musique. On his father's death in 1827 he supported his mother by teaching, soon becoming the salon-idol he always remained. He was strongly influenced by Chopin, von Weber, Paganini and Berlioz. He had a brilliant series of heart-affairs, beginning with the literary Countess d'Agoult ("Daniel Stern"), with whom he lived in Geneva (1835-39). She bore him a son and three daughters; Cosima, the youngest, became the wife of von Bülow, later of Wagner. 1839, he successfully undertook to earn by concerts money enough for the completion of the Beethoven monument at Bonn. 1849, ct.-cond. at Weimar, with royal encouragement to aid mus. progress. He made himself the greatest patron among creative artists, aiding Wagner materially by productions of his works at Weimar and by pf.-transcriptions, aiding also Raff, Schumann, and Berlioz, finally resigning before the opposition to, and failure of, an opera by Cornelius (q. v.). 1859-70, he lived chiefly at Rome, where in 1866 the Pope, Pius IX., made him an abbé. 1870 he was reconciled with the Weimar Court. 1875 pres. of the new Acad. of Mus. at Pesh; he spent his last years at Weimar, Pesh, and Rome, followed by a large retinue of disciples and pupils whom he taught free of charge. He died during a Bayreuth Festival. C. 2 SYMPHS.: "Dante" (after the "Divina Commedia" with female chorus); "Eine Faustsymphonie" ("Faust," "Gretchen," "Mephistopheles," with male chorus); SYMPH. POEMS: "Ce qu'on entend sur la montagne" (Victor Hugo); "Tasso, lamento e trionfo"; "Les Préludes"; "Orpheus"; "Prometheus"; "Mazeppa"; "Festklänge"; "Heröde junèbre"; "Hungaria"; "Hamlet"; "Hunnenschlacht"; "Die Ideale" (Schiller); and "Von der Wiege bis zum Grabe" (Michael Zichy); ALSO FOR ORCH. - Lully (rightly Lullī) (lūl-lē, or lool'-lī), (1) J. Bap. de, Florence, Nov. 29, 1632—Paris, March 22, 1687. A Franciscan monk taught him the violin and guitar. His parents were poor; the Chev. de Guise took the boy in 1646 to France to entertain Mlle. de Montpensier, but he was set to work in the scullery, where Count de Nogent heard him play the vln. and placed him in the private band. L., however, set to music a satirical poem on Mlle. de M. and she dismissed him. He studied the harps. and comp. with Métru, Roberday, and Gigault, and became a member of the King's private orchestra; 1652, he became head of the "24 violins"; he organised a second group, "les petits violons," of 16 instrs. and made it the best orchestra in France. 1653, ct.-composer and prod. masques and ballets in which Louis XIV. took part and Lully as "M. Baptiste," danced and acted. 1672, the king held him in such favour that he gave him letters patent for an "Académie royale de musique" (now the Gr. Opéra); a rival theatre was closed by the police (v. CAMPRA). With this opportunity (cf. Wagner's Bayreuth Theatre) the transplanted Italian proceeded to found French opera—idiomatic mus. to texts in the vernacular, and free of the super-ornamentation of the Italian Sch. He held the vogue till Gluck put him in eclipse. L. was dir., stage-manager, conductor, and even at times machinist, as well as composer. He was fortunate in his librettist, Quinault. He developed the overture, and introduced the brass into the orch. He was famous for his temper and once while cond. furiously struck his own foot with the bâton, producing a fatal abscess. His works, mainly on classical subjects, include "Les Fêtes de l'Amour et de Bacchus"; a pastoral pasticcio (1672); "Cadmus et Hermione"; "Alceste"; "Thésée"; "Le Carnaval," opera-ballet; "Atys," "Isis," "Psyche"; "Bellerophon"; "Proserpine"; "Le Triomphe de l'Amour"; "Persée"; "Phaëton"; "Amadis de Gaule"; "Roland"; "Armide et Renaud"; "Acis et Galatée," historic pastoral (1686), etc., also symphs., a mass, etc. (2) Louis de, Paris, 1664—after 1713; son of above; dramatic composer.

Doc. h. c., Princeton Univ. and 1902, Penn. U. also; he gave frequent pf.-recitals, and played his concertos with the Boston Symph. and other orchs. In Jan. 1904, he resigned his professorship at Columbia University from dissatisfaction with the faculty's attitude toward music as a high art. He was succeeded by Cornelius Rybner (q. v.). He had cond. the Mendelssohn Glee Club for two years. In 1905 he fell a prey to cerebral trouble that ended his beautiful career. Faithfully tended by his wife, he lingered under increasing clouds, till his death, Jan. 23, 1908, at New York. So great was his hold upon the American public that a MacDowell Club with many branches was formed to carry on his ideals of art and to aid the struggling musician; a choral branch under the leadership of Kurt Schindler attained a very high standard, taking the title of "Schola Cantorum" in 1912; a biography of MacDowell was written by Lawrence Gilman, 1905. Mahler (mä'-lër), (1) Gustav, Kalischt, Bohemia, July 7, 1860—Vienna, May 18, 1911; highly gifted composer and conductor; pupil of the Cons. and Univ. at Prague and Vienna, with Bruckner as one of his teachers; began his career in 1880 as theatre cond. in Hall, Lubljana and Olmütz; asst. cond., Cassel, 1883; asst. to Angelo Neumann at the Prague German Op., 1885-86; in latter year at Leipzig Op., under Nikisch; at Budapest Royal Op., 1888-91; at the Hamburg City Theatre, 1891-97, and orch. cond. as successor to Bülow. Beginning 1897 he was in Vienna, 1st as cond. at the Court Op., then from 1900 to 1907 its dir. during a most brilliant period. In 1907 he was called to the Met. Op., where he led German operas, and in 1909 was elected cond. of the N. Y. Philh. Orch. at what was then the largest salary ever paid a leader ($30,000 per annum). Partially as a result of a typhoid infection and partly of a nervous breakdown, he gave up his post and returned to Vienna in 1911, where he died the following year. He has had a strongly augmented fame as a comp. in recent years, owing to the championship of various notable conductors, such as Mengelberg, Bruno Walter, etc., and also to the organization of Mahler societies in various countries, of which there is one in the U. S. His output is highly individual, but there is a strong division of opinion as to its ultimate artistic rank. That he was a master of orchestration is generally admitted; he chose subjects of vast scope for his compositions, with programmes drawn from literature, and in several of his symphs. he employs the human voice as an adjunct; he generally uses a large musical apparatus.

His comps. include: 10 symphonies, 1, D major (1891); 2, C minor, with contralto and chorus (1895); 3, D minor, known as "La Programmatica," with contralto soloist, men's and boys' choruses (1896); 4, G major, known as "The Heavenly Life," with soprano soloist (1901); 5, D minor (1904); 6, A minor (1906); 7, E minor (Prague, 1908); 8, E flat major, in 2 sections, known as "the symphony of a thousand" from the large choral, orch. and solo forces employed (Munich, 1910); 9, D major, posthumous, 1st heard in Vienna under Bruno Walter, 1912; and 10, left unfinished but ed. by Franz Mikorey, and prod. under the title "Sinfonia Engadine" in Berlin, 1913. His other principal works are: "Das Lied von der Erde" for tenor and alto soloists and orch., after old Chinese poems (also a posth. work, first heard 1911, and since often perf. with growing popularity); "Das Klagende Lied," for soloists, chorus and orch.; 4 "Lieder eines Fahrenden Gesellen," 12 songs from "Des Knaben Wunderhorn"; songs to poems by Rückert; 5 "Kindertotenlieder"; 3 "Hefte Lieder"; and other songs from his earlier period; fragments from a youthful opera, "Die Argonauten"; a fairy tale opera, "Rübezahl" with text by the composer; sketches for an opera based on Weber's "Die Drei Pintos," early chamber music, etc. Studies of Mahler have been written by Specht, Bekker, Stefan, Guido Adler and Arthur Neisser. (2) Alma Maria (née Schindler), his wife, a pupil of Labor and Zemlinsky, c. songs; (3) Fritz, his nephew, a conductor, active in Germany and (1936) in the U. S.

- Mendelssohn, (1) (Jakob Ludwig) Felix (rightly Mendelssohn-Bartholdy) (mēn'-d'l-zōn-bār-tōl'-dē), Hamburg, Feb. 3, 1809—Leipzig, Nov. 4, 1847; eminent composer of remarkably early maturity. Great-grandson of a Jewish sch.-master, Mendel, who adopted Christianity and had his children reared in the Christian faith; grandson of the prominent philosopher Moses: son of the banker Abraham M. Pf.-pupil of his mother, Lea Salomon-Bartholdy, as was also his elder sister Fanny (v. HENSEL). The family-life of the Mendelssohns is almost unique in history for its happiness and mutual devotion. M. studied also with L. Berger, Zelter (theory), Hennings (vln.) and Mme. Bigot (pf.). At 10 he entered the Singakademie, as an alto; the same year his setting of the 10th Psalm was performed by the Akademie. Every Sunday a small orch. performed at his father's house, and his comps. were heard here early and often; he usually cond. these concerts even as a child. 1825 his father took him to Paris to consult Cherubini, who offered to teach him, but the father preferred to have him at home. At 12 he began the series of 44 vols., in which he kept copies of his comps. This year he c. bet. 50 and 60 pcs., incl. a cantata, a mus. comedy, a pf.-trio, 2 pf.-sonatas, a vin.-sonata, songs, etc. At 9 he had played the pf. in public; at 12 he was a notable improviser (while playing a Bach fugue at Goethe's request he extemporised the Development which he had suddenly forgotten). At 17 he c. the remarkably original, beautiful and (in advance) Wagnerian overture to "A Midsummer Night's Dream," and the superb octet for strings (op. 20). This same year he matriculated at Berlin Univ. with a translation of Terence, said to be the first German attempt to render Terence in his own metres. He also painted, and was proficient in gymnastics and billiards. At 18 he prod. the succ. opera "Die Hochzeit des Camacho," at the Berlin Opera, in which he used the leit-motif (v. D. D.). At 20 he compelled and conducted the first performance since the composer's death of the Bach "Passion according to St. Matthew" at the Singakademie. This was the first step in the great crusade he waged, taking Bach out of obsolescence into the pre-eminence he now keeps. 1830, M. declined the chair of mus. at the Berlin Univ. The year before he had made the first of nine voyages to England, where he has stood next to Händel in popularity and influence. He cond. his symph. in C minor, at the London Philh., which gave him his first official recognition as a composer. The same year he was invited (in vain) to c. a festival hymn for the anniversary of the emancipation of the natives of Ceylon, and in his letters (in which his sunny nature finds free play) he referred to himself as "Composer to the Island of Ceylon." He appeared also with brilliant succ. as pianist and organist. He now travelled in Scotland, Switzerland, and elsewhere, and returning to London, conducted the "Hebrides" overture, played his G min. concerto and B min. Capriccio brillant, and pub. his first 6 "Songs without Words" (c. in Venice, 1830). His race and his amazing energy and succ. made him much opposition at Berlin, and he was refused the conductorship of the Singakademie in 1833, although he had arranged a series of concerts for the benefit of the Orch. Pension Fund. 1833, he cond. the Lower Rhine Mus. Festival at Düsseldorf, and became Town Mus. Dir. of the ch.-mus., the opera, and two singing-societies, for a salary of 600 thaler (about $450). 1835, he became cond. of the Gewandhaus Orch., Leipzig, which (with Fd. David as leader) he raised to the highest efficiency; the Univ. made him, in 1836, Dr. Phil. h. c.; 1836, he cond. his oratorio "Paulus," the Lower Rhine Festival, Düsseldorf, in 1837 also at the Birmingham Festival. 1837, he m. Cécile Charlotte Sophie Jeanrenaud of Frankfurt, daughter of a French Protestant clergyman. She bore him five children, Karl, Marie, Paul, Felix, and "Lili" (Elisabeth). In 1841 Friedrich Wilhelm IV. invited him to take charge of the grand orch. and choral concerts at Berlin. The hostility to him was however so general that he wished to resign, but at the King's request organised the cath. mus., later famous as the "Domchor" (cath. choir). He was made R. Gen. Mus. Dir. With Schumann, Hauptmann, David, Becker, and Pohlz, in the faculty, he organised the since famous Conservatorium of Mus. at Leipzig (since 1876 the "R. Cons."); he again cond. the Gewandhaus Concerts. 1845 he cond. "Elijah" at Birmingham. He resigned the Gewandhaus conductorship to Gade, and the piano-dept. to Moscheles, whom he invited from London. Upon hearing the news of the sudden death of his idolised sister, Fanny Hensel, he fell insensible and lived only 6 months. M. was kept from opera by inability to find a satisfactory libretto. Besides "Die Hochzeit des Camacho" he left an unfinished opera "Lorelei," an operetta "Son and Stranger," and 5 small unpub. operas. He c. 3 oratorios, "Paulus" (St. Paul), "Elias" (Elijah), and "Christus" (unfinished), the symph. cantata "Lobgesang," op. 52; the ballade, with orch. "Die erste Walpurgis- nacht," op. 60; 2 "Festgesänge," "An die Künstler" (for male chorus and brass), and "Zur Säcularfeier der Buchdruckerkunst" ("Gutenberg Cantata"), with orch.; mus. to the plays "Antigone" (op. 55), "Athalie" (op. 74), "Edipus in Colonus" (op. 93), and "A Midsummer Night's Dream" (op. 61); c. also vocal works with orch., hymn, "Tu es Petrus," Psalms 114, 115, and 95, prayer "Verleih uns Frieden," and sopr. concert-aria "Infelice" (op. 94).

Meyerbeer (mī'-ēr-bār), Giacomo (rightly Jakob Liebmann Beer; by adding the name "Meyer" he secured a large inheritance from a wealthy relative; he then Italianised "Jacob" as "Giacomo"), Berlin, Sept. 5, 1791—Paris, May 2, 1864; son of a Jewish banker; a precocious and remarkable pianist; pupil of Lauska and Clementi; at 7 played in public; studied with Zelter, Anselm, Weber; 1810, was invited by Abbé Vogler to live in his house as a son and pupil; did so for 2 years, one of his fellow-pupils being his devoted friend C. M. von Weber. Here he c. an oratorio and 2 operas "Jephthas Gelübde" (Ct.-Op., Munich, 1813) and "Alimilek" (Munich, 1813), the first a failure, the latter accepted for Vienna, whither he went and made a great succ. as pianist though his opera was not a succ. In his discouragement Salieri told him he needed only to understand the voice, and advised an Italian journey. He went to Venice in 1815 and, carried away with Rossini's vogue, c. 6 Italian operas which had succ., especially "Il Crociato in Egitto" (Venice, 1824). While writing this last he went to Berlin hoping to prod. 3-act German opera, "Das Brandenburger Thor"; though he found no hearing, Weber begged him not to give himself up to Italian influences. In the 6 years of silence that followed, occurred his marriage, his father's death, and the death of his two children. In 1826, he went to Paris to live, and made a profound and exhaustive study of French opera from Lully down, forming his third style, in which acc. to Mendel "he united to the flowing melody of the Italians and the solid harmony of the Germans the pathetic declamation and the varied, piquant rhythm of the French." He made a coalition with the sophisticated librettist, Scribe, and his first French opera, "Robert le Diable" (Gr. Opéra, 1831), was an enormous succ., financially establishing the Opéra itself, though M. had had to pay the manager Véron a large sum to secure its production. Less pop. succ. at first, but more critical favour attended "Les Huguenots" (1836); its prod. at Berlin, 1842, led King Fr. Wm. IV, to call him there as Gen. Mus.-Dir. His opera "Das Feldlager in Schlesien" (1843), had only mod. succ. until Jenny Lind sang it in 1844; 1847, he visited Vienna and London; returning to Berlin he prod. Wagner's new work "Rienzi"; later he obtained "The Flying Dutchman" performance, after its rejection elsewhere. The extent to which he befriended Wagner is matter of bitter controversy, some claiming that he gave only formal assistance while Wagner was obscure, and fought him with underhanded methods and a "press-bureau," when Wagner attained power. At any rate Wagner despised and publicly assailed the music of Meyerbeer. Yet, whether or no Wagner borrowed money from M., he certainly borrowed numberless points of artistic construction from him. In 1849, "Le Prophète" (finished 1843) was prod. at the Paris Gr. Opéra (1849) followed by the successes "L'Étoile du Nord" (Op.-Com., 1854), some of it taken from his "Das Feldlager in Schlesien"; and "Dimorah, ou le Pardon de Ploërmel" (Op. Com., 1859). "L'Africaine" (worked on with constant and characteristic changes from 1838) was prod. at the Paris Gr. Opéra, 1865, a year after his death. M. left by will 10,000 thaler ($7,500) for the foundation of a Meyerbeer Scholarship, for which only Germans under 28, and pupils of the Berlin "Hochschule," the Stern Cons., and the Cologne Cons., are eligible. Competitors must submit a vocal fugue à 8 (for double chorus), an overture for full orch., and a dram. cantata à 3, with orch. (text of cantata, and text and theme of fugue being given). The fund gives six months in Italy, six in Paris, and six more in Vienna, Munich and Dresden together. M. c. also incid. music to "Struensee" (the tragedy by his brother, Michael Beer; Berlin, 1846), choruses to Æschylus' "Eumenides"; festival-play "Das Hoffest von Ferrara"; monodrama "Thevelindens Liebe," for sopr. solo, chorus with clar. obbligato (Vienna, 1813); cantatas, "Gutenberg" and "Maria und ihr Genius" (for the silver wedding of Prince and Princess Carl of Prussia); "Der Genius der Musik am Grabe Beethovens"; serenade "Brautgeleite aus der Heimath" (for the wedding of Princess Louise of Prussia); ode to Rauch (the sculptor), with orch.; 7 sacred odes a cappella; "Festhymnus" (for the King of Prussia's silver wedding); 3 "Fackeltänze," for wind-band, also scored for orch. Monteverde (môn-tā-vèr'-dè) (he signed his name, Monteverdi), Claudio (Giov. A.), Cremona (bapt., May 15), 1567—Venice, Nov. 29, 1643; eminent composer; when young, vla.-player in the orch. of Duke Gonzaga, Mantua, and studied cpt. with Ingegneri. At 17 and at 20 pub. Canzonette à 3, and madrigals, in which appeared (among many unintentional or unbeautiful effects) the harmonic innovations for which he is famous and which led Rockstro to call him "not only the greatest musician of his own age, but the inventor of a system of harmony which has remained in uninterrupted use to the present day." His progressions include the unprepared entrance of dissonances, the dominant seventh and the ninth (v. D. D., CHORD, PROGRESSION, SUSPENSION PREPARATION, etc.). He was bitterly assailed in pamphlets, particularly by Artuso, and he replied in kind. The outcome was his complete triumph and the establishment of the new school of song and accompaniment. His victory, while salutary for art in general and dramatic song in particular, was too complete; for the bigoted defenders of polyphonic music dragged down with them in their ruin the splendid edifice of church-mus. built to perfection by Palestrina and others. 1603, M. became his teacher's successor as Maestro to the Duke and c. for the wedding of the Duke's son to Margherita of Savoy the opera "Arianne," in which Ariadne's grief moved the audience to tears. In 1608 he prod. his opera "Orfeo" with the unheard-of orchestra of 36 pieces (Riemann states that "Arianne" was the 2d work and "Orfeo" the first). "Orfeo" was published in 1609 and in 1615, and the score shows great modernity, Rockstro comparing its preludes with one bass-note sustained throughout to the Introduction to "Das Rheingold," and its continual recitative also to that of Wagner.

In 1608 appeared his mythological spectacle "Ballo delle Ingrate." Vespers and motets (pub. 1610) gave him such fame that he was in 1613 made Maestro di Cappella at San Marco, Venice, at the unprecedented salary of 300 ducats (the usual salary had been 200), but it was raised to 500 in 1616, and a house and traveling expenses given him. 1621, his very romantic Requiem was given with effect. In 1624, he introduced the then startling novelty of an instrumental tremolo (which the musicians at first refused to play) into his dramatic interlude, "Il Combattimento di Tancredi e Clorinda"; 1627 he c. 5 dramatic episodes incl. "Bradamante" and "Dido," for the court at Parma; 1630, opera "Proserpina Rapita"; in 1637 in the first opera-house opened at Venice, the Teatro di S. Cassiano, operas having hitherto been performed at the palaces of the nobility (v. PERI) M. prod. the operas "Adone" (Venice, 1639); "Le Nozze di Enea con Lavinia" (1641), "Il Ritorno di Ulisse in Patria" (1641), and "L'Incoronazione di Poppea" (1642). He earned the title of "the father of the art of instrumentation"; was the most popular and influential composer of his time.

In 1663 he joined the priesthood and is heard of no more. C. masses, psalms, hymns, magnificats, motets, madrigals, etc.

There has been a strong revival of interest in his music within recent years. D'Indy arranged "Poppea" and "Orfeo" for prod. in Paris; and the latter work was also rescored by Respighi and prod. in Rome. A biog. by Prunières was published, 1926.

Kiev, Russia, Aug. 10, 1900; one of most individual and accomplished of Soviet composers; came into internat'l prominence for his descriptive works for orch. and chamber ensembles which are based on the rhythms and sounds of labor; esp. "The Soviet Iron Foundry," in radical dissonant style, which has been played by a number of Amer. orchs.; piano pieces, etc.

Philh. Concerts; 1893 the Grand Duke app. him Gen. Mus. Dir.; 1886, cond.-in-chief, Bayreuth; invited to be ct.-cond. but he declined; 1898 declined a similar call to Munich; led succ. concerts London and Paris; 1892, he m. (2) Henriette Standhartner (b. Vienna, Dec. 6, 1866, ct. opera singer at Weimar and Carlsruhe). M. came to N. Y., 1903-04, to conduct the first perfs. of "Parsifal" outside Bayreuth, but owing to protests of Wagner family did not do so; 1904 he became co-director of the Royal Academy of Music, Munich; he was cond. the United Royal Operas there, when he fell ill of arteriosclerosis and died in July, 1911. Shortly before his death he was divorced from his first wife and married Sdenka Fassbender, of the Munich Opera. He is particularly known for his orch. arrangements of ballet suites by Gluck and Rameau, but also c. succ. operas, "Agnes Bernauer" (Weimar, 1880), and the 1-act "Fürst und Sänger" (Carlsruhe, 1893); prod. also a "Festspiel," "Eberstein," songs, etc.

Mouret (moo-rā), J. Jos., Avignon, 1682-insane asylum, Charenton, 1738; conductor and composer.

Moussorgsky (mōō-sōrg'-skē), Modest Petrovich, Karevo, Ukraine, March 28, 1835—St. Petersburg, March 28, 1881; one of the most important Russian composers, perhaps the most original of the Nationalistic school of that country and the "father" of the whole modern movement for anti-formalism, and expression by means of folk idioms. He was the son of an impoverished noble family; early learned to play the piano, 1st from his mother, then from a teacher named Herke. He was largely self-instructed in comp. and began to compose songs before he was 20. He entered the Russian army, and as a young officer was introduced by César Cui to Balakireff (with whom he had some fitful instruction in comp.). He had also come to know Dargomizhsky earlier. He lived in St. Petersburg as a minor State official, his life a constant struggle with poverty, depression and drink. One of the bright spots was a journey to South Russia as accompanist to the singer Leonowa in 1879. His death occurred at the age of 46 in the Nikolai Military Hospital at Petersburg. Largely unappreciated by his contemporaries, but his fame has steadily increased since his death. Especially in his marvellous collection of some 60 songs, most of them grim and somewhat mordant, he has shown an outstanding gift for expression and character portrayal. He is most celebrated for his 2 principal operas, the stupendous nationalistic folk drama, "Boris Godounoff," conceived most originally with the people as the main protagonists and the chorus the featured performers, and the lesser but also impressive "Khovanstchina," both based on Russian folk and liturgical idioms. The first was originally prod. in St. Petersburg, 1874, but withdrawn after a few perfis. Fifteen years after M.'s death it was revised by Rimsky-Korsakoff, who added to it his brilliant orchestration, and smoothed down what he considered its "uncouth" qualities. In this form it made its way over the opera stages of the world and made a profound impression. Only in 1925 was the original version of the work published by the Soviet musical authorities and eagerly performed in Europe and the U. S. (concert hearing under Stokowski, Phila.). Other smaller operatic works are "The Marriage" (one-act, based on Gogol's comedy), 1868; and "The Fair at Sorotchinski," partially finished and completed by Tcherepnine. As an orch. composer, M. is best known by the symph. poem, "Night on the Bald Mountain," much revised by Rimsky-Korsakoff. His famous suite of descriptive pieces for piano, "Pictures from an Exhibition," has been orchestrated by Ravel and has enjoyed wide popularity; also c. song cycles, "Without Sunlight," "Songs and Dances of Death," "The Children's Room"; (chorus) "The Defeat of Sennacherib," etc. The chief Moussorgsky biographies are by Calvocoressi and Riesemann; a collection of his letters has been published. (See article, page 506.)

Mouton (moo-tōn) (Jean de Hollingue (ōl'-läng) (called "Mouton")), Holling (?), near Metz—St. Quentin, Oct. 30, 1522; important contrapuntist; c. motets, masses, psalms, chansons, etc.

Mouzin (moo-zān), P. Nicolas (called Édouard), Metz, July 13, 1822—Paris, 1894; studied at Metz branch of the Paris Cons.; 1842 teacher there, 1854, dir.; 1871, teacher at the Paris Cons.; writer; c. 2 operas, symphs., etc.

Mozart (mō'-tsärt) (originally Motzert), (1) (Jn. G.) Ld., Augsburg, 1719—Salzburg, 1787; father of W. A. M.; dram. composer. (2) (Maria) Anna (called "Nannerl"), Salzburg, 1751—1829; daughter and pupil of above; pianist; c. org. pcs.

(3) Wolfgang Amadeus (baptised Jns. Chrysostomus Wolfgangus Theophilus), Salzburg, Jan. 27, 1756—Vienna, Dec. 5, 1791; son of (1), and bro. of (2); one of the major divinities of music. Of unrivalled precocity in performance, composition, and acoustic sensitiveness; at 3 his talent and his discovery of thirds (v. D. D.), led his father to teach him. He began at once to compose little minuets which his father and later he himself noted down. He and his sister made a joint début at Munich, when he was barely 6, though he had appeared as a performer 4 months before in a comedy at the Univ. at Salzburg. He appeared the same year in Vienna, fascinating the court. He now learned the vln. and org. without instruction. At 7 he was in Paris, where his first works were pub., "II Sonates pour le clavecin." The next year he was in London, delighting royalty, winning the honest praise of musicians and coming victoriously out of remarkable tests of his ability as sight-reader and improviser. During his father's illness, while silence was required, he c. his first symph. Here his 6 sonatas for vln. and harps, were pub. and his first symph. performed frequently. He won the friendship of J. Chr. Bach, and was given singing lessons by Manzuoli. Before leaving England he wrote a motet to English words in commemoration of a visit to the British Museum. The family stopped at various cities on the way home, the children playing at courts with constant succ., a concert being given at Amsterdam in 1766, at which all the instrumental music was M.'s. At Biberach he competed as organist without result against a boy 2 years older, Sixtus Bachmann. Returning to Salzburg, in 1766, M. was set to studying Fux, etc. 1767 he c. an oratorio, 1768, an opera, "La Finta Semplice," at the Emperor's request. Its production was postponed by the now jealous musicians till 1769. Meanwhile a German opera "Bastien und Bastienne" had been performed, and M. made his début as cond. in 1768 (aged 12), with his solemn mass. The Archbishop made him Konzertmeister, with salary, but his father wished him to enjoy study in Italy. His concerts were sensations, the Pope gave him the order of the Golden Spur (also given to Gluck), and at his father's behest he signed a few compositions by his new title Signor Cavaliere Amadeo, but soon dropped this. After tests he was elected a member of the Accademia Filarmonica of Bologna. At 14 he gave a concert at Mantua in which according to the programme he promises to play "a Symphony of his own composition; a Clavichord-concerto, which will be handed to him, and which he will immediately play at sight; a Sonata handed him in like manner, which he will provide with variations, and afterwards repeat in another key; an Aria, the words for which will be handed to him, and which he will immediately set to music and sing himself, accompanying himself on the clavichord; a Sonata for clavichord on a subject given him by the leader of the violins; a Strict Fugue on a theme to be selected, which he will improvise on the clavichord; a trio, in which he will execute a violin-part all' improvviso; and finally, the latest Symphony composed by himself." In Rome, after twice hearing Allegri's famous "Miserere," long kept secret, he correctly wrote out the entire score from memory. At Milan he prod. 3-act opera seria "Mitridate, re di Ponto" (1770), which had 20 consecutive performances under his direction. 1771, he brought out a dramatic serenade, "Ascanio in Alba," for the wedding of Archduke Ferdinand. 1772 his friendly protector, the Archbishop of Salzburg, died; his successor, Hieronymous, Count of Colloredo, treated M. with the greatest inappreciation, compelling him to sit with the servants (though M. was frequently entertained at the houses of the nobility with great distinction); and when M. demanded his discharge in 1781, he had him kicked out by a servant. It was for his installation that M. had c. the dramatic "Il Sogno di Scipione" (1775), "Lucio Silla" (1772), and "La Finta Giardiniera," prod. at Milan, under his own direction, 1775; later "Il Re Pastore" at Salzburg during Archduke Maximilian's visit. 1778 he went with his mother to Paris, where he won little attention in the struggle between Gluck and Piccini. At length after his mother's death he returned to Salzburg as Konzertmeister, and ct.-organist; but settled in Vienna, after prod. the opera "Idomeneo" (Munich, Jan., 1781). On commission for the Emperor he wrote ("Belmonte und Constance, oder Die Entführung aus dem Serail," prod. with great succ., despite the machinations of the theatrical clique, 1782; a month later he m. Constance Weber (the sister of Aloysia, whom he had loved in Mannheim). She bore him six children, four sons and two daughters. The small receipts for compositions and concerts were quickly spent on luxuries beyond their means, and as neither was a good manager of resources, many hardships followed. After two unfinished operas he prod. a mus. comedy, "Der Schauspieldirektor" (Schönbrunn, 1786). May 1, in Vienna, his opera buffa "Le Nozze di Figaro" ("Marriage of Figaro") was rescued from intrigues into a very great succ. The then famous librettist Da Ponte next wrote the book for "Don Giovanni" ("Don Juan"), which made a very great succ. at Prague (1787), and led the Emperor to appoint M. "chamber composer," at 800 gulden ($400) a year (Gluck, just deceased, had 2,000 gulden). 1789 he accompanied Prince Karl Lichnowski to Berlin, playing for the Dresden court, and at the Thomaskirche, Leipzig. King Fr. Wm. II., hearing him at Potsdam, offered him the post of 1st Royal cond. with 3,000 thaler ($2,250) a year, but M. would not abandon his "good Kaiser"; still Fr. Wm. II. ordered three quartets, for which he paid well. Hearing this, the Emperor ordered the opera buffa "Così fan Tutte" (Vienna, 1790). Soon after its production the Emperor died; his successor Ld. II. cared little for M., leaving him in greatest hardship. His devoted friend Jos. Haydn now went to London. M. made a tour, pawning his plate to pay the expenses. For the coronation of Leopold II., as King of Bohemia, at Prague, he was invited to write the festival opera "La Clemenza di Tito," performed 1791. He returned to Vienna and c. "Die Zauberflöte" ("Magic Flute," Vienna, Sept. 30, 1791), a work in which are exploited the allegories of the Masonry of which M. was a member. It made a decided succ. He was, however, growing weaker and suffering from fainting fits, claiming that he had been poisoned. A mysterious stranger had commissioned him to write a requiem, and M. began it with a superstitious dread that the messenger had come from the other world to announce his death. It has since been learned that he was Leutgeb, the steward of Count von Walsegg, who gave the work out as his own, not, however, destroying the MS. The work was not quite completed by Mozart, who had his pupil Süssmayer fill out the incomplete portions. Mozart died of malignant typhus. A violent rain-storm coming up in the midst of the funeral, the party turned back leaving the body to be interred in some spot, never after discovered, in the ground allotted to paupers in the St. Mary cemetery. The profits of a Mus. Festival given by the Frankfort "Liederkrantz," June 25, 1838, were devoted to founding a Mozart Scholarship, the interest amounting in 1896 to 1500 marks, applied quadrennially to the aid of talented young composers of limited means. At Salzburg the Mozarteum, a municipal musical institute founded in his memory, consists of an orch. soc. pledged to perform his church-music in the 14 churches of the town, to give 12 concerts yearly, and to sustain a mus.-sch. in which the musicians of the orch. give instruction.

A complete ed. of M.'s works pub. by Breitkopf & Härtel (1876-86), contains much church-mus. inc. 15 masses, cantatas "Davidde penitente" (masonic), "Maurerfreude" and "Kleine Freimaurercantate," etc.; stage-works, besides those mentioned, "Die Schuldigkeit des ersten Gebots" (only partially his own), "Apollo et Hyacinthus" (Latin comedy with mus.); "Zaide" (unfinished); "Thamos, König in Aegypten" (choruses and entr'actes; Berlin, 1786); "Idomeneo, re di Creta, ossia Iliä ed Idamante." ORCH. WORKS: 41 symph.; 2 symph. movements; 31 divertimenti, serenades, and cassations; 9 marches; 25 dances, "Masonic Funeral-Music"; "A Musical Jest" for string-orch. and 2 horns; a sonata for bassoon and 'cello; phantasie for Glockenspiel; andante for barrel-organ, etc.; 6 vln.-concertos, bassoon-concerto, a concerto for flute and harp, 2 flute-concertos, horn-concertos, a clarinet-concerto, 25 pf.-concertos, a double concerto for 2 pfs., a triple concerto for 3 pfs. CHAMBER-MUSIC: 7 string-quintets; 26 string-quartets; "Nachtmusik" for string-quintet; 42 vln.-sonatas, etc. PF.-MUSIC: for 4 hands; 5 sonatas, and an andante with variations; for 2 pfs., a fugue, and a sonata; 17 solo sonatas; a fantasie and fugue; 3 fantasias; 36 cadenzas to pf.-concertos; rondos, etc.; 17 organ sonatas, etc. VOCAL MUSIC: 27 arias, and 1 rondo for sopr. with orch.; German war-song; a comic duet; 34 songs; a song with chorus and org.; a 3-part chorus with org.; a comic terzet with pf.; 20 canons.

His unstageworthy opera "Idomeneo" was provided with a new book, and extensively rescored by Richard Strauss for the Munich Fest., 1930. The best of many biographies is by Otto Jahn (1856-59, 4 volumes in English, London, 1882), etc.

His letters, ed. by Hans Mersmann, have also been published and translated in two volumes. One of his two overtures was found at the Paris Cons. 1901. Six unpublished sonatas were found in Buckingham Palace, 1902. A violin concerto (the "Adelaide"), c. at 10 yrs., was recovered in 1934.

Other memoirs have been issued by Berlioz, Dent, Holmes, Kerst, Breakspeare and Mersmann. (See article, page 508.)

Paesioello. Vide PAISTELLO.

Paganini (pāg-ā-nē'-nē), Niccolò, Genoa, Oct. 27, 1782—Nice, May 27, 1840; pre-eminent violin-virtuoso. Studied with G. Servetto and G. Dosta; at 8 he c. a vln.-sonata; at 9 he played in public with greatest succ.; from 1795 he studied with Ghiretti and Aless. Rolla (though P-denied this), at Parma. 1798, he ran away from his severe father after a concert at Lucca, and played at Pisa and other places. At 15 he was a passionate gambler, and very dissipated. Fits of gambling alternated with periods when he practised 10 hours a day, the result being a ruined constitution. He pawned his violin to pay a gambling debt, but a M. Levron presented him with a Joseph Guarnerius, which P. willed to Genoa. In 1804 he went home, and practised till 1805, when he had extraordinary succ. making a sensation by brilliant performances on the G string alone; soon ct.-soloist at Lucca; then to 1827 he toured Italy, crushing all rivalry with an extraordinary technic; 1827, Pope Leo XII. conferred on him the Order of the Golden Spur; he played at Vienna, receiving from the municipality the great gold medal of St. Salvator; from the Emperor the honorary title of ct.-virtuoso. 1829, Berlin; 1831, Paris; 1831, London. 1833-34, Paris; then retired to his villa at Parma. He lost 50,000 francs on a scheme to establish a gambling house with concert-annex at Paris, the gambling-license being refused. Though his earnings were enormous, he was not generous except spasmodically; he gave Berlioz $4,000 as a compliment for his "Symphonic Fantastique" (B. had written "Harold in Italy" for P.'s Stradivari viola). He m. the singer Antonia Bianchi, and he left his son Achille $400,000 (£80,000). He died of phthisis of the larynx. His technic was never equalled, and it provoked superstitious dread among his auditors, his ghoulis appearance aiding the impression. He was sometimes the charlatan and some of his effects were due to special tunings (scordatures), but his virtuosity has never been rivalled. C. 24 caprices for violin-solo; of which pf.-transcriptions were made by Schumann and Liszt; 12 sonatas for violin and guitar (op. 2); do. (op. 3); 3 gran quartetti; concerto in E \flat (solo part in D, for a vln. tuned a semitone high); concerto in B min.; "La Campanella," with Rondo à la clochette (op. 7); variations on many themes, "Le Streghe," "God save the King," "The Carnival of Venice," etc.; concert Allegro "Moto perpetuo" (op. 12); a sonata with accomp. of vln., 'cello or pf., and studies, etc. Biog. by Fétis (Paris, 1851; London, 1852); A. Niggi (1882); O. Bruni (Florence, 1873). Other studies by Stratton (1907), Prod'homme (1907), Bonaventura (1911), Kapp (1913), Day (1929), and Codignola (1936).

Paisiello (pā-ē-sī-ēl'-lō) (or Paesiello) (pā-ā-sī-ēl'-lō), Taranto, Italy, May 9, 1740—Naples, June 5, 1816. At 5 studied at Jesuit sch. in Taranto with a priest Resta; later studied with Durante, Cotumacci and Abos, Cons. di S. Onofrio, at Naples; teacher there, 1759-61. He c. masses, etc., till a comic intermezzo (Cons. Theatre, 1763) won him a commission to c. an opera for the Marsigli Th., at Bologna, where his comic opera "La Pupilla, ossia il Mondo alla Rovescia," was prod. 1764. (Grove calls this work 2 operas.) In 12 years he prod. 50 operas mainly succ., though in rivalry with Piccinni and Cimarosa; these include "Il Marchese di Tullipano" (Rome, 1766); "L'Idolo Cinese" (Naples, 1767) and "La Serva Padrona" (Naples, 1769). He was notable also for his jealousy and devotion to intrigue. 1776-84, St. Petersburg, with a splendid salary and on invitation from Empress Catherine. Here he prod. 1776 "Il Barbiere di Siviglia," gaining such succ. that the later and better opera by Rossini was received as a sacrilege with great hostility at first; on his return from Russia he prod. at Vienna one of his best works, "Il Re Teodoro," and 12 symph. for Joseph II. 1784-99, cond. to Ferdinand IV. of Naples; and prod. various works incl. "L'Olimpiade" (1786) and "Nina, o la Pazza per Amore" (1789), "La Molinara" and "I Zingari in Fiera." During the revolution 1799-1801, he won the favour of the Republican govt., also regained the favour of royalty at the Restoration, till Napoleon who had always admired him called him to Paris, 1802-03, as cond. Here P. lived in magnificence, lordling it over Cherubini and Méhul. 1803-15, he was in Naples again as ct.-cond. In 1815, on the return of Ferdinand IV., he was reduced to a small salary; soon his wife died, and he shortly after. A composer of great prolificity, melodic grace and simplicity, his works are rarely heard now. He c. 100 operas, a Passion oratorio (Warsaw, 1784); 3 solemn masses, Te Deum for double chorus and 2 orch.; requiem with orch. (performed at his own funeral); 30 masses with orch., 40 motets, 12 symphs., and other things in proportion. Biog. by Le Seuer (1816), Quatremere de Quincy (1817), Schizzi (Milan, 1833), Villarosa (Naples, 1840); other memoirs by Palma (1891), Pupino (1908), Panareo (1910), and Abert (1919).

Paladilhe (pāl-ä-däl), Émile, Montpellier, June 3, 1844—Paris, Jan. 8, 1926; studied with Marmontel (pf.), Benoit (org.) and Halévy (cpt.), Paris Cons.; won 1st prize for pf. and org., 1857; 1860, Grand prix de Rome, with the cantata "Le Czar Ivan IV." (Opéra, 1860); from Rome, he sent an Italian opera buffa, an overture and a symph.; 1872, prod. the 1-act comic opera "Le Passant" (Op.-Com.) followed by 5 operas incl. the still pop. "Patrie" (Opéra, 1886; 1889, Hamburg, as "Vaterland"; 1895, Milan, as "Patria"); and c. also 2 masses, a symph., chamber music, piano pieces, songs, etc.

Palestrina (pä-lēs-trē'-nä) (rightly Giovanni Pierluigi Sante, called da Palestrina, from his birthplace), Palestrina, near Rome, probably Dec. 27, 1525 (though date has long been controversial)—Rome, Feb. 2, 1594. One of the most revered names in liturgical music and the foremost composer of the Roman Catholic Church; he was b. of poor parents, little is known of his early life; he is said to have earned his living first as a church-singer; probably studied in Goudimel's sch., 1540, and was, 1544-51, organist at Palestrina, then magister puerorum (master of the boys), in the Cappella Giulia, with title "maestro della capella della Basilica Vaticana." He dedicated a book of masses to Pope Julius III., who, Jan., 1554, admitted him to the Pontifical Chapel as a singer, against the rules, P. having a wife and no voice. July 30, 1555, Paul IV. dismissed him with a pension of 6 scudi per month. This blow affected him so deeply (he had 4 children to support) that he suffered nervous prostration. On Oct. 1, however, the Pope appointed him cond. at the Lateran. 1560, he prod. his famous "Impropéria" (v. D. D.) for Holy Week, with such succ., that the Pope secured them for the Sistine Chapel, where they have been performed on every Good Friday since. 1561, he took the better-salaried post of cond. at Santa Maria Maggiore. The Pope was determined to rid church-mus. of its astonishing secular qualities: first, the use of street-ballads, even when indecent, as canti fermi, many of the choir actually singing the words; and second, the riotous counterpoint with which the sacred texts and the secular tunes were overrun. The Council of Trent and a committee of 8 cardinals, considering the matter seriously, decided not to revolutionise church-music entirely, and in 1564 commissioned Palestrina, by this time famous, to write a mass which should reform, without uprooting, ecclesiastical polyphony. He wrote three, all noble, the third, the "Missa papæ Marcelli," winning the most profound praise. He was called "the saviour of music" and appointed composer to the Pontifical Chapel. 1571, he became and remained till death maestro of St. Peter's. He also composed for the "Congregazione del Oratorio" (v. NERI); taught in Nanini's sch., and was from 1581 maestro concertatore to Prince Buoncompagni. Pope Sixtus V. wished to appoint him maestro of the Sistine Chapel, but the singers refused to serve under a layman. He was, however, commissioned to revise the Roman Gradual and Antiphonal, by Pope Gregory XIII.; he pub. the "Directorium chori" (1582), the offices of Holy Week (1587), and the Præfationes (1588), but on the death of his pupil and assist. Giudetti, he was compelled to leave the work unfinished. A complete ed. of his works is pub. by Breitkopf and Härtel: Vols. i.-vii. contain 262 motets; Vol. viii., 45 hymns; Vol. ix., 68 offertories; Vols. x.-xxiv., 92 Masses; Vol. xxv., 9 Lamentations each in various arrangements in 3, 4, 5, 6, or 8 parts; Vol. xxvi., 17 Litanies, Motets and Psalms in 3-12 parts; Vol. xxvii., 35 Magnificats; Vol. xxviii., about 90 Italian (secular) Madrigals; Vol. xxix., 56 Church-Madrigals (Latin); Vol. xxx. (from colls. of 16th-17th cent.), 12 Canticiones sacræ, 12 Cant. profanæ, and 14 Cant. sacræ; Vol. xxxi. (from archives of the Pontifical Chapel, etc.), 56 miscellaneous numbers, many doubtful, incl. 11, "Esercizi sopra la scala"; Vol. xxxii., 60 miscellaneous comp. incl. 8 Ricercari, Responses, Antiphones, etc.; Vol. xxxiii., Documents, Index, Bibliography, etc. Among his best masses are "Æterna Christi numerus," "Dies sanctificatus," "O sacrum convivium," in 8 parts; "Assumpta est Maria in coelum," "Dilexi quoniam," "Ecce ego Joannes," "Papæ Marcelli" in 6 parts; "Tu es Petrus" in 6 parts; these, the Motet "Exaudi Domine," 3 Lamentations, also selected Madrigals, Canzonets, etc., are pub. separately. Biog. by Baini (Rome, 1828); A. Bartolini (Rome, 1870); Bäumker (1877); Cametti (Milan, 1895). Also further studies by Brenet (1905); Raf. Casimiri (1918); Zoe Kendrick Pyne (1922); P. - Pergolesi (pēr-gō-lā'-sē), Giov. Bat., Jesi, Papal States, Jan. 4, 1710—(of consumption) Pozzuoli, near Naples, March 16, 1736; eminent composer. At 16 entered the Cons. dei Poveri di Gesù Cristo, Naples, and studied with de Matteis (vln.), Greco (cpt.), Durante, and Feo (cpt.). He speedily won attention by novel harmonies and threw off contrapuntal shackles early. His last student-work, the biblical drama "San Guglielmo D'Aquitania" (prod. with comic intermezzi at the convent of S. Agnello Maggiore, Naples, 1731), shows the beginnings of vivid and original fancy. He prod. at Naples in 1731 the excellent and novel opera "Salustia," and the intermezzo "Amor Fa l'Uomo Cieco," which had no succ., while the opera seria "Ricimerò" was a distinct failure. But he found a patron in the Prince of Stigliano, for whom he wrote 30 terzets for vln. with bass; he was commissioned to compose a solemn mass for Naples, which was performed after the earthquake of 1731, as a votive offering to the patron saint of the city. It brought him immediate fame. After four stage-works, prod. in 1732 the intermezzo "La Serva Padrona" (Naples, 1733); won him note as a dramatic composer and has served as a model of comic operas since; it has only 2 characters and the accompaniment is a string-quartet with occasional support of horns. His subsequent 6 operas were received without interest (except for the intermezzo to "Adriano," first given as "Liivietta e Tracollo" and later as "La Contadina Astuta"), though after his death they were revived with immense enthusiasm, and their harmonic novelty, sweetness, delicacy and melodic charm were recognised, "La Serva Padrona" and "Il Maestro di Musica" becoming standards in France. Of the failure of "L'Olimpiade," v. DUNI. Irregular habits due to regular disappointments undermined Pergolesi's constitution, and he died of consumption at the baths of Pozzuoli, finishing five days before his death his masterpiece, the celebrated "Stabat Mater" for soprano and alto with string orch. and org. He c. also 3 masses with orch.; Dixit for double chorus and orch.; a Kyrie cum gloria; a Miserere, and a Laudate with orch., etc.; an oratorio, "La Natività," a cantata "Orfeo" for solo voice and orch.; a cantata, "Giasone"; 6 cantatas with string-accomp.; 30 trios, etc. Biog. by Blasis (1817); Villarosa (1831). Other memoirs by Boyer, Fracassetti, Schletterer, Faustina-Fasini, Radiciotti, Barchiesi, etc.

Piccinni (or Piccini or Picinni) (pîch'in-nē), (1) Nicolà, Bari, Jan. 16, 1728—Passy, near Paris, May 7, 1800; operatic composer, famous as a rival of Gluck. Son of a musician who opposed his tastes. The Bishop of Bari recognising his talent and irrepressible passion for music overcame opposition, and at 14 he entered the Cons. di San Onofrio, Naples, remaining for 12 years, as favourite pupil of Leo and Durante. He entered into competition with the popular Logroscino, and prod. the v. succ. opera-buffa "Le Donne Dispettose" (1754), followed by (1755) "Gelosia per Gelosia" and "Il Curioso del suo proprio Danno," which had the unprecedented run of four years; "Alessandro nelle Indie" (Rome, 1758), and "Cecchina Zitiella, o La Buona Figliuola" (Rome, 1760), the most success. work of its kind in Europe, though written in 3 weeks, were hailed as masterworks. His new dramatic fervour and his extended duets and varied finales gave him such prestige that he is said to have c. 133 dramatic works, incl. "Il Re Pastore" (1760); "L'Olimpiade" (1761) previously though less succ. set by Pergolesi, Galuppi and Jomelli; revised 1771; "Bernice" (1764); "La Cecchina Mareiata" (1765); "Didone abbandonata" (1767); "Antigone" (1771). 1773, the Roman public favoured his pupil Anfossi, and hissed one of P.'s operas, which prostrated him with grief; on recovering he regained favour with "I Viaggiatori." In response to flattering invitations in 1776 he removed with his family to Paris, spent a whole year learning the tongue and writing his first French opera, "Roland" (Opéra, 1778), which had a succ. said to be due largely to the necessity the anti-Gluck faction was under to find a rival. The war between the "Gluckists" and "Piccinists" was violent and incessant, though P. regretted his position and made a vain effort after Gluck's death to raise a fund for annual concerts in his memory. He had succ. with the following French operas, "Le fat méprisé" (1779), "Atys" (1780), "Didon," "Le dormeur éveillé," and "Le faux Lord" (all 3 in 1783). In 1778, as dir. It. Opéra, whose performances

- alternated with the French company at the Opera, he produced his best Italian works with succ. The management simultaneously commissioned both Gluck and P. to set the opera "Iphigénie en Tauride"; P. had his libretto rewritten by Ginguené, and his version was delayed till after Gluck had made a triumph and left Paris. P.'s opera, though usually called a failure, ran 17 nights in spite of having an intoxicated prima donna on the first night to start the joke "Iphigénie en Champagne." Half a dozen others failed or were never performed. A new rival, Sacchini, now appeared. When this second succ. rival died, the large-hearted Piccinni delivered a glowing funeral-eulogy over him. 1784, he was Maître de chant at the new "École royale de musique et déclamation." His last operatic attempts in French were unsucc. At the outbreak of the Revolution he lost his positions, and retired to Naples, on a pension. But his daughter m. a young French radical, and P., suspected of republicanism, was kept a prisoner in his own house for four years, in extreme poverty. 1798, he returned to France, was fêted at the Cons., presented with 5,000 francs and small irregular pension. He was prostrated for some months by paralysis; a sixth inspectorship was created at the Cons. for him, but he soon fell ill and died. Rameau (rä-mò), (1) J. Philippe, Dijon, Sept. 25, 1683—of typhoid, Paris, Sept. 12, 1704; eminent as theorist, composer and organist. At 7 he could play at sight on the clavicin any music given him; from 10 to 14 he attended the Jesuit Coll. at Dijon; but taking no interest in anything but music was dismissed and left to study music by himself. He was sent to Italy, 1701, to break off a love affair, but did not care to study there, and joined a travelling French opera-troupe as violinist. Later he became organist at two churches in Paris, 1717. He studied org. with Louis Marchand, who found his pupil a rival, and in a competition favoured his competitor, Daquin, as organist of St. Paul's; R. went as organist to Lille, later to Clermont (where lived his brother (2) Claude, a clever organist, and his father (3) Jean Fran., a gifted but dissipated organist and poet). After 4 years he returned to Paris, and pub. a treatise on harm. which attracted some attention. He became organist Sainte-Croix-de-la-Bretonnerie; and c. songs and dances for pieces by Piron, at the Op.-Com.; 1726, he pub. his epoch-making "Nouveau système de musique théorique," based on his own studies of the monochord (v. d. d.); in this work among many things inconsistent, involved and arbitrary (and later modified or discarded) was much of remarkable even sensational novelty, such as the discovery of the law of chord-inversion. He founded his system on (1) chord-building by thirds; (2) the classification of chords and their inversions to one head each, thus reducing the consonant and dissonant combinations to a fixed number of root-chords; (3) a fundamental bass ("basse fondamentale," not our thorough-bass), an imaginary series of root-tones forming the real bases of all the chord-progressions of a composition. His theories provoked much criticism, but soon won him pupils from far and wide and the pre-eminence as theorist that he enjoyed as organist. He followed his first theoretic treatises with 5 other treatises. He now obtained the libretto "Samson" from Voltaire (whom he strikingly resembled in appearance) but the work was rejected on account of its biblical subject. "Hippolyte et Aricie," libretto by Abbé Flegelin, was prod. at the Opéra, 1733, with so little succ. that he was about to renounce the stage, but his friends prevailed and he prod., 1735, the succ. ballet-opera "Les Indes Galantes," and at the age of 54 his masterpiece "Castor et Pollux," a great succ. as were most of his later works for 23 years, "Les Fêtes d'Hébé" (1739), "Dardanus" (1739), "La Princesse de Navarre," "Les Fêtes de Polhymnie," and "Le Temple de la Gloire" (1745), "Les Fêtes de l'Hymen et de l'Amour, ou les Dieux d'Egypte" (1747), "Zaïs" (1748), "Pygmalion" (1748), "Platée ou Junon jalouse," "Neis" and "Zoroastre" (the "Samson" music with another libretto) (1749), "Acanthe et Céphise," "La Guirlande," and "La Naissance d'Osiris" (1751), "Daphnis et Eglé," "Lycis et Delie" and "Le Retour d'Astrée" (1753), "Anacréon," "Les Surprises de l'Amour," and "Les Sybarites" (1757), "Les Paladins" (1760). He c. also others not prod. His mus. is full of richness, novelty and truth, though he wrote only fairly for the voice. He said himself that were he younger he would revolutionise his style along the lines of Pergolesi. 1745 the King made him chamber-composer. His patent of nobility was registered, just before his death. He c. also many books of mus. for clavicin, etc.; of these a complete

ed. is pub. by Steingraber, edited by Riemann. In 1895 a complete ed. of his works was begun by Durand, Saint-Saëns and Malherbe, including his cantatas and motets. Ravel (ră-vēl'), Maurice, Ciboure, France, March 7, 1875—Paris, Dec. 28, 1937; one of the most brilliant and resourceful of modern composers, not slavishly a follower in the tradition of Debussy, but amplifying the impressionistic formulae with an individual quality and virtuosity. His birthplace is in the Pyrenees, and childhood impressions of Spanish music are evident in some of his works. At 12 he took up res. in Paris, where he entered the Cons. in 1899, a pupil of Gédalge. In 1902 he won 2nd Prix de Rome, but in 1905, although he had already composed some of his early piano works, his brilliant string quartet and his song cycle "Shéhérazade," he was excluded from the competition. This summary action resulted in a controversy on the part of his admirers, and as a result the head of the Cons., Théo. Dubois, resigned. Further controversy over the merits of R. was stirred in 1907, when his "Histoires Naturelles" for voice and piano were premièred, this opus dividing listeners into two camps on the question whether or not he was an imitator of Debussy. His music steadily gained public following, with the publication of his brilliant "Rhapsodie Espagnole" for orch., the piano suite, "Gaspard de la Nuit," and the spirited one-act opera, "L'Heure Espagnole," with its element of satire (Op.-Comique, 1911). The ballet, "Daphnis et Chloé" (one of R.'s most inspired works) was prod. by Diaghileff in 1912 to much applause. In recent years almost everything from his pen has been greeted with enthusiasm, perhaps the two outstanding successes in his orch. production being the virtuosic "La Valse," an "apotheosis" of the dance, which uses all the modern wizardry of instrumentation to create a brilliant and kaleidoscopic picture; and the somewhat overrated "Bolero," which develops a monotonous dance theme by a process of repetition until the effect on the hearer is almost hypnotic (created to be danced by Ida Rubinstein). His piano concerto and concerto for the left hand alone (composed for Paul Wittgenstein) show cerebral manipulation of material that in some instances is trite despite its engaging flippancy. His principal works, in addition to those already named, include the charming series of richly coloured nursery pictures for orch., "Ma Mère L'Oye"

- (French equivalent of Mother Goose); his scintillant orchestration of Mousorgsky's "Pictures from an Exhibition"; a nursery opera, "L'Enfant et les Sortilèges," in which a naughty child is punished when his toys come to life; his popular Introduction and Allegro for flute and string quartet; chamber works, incl. a trio and a septet, and a large number of much-played piano pieces, some artistic songs and vln. works. A biog. of R. has been written by Roland-Manuel. (See article, pp. 512-16.)

Riemann; important composer, especially in chamber music and sacred music; 1891-96 he was teacher at Wiesbaden Cons., then took his year of military service. After a severe illness he settled in Munich, 1901, and married there; 1905 he taught counterpoint at the Royal Academy; 1907-08 taught composition at Munich Cons., and was University music dir.; 1908 was named Royal Prof. and Dr. Phil. by Jena; 1910 Mus. D. Berlin U.; in 1911, he became General Music Dir. at Meiningen, cond. Meiningen orch., continuing to teach one day a week at Leipzig Cons. He toured with the orch., 1912. His compositions are exceedingly numerous, and include a Sinfonietta, op. 90, symph. prologue to a tragedy, op. 108, "Lustspiel" overture (1911), violin concerto; a vast amount of chamber music, sonatas for piano, organ, violin, clarinet, 'cello, variations, fugues, canons in all keys, left-hand studies, and transcriptions for piano; much organ music; "Gesang der Verklärten" for choir and orch., "An die Hoffnung" for contralto and orch. (1912); three orch. pieces "Nocturne," "Elfenpuk," and "Helios" (1912); organ fantasie and fugue, B-A-C-H; violin suite op. 103, sonata op. 42, for violin alone; tone-poems for pianos, "Aus meinem Tagebuch"; cantatas, male and mixed choruses, and many beautiful sacred and secular songs. His music as a whole is marked by elaborate formal and contrapuntal structure, sometimes developed to the point of pedantry. R., though a strong influence upon German musicians of his time, represents a type of comp. in whom ponderous scientific knowledge and great practical ability are unleavened by a sense of proportion. In the field of organ comp. he holds an honourable place. Biog. also thematic catalogue of his works, by Fritz Stein.

- Rossini (rōs-sē'-nē), Gioacchino A., Pesaro, Feb. 29, 1792—Ruelle, near Paris, Nov. 13, 1868; eminent Italian opera-composer. His father was inspector of slaughter-houses and also horn-player in strolling troupes in which the mother (a baker's daughter) was prima donna buffa. Left in charge of a pork-butcher, R. picked up some knowledge of the harpsichord from a teacher, Prinetti; 1802 studied with Angelo Tesci; this began his tuition; he made rapid progress, and sang in church, and afterwards joined his parents as a singer, horn-player and accompanist in the theatre. At 14 he studied comp. with Padre Mattei, and 'cello with Cavedagni at the Bologna Liceo. At 15 he prod. a cantata "Il Pianto d'Armonia per la Morte d'Orfeo," which won a prize. Mattei soon told him that, though he had not enough cpt. to write church-mus., he knew enough to write operas, and he ceased to study. At 17 he prod. a succ. 1-act opera buffa "La Cambiale di Matrimonio" (Venice, 1810); next year, a succ. 2-act opera buffa "L'Equivoco Savagante," Bologna. He received various commissions, writing 5 operas during 1812. 1813, his "Tancredi" (Venice Th., Venice) was an immense succ. and "L'Italiana in Algeri," an opera buffa (San Benedetto Th.), was also succ. Two failures followed with disheartening effect, but "Elisabetta" (its libretto curiously anticipating Scott's "Kenilworth") was a succ. (Naples, 1813), and in it he dropped recitativo secco. A failure followed and on the first night of the next work the public resentment at his daring to set to mus. the text of one of Paisiello's operas led to its being hissed. This work "Almaviva" (Rome, 1816) was better received the second night and gradually est. itself in its subsequent fame under the title "Il Barbiere di Siviglia"; 1815-23 he was under contract to write two operas yearly for Barbaja, manager of La Scala at Milan, the Italian opera, Vienna, and Neapolitan theatres. His salary was 12,000 lire (about $2,400). During these 8 years he c. 20 operas, traveling from town to town and working under highest pressure. 1821 he m. Isabella Colbran (d. 1845), who had sung in his operas. The ill-succ. of his most carefully written "Semiramide" (Venice, 1823) and an offer from Benelli, a mgr., led him to London where he was lionised and in 5 months earned £7,000. For 18 months he was mgr. of the Th. Italien at Paris, and prod. several operas with artistic but not financial succ. He was, however, "Premier compositeur du roi" and "Inspector-général du chant en France," sinecures with a salary of 20,000 francs ($4,000). He lost these in the Revolution of 1830, but afterwards on going to law received a pension of 6,000 francs. At the Gr. Opéra he prod. with succ. revisions in French of earlier Italian succs. 1829 he gave there his greatly succ. masterpiece "Guglielmo Tell." At the age of 37, having prod. under his direction Meyerbeer's first opera and having heard "Les Huguenots," R. foreswore opera and never wrote again anything more dramatic than his famous "Stabat Mater" (1832), not performed entire till 1842; "Petite messe solennelle," with orch.; a cantata for the Exposition of 1867; and pf.-pcs. with burlesque names. He retired to Bologna and Florence, returning to Paris in 1855. 1847 he m. Olympe Pelissier. He c. 35 operas, 16 cantatas, canzonets and arias, "Gorgheggi e solfeggi per soprano per rendere la voce agile," "Chant des Titans" for 4 basses with orch.; "Tantum ergo" for 3 male voices with orch.; "Quoniam" for solo bass with orch.; "O salutaris" for solo quartet, etc. Biog. by Stendhal

- Rousseau (roos-sô), (1) Jean Jacques, Geneva, June 28, 1712—Ermenonville, near Paris, July 3, 1778. The great writer; mainly self-taught in mus., but aiming to reform notation by the substitution of numerals for letters and note-heads, read before the Académie, 1742, a "Dissertation sur la musique moderne" (1743); his opera, "Les Muses Galantes," had one private representation (1745); his revision of the intermezzo "La Reine de Navarre" (by Voltaire and Rameau) was a failure; but his opera "Le Devin du Village" (Gr. Opéra, 1752) was succ. for 60 years. He wrote mus. articles for the "Encyclopédie," which were roughly handled by Rameau and others, but revised and re-pub. as "Dictionnaire de musique" (1768). In 1752 he participated in the "Guerre des Bouffons," between the partisans of French and Italian opera, R. siding with the Italianists and declaring that a French national music was impossible and undesirable; for which the members of the opera burned him in effigy. "Pygmalion" (1773) was v. succ. being a novelty—a melodrama, all the dialogue spoken, the orch. furnishing interludes and background. Six new arias for "Le Devin du Village," and a coll. of 100 romances and duets "Les consolations des misères de ma vie" (1781), and fragments of an opera, "Daphnis et Chloé," were pub. (1780). (v. PITCH, D. D.); Bellini wrote many operas for him; toured with Liszt, earning by one concert over $10,000; had one of the largest fortunes ever amassed by a singer.
- Rubinstein (roo'-bin-shtin), (1) Anton Gregorovitch, of Jewish parents, Wechwotynecz, Bessarabia, Nov. (16) 28, 1829—Peterhof, near St. Petersburg, Nov. 20, 1894; one of the greatest of the world's pianists. Early taken to Moscow, where his father est. a pencil factory, he was at first a pupil of his mother; at 7, of Alex. Villoing, who was his only pf.-teacher. At 9 he made a tour with Villoing as far as Paris, where, in 1840, he played before Chopin and Liszt, who advised him to study in Germany. He toured further and returned to Moscow in 1843. His brother, Nikolai (v. below), was also musical, and in 1844 both were taken to Berlin, where Anton studied comp. with Dehn. Returning to Russia after a tour through Hungary, with the flutist Heindl, he lived in Petersburg under the patronage of the Grand Duchess Helen; he prod. 2 Russian operas; 1854—58, with the assistance of Count Wielhorski and the Grand Duchess, he made a wide tour, finding himself now well known as composer and pianist; 1858, ct.-pianist and cond. of ct.-concerts, Petersburg; 1859, dir. Russian Mus. Soc.; 1862, founded the Imp. Cons. at Petersburg, and was its dir. until 1867; 1865, he m. Petersburg Cons., then lived in Berlin; 1891, in Dresden. The Czar bestowed on him the Order of Vladimir carrying with it nobility, and the title of Imp. Russian State Councillor; he was an officer of the Legion of Honour, a Knight of the Prussian Ordre pour le mérite, etc. He instituted the Rubinstein prizes of 5,000 francs each for pf.-playing and composition open every 5 years to men between 20 and 26 of any nationality.

He wrote his "Memoirs," also "Die Musik und ihre Meister" (1892), "Gedankenkor" (1892).

As a pianist R. is second only to Liszt, whom he perhaps excelled in fire and leonine breadth. He was, however, frequently inaccurate in his performance. He chiefly wished to be remembered as a composer but his music has lost its erstwhile popularity in recent years, save for occasional hearings of his piano works. He placed great hope in the creation of what he called "Sacred Opera" (oratorio to be enacted with costume and scenery). In this "new form" he c. "The Tower of Babel," "Paradise Lost," "Moses," "Christus." Besides the noteworthy operas "Nero" (Hamburg, 1879), "The Demon" (Russian, P., 1875), and "Die Makabäer" (German, Berlin, 1875), he c. 11 other operas, a ballet "La Vigne" (Die Rebe), and 2 cantatas with orch. C. also 6 symphs. (incl. the famous "Ocean," op. 42, in C, in 7 movements; op. 95, in D min. ("Dramatic"); op. 107, in G min. (in memory of Gr. Duch. Helen). Schönberg (shân'-bêrk), Arnold, b. Vienna, Sept. 13, 1874; eminent composer and theoretician; has exercised profound effect on other composers of his period by his path-breaking system of free harmonic writing; the "father" of atonality, and in his later works the exponent of the theory that any of the tones of the chromatic scale may be combined with equal effectiveness; the form of his works is, however, in the classical tradition. He began quite early to compose chamber music, and studied vln. and 'cello; in theory he evolved his own method, except for a brief period of study in 1894 with his future brother-in-law, Alexander Zemlinsky. He made a piano version of latter's opera, "Sarema"; an early string quartet from this period has been lost; some songs were heard in Vienna about 1900. From the previous year dates his popular string sextet, "Verklärte Nacht," in a romantic, somewhat Tristanesque idiom, which has had wide currency in its arrangement for string orch. In 1901, following his marriage to Mathilde Zemlinsky, S. took up res. in Berlin; there he produced his symph. poem, "Pelleas und Melisande." In 1903 he returned to Vienna and began his important labors as a theory teacher; in the next 4 years he continued his early post-Wagnerian period with his 6 orch. songs, his string quartet, 8 songs (op. 6), 2 ballades (op. 12), his much-played "Kammersinfonie," and the second string quartet with voice; also from 1910-11 dates his "Gurrelieder" for soloists, chorus, orch. Later his music began to reveal an abstract, anti-romantic quality; his 3rd and most important manner (which has been called "expressionistic" and said to have parallels with the painting of such a figure as Kokoschka) is heralded by his songs to lyrics of Stefan George, op. 15. The compositions of this period include 3 piano pieces (op. 11), the radical "Five Orchestral Pieces" (op. 16), which created a sensational effect when 1st played in Europe and U. S.; the monodrama, "Erwartung," for one woman singer and orch., which portrays the anguish in the mind of one waiting for her lover (one of S's. most original works, 1st staged at Prague in 1924); "Die Glückliche Hand"

(The Hand of Fate), a form of opera to the composer's own text. It symbolically narrates the struggle of a man to preserve the joy and dignity of life against the malign effects of an evil incubus, the mysterious menace of the world about him, and the snares of a rich dandy who wins away his wife (prod. Vienna Volksop., 1924; also in N. Y. by Phila. Orch. under Stokowski in stage version, 1930). 1911 marked S's. 2nd removal to Berlin, and the production of his highly original "Pierrot Lunaire" (op. 21), settings of a cycle of 21 poems by Albert Giraud, which describe the somewhat decadent and haunted longings of a moonstricken Pierrot for his native Bergamo; this work is called a "melodrama" and introduced to the world of music, in its score for a woman reciter-singer and chamber ensemble, S's. famous device of the "Sprechstimme," or voice that half speaks, half sings. 1915-17, he worked on an oratorio, "Jacob's Ladder," writing both text and music (not completed); and the following year founded in Vienna a Society for Private Perfs. of Music, which introd. the scores of his immediate circle to a small group of those interested; 1920-21, he lectured on comp. in Amsterdam; 1923, after return to Vienna, he issued some piano pieces, a quintet, and Serenade for barytone and chamber orch. Beginning 1923 he was Busoni's successor as teacher of master class in comp. at Berlin Hochschule, for about a decade; then came to America 1933 and taught comp. in Boston and N. Y.; 1935 faculty mem. of Univ. of Cal. at Los Angeles, occupying chair of comp. Apart from his compositions, his influence has been preëminent in the field of theory, which he may be said to have revolutionised with his publication of a "Harmonielehre"; also c. (operas) "Von Heute auf Morgen" (1-act attempt at work in more pop. style, not highly successful); "Moses and Aaron"; (orch.) theme and variations; suite for strings (in old-time style); 'cello concerto after an early work by Monn; and a reworking for string quartet and orch. of a Händel concerto grosso; in 1936 the 4th of his string quartets was to have its première in a fest. given at Los Angeles under the patronage of Mrs. F. S. Coolidge.

Studies of his music have been published by Wellesz, Erwin Stein and others, besides an essay by Huneke, etc. (See article, page 518.)

Schönberger (shän'-bérkh-ër), Benno, b. Vienna, Sept. 12, 1863; pianist; pupil of Vienna Cons., studied also with Liszt; toured; 1885 teacher, Vienna; later in Sweden (1886), then London; 1894 toured America; c. pf.-sonatas, rhapsodies, etc.

Schorr (shôr), Friedrich, b. Nagyvarad, Hungary, Sept. 2, 1888; barytone; studied with Robinson in Vienna; sang at Graz, 1911-16; Prague, 1916-18; Cologne, 1918-23; then Berlin; came to U.S. with Wagnerian Op. Co., 1923; mem. Met. Op. Co. after 1924; has sung widely in Europe and S. America, and at Covent Garden, esp. in Wagnerian rôles.

Schott (shôt), (1) Bd., d. 1817; founded (Mayence, 1773) the mus.-pub. firm of B. Schott, carried on by his sons (2) Andreas (1781-1840) and (3) Jn. Jos. (1782-1855), under the firm-name of "B. Schott's Söhne"; later managers at Mayence and the London branch were Fz. von Landwehr and Dr. L. Strecker. (4) Anton, Schloss Stauffeneck, Swabian Alp, June 25, 1846—Stuttgart, Jan. 8, 1913; tenor; 1865-71 an artillery officer in the French campaign; then studied with Frau Schebest-Strauss; 1871, Munich opera; 1872-75 Berlin opera; leading tenor at Schwerin and Hanover, made concert-tours; 1882 in Italy with Neumann's Wagner troupe.

Schradi(e)ck (shrä'-dèk), Henry, Hamburg, April 29, 1846—Brooklyn, N. Y., March 28, 1918; noted violinist; pupil of his father and of Leonard, Brussels Cons., David, Leipzig; 1864-68 teacher Moscow Cons., then leader Philh. Concerts, Hamburg; 1874-82, co-leader, Gewandhaus Orch. and theatre-orch., Leipzig, also teacher for a time at the Cons. 1883-89, prof. of vln., Cincinnati Cons., U. S. A.; returned to Germany as leader of the Hamburg Philh. Soc.; afterward head vln.-prof. Nat. Cons., N. Y., and later Broad St. Cons., Philadelphia; after 1912 also at Amer. Inst. of Applied Mus., N. Y.; pub. excellent technical studies for vln.

Schreker (shrëk'-ër), Franz, Monaco, March 23, 1878—Berlin, March 21, 1934; composer; pupil of Fuchs, Vienna; founded and cond. Philh. Chorus, Vienna, 1911; prof. of comp., Vienna Acad., 1912; dir. Berlin Hochsch., 1920-32; master class, Akad. der Künste there, 1931-32; noted for his original music dramas, usually on somewhat Freudian erotic subjects, with musical system based on new and unusual "clang-tints," and using his own texts; c. (operas) "Der Ferne Klang" (Frankfurt, 1912); "Das Spielwerk und die Prinzessin" (Vienna, 1913); "Die Gezeichneten" (1918); "Der Schatzgräber" (1920); "Irrelohe," "Memnon," "Der Schmied von Ghent"; (pantomime) "Der Geburtstag der Infantin" (after Wilde); Sinfonietta, "Nachtstück" and prelude to a drama for orch., choral works and songs; his influence as a teacher was considerable; his style excelled in richness of orchestral color and subtlety of detail, but his works for the stage were of such a complicated nature that they have never been produced outside of Germany and Austria. Studies of his music have been written by Kapp and Bekker.

Schrems (shrëms), Jos., Warmensteinach, Upper Palatinate, 1815—Ratisbon, 1872; conductor, editor and teacher.

Schubart (shoo'-bärt), (Chr. Fr.) Daniel, Sontheim, Swabia, 1739—Stuttgart, 1791; poet; organist and composer.

Schubert (shoo'-bért), (1) Jos., Warnsdorf, Bohemia, 1757—Dresden, 1812; violinist, and dram. composer. (2) Jn. Fr., Rudolstadt, 1770—Cologne, 1811; violinist, writer and composer, (3) Fd., Lichtenthal, near Vienna, 1794—Vienna, 1859; elder bro. of the great composer (4) and passionately devoted to him; dir. Normal Sch., Vienna; c. church-mus., a requiem for his brother, etc.

vict," where the unrestrained license allowed him in his compositions accounts for the crudeness of some of his early works and the faults of form that always characterised him, as well as for his immediate and profound individuality; at 17 he c. his first mass. In order to escape military conscription he studied a few months at the Normal Sch. and took the post of elementary teacher in his father's sch. He taught there until 1816, spending his leisure in studying with Salieri, and in comp. particularly of songs, of which he wrote as many as 8 in one day—144 in his 18th year (1815), including "Der Erlkönig"; 1814-16, he also c. 2 operettas, 3 Singspiele and 3 incomplete stage-pieces, 4 masses. 1816, he applied, without succ., for the directorship of the new State mus.-sch. at Laybach (salary $100 (£20) a year). From 1817 he lived in Vienna, except two summers (1818 and 1824), spent at Zelész, Hungary, as teacher in Count Esterházy's family. How S. existed is a matter of mystery, except for the help of such friends as Fz. von Schöber, who aided him with the utmost generosity. The famous tenor Michael Vogl popularised his songs. By his 21st year (1818) S. had c. six of his symphs. and a great mass of work. His mus. farce "Die Zwillingbrüder" was prod. (Kärnthnerthor Th., 1820, but ran only six nights). 1821, after he had written over 600 compositions, his "Erlkönig" was sung at a public concert of the "Musikverein" and elsewhere, with a wide sale that attended most of his subsequent publication of songs and pf.-pcs.; though he was sadly underpaid by his publishers, sometimes receiving only a gulden (20 cents, less than a shilling) for them. In 1822 he declined the post of organist at the court chapel; but could never obtain a salaried position, though many efforts were made. At 31 he gave his first concert of his own works, with good succ. (1828). In 1822, he had finished a grand opera "Alfonso und Estrella," the libretto bad, the scoring too difficult for the musicians at Graz, where it was put in rehearsal; it was withdrawn, not to be prod. till 1854 under Liszt and in 1881 when Jn. Fuchs rewrote the libretto and prod. it at Carlsruhe with great succ. In 1825 a work, "Rosamunde," was prod. at the Th. an-der-Wien, with applause for the music, but it was withdrawn after a second performance. Other works of his had not even productions, his stubborn refusal to alter a note preventing the profitable performance of dram. scenes, etc. His health finally broke under the strain of composition all day on a little food and revelry till late at night. He died of typhus and was buried, at his own request, in the "Ostfriedhof" at Währing, near Beethoven.

A complete critical edition of his works is pub. by Breitkopf & Härtel. These incl., besides those mentioned, an opera "Adrast" (unfinished), 3-act operettas "Der Teufels Lustschloss" and "Der Spiegelritter"; SINGSPIELE: "Der Vierjährige Posten," "Fernando"; "Claudine von Villabella" (unfinished); "Die Freunde von Salamanca" and "Der Minnesänger"; all written 1814-1816; none performed; 3-act melodrama, "Die Zauberharfe" (Aug. 19, 1820); 3-act opera, "Sakuntala" (not finished or performed); 1-act operetta, "Die Verschworenen, oder der häusliche Krieg" (Vienna, 1861); 3-act opera, "Fierabras" (Vienna, 1861); "Die Burtschaft," 3-act opera (c. 1816; prod. by Fz. Lachner, Pesth, 1827); unprod. operas "Der Graf von Gleichen" (1827) and "Die Salzbergwerke"; 6 masses; "Deutsche Messe"; unfinished oratorio "Lazarus," "Tantum ergo" (with orch.); 2 "Stabat Mater," etc. CHORAL WORKS WITH ORCH., OR INSTR.: "Miriam's Siegesgesang"; prayer, "Vor der Schlacht"; hymn, "Herr unser Gott," "Hymne an den Heiligen Geist," "Morgengesang im Walde," "Nachtgesang im Walde" and "Nachthelle," "Schlachtlid," "Glaube, Hoffnung und Liebe," several cantatas and part-songs. ORCH. AND CHAMBER-MUS.: 10 symphs., No. 8 the "unfinished" in B min., 7 overtures (Nos. 2 and 5 "in the Italian style"); vln.-concerto; rondo for vln. with orch.; octet; pf.-quintet ("Forellenquintet," with double bass); string-quintet with 2 celli; 14 string-quartets; 2 pf.-trios; 2 string-trios; rondo brilliant, phantasie in C, sonata, 3 sonatinas, nocturne for cello and pf.; introd. and vars. for flute and pf.; 17 pf.-sonatas (incl. op.

78, fantasia), 3 grand sonatas, posthumous; 8 impromptus, 6 moments musicaux; many variations, many waltzes, incl. "Valses sentimentales," "Homage aux belles Viennoises," "Valses nobles," 12 "Grützer Wälzer," "Wanderer-Fantasie"; FOR PF., 4 HANDS: 2 sonatas, "Divertissement à l'hongroise," "Grand rondo," "Notre amitié," rondo in D, "Lebensstürme," fugue, polonaises, variations, waltzes, 4 Ländler; marches, incl. "Trauermarsch" and "héroïque."

SONGS WITH PIANO: "Erlkönig," op. 1; "Gretchen am Spinnrade," op. 2; "Heidenröslein," op. 3; "Der Wanderer" and "Der du von dem Himmel bist," op. 4; Suleika songs, Mignon's songs, 2 song cycles by Wilhelm Müller, "Die Schöne Müllerin" and "Die Winterreise," containing 20 and 24 numbers; 7 songs from "Fräulein vom See" (Scott's "Lady of the Lake"), 9 songs from "Ossian"; 6 songs by Heine in the "Schwanengesang," etc. (more than 600 in all). As part of the celebration of his death centenary in 1928, the Columbia Phonograph Co. offered a prize for internat'l composers to complete the Unfinished Symph. This aroused so much protest from musicians, however, that the contest was changed to one for a work "in the style of" Schubert, and was won by Kurt Atterberg of Sweden.

Biog. by Kreissle von Hellborn (Vienna, 1861, 1865); Reissman, Berlin, 1873; A. Niggli (1880); Barbedette (Paris, 1866); Max Friedländer; other studies by La Mara, Risse, Austin, Frost, H. Ritter, Skalla, Curzon, Zenger, Heuberger, Duncan, Klatte, Bourgault-Ducoudray, Antcliffe, Dahms, Deutsch and Schiebler, Bie, Clutsam, Flower, Kobald and Ewen. His songs are the subject of studies by Capell and Le Massena. His letters and other writings were pub. in English translation (Knopf, 1928). (See article, page 521.)

Schumann (shoo'-män), (1) Robert (Alex.), Zwickau, Saxony, June 8, 1810—insane, Endenich, near Bonn, July 29, 1856; one of the most individual and eminent of composers. Youngest son of a book-seller (of literary taste and author of a biog. gallery to which R. contributed at 14). Pupil of a local organist, Kuntzsch (pf.), who prophesied immortality for him; at 6 he began to compose, at 11, untaught, he c. for chorus and orch. At 17 he set poems of his own to mus. 1820-28, attended Zwickau Gymnasium; then matriculated at Leipzig Univ. to study law and philosophy. 1829 Heidelberg, where he also studied mus., practising the piano 7 hours a day; played once in public with great succ. 1830, Leipzig, where he lived with Friedrich Wieck, with whom he studied the piano; he also studied comp. with H. Dorn. In trying to acquire independence of the fingers by suspending the fourth finger of the right hand in a sling while practising with the others he crippled this finger and foiled his ambition to be the chief virtuoso of his time. He now made comp. his first ambition. In 1833, his first symph. was performed with little succ., the first movement having been played in public by Wieck's 13-year old daughter, Clara, with whom S. fell in love. The father liked S. as a son, but not as a son-in-law, and put every obstacle in his way, until in 1840, after a year's law-suit, the father was forced to consent and the two lovers, both now distinguished, were united in one of the happiest marriages known in art; she giving his work publicity in her very popular concerts; he devoted to her and dedicating much of his best work to her. 1834 he founded the Neue Zeitschrift für Musik, and was its editor till 1844. His essays and criticisms (signed FLORESTAN, EUSEBIUS, MEISTER RARO, 2, 12, 22, ETC., JEANQUIRIT, etc.) are among the noblest works in the history of criticism, particularly in the matter of recognising new genius and heralding it fearlessly and fervently. (Chopin, Berlioz, and Brahms, profited by this quality. Of Wagner he did not altogether approve.) In his writings he constructed an imaginary band of ardent young Davids attacking the Goliath of Philistinism. He called this group the "Davidsbündler." His pen-name "EUSEBIUS," represents the vehement side of his nature, "FLORESTAN," the gentle and poetic side. His paper had some succ., which was not bettered by a removal to Vienna, 1838-39, and a return to Leipzig. 1840, Dr. Phil., Jena. 1840 was mainly devoted to his important song-composition; 1841 to symph. work; 1842 to chamber-mus., incl. his pf.-quintet (op. 44) which gave him European fame.

1843 was choral, "Das Paradies und Peri" (from Moore's "Lalla Rookh"), having a great succ.; he also began his choric mus. for "Faust." The same year, on the invitation of his warm personal friend Mendelssohn, he became teacher of pf. and comp., and of playing from score at the newly founded Leipzig Cons.; 1844, after going with his wife on a concert-tour to Russia, he removed to Dresden and resigned the editorship of the Neue Zeitschrift; lived at Dresden until 1850 teaching and composing such works as the great C-major symph., 1846, and the opera "Genoveva" (1848; prod. 1850 without succ.; its exclusion of recitative displeasing the public). 1847 cond. of the "Liedertafel"; 1848 organised the "Chorgesangverein." 1850, Düsseldorf as town mus.-dir. (vice Fd. Hiller). 1853, signs of insanity, first noted in 1833 and more in 1845, compelled him to retire. 1854 he threw himself into the Rhine, whence he was rescued by some boatmen; he was then taken to an asylum at Endenich near Bonn, where he remained in acute melancholia, varied by intervals of complete lucidity, when he composed as before. A complete ed. of his comps. is edited by Clara Schumann and publ. by Breitkopf & Härtel. It includes, besides the works mentioned, mus. to Byron's "Manfred," Goethe's "Faust," cantatas, "Der Rose Pilgerfahrt," with orch.; "Adventlied," for sopr., chorus and orch.; "Abschiedslied," chorus with wood-wind or pf.; requiem for "Mignon"; "Nachlied," for chorus and orch.; ballades "Der Königssohn," "Des Sängers Fluch" (op. 139), "Vom Pagen und der Königsstochter," "Das Glück von Edenhall," and "Neujahrslied"; Missa sacra, and requiem mass, with orch.; 4 symphs. (No. 3, op. 97, in Eb the "Rheinische," or "Cologne," symph.); "Ouvertüre, Scherzo und Finale," op. 52; 4 concert overtures "Die Braut von Messina," "Festouvertüre," "Julius Caesar" and "Hermann und Dorothea"; pf.-concerto; Concertstück, and concert-allegro, 'cello-concerto; fantasia for vln. with orch., etc.

Much remarkable CHAMBER MUSIC: incl. pf.-quintet in Eb op. 44; 3 pf.-trios, etc.; 6 org.-studies in canon-form, "Skizzen für den Pedal-flügel"; 6 org.-fugues on B-A-C-H, op. 60. FOR PF.: Op. 1, Variations on A-B-E-G-G (the name of a young woman); op. 2 "Papillons"; op. 3, "Studies after Paganini's Caprices"; op. 5, "Impromptus on theme by Cl. Wieck"; op. 6, "Davidsbündlertänze"; op. 9, "Carnaval"; op. 10, "Studies on Paganini's Caprices"; op. 15, thirteen "Kinderscenen"; op. 16, "Kreisleriana"; op. 21, "Novelletten" (4 books), 3 sonatas (No. 3 "Concert sans orchestre"), and 3 sonatas for the young; op. 23 "Nachtstücke"; op. 26 "Faschingsschwank aus Wien"; op. 68, "Album für die Jugend," a canon on "An Alexis." FOR PF. 4 HANDS: Op. 66, "Bilder aus Osten," after Rückert, 12 "Clavierstücke für kleine und grosse Kinder"; op. 109, "Ballscenen." Many choruses a cappella; many songs and duets, incl. ten Spanische Liebeslieder, with 4-hand accomp., op. 138; Liederkreis (Heine), song-cycle, op. 24, and Liederkreis (12 poems by Eichendorff), op. 39; "Myrthen," op. 25; Lieder und Gesänge, 5 sets; 12 poems (Körner), op. 35; 6 poems (Rückert), in collaboration with his wife, op. 37; "Frauenliebe und Leben," op. 42; "Dichterliebe," op. 48; "Liederalbum für die Jugend," op. 79; 6 songs from Byron's "Hebrew Melodies," op. 95 (with pf. or harp); nine Lieder und Gesänge from "Wilhelm Meister," op. 98a, etc. In 1937 a posth. vln.-concerto in D minor, never perf. but willed by Joachim to the Prussian State Library, was premiered by Yehudi Menuhin.

His writings are pub. in 4 vols., 1854; 4 vols. in English, London, 1875; and his letters ed. by his wife (1885) and (1886) by Jansen.

Scot'ti, Antonio, Naples, Jan. 25, 1866—Feb. 26, 1936; notable barytone; début Malta, 1889; sang in various cities; from 1899 at Covent Garden and Met. Op. House, N. Y., regularly; famous as "Don Giovanni," and in later years as "Falstaff," "Scarpia," in "Tosca," and the evil Chinese villain in Franco Leoni's r-act "thriller," "L'Oracolo." One of the most distinguished dram. artists of his period, he was a regular mem. of the Met. Op. Co. until 1933, his 25th anniversary with this co. being marked by special ceremonies in 1924. His last few years were clouded by ill health and poverty, as his fortune had been lost and his farewell perf. was given as a benefit for him; his death occurred obscurely in Naples.

Scotto (skôt'-tô), (1) Ottaviano, and his son (2) Girolamo, mus.-printers at Venice, 1536-39, and 1539-73, respectively; the latter was also a composer.

Scriabine (skrë-ä'-bën), Alexander Nicolaievitch, Moscow, Jan. 10, 1872—April 14, 1915; eminent composer and pianist; pupil of Moscow Cons., studying with Safonoff (piano) and Tanciev (comp.) along with Arensky; after 1892 he lived in Paris, Brussels and Amsterdam, and also toured in various cities of Europe as a pianist; but returned to Moscow and taught in the Cons., 1898-1903; in 1907 he visited the U. S. and in 1914 England, as performer in his works. He devoted the latter part of his life exclusively to composition, living in other countries until 1910, when he again took up res. in Moscow. In his earliest piano works, he was influenced by Chopin, Liszt and Wagner, but he soon developed a markedly personal style, which also shows traces of folk-song inspiration and the nationalist idiom of the Russian Five. The earliest period includes op. 1 to 25, and numbers the rst 2 symphonies in E (with chorus) and C minor, the piano sonatas, op. 6, 19 and 23; the études of op. 8, and the preludes, op. 11, 15 and 17. In his 2nd period his creative work took on a new, somewhat mysterious and ecstatic note, and he developed a highly original harmonic system, while his orch. writings were also individual, as exemplified in his "Divine Poem" and "Poème de l'Extase," the intensely poignant style of which bears a resemblance to Wagner's "Tristan" but is extended to new vehemence of expression. The 2nd period includes also the 4th piano sonata, op. 30; the "Poème Satanique," the 8 études, op. 42, 5th sonata, op. 53, and many smaller pf. works. His 3rd period saw the development of an entirely original harmony based on a so-called "synthetic chord" composed of 7 tones—C, F sharp, B, E, A, D, G—which S. sometimes called the "mystic chord." His theories at this time turned more and more toward the mystical and semireligious, so that he conceived his music as a sort of rite. The works of the final period include "Prometheus" (subtitled "The Poem of Fire"), scored for orch., piano, organ, chorus and color-organ, the 5 sonatas, op. 62, 64, 66, 68 and 70; the "Poème Nocturne," "Guirlande" and "Vers la Flamme," and many briefer piano numbers. He sought to combine the arts of tone, light, and even—in the "Mysterium" on which he was working at his death—various elements of smell by the use of perfumes. Studies of S. and his music have been written by Sabaneiev, Karatygin, Gunst, de Schloezer, Hull, Swan, etc. His letters were ed. by Sabaneiev and pub. in Moscow, 1923.

Scribe (skrëb), Eugène, Paris, 1791—1861; most prolific of French dramatists, and wrote over 100 librettos, incl. "Fra Diavolo," "Prophète," "L'Africaine."

Orch., were given speedily by other ensembles, as were subsequent works in this form; in substance, his music is synthetic, combining older styles, and marked by a virtuosic, often flippant and ironic touch; a consummate orchestrator and a humorist of pungent variety, S. made an international furore with his opera, "Katerina Ismailova" (known also as "Lady Macbeth of Mzensk"), which treats a brutal drama of lust, intrigue and murder in a bold, realistic manner; first prod. at Leningrad, it was highly popular in other Russian theatres and was prod. in America by the Cleveland Orch. and Russian singers under Rodzinski both in its own city and N. Y. at the Met. Op. House in 1935; this work, heard in concert form in London also, was later suppressed by the Soviet authorities, together with his ballet, "Limpid Stream," on the grounds that the composer was misusing his talents by cultivating a "formalistic" and sensational style of writing; he was encouraged to hew closer to the classic line of Russian music by being commissioned to prepare a new ballet; c. also a piano concerto, a sonata and smaller works for this instrument; some of his symphs. (notably that known as "May Day") include programs of revolutionary content.

Sibelius (sē-bā'-lē-ōōs), Jan, b. Tavastehus, Finland, Dec. 8, 1865; one of the most important and original composers of his period, influential not so much through any outward modernity of musical speech, as by the power and freedom with which he has used traditional material to gain new expressive results.

As a boy he played piano, improvised and wrote simple compositions; at 15 began vln. study with a local bandmaster; played in school orch. and in chamber music groups, but was entered as a student of law at Univ. of Helsingfors, 1885. Later he gave up law and in 1889 went to Berlin for further study, then to Vienna, where he was a pupil of Carl Goldmark, Robert Fuchs and others. He married Aino Järnefelt, and returned to his native country, 1892.

His first composition to attract wide attention was his orch. work, "En Saga." He taught comp. and vln. at the Helsingfors Music Inst. for a brief period, but after 1900 received a stipend from the Finnish Government to devote himself exclusively to comp. He visited Paris in 1900 and led some of his works at the Exposition there with the Helsingfors Orch. under Kajanus. In the following year he also conducted at Heidelberg Fest.

His later career has been one of increasing honours, with esp. esteem from his countrymen, who celebrated his 70th birthday anniversary in 1935 with an official fest. at Helsingfors, when the highest tributes were paid him. His journeys to other countries included a visit to America in 1914, when he led his symph. poem, "Daughters of the Ocean," at the Norfolk Fest., and Yale Univ. conferred on him the degree of Mus. D. His music in the larger forms, incl. 8 monumental symphs., was fairly slow in making its way into the repertoires of other countries, but esp. in England and America has in recent years been assigned a place among the most important of the present day.

In addition, his works include: (orch.) "Pohjola's Daughter"; "The Swan of Tuonela"; "Karelia"; "Tapiola"; "Frühlingslied"; "Lemminkäinen's Homecoming"; "The Dryads"; "Pelleas und Melisande"; "Night Ride and Sunrise"; "Pan and Echo" (dance intermezzo); 2 orch. suites, called "Scènes Histo- riques"; "Suite caractéristique"; 2 Serenades for vln. and orch.; "The Bard"; (symph. poem); and the pop. nationalistic tone poem, "Finlandia"; (chamber music) "Voces Intimae" for string quartet; vln. pieces; (opera) "Die Jungfrau im Turm"; incid. music to Ad. Paul's drama, "King Christian II."; to Procope's "Belshazzar," and to the morality play, "Everyman"; (chorus) Academic Festival Cantata; "Gesang der Athener" and "Die Gefangene Königin," both for chorus and orch.; "Des Fahrmanns Braut" for barytone and orch.; "My Land" for mixed chorus and orch.; "Jordens Sang" (Der Erde Lied) for mixed chorus, female solo choir and orch.; "Maan Virsi," cantata for mixed chorus and orch.; (pantomime) "Scaramouche" (Copenhagen, 1922); also many male choruses, songs and piano works.

In his larger compositions, S. has shown an original method of construction, developing his themes out of short units which later coalesce into their final form. His inspirations are drawn very largely from Nature, and though his works are "absolute" music in the highest sense, many of them contain picturesque legendary suggestions from the Finnish epics, such as the "Kalevala." It is, however, not true that his personality is essentially a gloomy or mystical one, for there are boisterous humor and rude strength in many of his works. S. is the subject of important biographies and studies by Rosa Newmarch, Cecil Gray, Walter Niemann, etc. (See article, page 526.)

At 17 entered the Cons. della Pietà de' Turchini at Naples. 1796, commissioned to write an opera for the Teatro Argentina at Rome, its director having heard some of his church-mus. in Naples, he left the Cons. without permission and prod. succ. opera, "I Puntigli delle Donne"; Piccinni secured his reinstatement and gave him valuable advice. He prod. operas with succ. in various cities and in Palermo, where he was cond. to the Neapolitan court which had fled before the French. After having produced 16 light Italian operas, he went to Paris (1803), where three successive failures and a study of Mozart's works led him to change his style. After supporting himself as a singing-teacher he won succ. with his substantial 1-act opera "Millon" (Th. Feydeau Nov. 27, 1804); the Empress Josephine, to whom he had dedicated the score, appointed him "chamber-composer." He c. a cantata "L'eccelsa Gara," celebrating the victory of Austerlitz. The Empress's power secured a hearing for his opera "La Vestale," which after three years of delay and polishing, was prod. with greatest succ. 1807; by a unanimous verdict of the judges, Méhul, Gossec and Grétry, Napoleon's prize for the best dram. work of the decade was awarded to it. It was followed with equal succ. by the grand opera "Fernand Cortez," 1809. 1810, dir. It. opera; dismissed for financial irregularity; 1814 Louis XVIII., appointed him ct.-composer. He c. 2 stage-pieces in glorification of the Restoration. The opera "Olympie" was prod. 1819 without succ., though when revised and prod. 1826 it prospered. 1820, he became ct.-composer and gen. mus.-dir. at Berlin; he prod. his old operas with succ., and c. the festival play "Lalla Rukh" (1821), remodelled as "Nurmahal" (1822); "Alcidor" (1825) and "Agnes von Hohenstaufen" (1829), none of which were widely succ. A period of violent jealousies and quarrels with the Intendant Brühl, and virulent intrigues, culminated after a score of stormy years in his being royally reprimanded, and finally driven out of the theatre by a hostile audience. He retired in 1841 on full pay. He went to Paris, then to Italy. 1844 the Pope gave him the rank and title of "Conte di Sant' Andrea"; he was a knight of the Prussian "Ordre pour le mérite," member of the Berlin Akademie (1839), and Paris

Stradella (strä-dël'-lä), Alessandro, probably Naples or Venice, ca. 1645—Genoa, after 1681 (the date of his last cantata); important Italian composer, of whom little is actually known, though he is the hero of an extraordinarily melodramatic legend of jealous nobility, paid assassins, and love pursued. In a work by Bonnet-Bourdelot (1715), it is said that his name was Stradel and being engaged to write an opera for Venice, he eloped with the mistress of a nobleman who sent paid bravi to assassinate him in Rome. These men were overcome by the beauty of an oratorio of his and warned him of his danger. He fled to Turin with the woman who passed for his wife, and after being followed here and there, and recovering from numerous wounds, was finally slain in Genoa. Flotow made an opera of this story, in which there is much that is incredible. S. was also credited with being a singer and poet, and a wonderful harpist. In any case, 148 of his works exist in MS. in the Modena Library, and others elsewhere, incl. 8 oratorios, many cantatas, madrigals, duets, etc. The church-aria "Pietà, Signore," and the arias "O del mio dolce ardor" and "Se i miei sospiri," are probably wrongly attributed to him. Stradivari (Stradivarius) (sträd-i-vä'-rë, or vä'-rë-00s), (1) Antonio, Cremona, 1644 (1650 ?)—Dec. 17 (18 ?), 1737; maker of vlins., vlas., 'cellos, etc., who established a type and proportion never improved; his tone is also supreme among vlins. (with the possible exception of those of Jos. Guarneri); he probably worked for Niccolò Amati, 1667-79; 1680, he purchased the house in which his workshop thereafter was situated; 1700-25, is his best period, but he worked to 1736; his label reads "Antonius Stradivarius Cremonensis. Fecit Anno . . . (A † S)." Of his eleven children, 2 sons, (2) Fran. (1671—1745) and (3) Omobono (1679—1742), were his assistants. Monographs, by Lombardini (1872), Fétis (1856), Wasielewski and Riechers.

(Sr.), Vienna, March 14, 1804—(of scarlet fever) Sept. 25, 1849, "The Father of the Waltz"; son of proprietor of a beer and dance-hall; conductor and composer of 152 waltzes all more or less famous. (3) Jn. (Jr.), Vienna, Oct. 25, 1825—June 3, 1899; "The Waltz-King"; son of above, who opposed the mus. tastes of the three sons, for whom the mother secured secret instruction. In 1844 conductor of court-balls and very succ. orch. concerts. He had c. a waltz at 6, and his later comps. eclipsed the success of those of his father, after whose death he united the two orchestras. 1862, he m. the singer Henriette Treffz (d. 1878), and later the singer Angelica Dittrich; c. 400 pcs. of dance-music; his waltzes "The beautiful blue Danube," "Künstlerleben," "Wiener Blut," "The 1001 Nights," "Wine, Women and Song," etc., are dance-rhapsodies whose verve and colour have deserved and won the highest praise of severe musicians. His light operas rival his waltzes in charm and succ. and incl. the v. succ. "Die Fledermaus" ('74). (4) Jos., Vienna, Aug. 22, 1827—July 22, 1870; bro. of above, during whose illness in 1853 he served as cond.; later formed an orch. of his own and learned the vln.; on a tour to Warsaw he was maltreated by Russian officers for whom he had refused to play, and died in the arms of his wife (whom he had m. in 1857); he c. 283 dances. (5) Eduard, Vienna, Feb. 14, 1835—

Dec. 28, 1916; bro. and succ. of Johann as cond. of the ct.-balls and orch.; took his orch. to America 1892 and 1900; c. dance-mus. (6) Ludwig, Pressburg, March 28, 1836—Cambridge, Engl., 1899; violinist. (7) Victor von, Royal opera conductor, Berlin, 1902. (8) Richard, b. Munich, June 11, 1864; composer; in early life a brilliant musical genius; son of (8) Fz. S. (chamber-mus. and horn-player); studied also with W. Meyer. At 4 he c. a polka. He took a regular Gymnasium course 1874-82, and spent two years at the univ. At 17 his first symph. was prod. by Levi; his "Serenade" for 13 wind-instrs. had much succ. with the Meiningen orch. under von Bülow, to whom S. became asst., and (1885) successor as ct.-mus. dir. at Meiningen; 1886, 3rd cond. at Munich; 1889, ct.-cond. at Weimar under Lassen; 1894, cond. at the ct.-opera, Munich, also 1894, cond. Berlin Philh., and from 1898, cond. at Berlin Royal Opera. He m. the soprano, Pauline de Ahna, who created "Freihilde" in his opera "Guntram" (Weimar, 1894, Munich, '95). His 1-act opera "Feuersnot" ("Fire-Famine"), libretto by Wolzogen, was prod. Dresden, Nov. 21, 1901, with much success. He has also cond. with great succ. in various cities. A Strauss Festival was given in London, 1903, with S. conducting the Amsterdam Orch.; 1904 he was made general musical director of the Berlin Royal Opera. In the same year he cond. in the U. S. C. symph. op. 12; symphonic fantasie "Aus Italien," "Wanderers Sturmlied" (Goethe), for 6-part chorus, and full orch.; tone-poems, "Don Juan," op. 20; "Macbeth," op. 23; "Tod und Verklärung," op. 24, the symph. poems "Also sprach Zarathustra" (after Nietzsche), "Ein Heldenleben" (op. 40), and "Don Quixote"; op. 28, Orchester-Rondo "Till Eulenspiegel's lustige Streiche"; chamber-mus.; vln.-concerto; 5 "Stimmungsbilder" for pf.; concerto for Waldhorn; "Enoch Arden," melodrama for pf. and recitation, and many songs. 16-part a cappella chorus "Der Abend" (1902), ballad for chorus and orch. "Tailliefer" (1902); "Sinfonia Domestica" (1904); operas "Salomé" (1 act after Oscar Wilde, Dresden, 1905, and throughout Europe; prod. at Met. Op., 1907; it was withdrawn after one performance but restored 1934 with succ.); "Elektra" (Dresden, 1909, and at Manhattan Op., N. Y., 1910); "Der Rosenkavalier" (Dresden, June 26, 1911, and at Met. Op., 1913); "Ariadne auf Naxos" (Stuttgart, Oct. 25, 1912, revised 1917); "Die Frau ohne Schatten" (1921); "Intermezzo" (1924, a work said to be based on a mild marital misunderstanding in his own career); "Die Aegyptische Helena" (Dresden, 1928, also at Met. Op. House, without succ.); "Arabella" (1933, comedy which uses waltz themes somewhat in manner of "Rosenkavalier" but not as strong as that world-conquering work); "Die Schweigsame Frau" (1933); the ballets "Josephslegende" (1914) and "Schlagobers" ("Whipped Cream," allegory of pastry shop, 1923). Also a pf.-concerto for the left hand, "Parergon zur Sinfonia Domestica und Panathenaeen-zug," written for Paul Wittgenstein. His last important orch. work was the rather weak "Alpensinfonie" (1915), a literal description in tone of a climb to the mountain summits. His later works have tended to revert to a greater simplicity in scoring, some, like his incidental music to "Der Bürger als Edelmann," have Mozartian influence. His post-war works have displayed a decline in invention, though his scoring wizardry is still in evidence. S. made a notable tour of the U. S. in 1921, when he led a cycle of his works in N. Y. with the Phila. Orch.; cond. in many Eur. cities; 1919-24, dir. with Schalk of the Vienna Op.; 1933-35, he was pres. of the Reich Music Chamber in Germany; in 1938 a 1-act opera, "Friedenstag," was premiered at the Munich State Op.; and "Daphne," at Dresden Op., 1938. Biographical works by Seidl, Klatte, Hutschenruijter, Brecher, Urban, Bie, Newman, Steinitzer, Finck, Waltershausen, and studies of his comps. by Gilman, Hutcheson, Rose and Pruewer, Schattmann, etc. S. revised and completed Berlioz's treatise on instrumentation. (See article, page 529.)

Stravinsky (strä-vën'-skē), Igor, b. Oranienbaum, Russia, June 17, 1882;

composer; one of most striking technical innovators of his period, a remarkable craftsman and highly influential upon other composers; studied comp. with Rimsky-Korsakoff, in whose memory he wrote a "Chant Funèbre" and also his early symph. piece, "Fireworks," for the wedding of the latter's daughter; his first productions were marked by original and highly brilliant impressionistic use of orch. color, exploiting strange timbres and instrumental effects, and drew upon Russian folklore, esp. for his pop. ballets "L'Oiseau de Feu" and "Petrouchka," which created much interest when prod. by Diaghileff. With "Le Sacre du Printemps" (1913), the strident and bizarre effects that made "Petrouchka" a masterpiece of bitter irony were augmented with an unprecedented complexity of rhythm and harsh, grinding dissonances which literally portrayed the earth-beating dances of a prehistoric race in a spring fest.; to this period belongs also his Chinese fairy opera, "Le Rossignol," more delicately dissonantal and based on an Andersen story, which was given by the Met. Op. Co., 1926. After "Les Noces," written as a "symphony" but prod. as a ballet which portrays Russian wedding customs of the past with salty gusto, the style of S. became progressively more reticent and also economical of means. His ironic "Histoire du Soldat" with a chamber ensemble and narrator, has been danced and also presented in concert form; his "Renard," a sort of animal fable in chamber style with voice and instruments, is also marked by delightful wit; a short opera, "Mavra," oddly echoes (with intent) Glinka and Italian styles. The tendency to compose in the manner of earlier creators asserts itself increasingly in his later works, which has been construed as symptomatic of his attempt to find new paths, but by others as a confession of lack of inspiration. Beginning with his post-war productions, his music is increasingly neo-classic in style. It takes the form of compositions for small instrumental combinations, for various solo instruments with orch. and in concertante form, which embody his strivings after an ideal of "pure music," in which emotion and overemphasis are sternly restricted. Parallel to this, S. has shown a fondness for antique subjects and Greek myths, treated in heroic manner and in neo-classic garb: such are his "Oedipus Rex," a dram. cantata for soloists, male chorus, narrator and orch. (prod. in Paris, N. Y. and elsewhere); his "Symphonie de Psaumes" for chorus and orch., settings of 3 Hebrew psalms stressing warlike spirit in austere fashion; "Apollon Musagète" for orch.; and "Perséphone," a mimetic cantata based on the Greek myth, in which a woman mime-reciter, tenor, chorus and orch. take part (given in concert form by the Boston Symph., under the composer); has also c. (ballets) "Pulcinella" (after Pergolesi), "Baiser de la Fée" and "Les Abeilles"; (orch.) "Scherzo Fantastique," a symphony; suites based upon his most pop. ballet scores; "Le Rossignol" (symph. poem); "Symphonie Concertante" and Octuor for wind instruments; Concertino; a Concerto and a Capriccio for piano and orch.; two-piano concerto; vln. concerto; "Duo Concertante" for piano and vln., and many other smaller pieces for piano and other instruments, also songs. S. has visited the U. S. several times as guest cond. of various orchs., incl. N. Y. Philh., Phila., Boston, Chicago and elsewhere. Soon after the war he took up res. in France and has become a citizen of that country. He has toured with Samuel Dushkin, violinist, and with his son, Soulima Stravinsky, pianist, in chamber programmes; has visited leading Eur. cities and South America as a guest conductor.

S. has published a book of reminiscences, as well as various "manifestos" and the like, setting forth his artistic ideals. A biography (in French) by André Schaeffner was pub. 1931. A large number of essays on the composer and his work have been issued, by Van Vechten, Wise, Montagu-Nathan, Boris de Schloezer and others. Edwin Evans has written a study of his "Firebird" and "Petrouchka." (See article, page 530.)

- Toscanini (tôs-kä-ne'-në), Arturo, b. Parma, Italy, March 25, 1867; most eminent conductor of his period; pupil of the Cons. in his native city, where he won a diploma in 'cello playing and comp. in 1885; he had already participated ably in a concert tour as 'cellist the preceding year, incl. appearances at the Exposition in Turin; in the spring of 1886 he was engaged as 'cellist for the opera season in Rio de Janeiro, and his début as conductor occurred on the second night of the season, when he took over the orch. after the batonist of the occasion had been hissed by the public; he at once proved his mettle; and the perf. was a triumph. In 1887 he conducted in Turin the première of Catalani's "Edmea." He led many orchestral concerts there, incl. more than 40 programs during the Exposition of 1898, when he gave the first perfs. in Italy of Verdi's 3 sacred works, "Stabat Mater," "Te Deum" and "Laudi alla Vergine." He also appeared in Bologna and Genoa. In 1895 he gave the 1st Italian perfs. of Wagner's "Götterdämmerung" at the Regio in Turin. He conducted opera and symph. concerts at La Scala under the management of Gatti-Casazza from 1898 to 1908. When that impresario came to the Met. Op. in the latter year, he engaged Toscanini as conductor. T. remained in N. Y. until 1915, giving a long series of brilliant perfs., incl. the premières of works by Puccini, Dukas, Wolf-Ferrari, Montemezzi and Giordano, and conducting "Göt- terdämmerung" and Gluck's "Ar-mide." During this period in N. Y., he also led 2 symphonic concerts in 1913. He left the Met. as a result of a reported dissatisfaction with its artistic policy and returned to Italy in 1915, where he was active during the war as a conductor of concerts for welfare work. He toured the U. S. and Canada with an orch. composed of musicians from La Scala, and also led fests. in Turin and Milan in 1920. In the following year he became the mus. dir. at La Scala, a post which he retained until 1929. During this period he led the world premières of Boito's "Nerone" in 1924, of Puccini's posthumous opera "Turandot" in 1926. Beginning with the season of 1926-27 he was guest conductor of the N. Y. Philh. Orch. He immediately estab. a reputation as perhaps the most brilliant cond. who had ever appeared in N. Y. After 1928 he became permanent cond. of this orch., and later musical director, sharing the podium with several others during each season. In 1930 he took the orch. for a tour of leading Eur. cities. In summer of 1932 he conducted at the Bayreuth Fest., but severed his connection with Bayreuth later as the result of his disapproval of discriminations made by the Nat'l Socialist régime in that country against musicians of Jewish birth. He was one of a number of prominent musicians who addressed a cablegram of protest to the German govt. He led a few concerts (exchanging the Philh. bâton with Stokowski) at head of the Phila. Orch. in 1930-31. In 1933 he began a series of annual appearances at the Salzburg Fest., but resigned 1938; has also conducted brilliant concerts at London, Vienna and Paris. In 1936 he announced his resignation as cond. of the N. Y. Philh. Orch. because of the strain imposed by a regular post. His special virtues as a cond. consist in his fidelity to the composer's score, the extreme perfection of detail and the lyrical tone with which he endows even the most abstruse modern works. He invariably conducts without a score. He agreed to lead 10 concerts by a specially formed orch. for the Nat'l Broadcasting Co., 1937-38.

Verdelot, (vård-lò) (Italianised, Verdelot), Philippe, d. before 1567; famous Flemish madrigal-composer and singer at San Marco, Venice; between 1530-40 in Florence.

Verdi (vèr'-dè), (Fortunio) Giuseppe (Fran.), Le Roncole, near Busseto, Duchy of Parma, Oct. 9, 1813—Milan, Jan. 27, 1901; eminent Italian opera composer. Son of an inn-keeper and grocer; pupil, and at 10 successor of the village organist, Baistrocchi, for three years pupil of Provesi at Busseto; 1831 with the aid of his father's friend, Barezzi, he went to Milan, where he was refused admission to the Cons. by Basili, who thought him lacking in mus. talent. He became a pupil of Lavigna, cembalist, at La Scala; 1833, cond. Philh. Soc., and organist at Busseto; 1836 m. Barezzi's daughter Margherita. 1839, his opera "Oberto" was prod. with fair succ. at La Scala, Milan. He was commissioned by Merelli, the manager to write three operas, one every eight months, at 4,000 lire ($800 or £160) apiece, and half the copyright. The first was a comic opera "Un Giorno di Regno," which failed (1840), doubtless in part because his two children and wife had died within three months. V.'s combined distress drove him to rescind his agreement and renounce composition for over a year, when he was persuaded by Merelli to set the opera "Nabucco" ("Nebuchadrezzar"), prod. at La Scala, 1842, with great applause, the chief rôle being taken by Giuseppina Strepponi (1815-97), whom he m. in 1844. "I Lombardi alla prima Crociata" (La Scala, 1843) was still more succ. and is still played in Italy (in Paris as "Jerusalem"). "Ernani" (Venice, 1844) was prod. on 15 different stages in 9 months. 8 unsucc. works followed, incl. "I due Foscari" (Rome, 1844), "Macbeth" (Florence, 1847; revised Paris, 1865), and "I Masnadieri" (after Schiller's "Robbers" London, H. M. Th., 1847). "Luisa Miller" (Naples, 1849) was well received and is still sung in Italy. "Stiffelio" (Trieste, 1850); later as "Guglielmo Tell;" also with another libretto as "Arnoldo" (1857), was three times a failure. "Rigoletto," c. in 40 days (Venice) (also given as "Viscardello"), began a three years' period of universal succ., it was followed by the world-wide successes "Il Trovatore" (Rome, 1853) and "La Traviata" (Venice Th., 1853; also given as "Violetta"), a fiasco at first because of a poor cast; "Les Vêpres Siciliennes" (Paris Opéra, 1855; in Italian "I Vespri Siciliani"); also given as "Giovanna di Guzman") was fairly succ.; "Simon Boccanegra" (Venice, 1857; succ. revised, Milan, 1881), "Un Ballo in Maschera" (Rome, 1859), "La Forza del Destino" (Petersburg, 1862), and "Don Carlos" (Paris, Opéra, 1867), made no deep impression, though they served as a schooling and marked a gradual broadening from mere Italian lyricism to a substantial harmony and orchestration. "Aida" (written for the Khedive of Egypt) was prod. Cairo, 1871, at La Scala, Milan, 1872, and has had everywhere a great succ. The Khedive gave him £3,000 for it. His "Manzoni Requiem" (1874) made a sensation in Italy; "Otello" (Milan, 1887) was a work worthy of its composer, and in his last opera "Falstaff," written at the age of eighty, he showed not only an unimpaired but a progressive and novel style. He also c. 2 symphs., 6 pf.-concertos, "Inno delle Nazioni," for the London Exhibition (1862), songs, etc.

In 1893 he was offered the title "Marchese di Busseto," but was too democratic to accept it. He lived at his villa Sant'Agata, near Busseto. His funeral brought 100,000 witnesses, though his will ordered that it should be simple and quiet. He left the bulk of his fortune to found a home for aged and outworn musicians in Milan, where there is also a Verdi museum.

Following a period in which V.'s operas were unfavourably compared with Wagner's, there has been a marked tendency to rank him as an even superior musical dramatist in some respects. Particularly in Germany, after 1920, a new interest in his works arose, partly as the result of translations and adaptations made by Franz Werfel, who also pub. a novel based on V.'s life.

He wrote the libretto for an opera, "Die Hochzeil," an introduction, septet, and a chorus 1832, but his sister Rosalie thought it immoral and he gave it up; 1833 his brother Albert, stage-manager and singer at the Würzburg Theatre invited him to be chorism. there. He c. a romantic opera in 3 acts "Die Feen," to his own libretto (after "La Donna serpente," by Gozzi); it was accepted but never performed, by the Leipzig th.-dir. Ringelhardt (given at Munich, 1888). 1834, he became cond. at the Magdeburg Th. Here he c. (text and music) "Das Liebesverbot (after Shakespeare's "Measure for Measure"), performed by a bankrupt troupe, 1836. Th.-cond. at Königsberg, and m. (1836) an actress Wilhelmine Planer, who d. 1866, after they had separated in 1861. He c. an overture "Rule Britannia," 1837 cond. Riga opera. Moved by Meyerbeer's triumphs at the Gr. Opéra at Paris, W. went there, July, 1839, by sea. The voyage lasted 3½ weeks and was very stormy; the experience suggested to him the opera "Flying Dutchman." Meyerbeer gave him letters to musicians and pubs. in Paris; here he suffered poverty and supported himself by song-writing, arranging dances for piano and cornet, preparing the pf.-score of Halévy's "Reine de Chypre," and writing articles. His operas were scornfully rejected and he could get no hearing till the v. succ. "Rienzi" was prod., Dresden, 1842, and "Der Fliegende Holländer," Jan. 2, 1843. The novelties in this work provoked a furious opposition that never ceased. 1843-49 he was cond. of Dresden Opera, also cond. Dresden Lieder-tafel, for which he wrote a biblical scene, "Das Liebesmahl der Apostel," for 3 choirs, a cappella, later with full orch. "Tannhäuser" was prod., Dresden, 1845, with succ. in spite of bitter opposition. In 1848 "Lohengrin" was finished; but the mgr. of the Opera did not care to risk the work. He now wrote out a little sketch "Die Nibelungen, Weltgeschichte aus der Sage"; a prose study on "Der Nibelungen-Mythos als Entwurf zu einem Drama" (1848), and a 3-act drama with Prologue, written in alliterative verse, "Sieg- fried's Tod," preparations for the great work to follow. A rashly expressed sympathy with the revolutionary cause (1849) made flight necessary; he went to Weimar with Liszt, but had to go on to Paris to escape the order for his arrest. 1849 he proceeded to Zurich, where he wrote a series of remarkable essays: "Die Kunst und die Revolution" (1849), "Das Kunstwerk der Zukunft," "Kunst und Klima," "Das Judenthum in der Musik" (1850), "Oper und Drama," "Erinnerungen an Spontini," a prose drama "Wieland der Schmied," and the 3 poems of the Niebelungentriology (privately printed 1853). The music of "Das Rheingold" was finished 1854, "Die Walküre," 1856. He cond. orch. concerts with much succ., lectured on the mus. drama, prod. "Tannhäuser" (Zurich, 1855); 1855 he cond. 8 concerts of the London Philh. Soc. 1857 he left "Siegfried" unfinished and c. "Tristan und Isolde." 1860 he gave concerts of his own works, winning many enthusiastic enemies and some valuable friends. The French Emperor ordered "Tannhäuser" to be prod. at the Gr. Opéra, March 13, 1861. It provoked such an elaborate and violent opposition (for omitting the ballet) that it was withdrawn after the third performance.

W. was now permitted to return to Germany; "Tristan" was accepted at the Vienna ct.-opera, but after 57 rehearsals the singers declared it impossible to learn. In 1863, he pub. text of the "Nibelung Ring" despairing of ever completing the mus. When his financial state was most desperate, King Ludwig II. of Bavaria (1864) invited him to Munich and summoned von Bülow as cond. to prod. "Tristan und Isolde" (June 10, 1865); but opposition was so bitter that W. settled at Tribschen, Lucerne, and completed the scores of "Die Meistersinger" (prod. Munich, 1868) and "Der Ring des Nibelungen," "Siegfried" (1869) and "Götterdämmerung" (1874).

Though King Ludwig's scheme for a special Wagner Theatre in Munich was given up, there were by now enough Wagner-lovers and societies throughout the world, to subscribe funds for a theatre at Bayreuth, where the corner-stone was laid in 1872, on his 60th birthday. In August, 1876, complete performances of "Der Ring des Nibelungen" were given there under most splendid auspices, but with a deficit of $37,500, paid off by a partially succ. festival in London, 1877, and by the setting aside of the royalties from performances at Munich. He now set to work on the "Bühnenweihfestspiel" (Stage - consecrating - festival - play) "Parsifal," finished, and prod. in 1882. The same year ill-health sent him to Venice, where he d. suddenly. His writings (extravagantly praised and condemned) are pub. in various eds. There is an English translation in 8 volumes, by Wm. Ashton Ellis.

1870 he m. Cosima, the divorced wife of von Bülow and natural daughter of Liszt (she d. 1930). After his death she had charge of the Bayreuth Festivals for a number of years, but 1909 yielded the direction to her son, Siegfried. Since his death, 1930, his widow, Winifred has been in charge.

In the half century since W.'s death his music has been universally accepted as the corner-stone of modern operatic repertoires. Concerning his personal character there has been much polemical writing, ranging from actual vilification to the most fervid veneration. Particularly about his autobiography, controversy has centred, with some commentators asserting that his life history was altered somewhat after a few privately printed copies of the original edition were struck off. It was therefore of sensational interest when, in 1929, the so-called "Burrell Collection" of Wagneriana, made by an Englishwoman of that name, who wrote a biog. of his earlier years, was discovered in a strongbox in Great Britain after her death. This collection was bought by Mrs. Mary Louise Curtis Bok and now is housed at the Curtis Inst. of Music, Phila. But the "revelations" it was supposed to contain, as thus far made public, only in minor details altered the impressions contained in his book, "Mein Leben."

Besides his operas and the other works mentioned he c. a symph. (1832); 6 overtures, incl. "Konzert-overtüre ziemlich fugirt," "Polo- nia," "Columbus," "Rule Britannia"; "New Year's Cantata"; incid. mus. to Gleich's farce "Der Berggeist" (Magdeburg, 1836); "Huldigungs-marsch" (1864, finished by Raff); "Siegfried Idyll" (1870, for his son then a year old), "Kaisermarsch" (1870), "Festival March" (for the Centennial Exposition, Philadelphia, 1876), "Gelegenheits-Cantata" (for unveiling a statue of King Friedrich, August, 1843), "Gruss an den König" (1843, pf.), "An Weber's Grabe" (Funeral March for wind-instrs. on motives from Weber's "Euryanthe," and double quartet for voices, 1844). FOR PR.: sonata; polonaise, for four hands; fantaisie, "Albumsonate, für Frau Mathilde Wendenonck" (1853); "Ankunft bei den Schwarzen Schwänen" (1861); "Ein Albumblatt für Fürstin Metternich" (1861), "Albumblatt für Frau Betty Schott" (1875). SONGS: "Carnavalslied" from "Das Liebesverbot" (1835-36); "Dors, mon enfant," "Mignonne," "Attente" (1839-40), "Les deux Grenadiers" (1839); "Der Tannenbaum" (1840); "Krautliedchen" (1871), "Fünf Gedichte"; 1, "Der Engel"; 2, "Stehe still"; 3, "Im Treibhaus"; 4, "Schmerzen"; 5, "Träume" (1862). Biog. by C. F. Glasenapp (1876); F. Hueffer (1881); R. Pohl (1883); W. Tappert (1883); H. v. Wolzogen (1883); Ad. Jullien (1886); H. T. Finck (1893); H. S. Chamberlain (1897); E. Dannreuther, F. Präger (1893); G. Kobbé; Glasenapp and Ellis (1900). There are many treatises on his works. His letters have also been published in various forms. Among the vast number of other studies of his life and music are works by Torchi, Lidgley, Henderson, Kienzl, Newman, Mrs. Burrell, Adler, Buerkner, Koch, Schjelderup, Lichtenberger, E. Schmitz, Hadden, Kapp, Prohl, Batka, Runciman, Huckel, Aldrich, Becker, Blackburn, Buesst, Heintz, Krehbiel, Lavignac, McSpadden, Neumann, Pourtalès, Shaw, Thompson and Wallace. "Wagner-Lexikons" have been published by Tappert and Stein, a "Wagner-Encyclopaedia" by Glasenapp, while a comprehensive list of more than 10,000 books and essays on his life and music is contained in Oesterlein's "Katalog einer Wagner-Bibliothek." There is also a "Wagner-Jahrbuch" and much material has been issued in the "Bayreuther Blätter," ed. by Wolzogen. (See articles, page 538.) (11) Fridolin (II.), b. 1761; son of (2), and step-broth. of (12); pupil of Haydn; singer and mus.-director. (12) K. Maria (Fr. Ernst), Freiherr von, Eutin, Oldenburg, Dec. 18, 1786—(of consumption) London, June 5, 1826; son of the second wife of (2) and cousin, by marriage, of Mozart; the founder of German national opera (Wagner shows his influence deeply), and of the Romantic Sch.; perhaps the most widely influential German composer of the cent. He was important not solely as a path-finder, but also showed a striking artistic individuality; he was also a notable pianist (he could stretch a 12th), and a pioneer in modern pianistic composition. At first a pupil of his step-bro. (11). His mother, Genoveva (d. 1798, of consumption), was a dram. singer, and the family led a wandering life. At 10 he became pf.-pupil of J. P. Heuschkel. As a chorister in the cathedral at Salzburg, 1797, he had gratuitous lessons in comp. from Michael Haydn, to whom he dedicated his first published comps., six fughettas (1798). 1798—1800, at Munich, he studied singing with Valesi, and comp. with Kalcher. At 12 he c. an opera (the MS. lost or burned). He also appeared as concert-pianist. He met Aloys Senefelder, the inv. of lithography, and engraved his own op. 2, 1800, and made improvements in the process. At 13 he c. and prod. with succ. the opera "Das Waldmädchen" (Freiburg, also played at Chemnitz, Prague, Vienna and St. Petersburg). In 1801, he c. a third opera "Peter Schmoll und seine Nachbarn" (Augsburg, 1803?); 1803, in Vienna, he became a pupil of Abbé Vogler. 1804, cond. Breslau City Th.; resigned 1806; supported himself by lessons, then mus.-intendant to Duke Eugen of Württemberg; 1807, private secretary to Duke Ludwig at Stuttgart, and mus.-master to his children. In a turmoil of intrigue and dissipation he forgot his art, until he became involved in a quarrel leading to his banishment in 1810. This sobered him and awoke his better self. Going to Mannheim, he prod. his first symph.; then rejoined Abbé Vogler, at Darmstadt. His opera "Silvana" was prod. (Frankfort-on-Main, 1810), and "Abu Hassan," a comic Singspiel (Munich, 1811). He made a concert-tour to various cities, 1813, cond. of the Landständisches Th. at Prague, where he reorganised the opera, and won such note that in 1816 the King of Saxony called him to Dresden to reorganise the Royal Opera. At 20 he began "Der Freischütz," but gave it up till later (the incid. mus. to Wolff's "Preciosa" took 3 weeks). In 1817, he m. the singer Karoline Brandt, a member of his company to whom he had long been engaged. They toured together as pianist and singer. "Der Freischütz" was prod. with tremendous succ., Berlin, 1821; its strong nationalism provoking a frenzy of admiration. But "Euryanthe" (Vienna, 1823) had much less succ. 1824, he was commissioned to write "Oberon," for Covent Garden, London, but consumption delayed its completion; it was prod. (London, 1826) with much succ. He lived only eight weeks longer; his body was taken to the family vault at Dresden. DRAMATIC WORKS: Besides the operas already mentioned he c. "Rübezahl" (begun 1804, not completed): "Die Drei Pintos" (completed by G. Mahler, written and prod. Leipzig, 1888). A shy, sensitive figure he was principally self-taught, and held only minor posts, as asst. and chorus-master at the Salzburg Op., under Muck, 1881-82, and as critic for the Vienna Salonblatt, 1884-87. His life was a desperate struggle with poverty and was attended by little recognition; he eked out his income by giving occasional piano and vln. lessons; after 1888 he began writing the series of more than 275 songs which were later to make him immortal. He had ambitions to compose for the stage, and his opera, "Der Corregidor," based on a Spanish comedy, Alarcon's "Three-Cornered Hat," was prod. in Mannheim, 1896, but despite the praise it received was not given repetitions; he was at work on another opera, "Manuel Venegas," when his mind failed. After spending some months in an asylum he was released but had to return in 1898; paralysis set in and he lived for 5 years in a helpless condition. His great genius was discovered only slowly, but today he is generally ranked among the few foremost Lieder composers, including Schubert, Brahms and Franz. His songs have had a great and growing popularity with recitalists the world over. His comps. include, besides the pop. Spanish and Italian "Liederbücher," the "Lieder aus der Jugendzeit," his Goethe, Mörike and Eichendorff songs; choral works, most pop. being "Elfenlied" and "Feuerreiter," also a partially completed symph., "Italian Serenade" for small orch., a vln. concerto and other works. His "Corregidor" has been cond. by Bruno Walter at the Munich and Salzburg Fests. and in 1936 an official ceremony was held at the latter event. More than a score of unknown songs, some youthful, were discovered in 1936. His literary productions were ed. by Batka and Werner and pub. in 1911. Memoirs have been issued by Decsey, Haberlandt, P. Mueller, E. Schmitz, Newman, Morold, Schur and others. There are W.-Vereins in various Eur. cities.

SHORT BIOGRAPHIES OF MUSICIANS

JOHANN SEBASTIAN BACH

BY SIR CHARLES HUBERT H. PARRY

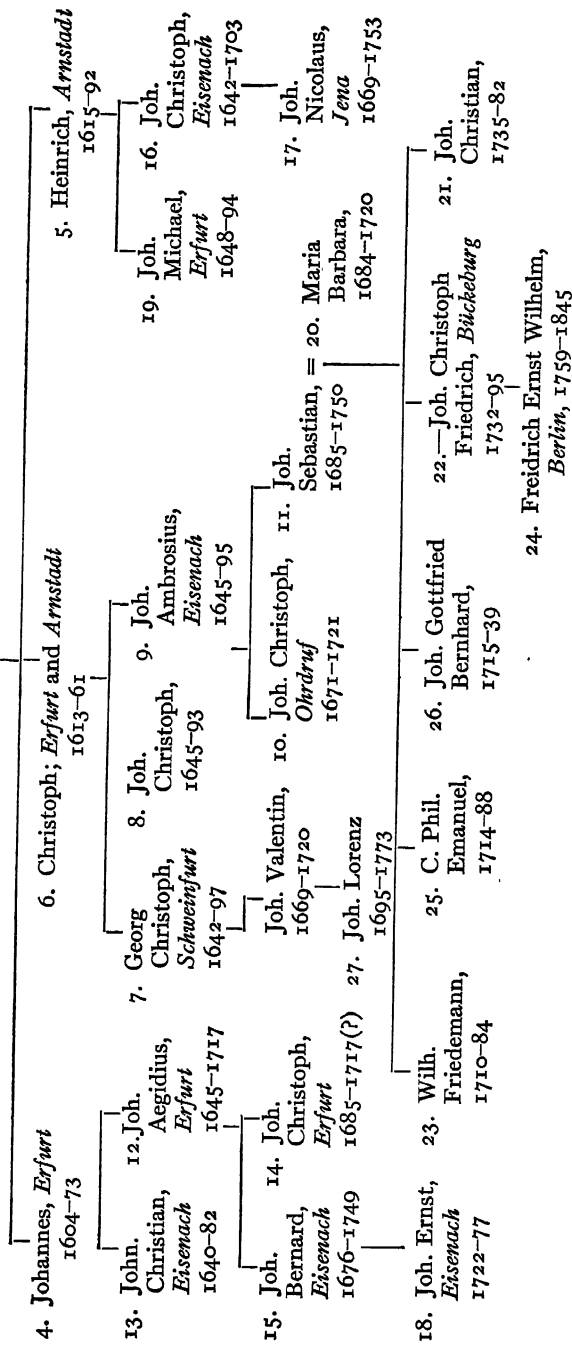

FOR more than a century before J. S. Bach came upon the scene, a succession of exceptionally gifted and earnest composers had been hard at work developing the methods and style of organ-music. Andrea Gabrieli and his nephew Giovanni Gabrieli and Claudio Merulo in Venice and Ian Pieterzoon Swelinck in Amsterdam had already done much to define its true sphere and style before the era of pure choral-music was ended. The early years of the seventeenth century saw Frescobaldi in the zenith of his fame, and his pupil Froberger following worthily in his footsteps; and throughout the century rapid progress in the accumulation of artistic methods and the development of true instrumental forms was made by such famous organists as Scheidt, Scheidemann, Pachelbel, Muffat, Reinken, and Buxtehude. And when it is considered that this branch of art already enjoyed an advantage over the new secular form of art which began to be cultivated at the end of the sixteenth century, through having its foundation securely laid in the old style of sacred choral-music, it seems natural that by the beginning of the eighteenth century it should appear to be the most mature of all the branches of art then cultivated. ¶These circumstances had profound and far-reaching influence upon J. S. Bach's musical character. In unravelling the secrets of art he was naturally attracted by that branch which possessed methods most fully developed for the formulation of the artistic impulses which were urging him to utterance. But the attraction was enhanced by the fact that organ-music had already become a kind of appanage of German composers, and had proved the one special form of art in which the fervent religion of Teutonic Protestants found the highest artistic expression. ¶Hence it came about that, great as his powers were as a composer of choral-music and of suites and secular instrumental music, he was first and foremost a writer of organ-music, and inasmuch as organ-music was the only branch of art which was even approximately mature in his youthful and most impressionable days, the methods and diction of organ-music permeated and served as the foundation of his style in all branches of art which he attempted. In his earlier years he copied out and studied the works of great composers for the organ, and watched with critical appreciation the performances of great organists such as Reinken and Buxtehude. It is easy to trace in his own work the impression made on him by the interlinked suspensions of Frescobaldi and Froberger and by the vivacity of their fugue subjects; by the treatment of chorale melodies with elaborate figuration of accompanying counterpoint in which Pachelbel excelled, by the copious picturesqueness of detail and the richness and emotional force of the harmonisation of Buxtehude. ¶He brought all such specialities of earlier composers into the sphere of his own operations, and fused them into consistency by the force of his personality, and this assimilation became the foundation of his life's work. Most of his best organ-music, such as the sonatas, preludes, fugues, fantasias, canzonas and movements founded on chorales, and the great passacaglio in C minor, belong to comparatively early years, and his concentration on this branch of work was only relieved by the production of a few church cantatas, which showed that he had begun to consider other forms of art, in which in later years he attained such comprehensive mastery. After many years spent in several organistships, came the singular central episode of his life, when the appointment as Capellmeister to the Prince of Anhalt-Cöthen caused him to apply his mind almost exclusively for some years to secular instrumental music, mainly of a domestic kind. ¶He sought for his models and types of procedure in the suites and ordres of the French composers, such as Couperin and Dieupart; and among the examples of the so-called French overture, which came into prominence in Lulli's operas, and had found such a brilliant imitator in Muffat. He studied also the instrumental compositions of the Italians, such as the concertos of Vivaldi, and the sonatas for stringed instruments of other Italian composers such as Albinoni and Legrenzi and even German imitations of such works like Reinken's "Hortus Musicus"; and the outcome was a perfect outpouring of suites and partitas for the domestic keyed instruments, solo sonatas for violin, flute, viole de gamba and concertos for strings and various combinations of orchestral instruments; and last and perhaps most notable of all, the collection of the twenty-four preludes and fugues in all keys, which he called—as a sort of manifesto of his belief in the system of equal temperament, which made all keys equally available for the purposes of the composer—"Das Wohltemperirte Clavier." Underlying a very large proportion of the works of various kinds, even dance tunes or movements for a solo instrument like the violin, fugue principles of procedure are predominant. The lightest dance tunes have a contrapuntal texture, and in the more serious and artistic examples it is so woven as to display beautiful combinations of ornament and melodic designs, ingenious sophistications of accent and subtleties of rhythm such as are only possible in the style of instrumental counterpoint which had sprung up in the development of the artistic requirements of organ fugues. ¶In the famous collection of preludes and fugues, which he ultimately increased to forty-eight by the addition of a second collection, the style of instrumental counterpoint which had been developed for organ-music found a new but most congenial sphere. As the works are written for the domestic keyed instruments such as the tender expressive clavichord, or the picturesque harpsichord, they necessarily illustrated different artistic intentions from such as characterised genuine organ-music. Large scope of design and powerful effects of tune were obviously out of place, and more subtle treatment and greater intrinsic interest of detail were inevitable. ¶Thus the fugue became much more compact than the organ-fugues, and the treatment of melodic line and expressive harmony more intimately human. The composer deals with more variety of style than in his organ-compositions, and many of the fugues may be taken as studies in human moods, such a playfulness and gaiety, pathos and melancholy, contemplation and fervour, merriment, dignity, and confidence. The adaptation of known principles of artistic procedure to a purpose, at that time so novel, was characteristic of Bach's attitude toward art; and this is as true of the preludes as of the fugues. The genealogy of the preludes may in some cases be traced back as far as the figurate preludes and little fantasias of such early types as were produced by the Elizabethan composers of virginal music and their contemporaries in other countries; though the form is enormously enhanced in J. S. Bach's hands by the skilful use of more definite and attractive figures, and a higher balance of organisation in each work. However, the forms of the preludes are extremely various. Some seem to be almost without precedent. As, for instance, the rapturous instrumental song with solo part and accompaniment all combined for one instrument. ¶Among the preludes are also a few of the rare anticipations of complete sonatas of the harmonic kind, movements with distinct contrast of key in the first half, "working out," and modulation in the central part, and a recapitulation of the concrete material of the opening portion to conclude with. These occasional excursions out of what seemed to be his most congenial ground, are often thoroughly successful, but all the same his venture into the Italian manner and the Italian type of form proves rather that he grasped their artistic meaning fully than that he believed in their efficiency as vehicles for the highest aspirations of the composer. In the latter part of his life J. S. Bach dealt more in the grand forms which bring into play the methods and resources of many subordinate forms of art, both instrumental and vocal—such as the noble settings of the Passion, the masses—especially the great one in B minor—the work known as the "Christmas Oratorio" and the immense collection of church cantatas written for Sundays and festivals in the churches in Leipzig. In all of these branches of art he had precursors, and the types of various kinds had been explored. The Italian aria-form had been more or less transformed for German purposes before he gave it his own exceptional character and high artistic organisation. ¶The peculiar form of expressive recitative, so earnest and deeply emotional, which became a characteristic feature of German music and prefigured much in its latest dramatic manifestations, had found worthy exposition. The treatment of chorales with rich harmonisation and elaborate part-writing and the development of the so-called motet choruses and choral fugues and even the peculiar contrapuntal treatment of the accompanying instruments had all found characteristic German exponents. Moreover, the form of Passion music had engaged the attention of composers for nearly two hundred years and had arrived at a considerable degree of development recently in the hands of Kuhnau, Keiser and Händel himself. But Bach's treatment of the scheme so immeasurably distanced all those who went before him that in later time his settings "according to St. Matthew" and "St. John" seem to stand almost alone in their pre-eminent glory. The same is the case with his church cantatas. ¶The best work even of such composers as Buxtehude and John Christophe Bach seems singularly bald by the side of the copious variety and the inventive vigour of his work of this kind. True it is that in all such cases, and even in such mighty phenomena as the choruses in the B minor mass, he built upon the foundation his predecessors supplied and with methods they had helped to make available. ¶His peculiar quality was to divine how the resources of art which he found in being could be applied to purposes so grand and comprehensive that it is difficult to realise that the methods were in truth the same as had been used by his forerunners. His artistic powers and insight were at such an immeasurably higher plane than those who preceded him that music seems at once to have stepped out of childishness into maturity at his bidding. ¶In a sense his work is final and isolated. His work stands alone as the summing-up of a long period of preparation; and the summing-up in his characteristically Teutonic direction seemed so complete that nothing remained to be said in the lines which he had illustrated. No composer followed in his footsteps. Those who understood him saw that they could not approach him; and the world in general wanted a more easy-going and accommodating standard of art. So the succeeding generation of composers cultivated the more plausible Italian manner and the easily manipulated Italian form. ¶It was not for a century that his style and methods began to exert influence, and they came back to regenerate the world growing stale with the overpersistency of harmonic forms of the sonata order. ¶Indeed it was the rise of what was called the romantic movement which brought J. S. Bach back into the hearts of men, and made his ways of procedure suggestive of new developments. The foremost prophets of the Romantic movement, Schumann and Chopin, were his most ardent admirers. ¶To the Classicists the style of J. S. Bach had seemed somewhat archaic. But as men began to long for human expression in art and the greater elasticity of form which helps to closer characterisation of mood and feeling, the richness of possibilities and the greater pliancy of the forms Bach used became more and more apparent. At the same time the perfect adaptation of means to ends which his perfect self-containment manifests may serve as a corrective and a counterpoise in the turbulent times which follow the opening of the floodgates of dramatic passion. Those who cherish a constant love of the human art of John Sebastian Bach have still a guiding light which will not betray them. (See Dictionary entry, page 38.)

LUDWIG VON BEETHOVEN

BY H. E. KREHBIEL

IN ONE respect Beethoven stands alone in the history of music. The influence of all his fellows, from Bach to Wagner and Brahms, can be determined in matter as well as manner, and set down in plain terms; his full significance is yet to be grounded. Beethoven was a gigantic reservoir into which a hundred proud streams poured their waters; he is a mighty lake out of which a thousand streams have flowed through all the territories which the musical art has peopled, and from which torrents are still pouring to irrigate lands that are still terrae incognitae. ¶In some respects his genius is an enigma. Whence came his profound knowledge of the musical art as it existed before him? He was not precocious as Mozart was. He was a diligent pupil, but not an orderly one. Except in childhood he was unruly, and impatient of discipline. The sternness and cruelty of a dissipated father made his earliest studies a suffering and an oppression. In later years he performed his duties toward Albrechtsberger, but refused to yield himself to that teacher's domination as he had already refused to bow to the authority of Haydn—an authority which he felt was too carelessly exercised. Yet the world knows how conscious he was of the potency of the learned forms into which Albrechtsberger strove to induct him, and the charm of romantic expression exemplified in Haydn. ¶He refused to acknowledge these men as his teachers, while they returned the compliment by refusing to own him as their pupil. Haydn condemned his first trios; Albrechtsberger advised his other pupils to have nothing to do with him because, as he said,

"he had never learned anything, and would never do anything in decent style." Yet Beethoven was proud of his ability in the department of study for which he had gone to this teacher of counterpoint. In his old age he considered Cherubini the greatest of his living contemporaries, and Händel the greatest of the great dead. Note the significance: both were masters in the severe forms. Taking no account of the canons, fugues, and variations which occur incidentally in his symphonies, sonatas, and quartets, we find that Beethoven left an extraordinarily large number of compositions in these forms behind him—no less than thirty-five canons, five independent fugues and thirty-two sets of variations for different instruments. Could there be a more convincing demonstration of his devotion to the scientific side of his art? ¶But he was no more and no less an iconoclast in these forms than in the romantic. Proof of another kind I found in an anecdote recorded in Mr. Thayer's note-book as related to him by the nephew of the observer of the incident. ¶In 1809 Wilhelm Rust sat in a coffee-house in Vienna with Beethoven. A French officer happening to pass, Beethoven doubled up his fist and exclaimed: "If I were a general and knew as much about strategy as I know about counterpoint, being a composer—I'd cut out some work for you fellows." ¶The great difference between him and his teachers was one of conception touching the uses to which counterpoint and fugue should be put. To Albrechtsberger the sciences existed for their own sake; for Beethoven they existed only as a medium of expression. There was nothing sacrosanct about them. As he himself said, it was a good thing to learn the rules in order afterward to know what was contrary to them, and, he might have added, also to know how to violate them when musical expression could thereby be promoted. ¶Yet Beethoven's greatest significance as an influence is not as a destroyer of forms and contemner of rules, as so many would have us believe who justify all manner of lawlessness to-day and quote Beethoven as an excuse; but as a widener of forms and a creator of rules for the development of expression, which is and must ever remain the aim of musical art. He was the prototype of Wagner's Hans Sachs, who wished due respect paid to the laws of the poet's craft so that poetical creation might go on within the lines of beauty, but who also wished spontaneous creative impulse to have its rights. Where he differed from the pedants who sought to stem the original flow of his utterance, was in realising better than they that art-works are the source of rules quite as much as their outcome. He felt, with Faust, that "In the beginning was the Deed," neither the "Word," nor the "Thought," nor the "Power," but the "Deed"; from that can be deduced the other potencies. ¶"Beethoven was not only the embodiment of all that was before him, but also of that which was yet to come. In his works music returned to its original purpose with its power raised a hundred-fold." I have said this before and elsewhere, but as I cannot say it better and want it said again, I say it again, and here. It is easy rhetoric to descant upon the tremendous strides which music has made in the last half century, the transformation of forms, the augmentation of expressive potencies (rhythmic, melodic, harmonic, instrumental), the widening of the horizon of the things proper to musical expression and much else; but he has not yet learned his Beethoven who does not see all that has yet appeared to be essential in these things distinctly foreshadowed in the music of the master who, in a larger, more comprehensive, more luminous sense than was dreamed of before or since, was priest, king, hero, and seer. A priest unceasing in his offerings in the Temple Beautiful! A king whose dominion is over the despotic rulers in man's emotional nature! A hero who knew his mission and subordinated to it himself, his longings, his loves, his very life! A seer, as Ruskin says of Imagination, "in the prophetic sense, calling the things that are not as though they were, and forever delighting to dwell on that which is not tangibly present." ¶Like Faust he ever heard the dread words ringing in his ears: "Entehren sollst du, sollst entbehren!" His art asked his all; he knew it and gave his all; and then the Gottbeit which he was wont to invoke, hushed the noises of the material world that he might the better hear the whisperings of the spirit pervading it; and raised a barrier between him and mankind to force him to be a witness and historian of the struggle between the human and the divine reflected in his own soul. All the misanthropy which filled his later years could not shake his devotion to an ideal which had sprung from truest artistic appreciation and been nurtured by enforced introspection. This is the key to Beethoven's music. ¶But it will not serve the purposes of this study merely to generalise. If the contention set forth is to be maintained, there must be some martialling of evidence. Confining ourselves to the cyclical form, the symphony, we note that Beethoven introduced a wider range and a freer use of keys than were employed by his models, Haydn and Mozart; abolished much of what sounds like mere remplissage in the connecting portions between themes, substituting therefor phrases developed out of the themes themselves; introduced original episodic matter; extended the free fantasia and coda; developed the old minuet into the scherzo, which could better carry on the psychological story which he wished to tell in the four chapters of his instrumental poem; infused unity into his works, not only by bringing the spiritual bonds between the movements more clearly before our perception, but also by making the material bonds obvious and incontrovertible. This last achievement has its simplest as well as most eloquent illustrations in the community of rhythms between the first, third, and last movements of the Fifth Symphony, and all the movements of the Seventh; the recurrence of themes in different movements of the Fifth and Ninth; the family likenesses, physiognomical resemblances, between the principal melodies of the Ninth; finally the programmatic conceit back of the Sixth. ¶The acceptance and continuation of the hints contained in these innovations is published in the abolition of pauses between the movements in the "Scotch" symphony of Mendelssohn, the adoption of the same device by Schumann, together with community of theme in the symphony in D minor, the invention of "l'idée fixe" by Berlioz for his "Symphonie Fantastique" and the successive recapitulation of material already used in the second, third, and fourth movements in the symphony, "From the New World," by Dvořák. ¶It has not been necessary to go far afield for examples; the proofs are surely convincing and come down to our own day. Moreover we find an illustration of the same principle, coupled with an exposition of Beethoven's system of thematic, instead of melodic, development—another form of variation, in brief—in all the symphonic poems of Liszt and his imitators down to Richard Strauss. ¶Beethoven's license may have degenerated into lawlessness, but he pointed a way that has been followed in all the particulars enumerated, and also broke down the barriers between voices and instruments in the symphonic forms to the delight of many successors. His revolutionary proceeding in the Ninth symphony found imitation by Mendelssohn in his "Hymn of Praise," by Berlioz in his "Romeo and Juliet," by Liszt in his "Faust" and "Dante" symphonies, by Nicodé in "Das Meer," and by Mahler in his symphony with contralto solo. (See page 51.)

HECTOR BERLIOZ

BY ERNEST NEWMAN

BERLIOZ's early influences were as much literary as musical. His reading was mainly romantic; his musical gods were Beethoven, Weber, and Gluck, whose orchestral works influenced him most. He knew little of Beethoven's piano writings, and did not like Bach. ¶Into the intellectual world of the Beethoven symphony and the operas of Gluck and Weber he breathed the newer, more nervous life of the French Romanticists. Colour and sensation became as important as form and the pure idea. ¶These influences and his literary instincts led him to graft the programme form on the older symphony. All his music aims at something concrete. Instead of the abstract world of the classical symphonists he gives us definite emotions, or paints definite scenes. Colour, passion, and veracity were the prime needs; form had to follow their guidance. Hence both his successes and his failures. His virtue is truth and vivacity of expression; his defect the pursuit of these to the detriment of the musical interest. ¶All modern programmists have built upon him—Liszt, Richard Strauss, and Tschaikowsky. Wagner felt his influence, though he belittled it. ¶His own words, "I have taken up music where Beethoven left it," indicate his position. He is the real beginner of that interpenetration of music and the poetic idea which has transformed modern art. (See page 59.)

GEORGES BIZET

BY EDWARD E. ZIEGLER

AS BIZET's last work was his best, it is logical to argue that his untimely death has cheated us of compositions more valuable than "Carmen"; but beyond mere conjecture such an estimate can have no value and his rank among opera-composers must be determined by "Carmen." That the stage was his real field, is proven clearly by the persistency with which he composed for it, and a study of his different efforts proves the wisdom of his choice, for there are no masterpieces among his songs, or among his piano-compositions, and even his most successful orchestral number is the "First Suite" compiled for his incidental music to Daudet's "L'Arlésienne." ¶His early letters confess his musical creed: Mozart and Beethoven, Rossini and Meyerbeer; this is catholic, to say the least, but later he acknowledged his preference for the Germans in general and Beethoven as the master of all. But Bizet was a stranger to the larger forms in music—for two years he toiled intermittingly at a symphony and produced only the "Roman Suite" as a result—and his work shows more tendency to follow Gounod's teaching than that of his high ideals. He was bitterly accused of being a follower of Wagner; Paris, knowing so lamentably little of Wagner's music, then condemned that of Bizet's, which it did not like or could not understand, by labelling it "Wagnerian," and thus put it hopelessly beyond the possibility of discussion. As a matter of fact there is no trace of Wagner to be found in Bizet's music, and the only resemblance between the two is that both were innovators who presented their theories about dramatic art in practical forms, proving them by their operas. ¶Bizet realised the sorry state of the French operatic stage, but contented himself with an effort at reforming the minor stage of the Opéra-Comique, and it is doubtless due in a great measure to the precedent of "Carmen" that to-day the Opéra-Comique is on a higher artistic plane than the Opéra. ¶A direct musical influence it would be difficult to trace to Bizet. As an orchestral colourist he had been outdone and outdared by even his contemporaries; nor did he bequeath to us a new art-form. But because he demanded a more sincere libretto than any of those with which that maker of marionette opera-books, Scribe, had conjured all Paris, and because in his music he did not fear contact with throbbing life, he commands our respect. His work shows a musical sincerity foreign to French composers generally, and he deserved a better fate than a sequence of failures ending with an early death. (See Dictionary of Musicians entry, page 64.)

JOHANNES BRAHMS

BY JAMES HUNEKER

SCHUMANN, in his much-discussed article "New Paths," called Brahms the true successor to Beethoven. His prediction was verified. To-day Johannes Brahms stands for the ultra-classic in symphonic music, though singularly enough he is really a hardy romanticist, who has widened and deepened the symphonic form. The career of Brahms compared to Wagner's was a quiet, scholarly, uneventful one. A severe student and self-critic, he made his way slowly, for the Wagner furor was at hand, and the modest writer of chamber music, of songs and symphonies, was completely eclipsed by the glory of his so-called rival. ¶It was Von Bülow's audacious epigram, "The three B's,—Bach, Beethoven, and Brahms," that drew down upon the head of the innocent composer the ire of the Wagner camp. As a matter of record Brahms never posed as an opponent, much less as a rival of the Bayreuth hero; indeed he was an admirer, and knew his scores as only he could know a score—absolutely. But he was not in the least affected by Wagner—how could he be, working as he did in such a totally different genre? This genre, however, was not the out-worked vein it was so contemptuously christened by the new men. To-day Brahms is a modern among the moderns—indeed his has also been called the music of the future. ¶To old forms like the symphony, to the smaller forms, he has brought an abounding invention, a vitality in execution, and a musical intellect the most profound since Beethoven's. To the complex symphonic structure of Beethoven he had superadded a polyphony almost Bachian in its mastery of intricate voicing and the weaving of a marvellous contrapuntal web. The dignity of his themes, the depth and sweetness of his cantilena, the massiveness of his musical architecture—he is in music the born builder—combined with a fecund fantasy, a grim but elastic humour, and no little susceptibility, mark Brahms as one of the elect, a master among masters. His control of the orchestra is absolute in its eloquence, though he is no painter, no seeker after the unique word, the only colour. ¶He has been reproached for a colour monotone by those critics who are easily moved by brilliant and showy externals. But that reproach falls to earth when the adaptability of the garb to the musical idea is discovered. Brahms never erred in this matter; his taste was impeccable. ¶He had a message and he delivered it in tones that befitted its weight, its importance. He is a symphonist primarily; his themes as if carved from granite are symphonic and not dramatic themes, and in his development of them he is second only to Beethoven. A philosopher, he views his subject from every possible side, and the result is an edifice of tone comparable to a Gothic Cathedral. In his songs he is the sweet-voiced, the tender German lyricist, deep in feeling, capricious, noble and moving as Schumann or Schubert. He will rank with these song writers. In chamber music, in the amiable conjunction of piano and strings, trios, quartettes, quintets, horn-trio and two clarinet-quintets, Brahms is supreme. He has written a sterling violin-concerto dedicated to Joachim and played first by him. His two piano-concertos in D minor and B flat major, introduced here by Rafael Joseffy, are masterpieces; though pianists complain of the dearth of display passages, they are sincere in feeling and perfect concertos in the balance of the solo instrument with the orchestra. ¶The Brahms solo piano-music is a new and independent literature. He wrote three sonatas; of these the last is the most popular; its andante and scherzo are beautiful specimens of piano-writing. The solo scherzo in E flat minor, opus 4, was a great favourite with Liszt, who saw in it traces of Chopin. The little pieces written during the closing years of the composer's life are exquisite and poetic gems, conceived by a poet, executed with all the dainty cunning of a lapidary. These miniatures are Brahms in his most genial mood. The forger of thunderbolts was now resting and plotting lovely little gardens of fragrant flowers. ¶His extraordinary technical invention is nowhere better evidenced than in his Paganini variations for the piano, the Ultima Thule of pianists. These variations are paralleled in his St. Anthony variations for orchestra, a noble disproof of the assertion that Brahms had no intimate feeling for the orchestra. His German Requiem written in 1868 is tremendous in its scope and elemental power. It is the apotheosis of a nation's grief. ¶He was not uniformly successful—little wonder, for his published works number 130. But if this Titian stumbled, was intermittent in his inspiration, the main body of his work stands out marmoreal, of overwhelming grandeur, truly German, and withal, sounding the big note as no one has sounded it in music since Beethoven. FRÉDÉRIC FRANÇOIS CHOPIN

CHOPIN's home education doubtless preserved in him a certain feminine delicacy which never deserted him. ¶At the age of nine he played a Gyrowetz concerto in public and improvised, but seemed more solicitous about the impression his new collar made on the audience, than for the success of his music. ¶As a composer of nineteen he was remarkable and far in advance of his critics and audiences. The disturbed political atmosphere of Poland coupled with an unsuccessful love affair—he vainly adored the singer Constantia Gladowska—decided him on a residence in Vienna. There his playing did not create any enthusiasm, and in the fall of the year he went to Stuttgart en route for Paris. It was in the German city that he heard of the downfall of Warsaw and of his patriotic hopes; for Chopin was a fierce patriot, but because of his slender physique, a non-combatant. He journeyed at once to Paris and settled there. ¶His intimacy with the famous novelist George Sand lasted ten years, and her influence, hurtful according to some, and valuable according to others, was most potent and enduring. His sensitive nature was subject to many rude shocks during his companionship with the coarser-fibred and more intellectual woman. Yet it cannot be denied that from his most ardent pangs, he, artist-like, contrived to wring some of his sweetest and most subtle music. The shock of the separation, a separation that was inevitable, shattered Chopin's bruised spirit, and two years later he died, if not of a broken heart, partially of disappointment, chagrin, and spleen. His lungs, always weak, became hopelessly diseased, and after a profitless tour in England and Scotland, where he was really too weak to play, he died of consumption and was buried in Père-Lachaise, near the graves of Cherubini and Bellini. His funeral, an imposing one, called out the representative artistic spirits of the city. Seldom has genius been so accompanied to its last resting-place. ¶During his lifetime Chopin was the centre of a circle of wit, talent, and fashion. Balzac, Delacroix, Liszt, Meyerbeer, Heine, Bellini, Berlioz, Mendelssohn, were a few among his intimate associates. His spiritual and original piano-playing admitted him into the inner circle of aristocracy, and he was sought for persistently until his life was sapped by sorrow and constant social duties. ¶Chopin played but seldom in public, for he was unfitted by nature to cope with the audiences of the larger concert halls. That task he gratefully resigned to Liszt. But in the twilight of the salon among the favoured choice souls, his playing took on almost unearthly qualities. His touch, light in weight, was exquisite in timbre; his tone ranged from forte to a feathery pianissimo, while his style was absolutely unique. Tender, martial, ironical, capricious, gay, and sad, this young Pole held in bondage the entire emotional gamut. Never had the piano sounded so before, sounded so ærial, so witty, so passionate; and it may be doubted if it has sounded thus since; for, while Liszt, Rubinstein, Tausig, Joseffy, Heyman, DePachmann, Essipoff, Rosenthal, and Paderewski were, and are, remarkable interpreters, yet those who heard Chopin the pianist despair in their efforts to describe his spiritual performances. His light, finely articulated hand explains some of the characteristics of his technics; the wide-spread harmonies, the changeful play of inner voices; the novel figuration; and the lovely melodic life. ¶Chopin is the poet of his instrument, the musical poet of Poland. He caught up and treasured the folk-songs of his country, and gave them to the world in an idealised form. His mazurkas are tiny poems full of caprice, wounded pride, ecstatic moments; his four ballads are epical in scope, containing noble melodies, the form absolutely original; the four scherzos are evidences of Chopin's creative powers, for here the form is again novel; the content startling. Bitterness, frantic and cruel, followed by rapturous outbursts of melody arouse in the listener the most vivid emotions. It is Chopin at the apex of his power. The polonaises are passionate and patriotic, or else fantastic and graceful, but always wonder-breeding. His waltzes are for the salon, and for the soul—like the mazurkas. Of the three sonatas, the one in B flat minor is the most satisfactory. Without organic unity it nevertheless astonishes by its originality and depth. Its slow movement is the funeral march, now a banal concert number. In his four Impromptus Chopin is full of charm, while in the Barcarolle and in the Fantaisie, opus 49 he almost achieves perfection. The nocturnes and Cradle Song, now for the most part war-worn from repetition, contain much beautiful music. The Studies, opus 10 and 25 with the Preludes, opus 28 are Chopin in all his dazzling invention, his never-failing fancy, poetry, daring harmonic innovations and moving melodic richness. ¶He changed the modern map of music by his subtle and profound experimentings with the possibilities of chromatic harmonies, and for this ranks among the great composers. Within his range he is the most perfect lyrist that ever sang, and the ethereal sonorities of his style, his discreet and original use of the tempo rubato, make him a fore-runner of all that is free, individual and exotic in latter-day music. ¶Chopin was not happiest in writing for orchestra or for piano in conjunction with violin or violoncello. His two concertos contain charming episodes, but do not cohere, do not make the eloquent appeal of the smallest of his mazurkas. He was not fashioned for the epic, this master of intimate moods. He wrote variations, fantasies, a 'cello-sonata, a piano-trio and bolero, a tarantelle and songs. ¶We have forgotten them; but never so long as the piano remains the piano, will Chopin be forgotten. He is, as Rubinstein said, its soul. (See page 100.)

CLAUDE DEBUSSY

BY RICHARD ANTHONY LEONARD

A CONTEMPORARY once described Debussy as "a musician of genius, who has the forehead of a Pekinese dog, a horror of his neighbour, a fiery glance and a slightly husky voice." If the portrait is only partly flattering, at least it leaves us assured that Debussy was extraordinary even down to the unimportant externals. He was a man of genius—one of the greatest of a century which teemed with geniuses. He was the founder of the so-called school of impressionism in music; he gave it a form, a language, and a spirit, and he endowed it with most of its finest works. To French music in general he provided an impetus that had been lacking for many years; he liberated it from the Germanic influence and bequeathed it a style in harmony with the character of the French. His influence on all modern music has been enormous. The stream of musical thought has taken on new colours and flows to-day in different channels than it would have, had Debussy never lived. ¶If he had a bulging forehead, then it was simply the outward evidence of a powerful intellect, of a mind capable of grappling with some of the most difficult problems that ever confronted any artist, and of solving many of them. If he had a horror of his neighbour, it was merely one of the phases of his solitary and fastidious nature. The obvious and the hackneyed repelled him; he was drawn instead to the internal, intangible side of life, to the reticent and the hidden. There lay the inspiration for his impressionistic art. If he had a fiery glance, so, too, did he have stubborn courage. His was a soul in rebellion and he needed a certain obstinacy and a disdain of his inferiors if he was to achieve his revolutionary ends. ¶Debussy was in revolt even as a youth of sixteen at the Paris Conservatoire, where he shocked his teachers by questioning the classic rules of harmony and counterpoint. He was a brilliant enough student to win the coveted Prix de Rome at the age of twenty-two, with his cantata "L'Enfant Prodigue," but he left his studies at the Villa Medici in Rome before the three-year course was completed. In his sky loomed the gigantic figure of Richard Wagner, the great god of all nineteenth-century revolutionists, the man who had broken down the barriers of form in music, given melody a new elasticity and freedom, and let harmony run riot. ¶But Debussy's most potent early influences came from the sister art of painting, where a group of men known as the impressionists were in rebellion against the established canons of the Academy. This famous movement grew from the studies by Edouard Manet of the effect of light and atmosphere on colour. The impressionists sought to interpret not so much the direct or photographic representation of an object as the impression which that object left upon them—the emotions which it conjured up. They were more concerned with light, colour, and atmosphere than with form and structural balance. To this new art, and to its practitioners and champions, Debussy was powerfully drawn. He came to know the work of Manet and Monet, Pissarro, Degas, and Whistler. He sought the company and literary advice of the allied poets and writers—the "Symbolists"—Stéphane Mallarmé, Pierre Louÿs, Paul Verlaine, and André Gide. ¶As early as 1894, when he was but thirty-two, Debussy had already laid the foundations of his refined, subtle, and exquisitely fashioned art. In that year he completed "L'Après-midi d'un Faune," after the famous eclogue of his friend Mallarmé. In this superb score (it remains to-day one of the most perfect of all Debussy's works) his music evokes with sensuous delicacy the dreams and desires of a faun on a hot summer afternoon. It was an instant success. Even the more obtuse critics of his time realised that a new voice of singular impressiveness had spoken. ¶With his next major works, the three "Nocturnes" for orchestra ("Nuages," "Fêtes" and "Sirènes"), Debussy's impressionistic methods had become firmly fixed. In these scores all is cloudlike and impalpable; the orchestral colouring is transparent and light as air. The composer uses his instruments with a marvellous economy and yet with a richness of effect that is magical. His harmonic scheme is new and daring, while the old ideas of harmonic progression he discards, until his modulations move freely outside the boundaries of a key centre. After the first performances of these works, in 1900, Debussy had definitely arrived as a composer. But his greatness was far from established. It was still to be many years before the more conservative critics and even many musicians of discernment could stomach his advanced style. ¶In 1902 came the first performance of his opera, "Pelléas and Mélisande," a work which had absorbed Debussy's creative energies for more than ten years. No opera since "Tristan and Isolde" let loose such torrents of controversy. It divided the music world into two warring factions: one side saw the composer reducing the established canons of opera to fragments in a manner straining for novelty and effect; the other looked upon him as the Messiah of a new movement in music, and called "Pelléas and Mélisande" the most perfect work for the lyric stage since "Tristan and Isolde." Debussy had, in fact, succeeded in carrying out the ideal which Wagner set up but never fully realised himself: i.e., the perfect union of poetic text, dramatic action, and music. In "Pelléas and Mélisande" the music moves hand-in-hand with the drama; there are no arias, no set vocal pieces, and no thematic development in the orchestra to hamper the dialogue on the stage. The drama unfolds itself in song of a recitative style, following the inflections of the speaking voice. Under this the orchestra lays a richly decorative pattern of sound, accenting and underlining the text and action but only at rare moments rising in climactic intensity to overshadow all else. ¶Following "Pelléas and Mélisande" Debussy's creative powers moved rapidly to their apex. Between 1902 and 1912 he produced some of his finest piano music (including the Preludes, "L'Isle joyeuse" and the superb "Reflets dans l'eau") as well as his three great orchestral canvases, "La Mer," "Iberia," and "Rondes de Printemps." In "La Mer" and "Iberia" Debussy reached the highest point in the development of impressionism in music. Here colour and atmosphere are present in unparalleled richness, while the old frameworks of form and contrapuntal development have almost vanished. Debussy is the master of his technique. And he refutes, once for all, the notion that his art is effeminate or essentially small-scaled. ¶Debussy was to produce one more major work of consequence, his "Le Martyre de Saint-Sebastien" in 1911, and thereafter his art began to suffer a tragic decline. It grew formulaised, mannered, stale. The composer seemed no longer able to rouse himself from the laziness which had always been his besetting sin. The outbreak of the World War affected him profoundly, and in 1915 he began to suffer acutely from the disease which was to cause his death three years later. His work during this period is often the merest shadow of its former greatness. Composition had always been difficult for him; and now, under the pressure of the war horror, the ever-increasing pain of his disease, and a recalcitrant inspiration, the effort of work must have become intolerable. He tried heroically to continue, but in March 1918 he died—this creator of some of the most exquisite sounds in all music—to the noise of "Big Bertha's" shells crashing into the streets of Paris. ¶With the passage of time and the appearance of composers even more revolutionary, much of the strangeness has disappeared from the music of Debussy. His technical discoveries and innovations have been analysed until they are the familiar property of every music student and the common coin of even the modern jazz band arranger. Even so, his contributions to the purely technical side of music are not yet fully appreciated. ¶Debussy is most famous for his unusual harmonies. He began early to use chords which did not belong to the scale or key of the work. Gradually these interlopers assumed greater and greater importance until in his mature works the idea of a key centre almost disappears and it is often impossible to name the key or tonality that predominates at a given moment. Debussy used the chord as an entity in itself, not merely as the support of a melody or the result of the contrapuntal movement of different voices. He mixed completely unrelated chords, and he made great use of chords of the seventh, ninth, and eleventh. From Wagner he learned the subtle aesthetic value of the dissonance and he expanded its use with telling effect. One of his favourite devices was the "gliding" of chords, that is, the parallel movement of the same chord through any of the twelve tones of the scale. This required, of course, the use of parallel or "consecutive" fifths and octaves—once the unforgivable sin of orthodox harmony. ¶Another of Debussy's most valuable innovations was his use of neglected scales, notably the whole-tone scale and the pentatonic, or five-tone scale. The former in particular is used so extensively that it gives its characteristic colouring to a great part of the composer's work. Debussy also employed the medieval modes, for their novel tonal colouring and to gain the effect of a classic or archaic style; and there are uses of the ancient organum of the early Roman Church. ¶Great as was his mastery of harmony, Debussy could never have wrought as he did without equal gifts for melody—melody being in the last analysis the sine qua non of all music that endures. For a long time his singular skill in this respect was overlooked, largely because he neither harmonised nor developed his themes in the expected manner. Now, when we may see his work in truer perspective, his melodic material stands out in its proper light—beautifully curviform, full of originality and exquisite charm. ¶Of Debussy's use of the orchestra it is difficult to speak without excess of praise. For his most delicate, most elusive, most enigmatic ideas he seemed always able to find the most richly eloquent orchestral voice. He expanded the entire instrumental palette, inventing a whole new range of prismatic values. Yet his most magical effects are often achieved with a reticence and an economy of means that leave us breathless. (See Dictionary of Musicians entry, page 119.)

MANUEL DE FALLA

BY RICHARD ANTHONY LEONARD

THE GREAT NATIONALIST MOVEMENT in music, which began in Russia in the nineteenth century, had its repercussions all over Europe. Composers in Germany, Hungary, France, Italy, and England awoke to the possibilities of native folk music and legend as the source of their inspiration. But Spain lagged behind. For many years the most effective Spanish music was composed by men who were not Spaniards at all, but Frenchmen like Bizet, Chabrier, Debussy and Ravel, and even Russians like Rimsky-Korsakoff. ¶The first important steps toward a truly native Spanish music were taken by Albeniz and Granados; but neither of these men ever gained the stature sufficient to place them in the class of first-rate creators. Both were gifted in manipulating the externals of the Spanish idiom—the characteristic dance rhythms and melodies, the warm, languorous colouring. But for the most part the best contributions of both were in the smaller forms—piano pieces and songs. With the rise of Manuel de Falla, however, Spain has at last produced a composer of unquestioned genius; one who, almost single-handed, has created a genuinely nationalistic music for his country. ¶Falla was born in Cadiz, in Andalusia, in 1876. His first important work was the short opera, "La Vida Breve," composed in 1904 and 1905, in which he displays a remarkable maturity of style and technique. Two years later Falla went to Paris, where he met Debussy. That was the most important event in his creative life, for he fell under the spell of the French composer, absorbing the ideas of Impressionism which were to influence all his major works thereafter. ¶The most immediate effect of this new influence was the composition of the three Nocturnes for orchestra and piano, "Nights in the Gardens of Spain." Then followed what is probably Falla's masterpiece, the ballet "El Amor Brujo," performed with great success in 1915.

A second ballet, "The Three Cornered Hat," produced by Diaghileff in 1919, made the composer internationally famous. Since then Falla's chief works have been a marionette opera, "The Puppet Show," and a concerto for harpsichord. It will be noted that Falla's output has been comparatively small; even so, it has been sufficient to bring him world fame and an honoured place among the most important composers of his time. ¶Falla's music represents by far the finest and most effective use that has yet been made of the Spanish idiom. It is infinitely more subtle and truer to the spirit of Spain than any of the attempts made by foreign composers, with the exception of Debussy. For Falla, although steeped in the folk music and popular dance tunes of Spain, never makes direct use of them. In his music the conventional mannerisms of melody, the dance rhythms, the characteristic harmonies and ornamental figures are suggested, insinuated, but rarely referred to directly. For these purposes the impressionistic technique is, of course, invaluable; and Falla's debt to Debussy is undeniably large. His harmonic scheme is thoroughly "modern" in scope and exceptionally rich—not at all bound by the limits of his native material. In the field of orchestration Falla has developed effects of great beauty and originality, sometimes by borrowing the effects belonging to popular Spanish instruments. He works subtly and often with disarming simplicity to achieve his ends. ¶In his finest works, like "El Amor Brujo" and "Nights in the Gardens of Spain," this composer has made a notable contribution to the music of our time, not only in the quality of the work itself, but by his proof that the Spanish idiom can be made the basis for great music in the larger forms. So completely is he the master of his materials that he is able to give them variety instead of monotony, and a universal rather than a narrow provincial appeal. (See Dictionary of Musicians entry, page 121.)

CÉSAR FRANCK

BY RICHARD ANTHONY LEONARD

IT IS NO EXAGGERATION to say that the father of modern French music came perilously close to dying without issue. For César Franck, the man whose work engendered the rebirth of music in France after 1870, lived for almost three quarters of his life in obscurity. It was not until after his fifty-fifth year that he began to produce the series of masterpieces which brought him posthumous fame and a place among the immortals of his art. French music had declined hopelessly after Berlioz; Rosa Newmarch declares that the public taste had "degenerated into a craze for opera of a merely frivolous kind." Then came this shy, painfully modest little organist and pedagogue who was to build, in the twilight of his life, a new and enduring edifice of cathedralesque beauty, one that rested for the most part upon the solid classicism of J. S. Bach. Ambitious young French composers of the eighteen-eighties, who had despaired of the future music of their country, listened to Franck's violin sonata and his string quartet, to his "Beatiitudes" and the Symphony in D minor—and raised their eyes in wonder. Here at last was a French composer (albeit he was born in Belgium) who by a lifetime of industry and with stainless purity of motive could revive and expand the old classic forms and clothe them with a new aesthetic personality of his own. Thus César Franck became the spiritual father of most of the younger men who were to help him restore French music to its former greatness—of D'Indy, Chausson, Duparc and of Debussy and Ravel. ¶The salient qualities of Franck's music can be explained only by the details of his life and character. Born in Liège in 1822, the son of a banker, he was brought by his father to the Paris Conservatoire at the age of fifteen. He became one of the most brilliant and talented pupils of that venerable institution, and was advised to follow the career of virtuoso. But once he had left the Conservatoire he was hardly ever again to be beyond the pressure of economic necessity. He became a church organist and a teacher of the piano. Vincent D'Indy (his pupil, biographer, and devoted disciple) has left us a picture of his master that is both revealing and pathetic. Every morning for almost fifty years Franck arose at five-thirty and spent two hours at composition. After breakfast he went out to give his piano lessons, hurrying all over Paris to provide the rudiments of music training to recalcitrant young ladies in boarding schools and colleges . . . "invariably in a hurry, invariably absent-minded and making grimaces, running rather than walking, dressed in an overcoat too large and trousers a size too short." In the evening, after a long day of teaching, he still had energy left for a few minutes' work on his scores. When he became organist of the Church of Ste. Clothilde, a post he held for thirty years, he began to satisfy the only other great passion in his life besides composition. He was a great organist and a transcendent improviser. In 1866 Franz Liszt went to Ste. Clothilde and after hearing Franck left "evoking the name of J. S. Bach in inevitable comparison." ¶That was Franck's life for half a century. There is no doubt that under the strain of the teaching routine his music suffered; for most of his earlier work, though competent and sincere, is seldom of first quality. But through perseverance, prodigious industry, and selfless devotion to his ideal he succeeded at last. After he had reached the age of fifty-five he began to produce the great works which finally brought him fame. His quintet for piano and strings, his oratorio, "The Beatitudes," the prelude, chorale and fugue for piano, the symphonic variations; the sonata for violin and piano, the Symphony in D minor, the string quartet, and the three organ chorales are all products of this closing period of his life. ¶Because his music was so much the soul of classic purity, without the slightest acknowledgment to current fads or styles, even Franck's finest works were often slow in achieving deserved recognition. At the first performance of the Symphony in D minor, Gounod pronounced the work "the affirmation of incompetence pushed to dogmatic lengths." But Franck merely said, "Oh, it sounded well, just as I thought it would." He became so used to obscurity and so indifferent to public acclaim that he seemed almost surprised when fame at last overtook him. When his string quartet scored an unexpected success at a performance in Paris in 1890, Franck was utterly bewildered by the ovation. "There, you see," he said, "the public is beginning to understand me." He was then sixty-eight years old and within a few months of his death. ¶For the expression of his musical ideals Franck was fortunate in two aspects of his purely technical equipment: the first was his mastery of the classic forms, the result of a lifetime of study as well as a natural predilection; and the second was his extraordinary resource as a harmonist. Franck's harmonies remain to-day the most characteristic feature of his work. They are richly varied and expressive, full of unexpected chromatic modulations, flooded with colour and light. Franck owed much in this respect to Wagner and to Liszt; but his music is mostly lacking in the sensuous qualities that mirrored the passions of the great Germans. Sensuousity seemed not to exist for Franck. He was a man of almost saint-like modesty, for whom the love of his fellow men was a cardinal life-principle. His piety was utterly sincere, his faith in his religion deep and abiding. This spiritual and mystic nature speaks in almost every bar of his works. His music soars and sings; it is full of the choiring of angelic voices, the perpetual adoration of heavenly hosts. (See Dictionary of Musicians entry, page 155.)

GEORGE GERSHWIN

BY FERDE GROFÉ

GERSHWIN proved in his own achievements what Paul Whiteman and I had always believed when we were first associated in his band (I as pianist and arranger): that the better elements of jazz could be incorporated into art music and be the basis of a series of symphonic creations typically expressive of our nation. ¶Until Gershwin wrote his "Rhapsody In Blue," our serious American orchestral composers had been preponderatingly influenced by their German and French predecessors and contemporaries. Of course, there were essays in adapting the Indian and Negro idioms, but there was nothing that completely represented the particular spirit, atmosphere and voice of our land. Even Dvořák's "New World" symphony, themed with tunes of Southern implication, was found by experts to be more Czech than American. ¶Gershwin's early songs showed strong originality in melody, harmony and rhythm, but it was not until he composed the "Rhapsody" and the "Preludes" for piano, that critics pricked up their ears, promoted him from Broadway, and admitted him into the charmed circle of serious creators. ¶I had done some arranging for Gershwin before he came to me with the piano score of the "Rhapsody" in 1923-24. I was astonished at the resource and taste displayed in his newest manuscript. It fired my imagination and inspired me as I had never been before. Naturally I am proud of the orchestration of the "Rhapsody." ¶There are those who do not think that Gershwin grew musically after the "Rhapsody," but I disagree with them emphatically. I consider his "Concerto in F" the most important piano opus in that form ever to come from the pen of an American composer. It is essentially individual and national, with a slow movement of irresistible feeling. The "Second Rhapsody" is completely different from the "Blue," and yet speaks in novel and convincing utterance. "An American in Paris" is a lifelike characterisation of our people, confident, ebullient, mostly gay, and perhaps a bit swaggering. The "Cuban Overture" presents delightful persiflage and good-natured satirisation of the rhumba style. "Porgy and Bess" frankly puzzled the hidebound critics. It may not be a "grand opera" in the strictest sense of the term, but it surely is a brilliant, warm-blooded, witty and indigenous piece of writing. The picturesqueness and psychology of the famous Southern drama have been set forth with the utmost fidelity. ¶A distinctive Gershwin touch typified all his music, even the rollicking and sentimental songs and other numbers he did for Broadway. Some of them have become classics in their field. I do not imagine, for instance, that "The Man I Love" could ever lose its heart-filling appeal, even though "I Got Rhythm" might diminish in popularity should newer dance metres come into vogue. ¶Gershwin has left a measure of fame that is not writ in water. (See Dictionary of Musicians entry, page 168.)

VICTOR HERBERT

BY DEEMS TAYLOR

WHEN THEODORE THOMAS conducted his third Popular Matinee for Young People in Steinway Hall on the afternoon of Saturday, December tenth, his programme included, among other things, Mendelssohn's "Fingal's Cave" overture, the prelude to "Lohengrin," and a new "Concerto for Violoncello and Orchestra" by the brilliant twenty-eight-year-old first 'cellist of the Metropolitan Opera House orchestra. The composer played the solo part. On the evening of the same day, in the Metropolitan, the young 'cellist again played his new work at the season's second concert of the Philharmonic Society. "The violoncello concerto was introduced in place of the scene from 'Euryanthe,' 'Wo berg ich mich?,' which was announced for Herr Emil Fischer, but who became hoarse after the public rehearsal on the preceding day." ¶[This, from Henry E. Krehbiel's "Review of the New York Musical Season, 1887-88," is the earliest mention of Victor Herbert as a composer that I have been able to find. The young Irishman who spoke English with a brogue that had a bewildering Teutonic flavour (he had been brought up and educated in Germany, where he lived from his fifth to his twenty-fifth year) was known chiefly as a 'cellist, and a good one. In 1886, when his wife, Therese Foerster, of the Stuttgart Opera, had been engaged for the Metropolitan in New York, Herbert came to America with her, where he entered the orchestra of the Metropolitan. Before long he gave up the career of instrumentalist to become, successively, assistant conductor with Thomas and Seidl, bandmaster of the Twenty-Second Regiment Band in New York, and conductor of the Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra. ¶[In later years he organised his own orchestra, which existed as a more or less loosely constructed unit almost to the time of his death; but it is not as a conductor, first-rate leader though he was, that we remember him. In Germany he had composed, aside from the 'cello concerto, a 'cello suite and a suite for strings. These, together with a cantata, "The Captive," written in America, all come under the head of "serious" music, and they possess undeniable charm and—as one would expect of Herbert—great technical fluency; all the work of a young composer concerning whose future one could say nothing more definite than that he possessed great talent. ¶[It was not long before the direction in which that talent was to turn became increasingly clear. In 1894 he wrote, and saw produced, a comic opera, "Prince Ananias." I know little about it, have not, as a matter of fact, heard any of the score. I do know, however, that it attracted critical attention and was successful enough to procure its composer another commission. This was a starring vehicle for Frank Daniels, a fantastic musical farce written by Harry B. Smith. It was called "The Wizard of the Nile." Opening on the evening of November 4, 1895, at the Casino Theatre in New York, it was an instant success, not only in America, but, later, in Mexico, England, and Germany. Herbert had found his calling. ¶The "Wizard" was the second in a list of musical comedies, operettas, and extravaganzas that is far too long to enumerate here—even if it were necessary. "The Gold Bug," "The Serenade," "The Idol's Eye," "The Fortune Teller," "Babes in Toyland," "Mlle. Modiste," "The Red Mill," "Naughty Marietta," "The Princess Pat," "The Madcap Duchess," "Eileen"—these are a handful of the best known of the forty-odd scores that flowed from Herbert's inexhaustible pen during the forty years between "Prince Ananias" and his swan song, "Orange Blossoms." Add to his stage works the quantity of overtures, divertimenti, and other short instrumental pieces that he wrote, and the sum of his separate vocal and instrumental numbers comes to well over a thousand. ¶Other composers of light music have equalled this output (Johann Strauss the Younger and Jacques Offenbach probably exceeded it; Sullivan wrote about half as much), but none, in my opinion, has ever maintained its incredibly high average of excellence. To me, Victor Herbert's music, taken on its average, is the finest repertoire of light opera music ever written. Strauss can be glily sentimental at times; Offenbach can and does write pages whose apparent purpose is merely to keep things going until an idea turns up. Herbert can be sentimental upon occasion, Lord knows; witness "I'm Falling in Love with Someone" and "Ah, Sweet Mystery of Life" from "Naughty Marietta." But even at his worst he generally contrives something—an unexpected melodic leap, a piquant chord progression—that saves him from complete banality. And throughout his scores you will be hard put to it to find a passage that can honestly be called perfunctory, that does not contain some wholly individual turn of phrase of which one says, "That's Herbert." His music is light, superficial, if you like; it was meant to be. But its crystalline charm and glossy perfection of finish contrive to give it a detached, aristocratic flavour that keeps it from ever becoming obvious and cheap. ¶Ordinarily, one would expect the music of a man whose entire education, academic and musical, was German, to reflect the characteristics of his stepmother country. As a matter of fact, except for its consummate workmanship and the Viennese character of his waltz rhythms, I can find nothing at all Teutonic about Herbert's music. It is, if anything, French. Not the adopted French style of Offenbach, but the truly Gallic style of, for example, Bizet. The two seem to me curiously alike in the quality of their talent: unhackneyed but instantly remembered melodies, vocally grateful (the fact that Mrs. Herbert was an opera singer undoubtedly had much to do with that), a tendency to make sudden brief incursions into remote keys, an effective and ingenious sense of rhythm, and an unerring feeling for style and atmosphere. The composer of the "Card Song" from "Carmen" might well have written the verse of the "Gypsy Serenade" from "The Fortune Teller," just as the composer of "Panamericana" might have written the Habanera from "Carmen." ¶One striking feature of his music is its extraordinary variety. In his own field I know of no one who can equal him in versatility of style. The gypsy music in "The Fortune Teller" has a true gypsy flavour; "In the Toy-maker's Workshop" is a brilliantly successful modern "Kindersinfonie"; there is real eighteenth-century atmosphere in much of "The Madcap Duchess" score; and the Oriental music of "Algeria," while not perhaps the Orient of Algiers, is at least the Orient of Borodin. He was a master of rhythm; not the rhythm of contemporary jazz—he never mastered that. On the other hand, unlike the contemporary jazz composer, he had not one but a dozen dance rhythms at his fingertips. He was particularly happy in writing pieces that called for tempo rubato playing. Trifles like the “Absinthe Frappé,” “Punchinello,” and “Badinage” are little masterpieces of this style of writing. ¶In neither of his two ventures into the field of grand opera, “Madeleine” and “Natoma,” was he successful. There were two reasons for this failure, I think. One was—and this is the tragedy of Herbert’s career—that he never found a librettist who could match him. All his life he was a genius working with hacks; clever, even brilliant men, expert in the kind of word carpentry that turns out successful musical-comedy books and lyrics, but nonetheless hacks. Many of Arthur Sullivan’s best numbers obviously owe their form to the inspiration of Gilbert’s lyrics. In Herbert’s case I always have the feeling that the music pulls the lyrics along, that if Herbert wrote brilliant and charming tunes, he wrote them without help, that the inspiration for them came entirely from within. No man can set banal and pedestrian words to music for half a lifetime without having his poetic sense blunted. Herbert’s ear for literary English was never very keen—the result, probably, of speaking little but German for twenty years. As he grew older, he seemed at times to be almost incapable of judging good lyrics or a good libretto. Music came to him so easily that the words became little more than a take-off; so why bother about them? ¶But grand opera is a different matter. No composer can write a continuous score, lasting two or three hours, without inevitably reflecting the quality of his libretto; if the music is to have any distinction, the libretto must possess some sort of distinction, either poetic or dramatic, in its own right. ¶“Madeleine” and “Natoma” had neither. The former is a little better poetically, but neither has any real dramatic interest. As for the words of “Natoma,” no critic has ever been cruel enough to do them full justice. The oft-quoted phrase from the “Vaquero’s Song,” “See how the bull, upon his knees, Snorts when his neck we tighter squeeze,” is one of dozens of similar triumphs of bathos. In too many places the music of “Natoma” sounds trivial, prettily uninteresting, “catchy” in the Broadway sense of the word, rather than the music of a serious lyric drama. How could it be otherwise? It is an all-too-perfect setting of the words. For a hint as to what he might have done, had he been given a genuinely poetic and emotionally sincere libretto, listen to the prelude to the third act. Here, freed momentarily from the necessity of setting refined doggerel to music, he writes broadly and nobly. ¶Many of Verdi’s librettists were hacks, too; but Verdi always managed to whip even the worst written libretto into some sort of dramatic shape, so that if he lacked words that were an inspiration, at least he had a situation. But this Herbert was helpless to do. The second reason that his operas failed is that he was not by instinct a dramatic composer. ¶This seems an odd thing to say of a composer who had spent twenty years in the theatre. But theatrical music is not necessarily dramatic music. Particularly is this true of musical comedy, where the score exists primarily for its own sake, rather than to advance or enhance the action. The order in which the musical numbers occur is determined solely by considerations of musical rather than dramatic effectiveness. But a successful grand opera must be a dramatic unit. The words and music combine to create the drama, and the composer must be prepared to sacrifice or cut short his happiest inspirations if the action requires him to do so. Herbert had had no experience at this sort of thing. He had not acquired Verdi's or Puccini's or Bizet's knack of carrying the action along through the medium of—apparently—purely musical numbers. He could stop the action and burst into song, or he could stop the music and underline dialogue; but he could not combine the two styles of writing, or hide the seams, so to speak, in his musical fabric. His operatic scores, consequently, sound short-winded and scrappy. ¶He took their failure much to heart. But that is his tragedy, not ours. He was put here to sing, and sing he did—for forty years; and we are still under the spell of the charm and bubbling freshness of what he sang. There has never been anyone quite like him. (See page 204.)

FRANZ LISZT

By HENRY T. FINCK

THERE are two great paradoxes in the career of Liszt. The first is that just as Rossini, the most popular opera composer of his day, ceased writing operas thirty-nine years before his death, so Liszt, the greatest and most adored pianist of all times, ceased playing in public (except for an occasional charitable purpose) about the same number of years before his end came. He had, with his inimitable art, familiarised concert-goers with nearly all the best compositions for the piano, created by other masters. He had transcribed for the same instrument a large number of songs, operatic melodies and orchestral works (the number of these transcriptions at his death was 371), thereby vastly increasing their vogue. He also wrote altogether 160 original compositions for the pianoforte, many of them as new in form as in substance; unique among them being the fifteen Hungarian rhapsodies—collections of Magyar melodies with gypsy ornaments, moulded by him into works of art, after the manner of epic poets. But—and here lies the second paradox—Liszt, the greatest of all pianists, was not satisfied with the piano. In many of his pieces for it, he endeavours to impart to it orchestral power and variety of tonal effect; and finally, when he became conductor at Weimar (1849), he transferred his attention chiefly to the orchestra. ¶Of his thirty-four orchestral works, the most important are the "Faust" and "Dante" symphonies, and thirteen symphonic poems, in which he deviated from the old symphonic form in a spirit similar to Wagner's operatic reforms—abolishing the mosaic of unconnected movements and allowing the underlying poetic idea (programme) to shape the form of the music. Of great importance and beauty also are his sixty songs, which represent the climax of the tendency to mirror in the music, not only the general spirit of the poem, but every line and word. The last period of his life was largely given up to the writing of sacred compositions. Among these, the most original in substance is the "Legend of St. Elizabeth," the most original in form "Christus," in which the last remnants of the opera (the aria and recitative) are eliminated from the oratorio, and little remains besides choruses and instrumental numbers. Liszt's genius in early life was shaped largely by Schubert, Chopin, Berlioz, and Wagner. His own influence on the pianists and orchestral writers of Germany, France, and Russia, can hardly be overestimated. (See page 263.)

EDWARD MACDOWELL

BY RICHARD ANTHONY LEONARD

THE MUSIC of Edward MacDowell is heard much less frequently these days than it was at the time of his death, in the first decade of the present century; but it will be a long time before our debt to him is paid. For it was MacDowell who proved, once for all, that America was not a musical desert; that it could produce a composer of high rank, gifted with distinction and originality of utterance, whose genius would be recognised not only in his own country but in Europe as well. MacDowell was in fact the first important American composer. He was the pioneer who broke the ground and who, by the potency of his example, gave courage to many an American composer who came after him. ¶MacDowell was born in New York City in 1861 and he displayed such early talent for the piano that at the age of fifteen he was taken by his mother to Europe to study music. When he returned to America in 1888 after twelve years in France and Germany, the state of music in his native country was (and always had been) far from exhilarating. What little serious musical composition there was could only be described in terms of mediocrity. It was the palest of imitations of European models, so devoid of life-blood that it is now practically impossible to name a single work of major proportions which has survived into our time. On his return MacDowell and his early compositions were received with immense acclaim. For once (as more than one critic of that day remarked) a prophet had great honour in his own country. MacDowell's first appearances in New York and Boston as a young composer-pianist were scenes of wildest enthusiasm, almost without parallel in American concert-halls. And in the ensuing decade he received ovations ordinarily reserved for the very greatest European artists. ¶To-day when we are able to view the sum of MacDowell's achievement, that early enthusiasm still seems justified. It is true there was nothing in his technical equipment and little in his inspiration that had not been gained in Europe. His music belongs in the great stream of the Romantic movement, and his musical ancestors were Liszt, Mendelssohn, Wagner, Tchaikovsky, Greig, and his teacher, Raff. He created nothing that could be called "typically American," nor did any "American school" spring from the soil that he broke. But his achievement is none the less valid. He proved that an American could have the strength and stature to grapple with musical composition in its more serious forms; that he could take European models and manipulate them with outstanding ability; that he could give them an accent which is vigorously and singularly his own. ¶The whole of MacDowell's work is not large, for he died, after a tragic mental decline, in his forty-seventh year. Most of it was for the piano, of which instrument he attained a notable mastery. In fact it was only the counter-attraction of composition which prevented him from becoming one of the important piano virtuosos of his day. His best works, as we may judge them to-day, are probably the second Piano Concerto, the second "Indian Suite," some of the shorter piano pieces, and the four Piano Sonatas—especially the "Keltic" sonata, a work of powerful emotion and heroic sweep, undeservedly neglected to-day. He also wrote many songs, several symphonic poems and a number of small choral works. ¶MacDowell was a man of unimpeachable sincerity and deep sensitivity. He worshipped nature, and in a great number of his shorter and best-known pieces he went for his inspiration to the sea, to the New England woods for which he had an abiding love, and to the artless beauty of simple flowers. Poetry was another of the motivating forces of his work—the poetry of Keats, Tennyson, Shakespeare, Dante, Heine and Goethe. His own gift for poetic writing was not inconsequential and he provided the verses for a number of his songs. Coupled with this sentimental strain in MacDowell's make-up was another and equally assertive quality of manly vigour—a full-blooded, sinewy quality. Thus we find in his work a wide emotional range: from the fragile tenderness of some of the piano pieces and songs to the heroic, grandiose style of the Sonatas, music of such breadth and spaciousness, of such concentrated power that it often strains the resources of the instrument. ¶Some of the best of these works suffer neglect to-day but it cannot in justice be said that this is wholly the composer's fault. Because he was a part of the great Romantic movement in music which has since been overshadowed by revolutionary new developments, he (like many another Romantic composer who just missed being first-rate) has gone into eclipse. But with the inevitable turn in the cycle of events it is possible that he may yet enjoy a return to favour. Chief among the gifts which work to keep his music alive is the indispensable gift of melody. This MacDowell had in abundance. His melodies are always expressive and often deeply felt; they have staying power, and even when they are so simple as to reach the least exacting of listeners, they seldom descend into the commonplace. MacDowell was not an innovator in any sense, but he did contrive to stamp his music with an individuality that is entirely his own. Sometimes it was by an unusual harmonic progression, or by a characteristic moulding of the melodic line but whatever the effect, it was unmistakably his. Lastly, MacDowell was a natural music-maker. Too much American music both before and after him betrays fatally the conscious effort; it smells of the lamp. But MacDowell's was utterly spontaneous and free. He had a noble imagination, and the wings to follow it far. (See Biographical Dictionary of Musicians entry, page 270.)

FELIX MENDELSSOHN-BARTHOLDY

BY VERNON BLACKBURN

FELIX MENDELSSOHN-BARTHOLDY almost rivalled Mozart in the precocity of his genius. Music came to him, as it were, straight out of the skies. He played with it from boyhood, and at the age of nineteen wrote his greatest work. I refer, of course, to the overture to "A Midsummer Night's Dream." It would be difficult to say exactly whence Mendelssohn derived the leading motives of his musical tendency. Mozart, of course, did much for him, but he was a brilliant, though, I should imagine, a superficial, student of the great John Sebastian and of the train of German and Austrian composers, including Haydn, which succeeded the period of that great master, Beethoven, with whom, of course, he was intimate from his childhood. One remembers the story of his playing one of the symphonies to Goethe; but I doubt if Beethoven had a very serious influence over this gay, companionable, brilliant musician to whom music was not so much a spiritual as a pantheistic influence. ¶The external world to him fired his brain, and his delicate genius responded to the influence. His personality was neither commonplace nor profoundly interesting. There is a certain class of German youth which makes a point of exuberance, of high spirits and somewhat boisterous assertiveness of the bright side of life. Such a temperament is usually accompanied by a certain shallowness of spirit, and by a certain naïf outlook which is just a trifle irritating to the serious man. ¶His place in the art of music has not, I should imagine, been quite definitely settled even at this day. While Sir George Grove would place him among the archangels of musical creation, there are others who prefer to rank him as quite in the front rank of the second class. On the whole, my judgment ranges with the latter, although there are times, of course, when he strayed into the really great things of his art, as for example in the "Watchman," from the "Hymn of Praise," or "How Lovely Are the Messengers," from "St. Paul." There will be none, however, I imagine, not even Sir George Grove himself, to rank Mendelssohn with Mozart, John Sebastian Bach, and Händel, and that alone may be taken as a test as to whether he really may be placed among the great gods. ¶If I were asked to assign his position, in the flash of a phrase, I should call him the Ganymede, the cupbearer of Jupiter's table. He was in the company of the gods, and he served them, he pleased them well; and his dwelling-place was in the palace of Jove; but he was not of royal rank, though he wore the livery of the great kings of art. And his influence has been confined chiefly to the more elegant song-writers of the time, to the composers of graceful and forgotten oratorios, and to the brilliant comic opera record of Sir Arthur Sullivan. And this, though Mendelssohn, after arriving at man's estate, never wrote a note that indicates him as possessing one flash of genuine humour. The disciple has here indeed outstripped the master. (See page 287.)

GIACOMO MEYERBEER

BY IRENAEUS PRIME-STEVENSON

WITHIN the last fifty years, especially since the Wagnerian measuring-rule was applied right and left, up and down, to almost all the lyric drama, more in enthusiasm than in good judgment, and also since opera-making has come to be talked of as a sort of exact science—Meyerbeer has been ungraciously handled by a certain school of criticism. This school is rich in Podsnaps. If we can believe these arbiters and observers, Meyerbeer was a feeble charlatan in French opera, or in any kind of opera, a vulgar and bawdy melodist and a commonplace orchestrator. Moreover, we must, by such critics, believe that the public as well as the critics have so thoroughly "found him out," that the popular interest in his works is over; that "The Huguenots," "L'Africaine," and "Le Prophète" are works that bore everybody of true musical intelligence—"the souls of them fumed forth, the hearts of them torn out." ¶Unfortunately for these undiscerning prophets, their premises are obviously wrong, and their results are short-sighted. Meyerbeer is a composer full of faults. His inconsistencies are a continual irritation. His shortcomings are plain to the ear.

His superficial, emotional side, too, is indisputable. He was never sure of himself, or rarely so; and that is fatal often to artistic strength. But when all is counted against him, Meyerbeer is still a great composer, an operatic master to be reckoned with for a long operatic time to come; and as for the world in general it is far from setting him aside when his best scores are the question. ¶His splendid subtler mastery of true dramatic effect is, after all, as emphatic as his cheaper method of making a point. He does not, alas! sustain his melodies. He does not work out good themes as they deserve, over and over. He gives-out, he resorts to noise and clap-trap. His favourite rhythm  is tedious. ¶But notwithstanding all, he is a genius in dramatic, pathetic melody. He is constantly able to move us legitimately by his beautiful art as an orchestral colourist. He writes for the operatic actor as a singer, perfectly and consistently, as well as for the operatic artist as a declaimer. He is a king at great musical phrases, words and music so linked that we cannot think of them as not together. And as a merely French composer Meyerbeer is of the first rank. A sincere and learned musician himself, especially influenced by the greatest and even severest German and Italian musicians, he is distinctly a descendant in artistic speech of no less than Gluck. One often finds a Gluck-like nobility of phrase in Meyerbeer's dialogue, a Gluck-like outstart of melody, to atone for all that is savoury of Offenbach or worse. ¶As for Meyerbeer's influence on not only the French opera but in far wider range, that is undeniable. From Halévy to Reyer French opera since his day has never set his monitions aside, and Wagner (heretical as it sounds to say so) never quite drew away from the French principles in dramatic opera that he often most repudiated—exactly as he repudiates his eternal practical debts to Meyerbeer for no vague kindness. ¶Meyerbeer is the Scott, the Jokai, of opera, forever. Just as we forgive technical error or error of sentiment in both here and there, so must we forgive Meyerbeer: and in admiring his best scenes much indeed is to be forgot! ¶Personally, he was a large-souled and a good man as well as a man of finest cultivation and polish. His charities were numberless and his large bequests have continued them. Take him all in all, he was a creator and an influencer of, we may say, permanent dignity and honour in the general gallery of the really great, not merely the pseudo-great, operatic sovereigns. MODEST PETROVICH MOUSSORGSKY

IT WOULD HAVE AMAZED the contemporaries of Modest Petrovich Moussorgsky could they have foreseen the homage which is paid the man to-day. Though he was one of the original "Five," that little band of determined men who created the Russian school of music in the nineteenth century, he was the one from whom least was expected and for whom most had to be forgiven. When he died in 1881 at the age of forty-two (a victim of poverty, drink, and broken hopes) his work was so imperfectly understood that his friends, before publishing it, sought to cover up what they thought to be his musical illiteracy. His fellow-member of the "Five," Rimsky-Korsakoff, was a firm believer in Mous-sorgsky's great talent; so he "rearranged" many of Moussorgsky's works, "touching them up to make them more understandable to the public," removing what he thought to be crudities of theoretical music procedure. In short, Moussorgsky was looked upon as a bungler—a man of powerful and original talent who, through his failure to master the fundamentals of harmony, counterpoint, and form, had left tragically little of enduring quality to the world. ¶But we see him with far different eyes to-day. As a writer of songs he is now ranked with Schubert, Schumann, and Wolf. We call him one of the supreme masters of the music drama, and we name his opera "Boris Godounoff" one of the two greatest works for the lyric stage since Wagner. More than that, Moussorgsky is now seen to be the wellspring from which much of the important music of the twentieth century has flowed. ¶Moussorgsky's musical "illiteracy" was due in part to his early association with Balakireff. That astonishing young man, who was the original inspiring genius of the "Five," was almost entirely self-taught in harmony, counterpoint, and form; and because he understood by instinct what other men could acquire only by rigorous training, he disparaged the necessity for such training. Many authorities have agreed with Moussorgsky's contemporaries in lamenting the influence of Balakireff in this respect. But it must be remembered that Moussorgsky, a revolutionist and an innovator to the core, would probably have learned the rules only to break them. He repeatedly defended his unorthodox procedure, on the ground that he was trying to express something in music that had never been done before. His mistakes and crudities were often the outward evidences of his powerful individuality seeking new forms of expression. They were the trademarks of his genius. ¶Absolute or purely formal music interested Moussorgsky hardly at all. Such abstract tone-weaving as writing symphonies, sonatas, or suites was foreign to his purposes. Instead he devoted most of his creative energies to operas and songs—i.e., to those forms which gave him access to the human heart. He was profoundly, avidly interested in his fellow-men, and he spent his life searching their minds and characters. What he discovered in that search and the way he put his findings into music constitute one of the great glories of the tonal art. ¶He left us hardly more than forty songs, yet they are perfect testaments to his intense and concentrated force, to the wide and daring range of his subject matter, and above all to his deep and touching sympathy with the pitiful human victims of a pitiless world. The very titles are indicative: e.g., "The Orphan Beggar Child," "Peasant's Cradle Song," "O My Savishna" (the plaint of the village idiot for love and sympathy), "The Ragamuffin," "The Song of the Flea," and the song-cycles "Sunless," "In the Nursery," and "Songs and Dances of Death." In his songs Moussorgsky attempted always to express in tones the very letter and spirit of the text: the picture that the words painted, the inmost thought of the character, the subtlest shades of idea and meaning that could not even be expressed in the words. In realising this ideal he refused to be bound by the conventional song forms and formulas. What did it matter if a song began in one key and ended in another? Or if one chord followed another harshly and gratefully, not properly "prepared"? Or if a song ended without a cadence? The justification was always in the text. And the end was often miraculously realised. ¶Besides the songs, the works upon which most of Moussorgsky's reputation rests to-day are his operas, "Boris Godounoff" and "Khovanstchina";

the brilliant tone picture, "A Night on the Bare Mountain," which is probably the most satisfactory of Rimsky-Korsakoff's revisions of the composer's music; and his single great work for the piano, "Pictures at an Exhibition," best known to-day in Ravel's superb orchestration. ¶ "Khovanstchina" was found in a chaotic state after Moussorgsky's death—unfinished, only partly orchestrated, and almost twice too long. Rimsky-Korsakoff orchestrated the entire work, made numerous cuts, and generally "touched up" the harmonies and part-writing. Whether he was justified in his ministrations or whether he was guilty of malpractice is a matter of endless controversy. At any rate, his version remains a work of singular power and beauty. About "Boris" there is less question. It is the capstone of Moussorgsky's achievement, and Rimsky-Korsakoff was probably wrong in attempting twice to revise it. True, he did not make nearly as many or as drastic changes as he made in "Khovanstchina"; and (to do him complete justice) it was his versions which brought the opera world fame and Moussorgsky a rightful place in the sun. But since 1928, when the Soviet government published the original score, it has become apparent that, aside from certain weaknesses in the orchestration, Moussorgsky had wrought far better than anyone of his time realised. It is possible that the opera may again stand on its own feet, as it did so successfully during the composer's lifetime. ¶ No matter which version of "Boris" eventually displaces the other, however, certain indisputable facts remain. The intense nationalism of this work, its use of material derived from or imitative of folk-music, its astonishingly modern blending of music and text, have all been the inspiration of numberless composers since Moussorgsky's day. And above all it discloses the composer's unique genius for portraying mankind and his crown of sorrows. Like Macbeth, it is a "tragedy of twilight and the setting in of thick darkness upon a human soul." (See Dictionary of Musicians entry, page 303.)

WOLFGANG AMADEUS MOZART

BY VERNON BLACKBURN

JOHN CHRYSOSTOM WOLFGANG AMADEUS MOZART, the son of a tolerably good musician, by name Leopold, from his earliest years displayed the most extraordinary sense of musical precocity. At the age of three years he was able to pick out harmonies on the harpsichord; by the time he was seven, he had already burdened his young soul with the responsibility of various compositions which are more interesting than such compositions might be expected to be. The darling of courts in his childhood (for his father took him early on his travels for purposes of exhibition as a musical prodigy), the intensely industrious youth, the creator of a dramatic art in music, separate and by itself in the world, the greatest master of melody that this earth has ever seen, the writer of innumerable symphonies, innumerable songs, innumerable sonatas, the possessor of a musical memory such as had never been conferred on the son of man before, he was the brilliant artist of high spirits, the man who lived life to the very last drop of the glass. ¶ In a word, a genius, in art and in living, of the highest flower. He went down to his grave before he was forty years of age, buried no man knows where, deserted of friends, deserted even in his last journey to the

Vienna cemetery by his wife; abjectly poor, with not a soul to weep for him, not a soul to care what became of these sacred relics. Here was, indeed, a combination of glory and the darkest tragedy which can scarcely be found outside the Attic drama. ¶Yet, from the critical point of view, it can scarcely be said that Mozart was in any sense a revolutionary; he was the glorious link which combined the music of the last century with the music of this. The strictest formalist, the impeccable master of counterpoint, the respecter in every way of traditions, you can see him, as it were, on the tiptoe of the future, bearing on his brilliant soul, and bearing it lightly, all the burdens of the past. ¶But it is as a writer of opera that his fame is like to last longest, for it is here that he brought the brilliant qualities of the consummate musician to combine with the scarcely less brilliant qualities of the dramatist. Many men who might have written music equally noteworthy could not have touched the dramatic significance of it. "Don Giovanni," that glory of our blood and state, "Le Nozze di Figaro," "Così Fan Tutte," "Die Zauberflöte," these remain as noble a testimony of his great genius in the musico-dramatic world as the centuries are likely to bring forth. Then consider the G minor symphony—so different in quality from the quality of Beethoven at his best, and therefore not comparable to the great nine, but in its way the very flower of musical genius. Then again, such work as he brought into the Requiem declares him to be, as a master of the emotions, of supernatural terror, unsurpassed; I would almost say unsurpassable. In a word, here was the golden child of music, adding to the simplicity of his childishness the complex wisdom of the serpent. ¶Poor Mozart! Yet, who is ordinary man that he should say "poor" of such an immortal creature? Poor as it seems to us, yet it is not likely that he would have given up one golden moment of his glorious inspiration in exchange for the comforts of a Sultan. He was an artist, every inch of him. (See Dictionary of Musicians entry, page 303.)

GIOVANNI PALESTRINA

By W. J. HENDERSON

PALESTRINA's work in musical history was bringing order out of chaos in church-music, and setting the model for the loftiest purity of style. The music of the Church had become too complex through the extreme development of rigidly canonic writing. Palestrina, following the lead of some of his predecessors, who had begun to write in free counter-point, showed how this new style could be made to yield the finest possible results in the composition of music for the mass, and other parts of the Roman ritual. By adhering to the ecclesiastical scale and avoiding chromatic progressions, by clinging to purely religious thought and excluding anything like passion, Palestrina produced works which have remained to this day the perfect model of church-music. ¶The contrapuntal skill in his writing is masterly, but it never parades itself. Its most beautiful effects are produced with apparent spontaneity, and frequent chord harmonies of enchanting loveliness seem to be accidental. The Roman school of church-composers was founded by Palestrina, and his influence is even yet perceptible in the music of the Holy City. He has universally been accorded the position of the greatest of all church-composers. (See also page 323.)

HENRY PURCELL

BY JOHN F. RUNCIMAN

THE early English school reached a magnificent culmination in Purcell. Many influences went to the shaping of him. Behind was the contrapuntal English school, of which Tallis and Byrde were exemplars; more immediately behind was Pelham Humphries, who brought to England all that France knew; and it is as good as certain that he knew what the Italians, with Corelli at their head, had accomplished. That is to say, he must have learned how to handle many parts in a chorus or orchestral movement; learned how to write recitative and expressive song; learned what could be done in the way of chamber-music; and such orchestral colouring as was possible at that day. ¶To these acquired masteries he brought a native ear for miraculous colour in music—as witness his “Tempest” music, written for the worst libretto that the world has not listened to; a glorious invention of expressive or picturesque melody, though chiefly picturesque; a fine instinct for the dramatic, and for expressing it in music; and the most noble sense of the splendid effects to be gained by throwing about masses of vocal tone in the manner afterwards appropriated and made entirely his own by Handel. ¶Those who have studied Purcell’s scores will be astonished by the extent to which Handel took his themes and modes of using them. In that lies his sole contribution to what must be called the “progress” of music. Later English composers, to their shame, and certainly to their utter confusion, copied Handel instead of developing on Purcell’s lines. They profited nothing; and Purcell remains as the last of the tribe of the genuinely creative English musicians before Elgar. He was determined to excel in everything he touched; and he excelled in everything. His forms are at once broad and flexible; his harmonies are as daring as Sebastian Bach’s; his themes have a great dignity and vigour; and on everything he wrote there rests an early morning freshness. No music has preserved its freshness better; the dew is still on it. ¶Born just before the Restoration, he felt to the full the anti-Puritan reaction; he shared in the revival of the sheer joy of being alive; and his music is filled with a cheerful health such as one finds in no music written since his day. But he experienced the deeper emotions; and one may find in his works profound utterances of grief and sorrow, of the mystery and terror of all life. He was entirely pagan, and wrote no real religious music—religious as we use the word when we speak of Sweelinck, Palestrina, or Byrde. But power is there, and delicacy, and marvellous beauty; and above all that external freshness and picturesque quality which give his music the character that stamps and marks it off as his own. (See page 346.)

SERGEI RACHMANINOFF

BY RICHARD ANTHONY LEONARD

SERGEI RACHMANINOFF is one of those not infrequent composers whose artistic convictions become fixed at an early time in their lives, and who thereafter,

despite the pull of a thousand counterattractions, never relinquish those early ties. He was born in Russia in 1873, and by the time he had reached his early twenties the great nationalist movement in Russian music had reached its high tide. In his early compositions Rachmaninoff identified himself with one of the phases of that movement. Since then he has witnessed the whole art of music passing through a vast metamorphosis; nevertheless he has hardly moved from his original position. ¶The figure of Rachmaninoff the concert pianist is a familiar one the world over, and in many ways it is revealing of Rachmaninoff the composer. He is tall, powerfully built, commanding, with wrists and fingers of steel; his closely cropped hair, strong nose and deep-set, melancholy eyes all bespeak a nature that is austere, aloof, proudly individualistic. In short, a man of forceful inner convictions that cannot easily be shaken. Seeing him makes it easy to understand how, at an early age, he might have discovered his own aims and ideals, as well as his limitations, and how he might steadfastly have refused for the rest of his creative life to veer his course, regardless of how the winds of musical fashion might blow. That is why to-day much of Rachmaninoff's music sounds like a voice from the past, speaking the Romantic speech of the eighteen-eighties and nineties. ¶Rachmaninoff is often spoken of as a kind of connecting link between the two main branches of Russian music of the nineteenth century. One group included the arch-Nationalists, led by the famous "Five," who preached that all Russian music should come directly from the native soil; that it should be based on Russian literature, folk songs and legends, and the music of the Russian Church. They were opposed by the so-called Eclectics, composers like Tchaikowsky and Rubinstein, who had studied and were sympathetic with the trends of music in western Europe. While he was still in his teens Rachmaninoff met Tchaikowsky, and the influence of the great Russian Romanticist upon the talented young man was profound and lasting. Nevertheless, Rachmaninoff stands not entirely with either school, but between the two. He has the technical equipment of an Eclectic, a thorough knowledge of the methods and procedure of the French and German schools of the nineteenth century; but his thematic material, the whole colour and feeling of his music, is unmistakably Russian. ¶Rachmaninoff has composed in many forms, but the bulk of his enduring work centres around the piano. His piano solos are among the most famous and popular pieces produced for that instrument in the present century. The composer's own pre-eminence as a concert pianist as well as the ingratiating qualities of the pieces themselves has been responsible for their widespread favour. They are chiefly in the small forms, the preludes predominating, and most of them bear the marks of Chopin's influence. They lack the depth and subtlety of Chopin's greater works, but they are brilliantly pianistic and exemplify the composer's mastery of the technical resources of the instrument. ¶In the larger forms Rachmaninoff's most distinguished works are undoubtedly the piano concertos. He has written four; but the Second, in C minor, is most often performed to-day, in fact it remains one of the most successful concertos produced in the past four decades. It is typically a work of the Romantic era, melodious and expressive, alternating between long-breathing, darkly coloured cantabile phrases and powerfully built climaxes, grandiose and declamatory. The flavour of the work is strongly Russian, and shows the influence of Tchaikowsky. The piano part is in the virtuoso vein throughout. ¶Several of

BY JOHN F. RUNCIMAN

THE early English school reached a magnificent culmination in Purcell. Many influences went to the shaping of him. Behind was the contrapuntal English school, of which Tallis and Byrde were exemplars; more immediately behind was Pelham Humphries, who brought to England all that France knew; and it is as good as certain that he knew what the Italians, with Corelli at their head, had accomplished. That is to say, he must have learned how to handle many parts in a chorus or orchestral movement; learned how to write recitative and expressive song; learned what could be done in the way of chamber-music; and such orchestral colouring as was possible at that day. ¶To these acquired masteries he brought a native ear for miraculous colour in music—as witness his “Tempest” music, written for the worst libretto that the world has not listened to; a glorious invention of expressive or picturesque melody, though chiefly picturesque; a fine instinct for the dramatic, and for expressing it in music; and the most noble sense of the splendid effects to be gained by throwing about masses of vocal tone in the manner afterwards appropriated and made entirely his own by Handel. ¶Those who have studied Purcell’s scores will be astonished by the extent to which Handel took his themes and modes of using them. In that lies his sole contribution to what must be called the “progress” of music. Later English composers, to their shame, and certainly to their utter confusion, copied Handel instead of developing on Purcell’s lines. They profited nothing; and Purcell remains as the last of the tribe of the genuinely creative English musicians before Elgar. He was determined to excel in everything he touched; and he excelled in everything. His forms are at once broad and flexible; his harmonies are as daring as Sebastian Bach’s; his themes have a great dignity and vigour; and on everything he wrote there rests an early morning freshness. No music has preserved its freshness better; the dew is still on it. ¶Born just before the Restoration, he felt to the full the anti-Puritan reaction; he shared in the revival of the sheer joy of being alive; and his music is filled with a cheerful health such as one finds in no music written since his day. But he experienced the deeper emotions; and one may find in his works profound utterances of grief and sorrow, of the mystery and terror of all life. He was entirely pagan, and wrote no real religious music—religious as we use the word when we speak of Sweelinck, Palestrina, or Byrde. But power is there, and delicacy, and marvellous beauty; and above all that external freshness and picturesque quality which give his music the character that stamps and marks it off as his own. SERGEI RACHMANINOFF

BY RICHARD ANTHONY LEONARD

SERGEI RACHMANINOFF is one of those not infrequent composers whose artistic convictions become fixed at an early time in their lives, and who thereafter,

despite the pull of a thousand counterattractions, never relinquish those early ties. He was born in Russia in 1873, and by the time he had reached his early twenties the great nationalist movement in Russian music had reached its high tide. In his early compositions Rachmaninoff identified himself with one of the phases of that movement. Since then he has witnessed the whole art of music passing through a vast metamorphosis; nevertheless he has hardly moved from his original position. ¶The figure of Rachmaninoff the concert pianist is a familiar one the world over, and in many ways it is revealing of Rachmaninoff the composer. He is tall, powerfully built, commanding, with wrists and fingers of steel; his closely cropped hair, strong nose and deep-set, melancholy eyes all bespeak a nature that is austere, aloof, proudly individualistic. The flavour of the work is strongly Russian, and shows the influence of Tchaikowsky. The piano part is in the virtuoso vein throughout. ¶Several of Rachmaninoff's orchestral works, such as his Second Symphony in E minor, his symphonic poem, "The Island of the Dead," and "The Bells" (for chorus, soloists, and orchestra) enjoyed a wide vogue in the early part of the present century, but they are less often heard to-day. Recently his brilliant "Rhapsody on a Theme of Paganini," for piano and orchestra, and his long-awaited Third Symphony have received genuine acclaim. All these works give evidence of the composer's masterful command of the orchestra, and his ability to sustain, in the difficult large forms, a lofty inspiration. ¶Rachmaninoff's songs are for the most part deeply coloured and rich in sentiment, more in the lyrical pattern of Tchaikowsky than in the stark, unadorned style of Moussorgsky. Several of them, like "Floods of Spring" and "In the Silence of Night," have achieved a popularity almost as widespread as the piano preludes. (See Dictionary of Musicians entry, page 348.)

MAURICE RAVEL

BY RICHARD ANTHONY LEONARD

THE MUSIC of Maurice Ravel suffered for a long time from unjust comparison with that of Claude Debussy. It used to be the fashion to say that Ravel was a kind of minor Debussy, who was more imitative than original, more clever than profound. Perhaps such comparisons were inevitable: they were both Frenchmen, they were contemporaries (Ravel being but a dozen years younger than Debussy), and both were leading exemplars of the impressionist movement in music. They even displayed a curious parallelism in their choice of subjects. It is true that Debussy had the more original creative gifts. His impressionism is more subtle and mysterious than Ravel's; his was indeed the deeper and more enigmatic mind. But Ravel had his gifts, too, not nearly so inconsiderable as his early detractors had surmised. ¶For one thing Ravel was a scrupulous craftsman. One might search his music from "Jeux d'Eau" to the two piano concertos, and find scarcely a bar that gave evidence of having been set down carelessly, or that, for want of new inspiration, was obviously repetitious of something he had done before. Furthermore, he was a craftsman not merely in one form but in many. He wrote a number of exquisite songs; his piano music is brilliant and effective; his string-quartet is one of the best in modern music; his "L'Heure Espagnole" is a delicious comic opera; while "Daphnis and Chloe" is one of the two or three greatest ballets of our time. ¶Ravel's indebtedness to Debussy is incontestable, but we can discern now that it was nevertheless limited. It lay chiefly in the field of harmony—in his use of seventh and ninth chords, parallel chords, polytonality, the twelve-tone scale, the medieval modes, etc. But we discern, too, that Ravel's music has a rhythmic quality that Debussy's often lacks. The latter's music is liquid, flowing, sensuous, vague in outline. Ravel's is more incisive, definite, clean-cut. And Ravel was far more preoccupied with form than Debussy ever was. He had a special liking for the formal classicism of the eighteenth-century masters, especially Couperin, Rameau, and Mozart. He admired their elegance, their perfection of style, their economy of means. His study of these masters is reflected in a great deal of his work—most obviously in his Sonatine and "Tombeau de Couperin" for the piano, his string-quartet, and the first movement of his Piano Concerto. It has given his work a balance and symmetry, a classic grace that is almost unique in impressionistic music. ¶Debussy was of course a supreme stylist, but so was Ravel—and in a totally different sense. There was one problem of style which Ravel delighted in solving: that of taking the essentials of another musical idiom and translating them into his own impressionistic medium. The above-mentioned works based on the eighteenth-century masters are typical examples; others are his numerous excursions into the Spanish idiom in such works as "Rhapsody Espagnole," "L'Heure Espagnole," "Bolero," and "Alborado del Gracioso"; his brilliant study of the Strauss waltz in "La Valse"; and his paraphrase of Liszt's Hungarian Rhapsodies in "Tzigane," for violin and orchestra. We even find the last movement of his piano-concerto tintured with American jazz. ¶In the art of orchestration Ravel stood at the summit. Some of his pieces are very nearly études in orchestration; "Bolero," for example, is hardly more than an instrumental tour de force. But in others he made his orchestration an integral part of his inspiration. "Daphnis and Chloe" is a matchless example. Here it is the orchestral garb almost as much as the substance of the music itself which gives this work its exquisite antique flavour, its air of pure Arcadian beauty. And in his orchestral arrangement of Moussorgsky's "Pictures at an Exhibition," by precisely the same means Ravel achieves a miraculous affinity with the nineteenth-century Russian composer. Surely the Greece of Longus and the Russia of Moussorgsky stand at the poles; and yet is it not one of the triumphs and one of the mysteries of art that an elegant, urbane, and somewhat ironical Frenchman of the twentieth century can reach out, through music, and touch them both? ¶Many critics have observed Ravel's sly wit, his unexpected irony. More than one has intimated that a coldness in his nature must have found its way into his work, that it too often lacks the warmth of human sympathy. This is partly true. Ravel's music never wrings the heart as, say, Debussy's does in the last act of "Pelléas and Mélisande." Ravel abhorred sentimentality even more than Debussy did, more than most Frenchmen. He could no more have been guilty of a sentimental orgy like "Ein Heldenleben" than Richard Strauss could have written anything so cold and glittering and cynical as "La Valse." But Ravel had his moments, too, a few moments when he exposed—half-ashamedly—an innate tenderness of heart. One of them is in his early "Pavane pour une Infante défunte"; others are to be found in his "Ma Mère L'Oye." And is not "Daphnis and Chloe" a monument to the wild ecstasy of young love, alive in every bar with breathing passion? ¶Ravel's whole life, both personal and artistic, was that of an arch-aristocrat—perfectly ordered, fastidious, withdrawn. He never married, and he had few intimate friends; so that most of his life after the World War was spent at Montfort l'Amaury, near Paris, in surroundings so quiet as to make him practically a recluse. For several years before he died the same terrible black veil that had covered the faces of Schumann and Smetana covered his. ¶We might sum him up to say that he was one of the very greatest of French composers; that whatever he set out to do in music he accomplished by sheer force of craftsmanship and elegance of taste; that his music is "modern" to the core—singularly a product of his time and his country; and that, above all, he shares with Debussy the distinction of having contributed most to the impressionist movement in music. (See Dictionary of Musicians entry, page 352.)

RECOLLECTIONS OF MY LAZY CHILDHOOD

BY MAURICE RAVEL

IN THE LAST FEW YEARS of his life Ravel met the most tragic fate that can overtake anyone. He began to lose his mind. What made the disaster even more terrible was the fact that he had intervals of complete lucidity, during which he realised all too well what was happening to him. He died in Paris on the 28th of December, 1937. ¶Shortly before his death, during one of his lucid intervals, the composer wrote an essay that he called Mes Souvenirs d'Enfant Paresseux ("Recollections of My Lazy Childhood"), in which he discussed the various influences that shaped his career, gave a partial estimate of his own work, and voiced his own declaration of faith as an artist. The article was published in the French newspaper Paris-Soir a week after Ravel's death. It has never been widely read here, was not reprinted. It appears here in my own translation.

DEEMS TAYLOR

For me [writes Ravel] there have never been several arts: Only one. Music, painting, and literature differ only as to their means of expression. So there are not various kinds of artists, only various kinds of specialists. The need for specialisation becomes greater and greater as our field of knowledge broadens; for nothing, even in art, can be acquired without hard study. Consequently it has become impossible for us to follow the example of Leonardo da Vinci, who managed to be an amateur of all the arts—even of painting! ¶As for myself, I was certainly born to be a musician; but if I am not a writer, it is simply because of the lack of the impulse to be one. I notice, for example, that when I read, my attitude is a professional one, as if I were a writer. The same with painting. I look at a picture, not with the eyes of a picture lover, but with those of a painter. This comes, perhaps, from the fact that as a child I was gifted in many ways; a fact that, needless to say, greatly worried my parents. It worried them all the more because my various artistic leanings were coupled with an extraordinary laziness. I never worked except "taxi" fashion; that is to say, in order to induce me to make the slightest exertion, I had to be bribed. ¶In school, the only study that amused me somewhat was that of mathematics—to the great joy of my father, who was an engineer. My mother, who was a Basque and, like all the people of her country, a musician, would have liked to see me a little more zealous in my piano studies. But they merely bored me. However, the minute I took up the study of composition, everyone realised that my path lay in that direction. It even amused me! Which was not extraordinary, after all, since my interest in mathematics tended to bring me to music. I became interested to such a point that, inveterately lazy as I had been up to then, I began to work nights as well as in the daytime—a habit that, unfortunately for my health, has always persisted. My teacher, Charles René, started me working exercises in composition when I was no more than sixteen or seventeen; but it was not until three or four years later that I devoted myself to serious attempts at composition. I had made others before, but kept them carefully hidden. At the Conservatoire I was enrolled both as a composition student and as a pianist. In the latter capacity I was a member of the class of Camille de Bériot, who soon noticed that while I had definitely the temperament of an artist, I had a minimum amount of zeal as an executant. Meanwhile I plunged ardently into the study of harmony, counterpoint, and fugue, and notwithstanding the fact that up to then I had written very little, I began to feel the itch to compose. ¶It was at that time that I began to make continual discoveries among the works of my favourite authors, feeling, meanwhile, that I had something to say in another direction. The influences that I felt at that time confirm me in my belief that there are not various kinds of arts. I did fall under the spell of one musician: Chabrier. Not yet has he been given the rank that he deserves, for modern French music all stems from him. He played, in music, the part that Manet played in painting. And, as a matter of fact, Chabrier owned some of the finest of Manet's paintings. The discovery of Debussy was less of a shock to me, in that I had already surrendered to Chabrier. And if I have been influenced by Debussy I have been so deliberately, and have always felt that I could escape him whenever I chose. In any case, I never completely accepted Debussy's principles, and I believe that that should be obvious to anyone. As a matter of fact, as regards musical technique, my teacher has certainly been Edgar Allan Poe. To me the finest treatise on composition, certainly the one that has influenced me the most, is Poe's essay on the genesis of a poem. Mallarmé to the contrary, when he claims that the essay was written as a joke. I firmly believe that Poe wrote his poem, "The Raven," exactly as he says he did. ¶My passion for discovering new things, in painting, literature, and music, was not merely a phenomenon of my youth. I have always had it, especially about myself. It is this passion for discovery that has always driven me to try to renew my artistic self. ¶I never put down a work until I have made absolutely certain that there is nothing about it that I could not improve. The great thrill comes when I do put it down. After that I have no more interest in it. I have never tried to write in the style of Ravel. If I have found new ways of expressing myself, I leave it to others to discover them. If you want to convict me of inconsistency by hurling my earlier works at my head, well and good. I know that a conscious artist is always right. ¶I say "conscious," rather than "sincere"; for there is something humiliating about the latter term. A true artist cannot be sincere. The imaginary, the false, if you please, used to create an illusion, is mankind's one great superiority over the animals, and, when he undertakes to create a work of art, the artist's one point of superiority over the rest of mankind. Anyone who rests his claim on so-called spontaneity alone, is merely babbling. ¶In art, everything that is not significant must be rejected. Massenet, who was so highly gifted, squandered himself through too much sincerity. He wrote down, literally, everything that came into his head; with the result that he spent his career saying the same thing over and over again. What he thought were discoveries were only reminiscences. As a matter of fact, artists seldom exercise enough self-mastery. After all, since we cannot say what we have to say without deliberately exploiting, and so translating, our own emotions, is it not better at least to be conscious of that fact, and realise that great art is simply a supreme form of pretense?

The thing that people sometimes call my own lack of sentiment is simply my scrupulous care to avoid saying the obvious and unimportant. ¶As for the charge they level against me, of writing "only masterpieces" that is, of creating works that leave me nothing more to say in that particular idiom, I can only answer that, if that were true, I should be the first to know it and that there would be nothing left for me to do, except either to stop work, or to die. I say this, despite the example of the Lord, who took a long rest after having created the world . . . and who was so wrong! (See also page 352.)

RIMSKY-KORSAKOFF

BY RICHARD ANTHONY LEONARD

OF THE ORIGINAL "Five" who created the Russian school of music in the nineteenth century, four were essentially amateurs. Balakireff was looked upon by his fellows as a professional musician; but Cui was an army officer, an engineer of fortifications; Borodin was a doctor and a teacher of chemistry; Moussorgsky, after his retirement from the army, spent his life as a government clerk. Rimsky-Korsakoff was a naval officer. As a young midshipman he had fallen under the spell of the fascinating Balakireff, and wrote his first symphony before he was twenty-one years old. At that time he was so ignorant of music theory (Balakireff having scorned the necessity for academic training in harmony, counterpoint, form, etc.) that he did not even know the names of the common chords. ¶But Rimsky-Korsakoff was the one member of the famous group who refused to remain an amateur. In fact, he became one of the most skilful musicians of his time, and a consummate master of many aspects of musical technique. He accomplished this through years of unceasing industry. Harmony and counterpoint he learned only after he had accepted a professorship at the St. Petersburg Conservatory! He taught simply by teaching himself first and keeping one jump ahead of his pupils. To understand orchestration more fully he bought many of the instruments and learned how to play them. He succeeded so well that he was later able to write a manual of orchestration which remains a classic to this day. ¶Rimsky-Korsakoff's life was a steady progression, a carefully planned development of a great natural talent. He was a perfectionist, who never ceased polishing not only the brilliant facets of his music but the very tools of his trade as well. He seemed never to be idle; and when he was not adding to his own immense output he was spurring on his friends Borodin and Moussorgsky to similar achievement—helping them with their orchestrating, even completing and editing their works after their deaths. ¶It is curious that for all his methodical mind and well-ordered habits Rimsky-Korsakoff's music is the most fanciful, picturesque, and charmingly extravagant of all the nineteenth-century Russians. It offers a contrast with the music of Moussorgsky, for example, that is almost as great as the gulf between the temperaments of the two men. Moussorgsky's art was that of the natural dramatist, the realistic interpreter of the hearts of men. His music is often shaggy and unkempt; it reeks continually of the Russian soil. Rimsky-Korsakoff's is melodic, lyrical, and essentially pictorial. It is Russian, but with a blend of the exotic East; and its polished technique often covers melodic ideas that are commonplace. There is no doubt now that Moussorgsky was the more powerful and original genius, for his music has grown steadily with the years and a whole generation of modern composers have fed upon it. Rimsky-Korsakoff's, on the other hand, has declined. ¶Though he composed in many forms, Rimsky-Korsakoff's operas constitute the great bulk of his works. He wrote fifteen, nearly all of them based on Russian stories, legends, or dramas. For a time they were so important a part of the operatic repertoire in Russia that he seemed destined to become the equivalent in his native country of Wagner in Germany and Verdi in Italy. But in recent years many of these works have faded and now suffer neglect. Outside of Russia one hears only the exquisite "Le Coq d'Or," and occasionally "Sadko" and "Snyegoo-rochka." ¶Far more popular are the purely orchestral works: the "Capriccio Espagnol," the Russian Easter overture, the "Antar" Suite, and—inevitably—"Scheherezade." There is still great vitality in these pieces, and they are likely to represent their composer on symphonic programmes for many years. They will live because, for one thing, Rimsky-Korsakoff had the gift of lyricism, and his melodies (though often somewhat obvious) nearly always have charm. He knew, too, how to hide their defects by his expert use of colourful harmonies. He was also a past-master of orchestration, by which he gave his music a marvellous clarity of expression, a richness of texture, and a brilliance that is almost Oriental in its opulent splendour. For his discoveries in the science of instrumentation, a host of modern composers—Stravinsky, Ravel, Falla, Respighi, Prokofieff, etc.—owe him a great debt. ¶Russia owes him a great debt, too. For at a time when nationalism in music was still on trial in western Europe, he was her most ardent and successful propagandist. He proved by his own technical mastery that nationalism need not be synonymous with amateurism. He made it plain that the literature, legend, folk, and church music of a single nation might be made the basis for a treasury of musical inspiration. GIOACCHINO ROSSINI

IT is like a page of goldenest sunshine in the volume of musical personalia to review the brief, brilliant, artistic story of Rossini's activity or to glance at his long and happy life. Almost from the first came to him fame, fortune, and opportunity for that amazing fecundity of mind which was so curiously sorted with his indolence of body. Few men of genius have lived and worked and rivalled and succeeded, of whom so little is current that is ungracious or discreditable. ¶As to Rossini's place in art, albeit a huge fraction of his operas are empty to our ears, and bore us with their flowery ornamentation and feeble dramatic substructure, we have no right to predict that thorough neglect will soon deliver to darkness and dust such scores as "L'Italiana in Algeri," "Il Barbiere di Siviglia," "Guglielmo Tell,"—and possibly "Se-miramide," for the world will have lost too completely a natural irresistible feeling for melody, for restrained elegance of orchestral diction, and above all for the perfect expression of true comedy in music. Only in one other master,

Mozart, to whom Rossini felt that he owed so much, and to whom he declared himself so far inferior, do we meet equal sincerity, taste, and eloquence as prolifically put into operatic song and orchestration. ¶And as to "Tell," with that noble and serious work, a striking variant from the old Italianistic Rossini, a work by a mature and serious-minded composer of the first order, all the great and the little musical world will long have to reckon. ¶The great influences on Rossini were two: Mozart, whose greatest successor in Italian operatic comedy Rossini certainly is; and a mixture of French form and French dramatic spirit with German importance in every detail of the orchestra. ¶It cannot be said that Rossini founded a school. He "said it all himself," as the phrase goes; and his imitators either gave over copying (often with most happy and significant advantages to great individualities for themselves, as in the instances of Meyerbeer and Donizetti and Verdi), or else they were not of substance in their efforts to eclipse the dazzling master of Pesaro. His effect upon the whole operatic public of Europe was for a time almost demoralising, paralysing to all other music. ¶Immediately after the striking renunciation of his career, at only thirty-seven years of age, came the Wagner movement. ARNOLD SCHÖNBERG

BY RICHARD ANTHONY LEONARD

ARNOLD SCHÖNBERG is either music's most hopelessly misguided fanatic or her supreme martyr. He occupies the "last and lofty station" of a St. Simeon Stylites, for his is an ideal which few beside himself have had the temerity even to acknowledge but which he pursues with the demoniac intensity of a zealot. Schönberg is the most advanced of all ultra-modernists, and (if we may change our metaphor) no one can yet see whether his explorations along the course of music's stream are pointing the way to the future, or whether he has drawn himself off into the shallows of a stagnant backwater. No composer since Wagner has been exposed to such merciless critical diatribes. No composer's music has drawn from audiences such unrestrained resentment, ridicule, and even hatred. "Empty ingenuity and ingenious pedantry" . . . "the fanciful imaginings of a lunatic" . . . "the drunken gesture of a learned professor" . . . these are but samples of the criticism that Schönberg's music has met unfailingly for three decades. ¶There is a revealing sentence in Egon Wellesz's sympathetic study of this composer and his works. Speaking of a performance of a group of Schönberg's early songs, in Vienna in 1900, Dr. Wellesz writes, "When the performance was over there was a mild 'scene' in the hall. 'And from that time,' said Schönberg with a smile one day when he was telling me about it, 'the scandal has never ceased.'" Indeed it has not, as those who heard the first New York performance of Schönberg's "Variations for Orchestra" twenty-nine years later can testify. ¶Yet there can be no question that Schönberg's mastery of the purely technical side of music might well be the envy of any musician of our time. The same is true of his unswerving sincerity and his intellectual strength. This man, it must be remembered, was practically self-taught in an art whose mechanics have been compared, for their complexity, to those of astronomy. At twenty-six he composed the "Gurre-Lieder," a work of gargantuan size, on a par for sheer physical bulk with Mahler's "Symphony of One Thousand." As a teacher he is probably without a peer. His pupils (some of the foremost German composers of to-day) revere him as the most inspiring of pedagogues and prophets. His books and essays on music, notably his great treatise on harmony, are unrivalled in their contributions to the aesthetics of this art. In the face of such accomplishment only the bigoted or the ignorant could fail to accord Schönberg the fullest measure of tolerance in his strivings toward a new frontier in music. ¶This supreme ultra-modernist began his career in the nineties as a post-romanticist, steeped in the music of Richard Wagner. His early songs, his sextet, "Verklärte Nacht," and the "Gurre-Lieder" all bear the inevitable marks of "Tristan and Isolde." The "Gurre-Lieder" is, in fact, a huge over-expansion of the Wagnerian style and method, a grandiose enlargement of already-stale nineteenth-century romanticism. It is a remarkable achievement for a young man of twenty-six but it suffers from having been born too late. All through his early work Schönberg displays a prodigious mastery of the technical side of his art. His symphonic poem, "Pelleas and Melisande," is of a contrapuntal density almost without parallel, while in the two early string quartets there is a superb handling of the thematic material and of the part writing. Nevertheless, the composer leaves the impression that he is unsatisfied by the facility which he has achieved so quickly in the existing styles and that he is struggling toward new concepts of beauty and form. Moreover, facility is not by any means the whole of accomplishment, and it is disturbing to find in much of this early work a lack of first-rate creative ideas. ¶With the completion in 1909 of his famous Opus 11, the "Three Piano Pieces," Schönberg arrived at the point of his "complete break with the past." Here was the beginning of a journey which he was to travel with a fixed and unshakable purpose for the remainder of his creative life. These three small pieces are Schönberg's first complete expression of his new atonal style. Atonality is not the only feature of Schönberg's music, from this point on, which is to be looked upon as revolutionary and even bizarre. His work abounds in innovation. (There are, for example, the use of the "Sprechgesang," or song speech, the elaborate synchronisation of music and stage lighting in his opera, "Die Glückliche Hand," and his highly individual uses of orchestration.) But all else is of secondary importance when compared with the far-reaching effect of atonality. In the public mind at least it is his use of atonality which is the kernel of Schönberg's art, and the fundamental cause for which ultimately he is to be canonised or damned. ¶Atonality is a new word, coined to express the antithesis of tonality, i.e., without tonality. To Schönberg the idea of a single key or tonal centre was a limitation; so he turned to atonality in which all twelve tones of the scale are given equal importance and complete independence. In atonality the old laws of harmony and tonality are no longer obeyed. Schönberg even refused the compromise of a mixture, purposely banning all consonant chords of orthodox procedure from his scheme. Coexisting with atonality in the Schönbergian method is the new type of counterpoint which he evolved to accompany it. As every music student knows, orthodox counterpoint required in melodic writing the copious use of scale lines, alternating with skips and leaps. Schönberg's melodies consist largely of wide leaps of every possible interval, often extending (even in the vocal parts) beyond the limits of an octave. These melodies, though angular and eccentric in the extreme, are always subjected religiously to the basic principles of unity and variety; chief themes as well as secondary themes and accompaniment material are derived from the same basic musical germs. ¶This so-called dissonant counterpoint became the basis of all Schönberg's work after 1909. His scores are thick, labyrinthine masses of contrapuntal development in which he displays an almost superhuman facility in the manipulation of the traditional devices. His music abounds in imitation, fugue, canon, inverted canon, and even the crab-canon, or "cancrizans," in which the melody progresses to a certain point and then reverses itself until the entire part is played, note for note, backward to the beginning. Lest the unwary might imagine that dissonant counterpoint, being released from the strict laws of orthodox harmony, might be a relatively simple matter, it must be pointed out that Schönberg in his scheme is guided by an entirely new set of rules which are even more stern and unrelenting than the old ones. They are rules of his own devising, an outgrowth of his inner convictions about the course which the music of the future must take. Often they seem strained and pedantic to the point of sheer perversity, suggesting that Schönberg, in his struggle to free music from her traditional fetters, had succeeded only to forge an entirely new set himself. ¶The net result of these methods is one of the most curious, if not utterly bewildering, developments in the history of music. To the eye, there is no doubt that Schönberg's music is based upon the logical application of sound aesthetic principles. We may clearly see in his scores the use of time-tested principles as foundation stones for his innovations. But to the ear it is the new, the startling, and even the downright ugly which predominate. Dissonance follows dissonance until all semblance of a connection with the past seems to disappear, and the ear longs for the eventual appearance of a consonance or even the suggestion of a tonality. For many listeners this is a development which has tortured the art of music out of shape to suit an arbitrary and self-imposed discipline, an experiment in beauty which destroys beauty and leaves only a shell of ugliness and frustration. For them it is significant that the most effective of all Schönberg's works is his "Pierrot Lunaire." This melodrama consists of twenty-one songs scored for eight instruments and a "sprechstimme"—that is, a soloist who half speaks, half sings. The poems upon which the songs are based relate the never-ending struggle between idealism and materialism. Pierrot, the embodiment of idealistic youth, passes from spirituality to the depths of degradation and sin, then back to regeneration and idealism. It is a decadent idea, sicklied o'er and staled by a thousand different uses. Schönberg's is precisely the setting that it deserves. He distills into his weird score the essence of a decayed romanticism. His music is perverse and morbid, heavy with the scent of sickening perfume; it is ironic and sinister, full of malicious humour that seems always on the point of breaking into the cackling laughter of sheer insanity. ¶Significant, too, is the fact that the only work, not merely of Schönberg's but of any of his close followers, which has as yet received a genuine and widespread acclaim is the opera "Wozzeck," by his distinguished pupil, Alban Berg. Here is a score of singular originality, the most powerful contribution of our time to the operatic stage. Its story is one that chills and repels the listener—a welter of human misery and suffering, of perversion, murder, and suicide.

The lyric muse walks into the charnel house and the psychopathic ward, and the music follows, suiting itself perfectly to its surroundings. In other words, it is to conceptions of the morbid and the decadent that the Schönbergian art has so far found its most successful application. ¶There is another pertinent observation to be made here. In "Wozzeck" Berg uses with consummate skill all of Schönberg's complicated atonal and contrapuntal technique—but his work has a power and a colour and an inner vitality that are lacking in the work of his master. "Wozzeck" may be monstrous, but at least it walks. Too much of Schönberg, on the other hand, is inert and static. Too often we are amazed at his immense resource, only to be disappointed that his inspiration remains still-born. It is possible, of course, that Schönberg is another Cézanne, an artist misunderstood and despised during his lifetime, only to be canonised after his death. But at present it would seem that his influence, not his work, is to cast the longer shadow. (See Dictionary of Musicians entry, page 389.)

FRANZ SCHUBERT

By H. A. SCOTT

FRANZ SCHUBERT was very nearly the greatest of all composers. If he had lived longer, been more carefully trained when young, and received greater appreciation in his lifetime—three very reasonable "might-have-beens"—who shall set limits to the heights which he might have won? He died at thirty-one. If others of the masters had been cut off at this age what treasures the world would have lost!—in the case, say of Händel, every one of his oratorios; in that of Beethoven, his seven greatest symphonies; in that of Wagner, all his operas after "Tannhäuser" and "Lohengrin"; in that of Brahms, the "German Requiem" and all his symphonies. ¶It does not follow that Schubert would necessarily have developed in any like manner. But at least there are reasons for thinking that he might have done so. We know that in the last year of his life he contemplated taking lessons in counterpoint, that on his death-bed he spoke of "entirely new harmonies and rhythms" running through his head, and that he had the loftiest of ambitions. As it was, and taking his works as they stand, certain weaknesses distinguish them which there is no overlooking. That fabulous fertility which could beget six of the "Winterreise" songs at a single sitting, three of the pianoforte sonatas in as many weeks, and eight operas in a year, was not counterbalanced by a like faculty in the matter of self-criticism and concentration. Too many of his bigger works lack form and proportion. He did not trouble sufficiently to work out and make the most of the inspired thoughts which came to him in such unparalleled abundance. He was a stupendous genius, it might almost be said, with an infinite capacity for not taking pains—whose "profuse strains of unpremeditated art" were at once too profuse and too unpremeditated. ¶But even so only one or two of the very greatest names can stand before him in music's history. He occupies a position only one degree short of the very highest. In the actual quality of his inspiration indeed perhaps there is not one who could be ranked before him. No composer in the whole history of music was more wondrously endowed by nature, whether one considers either the surpassing beauty of his ideas or the profusion of their supply. ¶In Schubert's music at its best there is a haunting and unutterable loveliness, an exquisite blending of tenderness, sweetness, and purity, with strength, nobility, and grandeur, to which, for the true Schubertian, there is perhaps no equivalent in the works of all the other masters put together. And this applies, it should be said, not less to his instrumental pieces than to his songs. ¶The notion that Schubert is great only in his songs is one of those stock judgments which, once accepted, it seems almost impossible to eradicate. In point of fact nothing could be wider of the mark than this belief. Schubert left imperishable works in nearly every branch of music. His songs comprise no doubt his most characteristic and distinctive achievements, inasmuch as nothing like them had ever been so much as attempted before. But so far as concerns the specific quality of their music, they were equalled, if not surpassed, by such works as the symphonies, his chamber compositions, and those exquisite one-movement pieces for the pianoforte, the "Impromptus" and "Moments Musicaux," which in their way, be it said, were only a degree less epoch-making than the songs. ¶What then is the distinctive place in music of this divinely gifted tone-poet? His distinction is twofold: he created the song as we know it, and more than any other composer he influenced the development of the romantic movement. As the greatest of all song-writers, Schubert's position is assured. It seems safe to say that his noblest achievements under this head will never be surpassed. The Schubert song, of which the text throughout is mirrored in the accompaniment, in which every bar of the music is conditioned by the words, thoughts, and dramatic or emotional content of the poem illustrated, was a distinctive creation in its way not one whit less wonderful than, say, the Beethoven symphony or the Wagnerian music-drama. Such songs as "Der Erlkönig," "Die junge Nonne," "Der Tod und das Mädchen," "Der Atlas," "Der Doppelgänger," or "Gruppe aus dem Tartarus," to name but half-a-dozen almost at random from his more descriptive examples, were a totally new thing in music, the influence of which upon all succeeding composers, not only of songs but of every kind of dramatic or illustrative music, not excluding opera, it would be hard to over-estimate. ¶And more remarkable still perhaps is the fact that this superb emotional and dramatic expressiveness was attained without the smallest sacrifice of qualities specifically musical—nay, took shape in music of the greatest beauty, richness, variety and charm, as music alone and without reference to the text. Schubert's creation of the song in truth partakes almost of the miraculous, for he not only invented an absolutely new kind of song, but developed its utmost possibilities, one might almost say, at a blow—in a word did this new thing at the first time of asking and did it supremely well. ¶Schubert's influence as song-writer it would be hardly possible to exaggerate. It was truly not a reform which he introduced but a revolution. As to his influence on the composers of the romantic school one has only to consider in general the whole character of his music with its all-pervading poetry and emotional expressiveness, and in particular such works as those already named, his "Impromptus" and "Moments Musicaux" to wit, to realise the character of the connection. Here also, in these last-named works, he did that which no one before him had attempted, inventing new forms for the expression of moods too delicate, too intimate, and too personal for treatment in the larger movements of established type, and once again left behind him creations of an entirely novel kind, which later composers have striven in vain to improve upon. ¶Perhaps in the whole range of pianoforte music there are no passages more ravishingly beautiful—more enchanting to the ear, regarded from the purely sensuous standpoint—than some to be found in these inspired works. Had Schubert left nothing further than this slender volume of "Impromptus" and "Moments Musicaux" for the pianoforte his name would live forever in the records of the art. ¶If Schubert's essays in the larger forms—the symphony and the sonata—are to a certain extent impaired by the qualities alluded to, this is by no means to deny their enormous significance and importance. Schubert in these larger works may have been diffuse at times, may not always have developed to the full the wondrous ideas which came to him in such abundance, his works may sometimes lack proportion; but what qualities are theirs by way of comparison!—what wealth of melody! what intoxicating harmonies! what irresistible rhythms! what magical modulations! Recall such creations as the C major and the B minor symphonies, the quintet in C major, the D minor, A minor, and G major quartets, and the sonatas in A minor, B flat, and G among his larger piano works, and of what account seem the dry-as-dusts' and analysts' strictures in the face of such imperishable compositions as these? Nor should it be overlooked that in these larger works also Schubert's methods, if he kept within the recognised forms, were all his own, and as such were full of influence upon his successors. Apart from such technical matters as his harmonies, modulations, instrumentation, and the like, under all of which heads he made striking advances, he breathed into these established forms also a spirit of romance, a yearning, wistful, personal note of lyric tenderness and fervour whereby they are distinguished from all earlier compositions of their kind. ¶Well might it be said by Grove of Schubert that "there never has been one like him and there never will be another"; by Liszt that he was "le musicien le plus poète que jamais"; and by the inscription on his tomb that "Die Tonkunst begrub hier einen reichen Besitz aber noch viel schönere Hoffnungen." (See Dictionary of Musicians entry, page 392.)

ROBERT SCHUMANN

BY RICHARD ALDRICH

SCHUMANN's music falls into three groups or periods as easily as Beethoven's. There is, first, the product of his early, exuberant style, those wonderful series of short piano pieces, slight in form, but soaring into imaginative power; saying little, but vaguely hinting at much. The second period is one of more self-centred activity, of greater poise, of more conservative methods; his ideal had expanded, and was leading him to compose in a larger mould, with a broader sweep of imagination, and with a greater regard for form as itself an element of beauty. And, in his last period, we must group those of his works that show the failing powers, the exhausted imagination of an intellect already overshadowed by its approaching doom. ¶Schumann's beginnings in music were as nearly the spontaneous outpourings of himself as can well be thought of. It is difficult to derive the sources of even his first attempts from the music of his predecessors. He studied some of Hummel's works, and greatly admired Moscheles, and, the critics say, that the "Aegg" variations, Opus 1, are in the Hummel-Moscheles style. He was devoted to Schubert from his early years, and played his little piano pieces, especially the dances, with great love; perhaps the traces of this may be found in the Papillons, Opus 2. But even here, the influence, if there be any, related more to the concise and sententious form, the poetic content, than to the fibre of the music itself. It is not the kind of resemblance that you will find to Mozart and Haydn all through the earliest works of Beethoven. Bach, too, formed a part of young Schumann's musical daily bread; we may perhaps discern that influence in the instinctive feeling for contrapuntal movement—though of a very free, and, as it were, untechnical sort—in those earliest piano pieces; but here again comparison of the specifically musical style reveals nothing. ¶There is one influence, however, that cannot be overlooked in computing the forces bearing on Schumann's formative period; that is Jean Paul Richter. All readers of Schumann's letters know how steeped he was in the spirit of this singular German fantastic, this overwrought romantic symbolist, a story-teller, philosopher, and poet in one. He was all in all to Schumann; not only the young man's literary style—he was already a copious writer—but his very ideals in music, were moulded on Jean Paul's, and thickly overlaid with his mannerisms. For in these early years of Schumann's life music and poetry seem to meet on common ground, and to take their impulse from one and the same starting-point. In Jean Paul, all that charming crew of "Davidites," with "Florestan" and "Eusebius" as their forefront, have their prototypes; and their appearance in the early Zeitschrift articles is no more characteristic of this influence than their appearance in the "Carnéval" and the "Davidsbündlertänze." ¶With his attainment of his heart's desire in his marriage with Clara Wieck, in 1840, there seems to have come a mellowing, a ripening force in Schumann's musical inspiration—if you will, a conservative force that led him to see the significance and value of those musical forms to which he had at first been indifferent. Some of his ardent companions in the revolutionary parties of the earlier years saw in this a backsliding from his professions. But the fact that he parted company with "Florestan" and "Eusebius," and erased their names from the reissues of musical works once signed by them, can be for us naught but an indication of intellectual growth. We enjoy those romantic and engaging figures, but we see greater things than they were concerned with in the symphonies, the piano-quintette, the string-quartettes, the piano-concerto, the third part of "Faust," and "Paradise and the Peri." ¶The contributions of Schumann to the development of the art are important and permanent. What he did to develop the expressive power of the pianoforte is all his own. He wrote for the instrument in a new way, calling for new and elaborate advances in technique—not the brilliant finger-dexterity of Chopin and Liszt, but a deeper underlying potency of expression through interlacing parts, skilfully disposed harmonies, the inner voices of chords, and through new demands as to variety of tone quality, contrasts of colour and the enrichment of the whole through pedal effects. It has been called a crabbed style, but it is no less idiomatic of the piano than the more open and brilliant manner that was developed at the same period by the virtuoso-school of pianoforte-playing and composition. ¶Schumann's use of short pieces, in connected series, as an exposition of what is really a single poetic idea running through them all, is his own creation, and one that succeeding composers have made the most of. So is his idealised form of programme-music—music, that is, expressing some definite, concrete, external idea. But his wise judgment on music of this kind must always be kept in mind, that it must always be beautiful and intelligible as music without the need of explanation through titles, in which he saw only an aid or stimulus to the hearer's imagination. Space is lacking to discuss his later experiments in modifying or developing the classical or sonata form to increase its unity and its emotional potency, such as are to be found in the D-minor and C-major symphonies, and the piano-quintette. Schumann added something peculiarly his own to the Lied, in his enhancement of the accompaniment's significance, increasing its power of expression in co-operation, sometimes almost on equal terms with the voice, and, in many instances, giving its ritornelles or instrumental postludes an independent elaboration and meaning of their own. ¶Schumann came of a well-to-do family, and his early general education and social surroundings had been far beyond those of most musicians. The fact that he was not only well read, but a writer himself of peculiar charm and individuality, a critic of quickening insight and generous discernment, reacted, as it needs must, on his music. Though he was, early in his youth, of a lively character, he was always disposed toward moodiness; and by the time he reached manhood he had fallen into a state of remarkable taciturnity and introspection. Wrapped in his own thoughts, he would, when in the company of friends or fellow-musicians, sit silent hour after hour, with his head leaning on his hand, often with an incipient smile upon his face, and with his lips pursed, as though to whistle. His letters show him to have been of a sweet and affectionate nature toward his family and intimates; kindly and generous in his estimate and treatment of others, yet roused to anger by a wrong, and capable of deep and glowing resentment. ¶Schumann's place in modern music was slowly won, both in his native land and elsewhere, but there is little sign yet of its being shaken. His symphonies suffer unduly, through their unskilful orchestration, in the estimation of a generation to whom fine feeling for orchestral colour is essential, but the magnificent elegance of the two great overtures (to "Manfred" and "Genoveva") is little discounted in this way; the string-quartettes and the piano-quintette and quartette seem to lose none of their beauty as they recede in historical perspective; the piano concertos and a great number of the songs are heard repeatedly, every year, with unre-mitted joy. His solo piano-pieces appeal less and less to the taste of the latter-day piano-virtuoso who cannot utilise music calling so little for nimbleness of finger and brilliancy of effect; but it is impossible to deny that these pieces are still competent, as few others are, to serve deep and sincere music lovers "for the enjoyment of god at home." Schumann will always have a commanding hold, a commanding place in the nineteenth century, the century of evolution, the century that struck off the academic bonds from art. In the noble band of romantic adventurers into new and unexplored realms of music, Schumann was a leader, but he never failed in his bold and chivalrous championship of the rectitude of his art. JEAN. SIBELIUS

THE MUSIC of Jean Sibelius stood before the world for more than three decades before this composer began to receive his just dues. On the stage of modern music he was for years a powerful but never a dominating figure; he remained aloof and in the half-light, never in the centre of the stage. Had Sibelius died as recently as 1925 it might have been with the belief that much of his finest work was destined for oblivion. But now at last he stands forth in his true stature as one of the two or three greatest composers of our time, while for many critical admirers he is the master spirit of all twentieth-century musicians. ¶No mystery surrounds this long-delayed recognition, for two often-encountered factors had been at work. The first is the inherently difficult, almost forbidding quality of Sibelius' greatest work, a quality which makes early appreciation well-nigh impossible. The second was the appearance, at the moment when Sibelius began his first serious work of composition, of new and startling trends in modern music—first the impressionism of Debussy, then the ultramodernism of Stravinsky, and finally the atonality of Schönberg—a small revolution which was to absorb the attention of the music world for more than thirty years, during which time Sibelius and his works had to wait, alone and neglected, in the ante-room. Still a third factor should be mentioned; it was accidental but nevertheless potent. Sibelius was unfortunate in that several of his early minor works (notably "Finlandia" and "Valse triste") achieved a widespread and superficial popularity. For many years musicians (even symphony conductors of otherwise discerning taste) thought of Sibelius in terms of these competent but essentially second-rate scores—to the great detriment of his other vastly more important works. ¶There is special interest in the fact that Sibelius was born in 1865, for it indicates that he is a contemporary of Debussy (born 1862) and of Richard Strauss (born 1864). The contrast in the creative careers of these three men is curiously revealing. Debussy died in 1918, and for six years before that the flame of his inspiration had tragically drooped. Strauss has survived into old age, but the genius who composed "Der Rosenkavalier" and "Till Eulenspiegel" has been dead these many years. Sibelius, alone of the three, grew old without suffering a serious decline in his creative powers. During the first decade of the twentieth century, when the other two men had already reached their zenith, Sibelius' star was rising in a steady curve; in the second decade, when they had passed their peak, he had just entered the great creative period of his life. ¶It should be noted, too, that all three men began their important work in the nineties, at the time when the tremendous tide of Wagnerism was moving toward its flood. The most vital single consideration in Sibelius' early life is the fact that he was not—and never did become—a Wagnerite. Sibelius has always disliked Wagner's music. So many composers, like Strauss, had succumbed to the Wagnerian magic and spent their lives largely in imitation of him. But Sibelius turned completely away from Wagner, and therein lay the ultimate salvation of his creative soul. In his finest work we find instead a definite kinship with Brahms. To-day indeed it becomes increasingly evident that the Sibelius symphonies are the most powerful essays in that form since the death of Brahms. An English protagonist of Sibelius, Cecil Gray, goes even further, declaring that for Sibelius' equal as a symphonist we must actually name the All-Highest—Beethoven himself. ¶The whole body of Sibelius' work comprises an enormous quantity of music in a great variety of forms. Besides the seven symphonies there are more than fifty orchestral and choral works, large and small; incidental music to a number of plays, a violin concerto, a string quartet, dozens of piano pieces, more than one hundred songs, and a number of miscellaneous works of every type—many of which have never been published. In such a wealth of material it is inevitable that there should be a wide variation in quality. But the general level is uncommonly high. The greater works fall mainly into two categories—the tone poems and the symphonies. The latter are the more likely to prove the supreme examples of the composer's genius, but it was the former which first established him and which even to-day remain in the public consciousness as his most characteristic creations. ¶The Sibelius of the tone poems is closely akin to nature and they are an unmistakable product of his Northern environment. He himself has written, "It is true I am a dreamer and a poet of nature. I love the sounds of the field and forest, water and mountains." He is profoundly moved, too, by the legends of the North, especially by the Finnish mythology. From these two wellsprings of inspiration have come many of his best works. "The Oceanides," for example, is an impressionistic tone picture with the myriad aspects of the sea as its background. The stupendous "Tapio" (one of Sibelius' masterpieces) takes its name from Tapio, the Finnish forest god. "En Saga," the first work of Sibelius to become widely known outside of Finland, is a symphonic poem based on an unnamed legend. Most potent of all sources of material for this composer has been the "Kalevala," the great national epic of the Finns. From its runes he has drawn the brilliant "Pohjola's Daughter," a tonal painting of the maiden of Pohjola sitting upon a rainbow, spinning. Also "The Origin of Fire," for barytone solo, male chorus and orchestra, in which Ukko, the Zeus of the Finnish mythology, restores sunlight and warmth to a world plunged in darkness. The story of the Creation as told in the "Kalevala" is set forth in "Lunnotar," for soprano solo and orchestra. Other runes of the same work are the basis for "The Song of Vaino," for chorus and orchestra; the "Legend" for orchestra, "The Return of Lemminkäinen" and its companion piece, the famous "Swan of Tuonela." In the Finnish mythology Tuonela is the Hell, or land of death. ¶In dominating such tremendous material—the painting of vast, icy Northern spaces, of mighty half-barbaric legends—Sibelius displays complete mastery. He brings to his task a prodigious technical equipment, an Olympian style, and a sovereign imagination. The result is music of truly epic quality. "It is blood-brother to the wind and silence," writes Paul Rosenfeld; "to the lowering cliffs and the spray, to harsh crying of sea-birds and the breath of fog. . . . The orchestral compositions of Sibelius seem to have passed over black torrents and desolate moorlands, through pallid sunlight and grim primeval forests, and become drenched with them. The instrumentation is all wet grays and blacks, relieved only by bits of brightness wan and elusive as the Northern summer, frostily green as the polar lights. The works are full of gnawing of bassoons and the bleakness of the English horn, full of shattering trombones and screaming violins, full of the sinister rolling of drums, the menacing reverberation of cymbals, the icy glittering of harps. The musical ideas of those of the compositions that are finally realised recall the ruggedness and hardness and starkness of things that persist in the Finnish winter. The rhythms seem to approach the wild, unnumbered rhythms of the forest and the wind and the flickering sunlight." ¶In spite of these qualities in the music of Sibelius it cannot be said that he has ever evolved a special or characteristic "style." We may speak of Debussy's typical harmonies, or Stravinsky's rhythms, or Schönberg's atonality; but no such ready epithetic qualities associate themselves with the work of the great Finn. For that reason there are no Sibelius imitators, and there probably never will be. There never has been a Sibelius school or a Sibelius cult—no swarm of gadfly imitators such as flitted around Stravinsky and Schönberg. The music of Sibelius contains little that is revolutionary or startlingly new, little upon which the facile imitator may seize. His development as an artist has been a slow, steady growth, based solidly on the foundations of his great predecessors and coloured only by his strong Northern personality. His mastery is all-embracing: his melodies are aggressive and strong, full of salt and savour; his harmonies are richly expressive or acrid and harsh, depending upon his specific aims; while his superb command of modern orchestration is exercised only for the most legitimate purposes, never for mere virtuosity for its own sake. ¶In the seven Sibelius symphonies all these qualities are present in superabundance. The First Symphony, written in 1899 when the composer was thirty-four, is largely orthodox in form. It contains strong reminders of Grieg, Tchaikowski, and Dvořák, but its melodies are distinctive and unhackneyed, its orchestration brilliantly effective. Even to-day, when so much of the music of the late nineteenth century has faded and grown stale, this work retains its vital freshness. The Second Symphony is closely akin to the First; it contains a finale of the type beloved by late Victorians. Yet it gives strong evidence of the composer's growth and its inner construction contains acorns that were later to produce some of his greatest oaks. For his Third Symphony Sibelius uses a process of reduction. The form is scaled down to three movements, the orchestration is restrained, while the imposing, dramatic dignity of the thematic material of the preceding symphonies is discarded for simple, straightforward melodies. The prevailing mood of the work is sunny and bright. ¶In his Fourth Symphony Sibelius produced not only the crown of his own endeavour, but one of the most astonishing works in all modern music. Early performances left its hearers baffled and unsatisfied, while most conductors thought it so harsh and ungrateful that it lay neglected for almost twenty years. The reasons are not far to seek. It is a remote, solitary, deeply introspective work, saturated with the darkest gloom. Its themes sound bare and elementary, and often so sparsely developed that at first hearing they seem not to be developed at all. "The Fourth Symphony," writes Cecil Gray, "is the outcome of a process of sheer starvation, of a fakirlike asceticism and self-denial. It is gaunt, spectral, emaciated almost; the question is no longer one of superfluous flesh, but of any flesh at all—the very bones protrude." When the outward strangeness of this extraordinary work wears off we begin to feel the workings of the powerful and original creative mind beneath it, and the desperate suffering which must have brought it to fruition. No other music of our time is such a distilled essence of intolerable pain. ¶Sibelius returns to something nearer serenity in his Fifth Symphony. Here is a far more conventional work than the Fourth, but every bar contains the stamp of its creator. The last movement is a notable success—a stirring, triumphant finale that nevertheless contrives to be unhackneyed. For many critics Sibelius' Sixth Symphony represents something of a falling off in creative interest. It is a restrained, carefully poised work, lacking the intensity of the Fourth and the brilliance of the Fifth. But with the Seventh Symphony we come again upon an undisputed masterpiece. This symphony is in one gigantic movement, a vast massing of the composer's creative forces for a single stunning attack. It has no counterpart in the music of our time. RICHARD STRAUSS

THAT Richard Strauss was the son of the famous horn-player may explain his predilection for the beautiful instrument. ¶At Meiningen he met Alexander Ritter, a pupil of Wagner, and this friendship, with Von Bülow's daily coaching, decided Richard Strauss's tendency in art. He became a composer of the future, a man of the new school. He travelled much—he went to Greece, Italy, and Egypt for incipient lung-trouble—and on "guesting" tours, on which he was received with enthusiasm, for he is a modern conductor in all the implications of the phrase. A man of good physique, Scandinavian in appearance, Strauss is widely cultured and well read in classical and modern literature. ¶In music he is a true descendant of Berlioz, Liszt, and Wagner, though early in his career he showed marked traces of a devotion to Brahms. This is more noticeable in his piano and orchestra Burleske in D minor, in the solo sonata and in the "Wanderer's Sturmlied," opus 14, for six-voiced chorus and orchestra. ¶He has in his symphonic forms pushed to the verge of the sublime—or the ridiculous—or both—the poetic programme (Vide D. D., "programme music"). His "Don Juan," "Macbeth," "Death and Transfiguration," "Till Eulenspiegel's Merry Pranks," "Thus Spake Zarathustra," "Don Quixote," and "Ein Heldenleben" are tokens of labours almost Balzacian in their intensity. An emotional strenuousness, a marvellous mastery of the orchestral apparatus, an abnormal colour and rhythmic sense, combined with poetic feeling, bizarre, even grotesque methods of utterance, an utter defiance of formalism either classic or romantic, and a thematic invention not commensurate with his other gifts—all these qualities jumbled in amazing juxtaposition and flavoured by a powerful individuality, easily made Richard Strauss the leader of the New German School and a formidable figure in the musical arena. ¶As a song-writer his various collections have met with the greatest success, for he has a happy method of welding music and poem into a perfect, if somewhat startling, whole. Form he abandons utterly, striving to capture the idea as he perceives it, in its full bloom. Opera 10, 15, 17, 127, 29, 32, are favourites; the newer songs are difficult and almost cryptic in sentiment and execution. Richard Strauss is the greatest living master of the orchestra. (See page 422.)

IGOR STRAVINSKY

BY RICHARD ANTHONY LEONARD

WHATEVER the future may think of him, Igor Stravinsky has achieved during his lifetime a place in modern music so far attained by no other composer of the twentieth century. One almost uses the word "notorious" in connection with Stravinsky. Specifically he is responsible for that most infamous of all scores, "Le Sacre du Printemps." When Diaghileff first produced this ballet in Paris in 1913, with choreography by Nijinsky, much of the music was drowned out by the hissing, stamping, and yelling of the enraged audience. They heard a tonal picture of the coming of Spring in pagan Russia, and it assaulted their ears and their emotions with a ferocity that knew no bounds. It was cacophonous, complex, intense—it was sadistic, frenzied, horrifying. After its first concert performance in England in 1921 outraged citizens took arms in typical British fashion and wrote letters of protest to the newspapers. Lawrence Gilman relates that one man, shaken to his emotional roots, insisted that the score "stood for all the unnamable horrors of revolution, murder, and rapine." In 1924, when New York first heard the concert version of the work, indignant members of the old school walked out in droves, unwilling to listen to the "blasphemous destruction of music as an art"; while to later performances sensation-seekers flocked as they would to a gangster's funeral. ¶The cause of all this pothor was a small-sized, slight-figured Russian, with the full lips and slanting eyes of a Tartar—a cold little man with the calculating interest of an experimenter in music, an iconoclast and a hater of all sentiment. This is the man around whom the entire ultra-modernist movement in music revolved. For almost twenty years, following the outbreak of the Great War, Stravinsky bestrode the narrow world of music like a Colossus. His every score was accorded instant recognition wherever important music is played. Imitators and disciples sprang up everywhere, until effeminate Frenchmen, staid young Englishmen, and talented American Jews were all slavishly imitating the bitter polytonality and shocking rhythms of this ultra-modern primitivist Russian. The concert halls of Europe and America rang with a new and strange music. The rich, sensuous styles of Wagner and Strauss began to disappear; their smooth-flowing, long-breathing melodic line gave way to hard, angular rhythms and short, metallic utterance. Atonality became the reigning fashion; notes without benefit of a key centre were juxtaposed in counterpoint that shrieked. ¶Stravinsky was not by any means the sole moving force in this revolution which swept the art of music; for more than a decade before the war the currents had been moving swiftly toward this climax. But he, more than any other composer, epitomises the upheaval that finally took place. His music reflected, more than any other, the profound changes wrought in every phase of man's activity and thought during the second and third decades of the twentieth century. It reflected a cold, hard cynicism, a disdain of sentiment, a preoccupation with pure, steely mechanics, mixed with occasional outbursts of an almost frenzied despair—in brief, all the characteristics of a race of men whose faiths, traditions, and sentiments, whose moorings to a nostalgic past were all blasted away in the shell-shock of a monstrous war. ¶Possibly the future will look with bewilderment upon the huge clouds of controversial dust which Stravinsky's music raised when it burst upon an unprepared world. Much of its strangeness has already vanished; atonality, polytonality, polyharmony, and all the other devices of ultra-modern composition no longer raise even a critical eyebrow. But a span of years must still pass before any final critical estimate can be made of Stravinsky's fundamental importance. The composer himself has complicated the issues and rendered final judgment difficult by refusing to remain in the categories which musicians and critics, in their disturbed attempts to classify, have tried to create for him. Several times in the course of his development he has changed his style, advanced new and often disquieting theories, or taken unto himself strange and incongruous gods to worship. Few composers have been more completely unpredictable. ¶As with so many revolutionists, Stravinsky's beginnings were orthodox. His early works, after a period of study with Rimsky-Korsakoff, include a set of piano études, a song cycle, a symphony after the manner of Tchaikowsky, and several short orchestral pieces. One of these, "Fireworks," was composed as a wedding present for Rimsky's daughter, and is a deftly orchestrated, exceedingly clever mimicry of fire and light. Another, "Scherzo fantastique," though a work of less originality, brought about the most important single happening in Stravinsky's early life. It was heard by Serge Diaghileff, who promptly commissioned the young composer to write for his Russian ballet. Between 1909 and 1914 Stravinsky composed "L'Oiseau de Feu," "Petrouchka," and "Le Sacre du Printemps," all in collaboration with Diaghileff, who produced them first in Paris. All three were landmarks in the history of the ballet and in the course of modern music. Moreover, in the short space of those four years the composer had traversed an astonishing span of creative development and achieved a climax which, for many critics, he has never again approached. With "L'Oiseau de Feu" he stepped with one stride out of the class of the talented but still uncertain amateur to an assured and immensely gifted mastery. Much of this work is plainly derived from Stravinsky's Russian predecessors; nevertheless it is full of originality and charm and it exhibits a use of the orchestra that is both exquisite and brilliant. "Petrouchka" represents another stride forward—a huge stride. Here Stravinsky discloses a genius not only for scene painting in music but also for the far more difficult art of character delineation. With incredible vividness and speed he draws for us a picture of the Russian peasant fair—a marvellous phantasmagoria of gypsies, dancers, organ-grinders, drunkards, animals—in a whirl of merry-making and noise. Against this background are mimed the four main characters—the Charlatan and his three puppets, the Blackamoor, the Ballerina, and Petrouchka. Stravinsky exposes their cruelty and vulgarity, their gaiety and charm, their morbid, violent passions, and their pathetic struggling for a transient happiness. Petrouchka, "a child-like soul crying in a withered hell," is an especial masterpiece of musical characterisation. ¶Of "Le Sacre du Printemps" and its first impressions we have already spoken. It is no longer the terrifying monument that it was in 1913, but it still remains a solitary and profoundly disturbing one. Stravinsky achieved these "Pictures of Pagan Russia" by a combination of effects which were violently new and startling at that time, and which were to leave indelible marks on all the music of the next two decades. Dissonance, atonality, and polyharmony abound in the score, with hardly a bar of orthodox harmony to be found anywhere. The orchestra employed is vast, but its immense frame is often strained to the utmost by the explosive fury of the music. By far the most extraordinary feature of the score is Stravinsky's use of rhythms. They are violent in the extreme, running a huge gamut of intensities and cadences, and often so complex that the time signatures change with almost every bar. It has been rightly said that in this work Stravinsky uses rhythm as a separate entity, much as Debussy had used the chord—divorced from melody and employed purely for its own sake. Rhythm—brutal, stark, realistic rhythm—now became the hallmark of Stravinsky's work. ¶After "Le Sacre du Printemps" a change came over the composer—a change about which there still remains certain elements of mystery. Up to this time his work had been unmistakably Russian, as well as pictorial and emotional. Now he sought to develop a new style. His life in Paris suddenly made him aware of the eighteenth century in music, of its abstract purity, its lack of a pronounced nationalism. He announced that he wanted to become "a classicist, an objectivist, a constructive artist." He scaled down his huge orchestral forces and wrote more intimate works like the chamber operas, "Renard" and "L'Histoire du Soldat," and the cantata with dances, "Les Noces." Then he became completely enamoured of the neoclassic style and composed "Pulcinella," a "ballet with song," based on airs of Pergolesi, a "Symphony for Wind Instruments," an "Octuo," also for wind instruments, a Concerto for piano, wind instruments and percussion, and a Piano Sonata. These works, according to the composer, were "in the style of the eighteenth century viewed from the standpoint of to-day." The view could not have been very good, for often the results were simply an odd mixture of old counterpoint and new atonality. In the later "Capriccio" for piano and orchestra and the Concerto for violin it appears that Stravinsky was chiefly influenced by Bach and—mirabile dictu—modern jazz. ¶Even though this neoclassic phase was to dominate the composer's work for more than a decade, and although he spoke a great deal in its defense, for the general music public it was a disappointing anti-climax. The world had expected tremendous things from the composer of "Le Sacre du Printemps" and "Petrouchka"; it felt unexpectedly let down when he produced instead these abstruse cerebral exercises, deliberately drained of the emotional force and the brilliant colouring that had characterized his most potent work. ¶Later, neoclassicism itself was to be supplanted. The seeds of the newest phase are to be found in the opera bouffe, "Mavra," which appeared in 1922. It is based on a book of Pushkin's and is an admitted attempt to imitate the style of the early nineteenth-century opera composers. Stravinsky dedicated it to the memory of Pushkin, Glinka, and Tchaikowsky. Later he publicly declared his admiration for Tchaikowsky, to the utter bewilderment of many of his ultra-modernist followers who had already relegated the Russian arch-romanticist to a waxworks of long-forgotten horrors. In 1927 Stravinsky finished "Oedipus Rex," an "opera-oratorio," based on a Latin translation of Jean Cocteau's French version of the Greek drama by Sophocles. This dark and sombre score (for orchestra, male chorus, and soloists) Stravinsky declared to be "the largest of all his works," in which his style "had reached the utmost simplification and the greatest similarity with the ideal style to be found in Glinka's 'Life of the Tsar.'" When, in 1930, he composed his "Symphony of the Psalms" for chorus and orchestra, based on verses from three of the Psalms, his purposes began to emerge more clearly. It seemed likely that his cycle of development had turned at last to the neo-romantic stage, and that now the nineteenth century was to be "viewed from the standpoint of to-day." ¶It cannot be denied that Stravinsky no longer enjoys the undisputed eminence and the immense prestige that he did for almost two decades after 1914. His phase of neoclassicism in particular brought about a strong critical revulsion. He has often been termed an opportunist in music, a shrewd observer of fads and fashions, an innovator who used the surface brilliance of his art to buy popular recognition and fame during his lifetime. His shortcomings—notably his weakness in melodic invention—have been proclaimed again and again. None of these factors, however, is likely to mar the enduring reputations of his three great ballets, produced between 1909 and 1914. This was the time when his natural impulses and his Russian heritage of strong, primitive emotionalism were given free rein. As soon as he sought to restrain these impulses and instead apply his tremendous technical skill to the abstract and the unemotional, his work suffered in consequence. ¶The inevitable fact remains that Stravinsky had reached with "Petrouchka" and "Le Sacre du Printemps" such a peak of creative intensity that almost any work which followed was bound to disappoint. Moreover, we may now discern that "Le Sacre du Printemps" was not the beginning of a genuine new phase in modern music, but the ending of one. It is clearly a work of impressionism—an application of Stravinsky's brutal, angular, hard-surfaced technique to the impressionist style. In spite of its primitivist outlines it is highly sophisticated, decadent; it represents the impressionist movement developed finally to overripeness. With its completion Stravinsky was left no course but to seek other modes of expression. (See Dictionary of Musicians entry, page 423.)

ARTHUR SEYMOUR SULLIVAN

By ERIC HODGINS

AFTER the death of Henry Purcell, it took England some one hundred and fifty years to produce a native composer worthy of any critical notice whatever. She finally succeeded in 1842, when Arthur Seymour Sullivan was born in London. ¶This second son of an Irish clarinetist was marked for music from the first. In an autobiographical moment he once assured a listener that from the age of five onward music was the only thing in his life which meant anything to him. After his father rose sufficiently in the musical world to become bandmaster in the Royal Military College, Sullivan quickly learned to play all the band's instruments. It is recorded by Hesketh Pearson that he composed his first anthem at the age of eight. ¶After this achievement had been followed by a career as a choirboy, as Mendelssohn Scholar at the Royal Academy of Music, and as a brilliant student at the Leipzig Conservatoire, Sullivan settled down in England with the avowed intention of becoming a composer. This was an odd ambition for a young Englishman of the period (it is interesting to remember that Sullivan was roughly the contemporary of Johann Strauss the Younger, and of Johannes Brahms); it was also somewhat eccentric of Sullivan to be such an energetic enthusiast for the music of Schubert and Schumann, when Mendelssohn was the one composer whom the English regarded as possessing true merit. But Sullivan was an ingratiating young man, as his personality triumphed over these peculiarities. Soon he was professor of pianoforte and ballad singing at the Crystal Palace School of Art, and hard at work completing a work begun in Leipzig: music to Shakespeare's "Tempest." Its performance in 1862, when he was just twenty, instantly made his reputation. ¶It was not, however, for five years that Sullivan was to begin venturing with the art form in which his genius was to make him famous, wealthy, and unhappy. Between 1862 and 1867 the official record of Sullivan's productivity lists dozens upon dozens of oratorios, sacred songs, hymns, cantatas, anthems, and "secular works." But in 1867 Sullivan joined hands with F. C. Burnand (a humorist later to become editor of Punch), and between them they wrote libretto and music for a minor theatrical tidbit called "Cox and Box." It was well but mildly regarded. Dabbling thus in the theatre it was inevitable that Sullivan should sooner or later meet William Schwenck Gilbert, who, while Sullivan was producing his endless series of religious works, had been turning out heaps of serious and semi-serious theatrical rubbish sometimes accompanied by music. The two men were introduced in 1870 by Frederic Clay, a composer who had been Gilbert's occasional previous collaborator. There thus began one of the most notable collaborations in the history of the English-speaking theatre. It opened inauspiciously with the production of "Thespis, or The Gods Grown Old" in 1871, a "comic opera" which withered after a brief run. It took successful root in 1875 with a curtain raiser, "Trial by Jury," originally written to fill out an evening made not quite long enough (in one sense) by Offenbach's "La Perichole." It was once and for all confirmed by the unparalleled success (after an uncertain beginning) of "Pinafore" in 1878. Thereafter the Gilbert and Sullivan collaboration, with one or two small exceptions, swept everything before it. It was thrice broken off by its partners, who were never able to like or respect one another, and who never met as friends. But between the date of the first successful full-length comic opera ("Pinafore") and the last ("The Gondoliers," produced in 1889) there elapsed eleven years of national acclaim for librettist and composer alike. The closing years of the collaboration, which finally ceased in 1896, were marred by increasing quarrels, one semi-failure ("Utopia, Limited,"), and one final effort ("The Grand Duke") which was, by unanimous testimony, so intolerably bad that it was all but unrecognisable as a product of the famous partnership. ¶In the course of their quarrels the partners had frequent recourse to other collaborators. Yet neither was ever able to write a successful work without the other. Sullivan's significant operas, therefore, are limited to those for which Gilbert provided the libretti. The passage of half a century has not dimmed their popularity. Throughout the English-speaking world they have been heard, year in, year out, almost continuously since their first production. The following is a condensed record:

Opera	Première	No. of Performances at First Production
Thespis, or The Gods Grown Old	December 23, 1871
Trial by Jury	March 25, 1875	294
The Sorcerer	November 17, 1877	175

H.M.S. Pinafore, or The Lass that Loved a Sailor	May 25, 1878	563
The Pirates of Penzance, or The Slave of Duty	April 3, 1880	366
Patience, or Bunthorne's Bride	April 23, 1881	578
Iolanthe, or The Peer and the Peri	November 25, 1882	400
Princess Ida, or Castle Adamant	January 5, 1884	147
The Mikado, or The Town of Titipu	March 14, 1885	672
Ruddigore, or The Witch's Curse	January 22, 1887	288
The Yeomen of the Guard, or The Merryman and His Maid	October 3, 1888	423
The Gondoliers, or The King of Barataria	December 7, 1889	559
Utopia, Limited, or The Flowers of Progress	October 7, 1893	245
The Grand Duke, or The Statutory Duel	March 7, 1896	123

¶For his services to the cause of English music, Sullivan was knighted by Queen Victoria in 1883—a distinction not conferred upon his collaborator (of whom the Queen disapproved) until Edward VII redressed the balance in 1907. But the acclaim and honours with which Sullivan was surrounded were disfigured for him by the feeling—fostered by many of his acquaintances—that his talents were being squandered upon the trivialities of Mr. Gilbert's topsy-turvy imagination. The suggestion was even borne to him that the Queen would be pleased to have him compose an opera to which the adjective "grand" could be properly applied. The eventual result of this was "Ivanhoe," composed by Sullivan to a libretto by Julian Sturgis and produced in 1891. ¶The result was not happy. By all accounts, "Ivanhoe" contained much good music. Incontestably, however, "Ivanhoe" contained no music that would live. In this, it illustrates the anomaly of Sullivan's entire career: the music by which he himself set the greatest store, and on which he laboured hardest, was either stillborn or died in infancy; the music he composed in a fuming fret at the limitations of Gilbert's libretti is the only music that has lived—and it has lived as "light" music never lived before or has since. The "Kenilworth Cantata" (1864), "The Light of the World" (1873), "The Martyr of Antioch" (1880), "The Golden Legend" (1886)—every one of these noble efforts is as dead as any music could possibly be. Aside from the Gilbert and Sullivan operas, the pieces of music by Sullivan of which the present-day world has any first-hand knowledge are only two: the rousing "Onward, Christian Soldiers" and the lugubrious "Lost Chord"—both composed before "Pinafore" sealed his fate. ¶But the music for these operas should be monument enough for any composer. Sullivan's supreme gift was the gift of melodic invention—without which music, whatever its pretensions, reduces itself to the status of ear noises. He scored for a small orchestra (two flutes, one oboe, two clarinets, two bassoons, two horns, two cornets, two trombones, percussion and strings) and by the standards of the present some of the instrumentation sounds thin. The traditionalism with which the D'Oyly Carte Opera Company, holders of the performing rights to the operas, carry out their presentations, accounts for the fact that no modernised orchestrations have been made—and anyone who would like to study the full scores of the operas will discover that they are jealously and secretly guarded by the holders of the performing rights and are not made available to anyone else. But Sullivan's orchestrations, if slightly dated to the modern ear, are almost invariably perfect models of deftness, taste, and ingenuity. Cecil Forsyth, in his great work Orchestration, sums up his opinion of Sullivan's gifts in instrumentation by pointing to "Were I Thy Bride" in "The Yeomen of the Guard" and urging his students to observe "not only the notes which Sullivan has written, but the many other notes he might have written and didn't." ¶Two other qualities of Sullivan's musicianship are to be noted. The first is his ability—so painfully and inexplicably rare—to express humour in music. The second—and one of the most significant qualities in the success of the operas—is his uncanny ability, while managing his melody and performing those prodigies of rhythmical skill which Gilbert's lyrics demanded of him, to provide settings for the words which were not only appropriate but which helped rather than hindered the audience's ability to hear what was being sung. One hold of Gilbert and Sullivan operas upon their early audiences lay in the joy those audiences felt that here at last was a native product in an art form which, they had come to think, could never be successfully transplanted from the Continent. Now, however, they heard English words clearly set to tunes which were also their own; they had had no such experience before, and were enchanted. ¶Probably part of Sullivan's unique ability to set Gilbert's words with such sympathy lay in his method of work. On receiving a set of Gilbert's verses, Sullivan's first studies were always directed toward the problems of rhythm; it was only after he had interpreted the words in a system of dots and dashes that he undertook to set his melodic line. Thereafter the operas grew organically. Sullivan would present roughly sketched parts to the singers and supply an approximation of the accompaniment for the piano. From these beginnings, the finished instrumentation grew. ¶Like that of all other composers, Sullivan's level of inspiration varied notably, not only from opera to opera, but often from song to song. He could be banal and tedious. One of his greatest strengths—and weaknesses—was his inexhaustible facility. Many of his loveliest effects he achieved without half trying; effort was unnecessary. Thus if the best solution of some troublesome problem escaped him, he was not apt to agonise to find it—a second or third best solution was already waiting to be set down on paper. There was never a less slovenly composer; but there have been composers who have needed a higher threshold of self-criticism than Sullivan ever felt called upon to apply to himself in the operas he wrote with Gilbert. ¶Any ranking list of the operas in terms of musical excellence means little more than an expression of personal preference. Sullivan did not become greater as the operas progressed; he became only surer. (He also became increasingly repetitive.) The emptiness of "The Grand Duke" is unanimously acknowledged. The merits of "Utopia, Limited," have never been tested by a D'Oyly Carte revival. "Thespis" is as dead as a cantata. "The Sorcerer" and "Princess Ida" are near the bottom of the list in popularity among the operas still heard. "Ruddigore" (originally titled "Ruddygore" to the shocked amazement of a people to whom the word bloody was once a prime obscenity) was a comparative failure in its first production, but when it was finally revived in 1920 it met a surprising success. For the rest, every opera has its own group of particular enthusiasts. In the United States, "The Mikado" seems to enjoy a unique esteem which, in England, is reserved to "The Gondoliers." Musically it is hard for some enthusiasts to regard "The Pirates of Penzance" as the full equal of most of its brothers. "Pinafore," perhaps because of the delirious joy with which an earlier generation regarded it, seems a trifle more faded than most.

"The Yeomen of the Guard," seldom performed in this country in the 20th century until the triumphal tour of the D'Oyly Carte players in 1934-35 (repeated in all its enthusiasm in 1936-37), is now certainly regarded as one of Sullivan's major triumphs. But a census of Sullivan's most studious admirers, whether in the United States or England, would probably reveal "Iolanthe" in first place as the finest creation of England's most distinguished musician of the 19th century. From the opening woodwind notes of the overture to the rollicking dance tune that concludes the last act, this opera never falters in the beauty and drama of its music or the perfection with which the words and action are carried forth by Sullivan's skill. Of the thrilling moment in Act I when the entrance of the Peers begins, Thomas Dunhill, a balanced and scholarly commentator on Sullivan, has written: "There are, perhaps, only two processional operatic scenes which can be said to compare with this for musical grandeur—one is in 'Aïda,' and the other is in the last act of 'Die Meistersinger.'" ¶Sullivan died of heart failure on November 22, 1900. He was buried in St. Paul's Cathedral, his funeral the occasion of national mourning. The successful operas which he composed with Gilbert have survived his own death, the death of Gilbert, the death of three successive British monarchs, and the World War. None of the profound changes in musical taste which have occurred in the four decades since his death have lessened the popularity of the works which he himself regarded so lightly by comparison with the pretentious efforts which were dead long before his time, if not before theirs. PETER IYLITCH TSCHAIKOWSKY

HALF French in his ancestry, Tschaikowsky's prenatal influences were a blend of East and West. While Westerns regard him as typically Russian, his compatriots think him less "native" than other Russian composers. Like most Slavs, he drew sustenance more from France than Germany. Brahms he thought dull; Wagner he never really understood. He loved music, he said, that came from the heart, that expressed "a deep humanity," like Grieg's. To the delicate brain and nerves of the modern man he added the long-accumulated eruptive passions of his race. He took the language made by the great Germans, and used it to express the complex pessimism of another culture. The colour of life in his music ranges from pale grey to intense black, with here and there a note of angry scarlet tearing through the mass of cloud. Almost all his work, like Tourgenieff's, lies within the one scale of emotions; but from relatively few elements he evokes an infinite variety and complexity. In his songs, for example, though melancholy is the dominant note of nine out of ten, each paints a different shade of the generic mood. ¶More interested in personal, dramatic emotion than in music of abstract beauty, he worked his way through and beyond the ordinary symphonic form, to the symphony with a human significance or the symphonic poem pure and simple. His phrases, scoring his general conceptions, are vital, emotional, intimate. Music, he held, must always interest in the first place; and so he avoided the cold displays of technical artifice which Brahms, for example, so often produced, preferring rather to repeat the old matter with variations of ornamentation. ¶His real contribution to the history of music, apart from the general beauty and expressiveness of his work, was the modification of the symphonic form in obedience to a poetic idea. He took up the suggestions bequeathed by Berlioz and Liszt, and turned them into accomplished realities. (See also page 431.)

GIUSEPPE VERDI

BY W. J. HENDERSON

VERDI has been the representative Italian opera composer of his time and his personal development in art is that of his country, which has followed his dominating influence. He began to write in the prevalent style of the old Italian school, but even in his early works, which had striking resemblances to those of Donizetti and Bellini, he showed a rude vigour not possessed by either of them. ¶This vigour came conspicuously into notice in his "Ernani," though the most familiar example of his style in this period of his development is "Rigoletto." The early works show fecundity of melodic invention, but a close adherence to the elementary dance rhythms used by the Neapolitan school. The dramatic element and the virile power of the man, however, continually pressed toward the front till in "Aida," in which the Egyptian subject lured him away from conventions into originality of colour, he entered upon a new field and established himself as a new individuality in music. He idealised the old aria, employed all the resources of modern instrumentation in the orchestral part, and sought for truthful dramatic expression as none of his predecessors had. "Aida" has been the model of the younger Italian school and its influence can be traced through the works of such writers as Mascagni, Leoncavallo, and Puccini. ¶In "Otello" Verdi left the old Italian patterns still further behind him, yet without ceasing to be Italian in style or individual in ideas. The voice parts are dominant and essentially melodious at all times, but the determination of the composer to be faithful to the spirit of the text is more manifest than ever before. The work is a monument of genius. In his "Falstaff" Verdi produced a comic opera which stands next to Mozart's "Nozze di Figaro" and Wagner's "Die Meistersinger." The freshness and spontaneity of the score, the marvellous eloquence of the orchestral details and the infinite significance of the recitative make this work one of the masterpieces of modern times. The advance of Verdi from the "drum and trumpet" operas of his youth to the highly organised, subtly significant and opulent scores of his old age, is the feature of his artistic career, and where he has led, Italy has followed. He was the master and the moulder of Italian musical thought for half a century. (See Dictionary of Musicians entry, page 448.)

RICHARD WAGNER

BY HENRY T. FINCK

WHEN Richard Wagner was living as a political refugee in Switzerland, at the age of thirty-six, he elaborated his theory of the "art-work of the future" in a long essay. Reduced to one sentence, this theory was, that music, poetry, painting, sculpture, and architecture had run their course as separate arts, and that the art-work of the future was to be a combination of them. At a later period he tried to make Beethoven responsible for this theory, so far at least as the union of poetry and music is concerned. Beethoven, he argued, wrote his first eight symphonies for instruments alone, but when he composed the Ninth, the greatest of them all, he reached a point in the last movement where the orchestra no longer sufficed for his purposes, so he called in the aid of the human voice and poetry—Schiller's "Ode to Joy." This symphony thus became "the gospel of the art-work of the future"; and beyond it, Wagner maintained, progress was possible only in the direction of the genuine music-drama; "the key to which was thus forged by Beethoven." And when the corner-stone for the Bayreuth Theatre—in which the "art-work of the future" was to be presented to the world—was laid, Wagner significantly made it the occasion for the performance of this epoch-making Ninth Symphony. ¶Undoubtedly it was a stroke of genius on the part of Wagner thus to turn the tables on his enemies—who had decried him as a heretic and a foe to music—by claiming their very idol as the sire of his new doctrine. In truth, however, it is not at all probable that Beethoven had in mind any such purpose as Wagner imputes to him. There is no reference to anything of the kind among the biographic documents, whereas, it is known, on the other hand, that Beethoven had been intending nearly all his life to set to music Schiller's "Ode to Joy." According to Czerny, he subsequently even pronounced this experiment of incorporating the Ode in his symphony a mistake (Missgriff). The voice, in truth, was never congenial to him. "Songs I do not like to write," he said to Rochlitz, in 1822, the very time when he was at work on the "Ninth Symphony." In both this work and the "Missa Solemnis," of the same period, Beethoven, moreover, uses the human voice like an instrument, and it is probable that in each case his object in employing it was not so much to secure an alliance with poetry as to increase the power of his musical forces, and to enlarge the variety of tone-colours by adding to the orchestra the human voice, alone, concerted, and in massive choral combination. ¶Wagner's musical pedigree must therefore be sought elsewhere. His ancestry might be traced back as far as Peri and the other originators of Italian opera who (strange as it may seem to us who know only the later Italian opera which Wagner reviled) represented a protest in favour of poetry against the tyranny of music in the marriage of these arts. Wagner's whole art was such a protest, and his more immediate progenitor in this respect was Gluck, who found that Italian opera had gradually become ridiculous through the "vanity of singers and the unwise compliance of composers"; and who, therefore, endeavoured to reduce operatic music to its proper function; that of seconding the poetry and deepening the feeling it arouses. Gluck's idea that the relation of poetry to music was much the same as that of a sketch to the colour, "which animates their figures without altering their outlines" was cordially endorsed and adopted by Wagner. ¶The next step in the evolution of Wagnerism is represented by Weber, his indebtedness to whom Wagner frankly acknowledged in several places. He declared that the last scenes in Weber's "Euryanthe" realised the ideal of musico-dramatic art, as here the orchestra "interpenetrates the recitatives as the blood does the veins of the body." What Weber himself wrote about this opera: "'Euryanthe' is a purely dramatic work, which depends for its success solely on the co-operation of the sister arts, and is certain to lose its effect if deprived of their assistance," shows that his ideal was the same as Wagner's. Had he lived longer, and had he possessed Wagner's pugnacity and iron will, he might have been the man to annihilate the old-fashioned opera and triumphantly establish the modern music-drama. He even made use of leading motives [vide D. D.]. His early opera "Abu Hassan" has a melody which is afterwards repeated in a reminiscent way. The "Freyschütz" has eleven recurring melodies, and "Euryanthe" has eight. ¶While the germs and main principles of Wagnerism may thus be found in Peri, Monteverde, Gluck, and Weber, it remained for Wagner's genius to develop and apply them. Gluck's operas were still far from being perfect works of art. To cite Wagner's own words: "In Gluck's operas we find the aria, the recitative, the ballet still placed side by side without any connection"; while opera in general remained after him, as before, a mere variety show, with here a pretty tune, there a graceful skip of a dancer or a brilliant feat of vocalisation, here a dazzling scenic effect, there a volcanic outburst of the orchestra, and the whole without artistic coherence. If a painter put on a canvas a number of human figures and diverse objects totally unrelated to each other, no one would call it a work of art, however well done each figure might be in itself. The opera before Wagner was such a canvas. He was the first who made a genuine picture of it—an art-work organically united in all its parts. He did this by means of the leading motives—the typical melodies and characteristic harmonies which accompany each of the dramatis personæ throughout the score, just as their social and moral character accompanies them, with such modifications as the situation calls for. Weber had used leading motives as we have seen, but only in an elementary way. It remained for Wagner to make them the very framework of the music-drama. He thus taught music to speak a definite language, so that we can almost tell by listening to the orchestra alone what is going on on the stage. ¶His whole aim and desire was to make the drama impressive and intelligible. For this reason he discarded the tuneful style of vocalism in vogue in Italian opera and developed a new vocal style—a sort of melodious declamation or "speech-song." This led to the ridiculous accusation that there was "no melody" in his operas, whereas the orchestral score usually bubbles over with melodies—often two or more at a time. After the singers had begun to master the new vocal style, it was found, moreover, that an artist like Lilli Lehmann or Jean de Reszké could make this speech-song sound smooth, and melodious, too—as smooth and melodious as the bel canto of Rossini and Mozart. And after the singers had learned how to act, and to enunciate distinctly, opera-goers learned that Wagner had written stage-works which were quite as impressive poetically as they were musically. He had an immense advantage over all other composers in being able to write his own poems. His best ten operas—"The Flying Dutchman," "Tannhäuser," "Lohengrin," "Rheingold," "Walküre," "Siegfried," "Götterdämmerung," "Tristan," "Meistersinger," and "Parsifal"—apart from the music, rank among the best plays ever written in Germany; though to be sure they must not be judged apart from the music any more than the music must be judged apart from the poems. The ludicrous opinions on these works formerly expressed by so many professional musicians and critics were due chiefly to the fact that they did not bear this in mind, though Wagner protested on every possible occasion that he must not be judged from the standpoint of the separate arts, but of the combined arts. The greatest defects in the present-day performances of his operas is owing to this, that few stage-managers have yet learned that he expects them to be artistic, too, familiar with every detail of the work, so that they can show how every incident on the stage is mirrored and emphasised in the orchestral score. There is much delightful pantomimic music in these operas, the meaning of which is lost if the stage-manager is a bungler, and the singers poor actors. ¶With all these reforms and innovations, Wagner never could have become the most commanding figure in the modern music-world had he not been endowed at the same time with the faculty for creating an extraordinary abundance of ideas, melodic and harmonic. Wilhelm Tappert has truly observed that there is more melody in Wagner's "Meistersinger" than in all the operas of the melodious Mozart. In the field of harmony and modulation Wagner was an innovator of unprecedented originality. There can be no tragic expression without discord, and he was the greatest of all masters of discord—the musical tragedian par excellence. In orchestration, too—the art of clothing his ideas in beautiful garbs of various colours—he was without a rival. ¶As Schubert influenced all song-writers after him, Chopin all the pianoforte-composers, and Beethoven all the symphonists, so Wagner has cast his spell on every writer for the stage. "Wagner is the oxygen, the atmosphere which modern opera breathes," writes Ferdinand Pföhl; and he hardly exaggerates when he adds that "modern opera, apart from Wagner's art, is an empty word, a phantom. It does not exist." The minor composers of all countries have been indulging for more than half a century in a very bacchanal of plagiarism at his expense, while even the greatest of masters—Dvořák, Grieg, Saint-Saëns, Richard Strauss—have honestly profited by his example in various branches of music. Rubinstein committed suicide by trying to swim against the current. The German school of opera, the French, and even the Italian have followed Wagner in abandoning colorature song and elaborate arias, in giving greater coherence to their scores, and in showing a decent regard for their texts. In these respects even Verdi, greatest of the Italians, in his last period, paid homage to Wagner's genius.

WAGNER THE MONSTER*

BY DEEMS TAYLOR

HE WAS AN UNDERSIZED little man, with a head too big for his body—a sickly little man. His nerves were bad. He had skin trouble. It was agony for him to wear anything next to his skin coarser than silk. And he had delusions of grandeur. ¶He was a monster of conceit. Never for one minute did he look at the world or at people except in relation to himself. He was only the most important person in the world, to himself; in his own eyes he was the only person who existed. He believed himself to be one of the greatest dramatists in the world, one of the greatest thinkers, and one of the greatest composers. To hear him talk, he was Shakespeare, and Beethoven, and Plato rolled into one. And you would have had no difficulty in hearing him talk. He was one of the most exhausting conversationalists that ever lived. An evening with him was an evening spent in listening to a monologue. Sometimes he was brilliant; sometimes he was maddeningly tiresome. But whether he was being brilliant or dull, he had one sole topic of conversation: himself. What he thought and what he did. ¶He had a mania for being in the right. The slightest hint of disagreement, from anyone, on the most trivial point, was enough to set him off on a harangue that might last for hours, in which he proved himself right in so many ways, and with such exhausting volubility, that in the end his hearer, stunned and deafened, would agree with him, for the sake of peace. ¶It never occurred to him that he and his doings were not of the most intense and fascinating interest to anyone with whom he came in contact. He had theories about almost any subject under the sun, including vegetarianism, the drama, politics, and music; and in support of these theories he wrote pamphlets, letters, books . . . thousands upon thousands of words, hundreds and hundreds of pages. He not only wrote these things, and published them—usually at somebody else's expense—but he would sit and read them aloud, for hours, to his friends and his family. ¶He wrote operas; and no sooner did he have the synopsis of a story, but he would invite—or rather summon—a crowd of his friends to his house and read it aloud to them. Not for criticism. For applause. When the complete poem was written, the friends had to come again, and hear that read aloud. Then he would publish the poem, sometimes years before the music that went with it was written. He played the piano like a composer, in the worst sense of what that implies, and he would sit down at the piano before parties that included some of the finest pianists of his time, and play for them, by the hour, his own music, needless to say. He had a composer's voice. And he would invite eminent vocalists to his house, and sing them his operas, taking all the parts. ¶He had the emotional stability of a six-year-old child. When he felt out of sorts, he would rave and stamp, or sink into suicidal gloom and talk darkly of going to the East to end his days as a Buddhist monk. Ten minutes later, when something pleased him, he would rush out of doors and run around the garden, or jump up and down on the sofa, or stand on his head. He could be grief-stricken over the death of a pet dog, and he could be callous and heartless to a degree that would have made a Roman emperor shudder. ¶He was almost innocent of any sense of responsibility. Not only did he seem incapable of supporting himself, but it never occurred to him that he was under any obligation to do so. He was convinced that the world owed him a living. In support of this belief, he borrowed money from everybody who was good for a loan—men, women, friends or strangers. He wrote begging letters by the score, sometimes grovelling without shame, at others loftily offering his intended benefactor the privilege of contributing to his support, and being mortally offended if the recipient declined the honour. I have found no record of his ever paying or repaying money to anyone who did not have a legal claim upon it. ¶What money he could lay his hands on he spent like an Indian rajah. The mere prospect of a performance of one of his operas was enough to set him to running up bills amounting to ten times the amount of his prospective royalties. On an income that would reduce a more scrupulous man to doing his own laundry, he would keep two servants. Without enough money in his pocket to pay his rent, he would have the walls and ceiling of his study lined with pink silk. No one will ever know—certainly he never knew—how much money he owed. We do know that his greatest benefactor gave him $6,000 to pay the most pressing of his debts in one city, and a year later had to give him $16,000 to enable him to live in another city without being thrown into jail for debt. ¶He was equally unscrupulous in other ways. An endless procession of women marches through his life. His first wife spent twenty years enduring and forgiving his infidelities. His second wife had been the wife of his most devoted friend and admirer, from whom he stole her. And even while he was trying to persuade her to leave her first husband he was writing to a friend to enquire whether he could suggest some wealthy woman—any wealthy woman—whom he could marry for her money. ¶He was completely selfish in his other personal relationships. His liking for his friends was measured solely by the completeness of their devotion to him, or by their usefulness to him, whether financial or artistic. The minute they failed him—even by so much as refusing a dinner invitation—or began to lessen in usefulness, he cast them off without a second thought. At the end of his life he had exactly one friend whom he had known even in middle age. ¶He had a genius for making enemies. He would insult a man who disagreed with him about the weather. He would pull endless wires in order to meet some man who admired his work, and was able and anxious to be of use to him—and would proceed to make a mortal enemy of him with some idiotic and wholly uncalled-for exhibition of arrogance and bad manners. A character in one of his operas was a caricature of one of the most powerful music critics of his day. Not content with burlesquing him, he invited the critic to his house and read him the libretto aloud in front of his friends. ¶The name of this monster was Richard Wagner. Everything that I have said about him you can find on record—in newspapers, in police reports, in the testimony of people who knew him, in his own letters, between the lines of his autobiography. And the curious thing about this record is that it doesn't matter in the least. ¶Because this undersized, sickly, disagreeable, fascinating little man was right all the time. The joke was on us. He was one of the world's great dramatists; he was a great thinker; he was one of the most stupendous musical geniuses that, up to now, the world has ever seen. The world did owe him a living. People couldn't know those things at the time, I suppose; and yet to us, who know his music, it does seem as though they should have known. What if he did talk about himself all the time? If he had talked about himself twenty-four hours every day for the span of his life he would not have uttered half the number of words that other men have spoken and written about him since his death. ¶When you consider what he wrote—thirteen operas and music dramas, eleven of them still holding the stage, eight of them unquestionably worth ranking among the world's great musico-dramatic masterpieces—when you listen to what he wrote, the debts and heartaches that people had to endure from him don't seem much of a price. Eduard Hanslick, the critic whom he caricatured in "Die Meistersinger" and who hated him ever after, now lives only because he was caricatured in "Die Meistersinger." The women whose hearts he broke are long since dead; and the man who could never love anyone but himself has made them deathless atonement, I think, with "Tristan und Isolde." Think of the luxury with which for a time, at least, fate rewarded Napoleon, the man who ruined France and looted Europe; and then perhaps you will agree that a few thousand dollars' worth of debts were not too heavy a price to pay for the "Ring" trilogy. ¶What if he was faithless to his friends and to his wives? He had one mistress to whom he was faithful to the day of his death: Music. Not for a single moment did he ever compromise with what he believed, with what he dreamed. There is not a line of his music that could have been conceived by a little mind. Even when he is dull, or downright bad, he is dull in the grand manner. There is greatness about his worst mistakes. Listening to his music, one does not forgive him for what he may or may not have been. It is not a matter of forgiveness. It is a matter of being dumb with wonder that his poor brain and body didn't burst under the torment of the demon of creative energy that lived inside him, struggling, clawing, scratching to be released; tearing, shrieking at him to write the music that was in him. The miracle is that what he did in the little space of seventy years could have been done at all, even by a great genius. Is it any wonder that he had no time to be a man? (See also page 455.)

VAUGHAN WILLIAMS

BY RICHARD ANTHONY LEONARD

VAUGHAN WILLIAMS is one of the foremost of that little group of valiant Englishmen who are making the music of their native land bloom again after a barrenness of more than two hundred years. The Germans (and before them the Italians) have dominated the art of music for so long that we are apt to forget the extraordinary efflorescence of musical genius which England produced in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries. Byrd, Morley and Tallis, Wilbye, Weelkes, Gibbons and Henry Purcell composed some of the finest music of their time, and were worthy of mention even with the incomparable Palestrina. But after the death of Purcell, in 1695, English music suffered a serious decline. Later the influence of Händel was devastating, from the standpoint of its effect upon native English genius, for the German set up an ideal which made English composers servile imitators of the Teutonic art for almost two centuries. ¶The present blooming of English music had its origins, of course, in the spectacular rise of Russian music in the nineteenth century and the ensuing spread of nationalism. The famous Five (Moussorgsky, Balakireff, Borodin, Cui, and Rimsky-Korsakoff) revolted against the Germanic tradition and tapped instead as their source of inspiration the marvellously colourful, half-barbaric folk-songs of their native land, and the equally characteristic music of the Russian church. For their literary bases they went to the folk-lore and to the history of Russia. Their immense success created a wave of nationalistic feeling that swept every country in Europe. England was no exception. The renaissance of the art of music in England has been one of the most striking developments in twentieth-century music. Men like Bax and Delius, Holst and Vaughan Williams have not wrought with the lasting magnificence of the greater Russians, but they have wrought ably and with important implications for the future. ¶Without attempting any comparative estimate of the work of these Englishmen, it may be said that the one whose contributions have been most typically English is probably Vaughan Williams. This is true even though a great part of his work is clearly impressionistic, owing an immense debt of gratitude to Claude Debussy. His "London Symphony," for example, is a panorama of the vast English macrocosm, with many of its typically British aspects; but musically it speaks the impressionistic language of the Frenchman. Impressionism, however, is simply a technique, and when we dig deeper into the music of Vaughan Williams we come upon qualities which only an Englishman could have produced. First of all we find music that is nurtured in the rich soil of English folk-music. All his life Vaughan Williams has collected and studied and used English folk-tunes. Not only is much of his work based directly upon this native material, but many of his original themes are so closely patterned after this original that it is often difficult to tell the old from the new. ¶It is important to note that in English folk-music Vaughan Williams did not have at hand material as brilliantly effective as the Russians had. The popular melodies which the Five and their successors used were heavy with a rich and sensuous beauty; they flashed across the music of nineteenth-century Europe with the startling splendour of the aurora borealis across the night sky. Their characteristic colour and form are instantly evident whenever they are used by modern Russian composers. English folk-music, on the other hand, has few such readily effective attributes. It is a refined and delicately modelled product of a sober people. Vaughan Williams has used it as only an Englishman could—with sobriety and good taste, with moderation and unfailing rectitude. He has used, too, with equal inspiration, the patterns left by his great English predecessors, the Elizabethans who first made English music glorious. The most noted example of his devotion to their art is his "Fantasia on a Theme by Thomas Tallis"—an exquisite paraphrase in terms of the modern string orchestra of the work of the great sixteenth-century contrapuntist. ¶After his interest in folk-music the strongest impulse in Vaughan Williams' creative life has come from his love of nature, particularly of the quiet, incomparably beautiful English countryside. Here again is a quality typical of the English, but one too subtle to be translated easily into terms of music. Nevertheless, it has been the inspiration for some of Vaughan Williams' finest scores, including "The Lark Ascending," for violin and orchestra; "On Wenlock Edge," a song cycle based on "A Shropshire Lad"; his first symphony, called "A Sea Symphony," in which soprano, barytone, and chorus intone Walt Whitman's rhapsodic invocation to the sea; and above all his "Pastoral Symphony"—probably the greatest orchestral work produced in modern England, and certainly this composer's masterpiece. There is nothing photographic about this last work, despite its title; no imitations in music of the sounds of nature. Instead it presents a serene and quiet contemplation, a mood of gentle reverie, of melancholy, and yet a thrilling sense of spaciousness and light. Every listener may find in this music his own images of meadow and plain, of winding river, and the wide, wind-swept sky. Or he may, if he choose, find none of these; but only the intensely personal recital of the composer's inmost confidences, told with a reticence and a delicate charm that has seldom been equalled in modern music. A PRONOUNCING & DEFINING DICTIONARY OF MUSICAL TERMS, INSTRUMENTS, &c.

A (G. ä; F. I. & Sp. lä.). 1. A musical pitch (435 vibrations per second, according to the standard adopted in France 1879 and at Vienna 1887, and called diapason normal). 2. Any octave of this pitch. 3. This tone designated in Absolute Pitch (q.v.) as a' is invariable on the oboe, and is accordingly used as the tone to which the whole orchestra is attuned. It is hence called the normal tone. 4. The major key with three sharps. 5. The minor key relative to C major.

a, a or ab, L., I., F. By, from, for, to, at, in, etc.¹

ab (äp), G. "Off." Used of stops.

ab'acus harmon'icus, L. 1. A table of notes. 2. The arrangement of the keys and pedals of an instrument.

abanera (ä-bä-nä'-rä), Sp. Vide HA-BANERA.

abandon (ä-bän-dôn), F. Lack of all restraint in emotion.

abbadare (äb-bä-dä'-rë), I. To take care.

abbandonar'si, abbandonatamen'te, abbando'ne, abbando'no, I. With abandon.

abbassamen'to, I. Lowering. A. di mano, (a) down-beat; (b) the carrying of one hand below the other in piano playing. A. di voce (vö-chë), I. Lowering of the voice. Diminution.

abbatimen'to, I. Down-beat.

abbellare (äb-bel-lä'-rë), I. To ornament. abbelitura(e) (too'-rä), abellimen'to(i). Embellishment(s).

abbetont (äp'-bä-tönt), G. With final emphasis.

a-b-c-d-i(e)ren (ä-bä-tsä-dë'rën), G. To sing the notes by their letter names.

Abend (ä'-bënt), G. Evening. -glocke. Curfew. -lied (lët). Even song. -musik (moo-zëk'). Evening music.

¹Phrases beginning with these and other prepositions will be found under their principal words.

abenteuerlich (ä'-bën-toi-ër-lÿkh), G. Venturesome.

ab'fallen, G. To deteriorate. -gebrochen (äp'-gë-brökh-ën). Interrupted. Vide RADENCE. Abgesang (äp'-gë-zängk). Refrain. It followed the two Stollen in the songs of the Meistersänger. -gestossen (äp'-gë-shtôs-sën). Staccato. -gleiten (äp'-glî-tën). To slide the finger from a black key to the next white key. Abkürzung (äp'-kür-tsoongk). Abbreviation. -leiten (äp'-li-tën). To derive from. -lösen (äp'-lä-zën). To change fingers on a sustained tone. -nehmend (äp'-nä-mënt). Diminuendo.

abrégés (äb-rä-zhâ), F. Trackers.

abreichen (äp'-rî-khën), G. On the violin, to extend the little, or draw back the first, finger.

Abreissung (äp'-ris-soongk), G. Sudden pause.

abrup'tio, L. An abrupt halt.

Absatz (äp'-zäts), G. 1. Cadence. 2. A phrase.

Abschnitt (äp'-shnÿt), G. Section.

abschwellen (äp'-schvël-len), G. Diminuendo.

absetzen (äp'-zët-zën), G. To strike two keys successively with the same finger.

absolute. Used of music that is self-derived and complete in its own form, meaning, and beauty, as opposed to operatic or programme music.

abstammen (äp'-shtäm-men), G. To be derived from.

Abstand (äp'-shtänt), G. Interval.

ab'stossen, G. To play staccato. Ab'stosszeichen (tsä-khën). Staccato mark(s).

Abstrak'ten, G. Trackers.

Abstufung (äp'-shtoo-foongk), G. Shading.

abtönen (äp'-tä-nën), G. To err from the key.

ab(h)ub (ä'-boob). A Hebrew horn.

abun'dans, L. Augmented.

abwechselnd (äp'-vëkhs-ëlnt), G. Alternating.

Abweichung (äp'-vikh-oongk), G. A variant.

Abyssinian flute. A beak flute.

Abzug (äp'-tsookh). 1. Lifting of a finger or a bow. 2. The sliding of the finger from one key to the next.

académie spirituelle (äk-äd-ä-mē spir-ët-wël), F. A sacred concert.

acathis'tus, Gr. Ancient Greek Church hymn in honour of the Virgin.

accademia (ak-käd-ä-mē'-ä), I. 1. An Academy. 2. A concert.

accarezzevole (äk-kä-réd-zä'-vö-lë), I. Caressing. accarezzevolmen'te. Pleadingly.

accel., acceldo. Abbr. of accelerando.

accelerando (ät-chä-lë-rän'-dö), I. Accelerating (the velocity). acceleratenen'te. Swiftly. accelerato (rä'-tö). Swift.

accent (in F., äk-sän). accento (ät-chën'-to), I. 1. Emphasis, force, on a tone, a chord, a beat. 2. An accent mark (q.v.). The first beat of every measure receives a primary accent. In 4-4 time, the third beat receives a lighter or secondary or sub-accent. 3. In 6-8 or 6-4 time the fourth beat takes a secondary accent. In 9-8 time the fourth beat has a secondary a., and the seventh a tertiary a. still lighter. The regular skeleton accent of the standard measure is called the grammatical, metrical, natural or regular a.; this is modified by the rhythmical and the aesthetic, emotional, pathetic, poetical or rhetorical accent.

accent-mark. One of the numerous signs of stress; as > sforzando or < (strictly tenuto); 'or, used (a) to indicate pitch (q.v.) as c' and C' = *c*² and *C*₂; (b) as an abbreviation of foot (q.v.) as 8' = 8-foot.

accent'or. Leader of a chorus.

accentuare (too-ä'-rë), I. accentui(e)-ren (ak-tsën-too-ë'-rën), G. To accent. To accentuate. accentua'to. With marked accent.

accentuation. The act or art of properly distributing emphasis.

accen'tus, L. Portion(s) of the ritual song of the Church, chanted by the priest at the altar; in contradistinction to the Concentus, sung by the assistants or choir. A. ecclesiastici, L. Melodic formulae used in the Church in reciting, the collects, etc. They correspond with the comma, semicolon, interrogation, etc., of ordinary writing, and are of seven kinds, called immutab'ilis, monotone; me'dius, a minor third; grav'is, a fifth; acu'tus, sol mi mi sol; modera'tus, rising a second and returning; interrogati'vus, falling a second and returning; final'is, sol la sol fa mi re—thus closing in the Dorian key.

Accessis'ten, G. Unpaid choristers.

accessory notes. The subordinate notes of an ornament. accessory tones. Overtones.

acciaccato (ät-chä-kä'-tö), I. Violent.

Acciacatur (ät-tsi-äk-kä-toor'), G. The doubling of the 6-4 chord on the dominant, the right hand alone resolving it.

acciaccatura (ät-chäk-kä-too'-rä), I. A short appoggiatura, usually a grace-note, struck at the same time with its principal, but instantly released.

accidentals, E. accidenti (ät-tshī-dën'-të), I. accidents (äk-sī-dän), F. Sharps, flats, and naturals, foreign to the key-signature.

acolade (äk-kö-läd), F. Brace.

accompagnamento (äk-kom-pän-ya-mën'-to), I. Accompaniment; figured bass. accompagnare (yä'-rë). To accompany. accompagnato (yä'-tö). Accompanied.

accommodare (dä'-rë), I. To tune.

accompagner (äk-köm-pän-yä), F. To accompany. accompagné (äk-köm-pän-yä). Accompanied. accompagnement (äk-köm-pän-yü-män). Accompaniment.

accompaniment. A part or parts added to other principal parts. a. ad libitum. Optional accompaniment. a. obbligato. Accompaniment essential. accompanist. One who plays accompaniments.

accoppiato (äk-köp-pi-ä'-tö), I. Tied.

accord, E. (in F., äk-kör), I. Consonance. 2. A chord; à l'ouvert, on the open strings; natural, a fundamental chord; parfait, a triad; renversé, inverted; de sixte ajoutée, chord of the added sixth. Vide ALTERED.

accordant (äk-kör-dän), F. In concord. accorder (äk-kör-dä). To tune. accordeur (dür). 1. A tuner.

2. a set of 12 tuning forks giving the tempered scale. 3. Monochord. accorderoir (äk-kör-dwär). A tuning-key, hammer, or cone.

accordamen'to, accordanza (dän'-tsä), I. Consonance.

- accor'dance, accor'dature, E. accordatura (too'rā), I. The system of tuning the strings of an instrument; thus, the a. of a violin is g-d-a-e.
- accordare (dā-rē), I. To tune. accordan'do. Tuning; in tune.
- accor'deon. A free-reed instr. inv. by Damian of Vienna, 1829. The tone is produced by a double set of bellows acting upon metallic tongues. The right hand presses buttons or keys giving an incomplete chromatic scale; the left hand has a few bass tones.
- accor'do, I. 1. A chord. 2. An old Italian instrument of twelve or more strings.
- accoupler (āk-koo-plā), F. To couple. accouplez (āk-koo-plā). "Draw the coupler."
- accrescendo (ak-krēs-shēn'-do), I. Crescen'do. accrescimento (ac-crā-shē-mēn'-tō). Augmentation as of a fugal theme. punto d'a., the dot placed after a note to prolong it. acresciuto (shoo'-tō), I. Augmented.
- acetal'ulum, L. An ancient instr. of percussion. Earthen vessels beaten as drums or clashed as cymbals.
- achromatic. Lacking accidentals and modulations.

ca'dence, E. (in F. kă-däns), ca'-dens, L., cadenza (kă-dēn-tsä), I., Kadenz (kă-dēnts'), G. 1. Literally "a fall," hence, the subsidence of a melody or harmony to a point of rest; thence any concluding strain, rising or falling. Harmonic cadences are of the following sorts: (a) When the chord of the dominant is followed by the chord of the tonic, with the roots of both chords in the bass and the root of the second chord doubled in the highest voice, it is called a perfect authentic cadence; when the first chord has other than the root in the bass, or when the highest voice does not take the tonic in the last chord (takes the third for instance), this cadence is called an imperfect authentic cadence. Other names for the authentic cadence are, whole, perfect, full or complete cadence; cadence parfaite (pär-fët), F. voll'kommene, or eigentliche (i'-khënt-lîkh-ë) Kadenz, G. (b) When the cadence is formed by a subdominant chord followed with a tonic, the cadence is called plagal (popularly church or amen cadence); cadence plagale (plä-gäl), F.; Plagal'kadenz, G. (c) When a subdominant chord is followed by a dominant and a tonic, it is called a mixed cadence. (d) When the mediant is prominent the c. is called a medial cadence. (e) When the tonic or some other chord is followed by the dominant the cadence is called a half-cadence, semi-cadence, imperfect cadence, half-close; c. imparfaite (än-pär-fët) or c. sur la dominante or c. irrégulière (ër-räg-ül-yär), F.; unvollkommene or Mittel Kadenz, G. (f) When the chord of the dominant apparently preparing a close, is followed by other than the tonic harmony the progression is called a deceptive, avoided, broken, interrupted, irregular or surprise cadence; cadence évitée (ä-vî-tä) or interrompue (än-tër-rôn-pü), or rompue, F.; cadenza d'ingann'o, or c. sfuggita (sfood-jë-tä) or fin'ta, I.; Trug'kadenz or -schluss, or ab'gebrochene K., G. (g) When various modulations are introduced between the dominant and its tonic, the cadence is said to be suspended; or sospesa (sôs-pä-zä), I. (h) When any dissonant harmony is followed by a consonance the French call this a cadence pleine (plën). (i) A cadence of any kind in which the chords have their roots in the bass is called a radical cadence. 2. When the cadence is highly ornate it is called floritur'a or florita (fë-ô-rë'-tä). So the word cadenza has in English and Italian, and the word Kadenz in German, a wide use for designating the florid passage preceding the actual cadence. This may be vocal or instrumental, may go up as well as down, and may be written out by the composer or some other musician or left to the skill of the performer. This cadenza usually follows a sustained chord in the second inversion (a 6-4 chord) with a fermata or hold-mark over it (in F. pointe d'orgue). The Germans accordingly call this an auf'gehaltene Kadenz, the F. call it a pointe d'orgue. 3. The French use cadence of a brief trilling ornament as c. brillante, or c. perlée; c. pleine is a trill. 4. Cadence is used of rhythm and velocity also as the "cadence" of double-time in a military sense, is 180 steps to the minute.

ca'dent. An old ornament like a short anticipation.

The most rigid form of imitation, a subject (antecedent) being followed accurately by an answer (consequent); once the playground of musical ingenuity, all forms of complication being indulged in. A canon written out completely was full or aper'to. Often only the antecedent (or canon) was written out, the consequent (now called fuga or consequenza) being left to the performer's skill; this was called close or chiuso (kī-ōo'-zo). If the entrances of the other parts were indicated by cabalistic signs, it was a riddle-canon (Räthsel-Kanon), or enigmatical or enigmatico. Canons were named by the interval between answer and antecedent and by the general treatment as in Imitation (q.v.).

- chant. 1. Originally a song, and still so meant in the French word (vide below), since the Gregorian time used of vocal music marked by the recitation of many syllables on one tone, and employed for prose texts such as the Canticles and Psalms. There are two sorts of chant, the Gregorian and the Anglican. (a) The Gregorian is a short tune to be repeated in successive sections of prose; it has 8 tones and is in four parts; the intonation (or inchoatio) or opening notes; the first reciting note (or dominant); the mediation; the second reciting note (or dominant); the termination (ending or cadence). (b) The Anglican omits the intonation and differs in the rhythm and mode but has the same monotone recitation with modulations in the middle (mediation) and end (termination). The Anglican has two parts of 3 and 4 measures, 7 in all; this is the single chant, there are also double, triple, and quadruple forms of proportionate length. In chanting, the fitting of the unequal phrases to the music is called pointing, and consists of reciting them strictly within the duration of the notes except those of the 1st and 4th measures which are enlarged to fit the words. Words to be sung to the cadence are cut off from those to be sung to the reciting-note, by a vertical line called the cadence-mark. 2. Any recitation of chant-like character. 3. A tone. 4. A cantus firmus. 5. Vide PLAIN-CHANT. 6. Vide CHANGEABLE. 7. Free-chant. A form in which the hemistichs consist of only 2 measures. 8. Roman Chant-Gregorian. 9. Phrygian chant. chapel. Musicians in the retinue of a great personage.
chapelle (shā-pēl), F. Cappella.
characteristic. Strongly individual in character, or mood, used of a composition (as Charakterstück, G.). c. note or tone. The leading-tone or any tone peculiar to a key. c. chord. The principal chord. Charakterstimme, G. A solo-stop.
charivari (shā-rī-vā'-rī), F. Vide SHIVAREE. chasse (shās), F. The hunt. à la c. In hunting style.
chatsotheroth. A Hebrew trumpet.
che (kā), I. Than, that, which.
che chi (kā-kē). One of the eight species of Chinese music.
chef (shēf), F. Leader, chief. chef-d'attaque (dāt-tāk). 1. The leader, or first violin. 2. Leader of a chorus.
chef-d'oeuvre (shā-düvr). Master-piece. chef-d'orchestre (shēf-dōr-kēstr). The leader. ch. du chant. Leader of an opera chorus.
cheipour. A Persian trumpet.
chel'idonizing. Singing a spring or "swallow song."
chel'ys. 1. Vide LYRE. 2. Old name for viol.
cheng (chēng). A Chinese mouth-organ, a gourd with many free reeds; it suggested the invention of the harmonium.
cheng chi (chēng-chē). One of the eight species of Chinese music.
cherub'ical hymn. The Prisagion.
chest of viols. A group or set of viols, two basses, two tenors, and two trebles.
chest tone, chest voice. The lowest register of the voice.
chevalet (shēv-ā-lā), F. Bridge.
cheville (shē-vē'-yē), F. Peg.
chevroter (shēv-rō-tā), F. To bleat like a goat, hence, chevrotement (shē-vrōt-mōn). A tremor or shake in singing.
chiarenta'na, I. An Italian country dance.
chiarina (kē-ā-rē'-nā), I. A clarion.
chiaro (kē-ā'-rō), I. Clear, pure. chiaramen'te. Brightly, purely. chiarrezza (rēd'-zā). Clearness. di c. Clearly.
chiave (kē-ā'-vē), I. 1. A clef. 2. Key. 3. Tuning-key. 4. A failure. 5. c. maestro. The fundamental key or note.
chiasse (vēt'-tē), I. pl. Transposing clefs of the 16th century; of which the high c. indicated that its line was to be read a third higher, the low c., a third lower. Thus the C clef might indicate e or e_b; or a, or a_b. chickera (kē'-kē-rā) or chikarah. A Hindu bow instrument.
chiesa (kē-ā'-zā), I. A church. da c. For the church, or in sacred style, as sonata or concerto da chiesa.
chiffre (shifr), F. A figure in thorough bass. basse chiffree (shif-frā). Figured bass.
chifonie (shē-fō-nē'), F. Old name for hurdy-gurdy.
chime. A set of bells tuned to a scale. chime-barrel. Portion of the mechanism for ringing a chime.
chimney. A tube in the cap of a stopped pipe.
Chinese flute. Bamboo flute.
Chinese hat. Vide CHAPEAU.

Chinese scale. Five notes without semitones; the music is written on five perpendicular lines, the pitch is indicated by distinctive names.

chinnor, chinor. Vide KINOR.

chirimia (chē-rē-mē'ä), S.p. The oboe; clarion.

chirogym'nast. A mechanical contrivance for exercising the fingers.

chi-roplast (ki'rō). A device of gloves and bars, inv. 1814 by Logier, to keep the hands and fingers of piano-players in the right position.

chitarra (kē-tär'-rā), I. 1. A guitar, a cithara. c. coll' arco. A violin with guitar-shaped body. chitarris'ta. One who plays on the guitar. chitarrina (rē'-nā). Small Neapolitan guitar. chitarro'ne. A double guitar.

chiterna (kē-tēr'-nā), I. Quinterna.

chiuso (kē-oo'-zō), I. Closed. Vide CANON and BOCCA. chiuden'do. Closing.

Chladni's figures. Vide NODAL FIGURES.

choeur (kür), F. Choir, chorus. à grand c. For full chorus.

choice note. An alternative note.

choir. 1. A body of singers usually in a church. 2. Their place in the church. 3. A subdivision of a chorus or orchestra. c. organ. Vide ORGAN. grand c. The combination of all the reed-stops.

Chor (kór), G. Same as Choir 1, 2, 3; also on the piano, or organ, a unison, i. e., all the strings or pipes belonging to one digital or pipe; hence a piano with 3 strings to each tone is drei-chörig.

chora'gus, chore'gus (kō). The donor of a choral or dramatic work. At Oxford the director of Church music.

cho'ral. Pertaining to a choir or chorus. choral service. A service in which the entire liturgy is intoned or chanted.

cho'rale, Choral (kō-räl'), G. 1. Choral psalm or hymn. 2. Early German-Protestant hymn.

chora'leon. Vide ÆOLOMELODICON.

choraliter (kō-räl'-l-tēr), choralmässig (mēs-sikh), G. In choral style.

Choramt (kór'-ämt), G. Choral service.

choraul'es. A Greek flutist.

chord. 1. A string. 2. Vide VOCAL C. 3. A combination of three or more tones, whether pleasant or discordant.

The chords which are the building-material of all our music are made up of thirds laid brick-wise one upon another. A single third is not counted a chord, two thirds (for instance the two intervals, g-b-d) make up a triad; another third (d to f) makes a chord, called a seventh (g-b-d-f) because the interval (q.v.) from g to f is a seventh; adding another third gives a chord of the ninth or a ninth chord (g-b-d-f-a), two other additions give the chords of the eleventh and thirteenth (g-b-d-f-a-c-e) (these last are usually cacophonous, and their existence as special chords is denied by some theorists). To add another third brings us back, on the tempered scale, to g, from which the chord grew and which is known as the fundamental or root of the chord.

Chords are distinguished in mode, as major or minor, from the majority or minority of their intervals, a minor triad differing from a major in having a minor third, the fifth being perfect in both cases. When the chord has been constructed as above (g-b-d-f) it is said to be in the first or root or fundamental or perfect position; it may re-appear with any of its notes as the lowest (though g always remains the root). When the 3d (b) is in the bass, it is said to be in the 2d position; when the fifth (d), it is in its 3d position. With any of its notes other than the root in the bass the chord is said to be inverted. The names of these inversions have been cumbrously taken from the intervals between the lowest note and the others, no interval being stated in terms of over an octave, the greatest interval being named first, and some of the intervals being unmentioned, especially those of doubled notes: thus the intervals in that inversion of a seventh chord in which the seventh is in the bass might be, counting upward, 11 (-4), 16 (-2), 20 (-6), but it would be called, for short, a 4-2 chord, or chord of the second and fourth.

A line or dash through any Arabic numeral as ♯ means that the note it represents is sharpened; it may be also preceded by a natural or flat. A sharp or flat standing over a bass note means that the third of the chord is to be sharpened or flattened;

In the following table the names of all the inversions are given. In thoroughbass these inversions are indicated by Arabic numerals above the bass notes.

A triad in the root or fundamental position is marked—^{5 8}3 or ³3 or 5.

A triad in the 1st inversion is called a chord of the 6th and marked ³6.

A triad in the 2d inversion is called a chord of the 4th and 6th or a six-four chord and marked ⁶4.

A 7th chord in the root or fundamental position is marked ⁷7 or ⁵5.

A 7th chord in the 1st inversion is called a chord of the 5th and 6th or a six-five chord, and marked ^{6 6}5 or ³5.

A 7th chord in the 2d inversion is called a chord of the 3d, 4th and 6th, or a four-three chord and marked ³4 or ⁶4.

A 7th chord in the 3d inversion is called a chord of the 2d and 4th or a four-two chord and marked ^{4 6}2 or ²4.

A 9th chord in the root or fundamental position is marked ^{9 9}9 or ^{7 5}7 according as the 5th or 7th is omitted.

a dash or horizontal line following a numeral continues its tone in the next chord.

The character (but not the inversion) of chords may be indicated by Roman numerals indicating the degree of the scale on which they are founded, the scale being noted by a large letter for major (as C), and a small for minor (as c). Thus IV means a triad on the fourth degree with a major third and perfect fifth; iv, a triad on the fourth degree with minor 3d and perfect fifth. An accent after the numeral indicates an augmented fifth, as IV'; a small cipher indicates a diminished fifth, as VII°; a small 7 indicates a chord of the seventh. These devices are an heirloom from an age of little modulation and formal counterpoint; they were shorthand then, but to our music they are handcuffs. They have only a dry text-book career, and alert theorists are rapidly denying them the right even to this existence. Other kinds of chords are characteristic, the leading chord; chromatic, containing a chromatic tone; common, a triad; accidental, produced by anticipation or suspension; altered, having some tone chromatically changed with modulatory effect (one of the bugaboos of the theorists), vide ALTERED; anomalous, vide ANOMALY; augmented, having an augmented fifth; broken, vide BROKEN; derivative, formed by inversion; diatonic, a triad; diminished, having an imperfect 5th and diminished 7th; dominant, the triad or 7th chord on the dominant; doubtful, equivocal, resolvable in many ways, as the diminished 7th; imperfect, having an imperfect fifth, or having some tone omitted; leading, the dominant chord; related or relative, containing a tone in common; solid, opposed to broken; threefold, a triad; transient, modulatory. (See article, Altered Chords, page 720.)

chord'a, L. A string; a note. c. characteristica. The leading note, c. dominant septima. The dominant chord of the seventh; no'na, the ninth. chordæ essentia'les. The tonic, third and fifth. chordæ voca'les. Vocal chords.

chordaulo'dian, chordomelo'dion. A large automatic barrel organ, inv. by Kaufmann, 1812.

Chordienst (kôr'-dēnst), G. Choral service. Chordirektor. A director who trains a chorus at the opera house.

chordom'eter. A gauge for measuring strings.

Chöre (kär'ë), G. plural. Choirs, choruses.

- Chorist', G., choriste (kô-rĕst), F., chorister, E. 1. A leader of a choir. 2. A choral singer. Chorsänger, C.-schüler, C.-knabe (kôr'-knä-bē), G. Choir-boy.
- Chorstimme (kôr-shtim-mē), G. Chorus part.
- Chorton (kôr-tōn), G. "Choir-pitch." 1. The pitch at which choruses formerly sang in Germany. 2. Choral tune.
- chorus. 1. A company of singers; especially in opera, etc., the supporting body of vocalists who do not sing solos. 2. A composition for a chorus, usually in 4 parts—a "double chorus" requires 8 parts. 3. A refrain. 4. The compound stops. 5. The bagpipe, or drone-pipe. 7. Marine trumpet. 8. The free-staves of the crwth. chorusmaster. The chief singer in a chorus.
- choutarah. Vide TAMBOURA.
- Chris'te eleison (ā-lā'ē-sōn), Gr. "Christ have mercy"; part of the Kyrie.
- Christmesse, Christmette (krĕst'-mĕt-tē), G. Christmas matins.
- chroma, Gr. 1. A chromatic modification of the Greek tetrachord. 2. A sharp or a flat. c. duplex. A double sharp. 3. c. diesis. A semitone. 4. (Or c. simplex.) An eighth note. c. duplex. A 16th note.
- chromam'eter. A tuning-fork.
- chromat'ic, chromatique (tĕk), F., chromatisch (mă'-tish), G., chromat'ico, I. 1. Literally, "coloured" and implying a foreign or added tinge, specifically that given to the sober diatonic notes natural to a key, by an unrelated sharp, flat or natural that is not of modulatory effect. A whole scale may be chromatic (i. e., progress by semitones); a chord, an interval or a progression altered by a flat or sharp is called chromatic, and the process of so modifying it is called c. alteration; an instr. playing semitones is called c., and the signs themselves that sharpen or flatten a tone are called c. signs, or chromatics. 2. Vide MODES.
- chronom'eter. Metronome, particularly Godfrey Weber's.
- chronomètre (krôn-ô-mĕtr), F. A form of monochord inv. 1827, by Raller, to teach piano-tuning.
- chrotta (krot'ta). Vide CROWD.
- church cadence. The plagal cadence.
- church modes. Vide MODES.
- chute (shüt), F. An obsolete sliding embellishment.
- ciaconne. Vide CHACONNE.
- ciaramella (chă-ră-mĕl'-lă), I. A bagpipe.
- cicogna (chĕ-cōn-yă), I. Mouthpiece.
- cicu'ta, L. A Pan's pipe.
- cicutrenna (chĕ-koo-trĕn'-na), I. A pipe.
- cifrato (chĕ-fră'-to), I. Figured.
- cimbalo (chĕm'-bă-lō), I. 1. Cymbal. 2. Tambourine. 3. Harpsichord or dulcimer.
- cimbalon. Vide CZIMBALON.
- Cimbel (tsim'-bĕl), G. A high mixture stop. Cimbelstern. A group of star-shaped cymbals attached to old organs.
- cinelli (chĕ-nĕl'-lĕ), I., Cinellen (tsĕ-nĕl'-lĕn), G. Cymbals.
- Cink (tsĭnk), G. 1. A small reed-stop. 2. Vide ZINK.
- cinq (sănk), F., cinque (chĕn'kwĕ), I. Five; the fifth voice or part in a quintet. a c.—in 5 parts. cinquē-pace (sănk-păs). Old French dance in quintuple time.
- cin'yra. Old name for harp.
- ciphering. The sounding of organ pipes, when the keys are not touched, due to leakage. cipher system. An old notation using numerals instead of letters.
- circle of fifths. A method of modulation by dominants. Vide TEMPERAMENT and preliminary essay, INTRODUCTION TO MUSIC.
- circular canon. A canon going through the major keys.
- circular scale. The curved row of tuning-pins.
- Cis (tsĕs), G. The note C sharp. Cis-is. C double sharp. Cis-dur. C # major. Cis-moll. C # minor.
- cistel'la, L. A dulcimer.
- cistre (sĕstr), F. Cither.
- cistrum, L. Vide SISTRUM.
- citara (chĕ-tă'-ră), I. Cither.
- citaredo (thĕ-tă-ră'-dhō), S.p., citarista (chĕ-tă-rĕs'-tă), I. A minstrel, a player upon the harp or cittern.
- citerna (chĕ-tĕr'-nă), I. Quinterna.
- cith'ara, L. The large lyre from which the guitar and zither are derived.
- c. biju'ga. A 2-necked c. c. hispanica. The Spanish guitar. keyed c. The clavictherium. cith'aris. The theorbo. citharoe'dus. A singing lutenist.

cith'er, cithera, cithern, cittern, cyth-orn. An old guitar-like instr., strung with wire and played with a plectrum; sometimes with a bow, or by means of keys.

cito'le. A dulcimer.

cit'tam. Ancient English guitar.

civetteria (chē-vēt-tē-rē'-ā), I. Coquetry.

clair (klār), F. Clear, shrill, loud.

claircylindre (klār-si-lāndr), F. Vide CLAVICYLINDER.

clairon (klār-ōn), F. 1. Trumpet. 2. Reed-stop. 3. Vide CLARINET. 4. A bugler.

clang. 1. A bell-tone. 2. In acoustics a fundamental tone with its group of over and under-tones, their completeness giving the clang-colour or clang-tint, Tyndall's word.

clang-key, E., Klangschißel, G. Riemann's word for his system of chord designation intended to supplant thorough-bass as a better method of describing a combination by its qualities. Intervals are reckoned, not from the bass, but from the principal tone of each chord. He uses Arabian figures for major, Roman for minor chords, the former indicating an interval upwards from a tone, the latter an interval below, as follows: 1 (I). Principal tone. 2 (II). Major 2d. 3 (III). Major 3d. 4 (IV). Perfect 4th. 5 (V). Perfect 5th. 6 (VI). Major 6th. 7 (VII). Minor 7th. 8 (VIII). Octave. 9 (IX). Major 9th. 10 (X). Major 10th. < indicates raising a tone by a semitone. > Lowering it a semitone; "tones doubly raised or lowered being inconceivable musically." The major chord (or upper-clang) is abbreviated + (for 5-3-1), the minor chord (or under-clang) is abbr. ° (for I-III-V) —thus a° or a°. Feeling that, for instance, the tone C in the major triad a-b-c-e has a different meaning from the tone c in the minor triad a-c-e, he has coined for this "substitution of clangs" the word Klangvertretung (klāng-fēr-trä'-toongk). clang-succession is a chord-progression with regard to its clang-meaning, that is, a tonality which does not consider every chord in its proper absolute key but in its relation to some other chord to which it plays the part of principal or related clang. Fuller particulars of this interesting philosophy must be sought in Riemann's Dictionary of Music, and other of his writings.

claquebois (klāk-bwä), F. A xylophone.

clar. Abbr. of Clarinet.

clarabel'la, L. A soft-voiced wood organ-stop.

claribel flute. 1. A flute. 2. A 4-ft. clarabella.

clar'ichord, clarico'lo, clar'igold. An old harp, or a clavichord.

Clarín (klā-rēn', G. In F. klār-än). 1. A clarion. 2. A 4-ft. reed-stop.

Clarínblasen. Soft notes of the trumpet.

clar'inet, clarinette (nēt), F., clarinetto, I. An important wood-wind instr. with a single beating reed, cylindrical tube and bell. It is in effect a stopped pipe (q.v.) and sounds an octave lower than other wood-wind of its length; it has only the odd-numbered partials in the overtone-scale, and requires a different fingering from the oboe, etc. It has 18 holes, including 13 with keys, by means of which it has a range of 3 octaves and a sixth, which range is sharply divided into four distinct qualities of tone: 1. The highest, or superacute, being (in the normal soprano clarinet in C) d'''-c''''.

2. The high or clarinetto or clarion register (whence the instr. took its name) b'-c'''. 3. The medium, f'-b'. 4. The chalumeau (shāl'-ū-mō) or Schalmei (shāl-mī) g-e'; the qualities being respectively.

1. Shrill. 2. Liquid and clear. 3. Veiled and feeble. 4. Rich and sonorous like a contralto voice.

The clarinet is a transposing instr. written in the C clef; it is made in many sizes to adapt it to different keys; the large soprano in C, B \flat (often called simply "clarinet in B") and A; the small soprano in D, E, F, A \flat ; the alto or barytone in F and E \flat , the bass (an octave lower than the sopranos) in C, B \flat and A. The soprano in B \flat is the most brilliant; the soprano in A is very tender in tone. The small sopranos are too shrill for use except in military bands in which the clarinet group serves the substantial purpose served by the strings in the orchestra.

The clarinet is an improvement (made by Denner of Nürnberg, 1700) upon the old chalumeau or Schalmei, whose name still persists in the low register of the clarinet. The ch. had a single, beating reed, a cylindrical tube and nine holes, each of which produced a tone giving a compass of these natural tones, f-a'. By placing a hole and a key at a nodal point dividing the tube into 3 equal parts, overblowing became possible in the twelfth, i. e., the 3d partials (vide ACOUSTICS). This new register was called clarinetto or clarion for its clarity of tone, and from this word came the present name of the instr., all of whose gaps have been filled by means of the Böhm key-mechanism, etc., though the fingering is still difficult and a slip gives a squawk called the "goose" or couac.

2. A soft 8-ft. reed-stop. clarinet flute. A flue-stop with holes in the cover.

clarino (klä-rē'-nō), I., clarion, E. (in F. klär-yōn). 1. A small trumpet. 2. A 4-foot organ reed-stop, an octave above the trumpet. 3. The trumpet parts in score. c. harmonique. A reed-stop.

clarinet. Obsolescent spelling of clarinet.

clarinet-flute. A stop.

clarone (klä-rō'-nē), I. A clarinet.

clärseach (klär'-säkh), clärséth (klär'-sé), The old Irish harp.

clavecin (kläv-sän), F. 1. The harpsichord. 2. The keys a bell-ringer plays on. c. acoustique. An instr. of the 18th cent. imitating various instruments.

Claviatur (klä-fī-ä-toor'), G. The key-board.

clav'ichord. Prototype of the piano, the strings being set in vibration not by hammers, but by small brass wedges (called tangents) on the ends of the keys; these set only one section of the string in vibration.

clavicyl'inder. An instr. inv. by Chladni, about 1800, consisting of cylinders of glass attuned.

clavicymbalum, L., clavicem'balo, I. The harpsichord.

clavicythe'rium, L. An upright harpsichord of the 13th century.

Clavier (cläv-yä, F., in G. klä-fēr'). 1. The key-board. 2. An old name for the clavichord. 3. c. de récit. The swell manual. 4. In French use, the gamut included in the stave. 5. Vide KLAVER.

clav'is, L. and G. 1. A key. 2. A clef. 3. A note. 4. Handle of a bellows.

clé (klä), clef (klä), F. (In English pron. "kléf.") A florid form of a letter, used as a symbol with a fixed note-meaning, from which it takes its name, as the so-called "c" clef denoting that whichever line it grips is middle C (c'). The most common clefs are the "G" (or treble c. or clef sol, or clef descendant, or violin c.) which is always seen now on the 2d line; the F. (or bass or c. de fay). (These two are those used in piano music.) The C (or clef d'ut) is used movably and is called the soprano (or German soprano) or discant c.; or the alto; or the tenor (or mean or counter-tenor) clef, according as it is placed on the first, the 3d or the 4th line, in each of which cases it marks middle C. The C clef is found in various forms and is still used in music for the 'cello and other instruments and in contrapuntal writing.

The obsolete clefs are the F on the 3d line (the barytone clef), the C on the 2d line (the mezzo soprano), the G on the 1st line (the French violin, or French treble clef.)

clear flute. Organ-stop.

clef d'accordeur (däk-kör-dür), F. Tuning-hammer.

cloc'ca, L., cloche (klōsh), F. A bell.

clochette. A hand-bell.

clock. To swing the clapper of a stationary bell.

clog, Irish. A shuffling dance.

cloro'ne, I. Alto clarinet.

close (klōz). A cadence.

close harmony or position. That in which the chords spread over little space; when a chord extends beyond an octave it is said to be in open position.

close play. Lute-playing in which the fingers remain on the strings.

close score. That with more than one voice on a stave.

C-moll (tsä-mól), G. The key of C minor.

c. o. Abbr. of choir-organ.

coalotino (kō-ä-lōt-tē'-nō), I. Concertino.

cocchina (kōk-kē'-na), I. An Italian country-dance.

co'da, I. "Tail." 1. An additional termination to the body of a composition, ranging from a few chords to

- a long passage. 2. The stem of a note.
- codet'ra. 1. A short coda. 2. A short passage in fugue, between the end of the subject and the entry of the answer.
- co'don, Gr. 1. A little bell. 2. The bell of a trumpet.
- coelesti'no (or -a). A name formerly applied to various keyed instruments.
- coffre (kôfr), F. The frame of an instrument.
- cogli (kôl'-yê), coi (kô'-e), col, coll', colla, collo, I. Forms of the preposition "con," and the definite article meaning "with the."
- colachon (kô-lâ-shôn), F. An instr. like a lute with longer neck.
- colascione. Vide CALASCIONE.
- collet (kôl-lâ), F. The neck, as of a violin.
- collinet (kôl-lî-nâ). A flageolet, named from a famous virtuoso on it.
- colofonia, I., colophane (kôl-ô-fân), F., Colophonium (kô-lô-fô-nî-oom), G., col'ophony, E. Resin.
- colorato (kô-lô-râ'-to), I. Florid.
- coloratura (kô-lô-râ-too'-rà) (pl. e), I., Coloraturen (kô-lô-râ-too'-rên), G. Ornaments and ornamental passages, in vocal or instrumental music; brilliant vocalization.
- coloris (kô-lô-rê'), F., Colorit (rêt'), G. The "colour"-scheme of a work.
- colour. 1. Vide NOTATION. 2. Timbre. 3. Literally colour; to some minds each tone, or each key, has a distinctive actual colour, as C is red to some, C# scarlet, Cb blood red, Cb darker, etc. The Editor has even met a painter who claimed the ability to play any picture or paint any composition.
- colpo, di, I. "At a blow," abruptly.
- combinational tones. Vide RESULTANT TONES.
- combination mode. The ambiguous mode resulting from resolving a dominant chord in a minor key to the tonic major.
- combination pedals. Vide COMPOSITION PEDALS.
- come (kô'mê), I. As, like, the same as. c. prima. As before, as at first. c. sopra. As above. c. sta. Exactly as it stands.
- co'mes, L. 1. In fugue, the companion or answer, to the dux (leader), or subject. 2. In canon, the consequent.
- comiquement (kô-mêk-mân), F. Comically.
- com'ma. 1. A breathing-mark. 2. A theoretical term indicating the minute difference between two tones nearly identical. (a) The comma syntonium, or c. of Didymus, is that between a major and a minor tone 80:81. (b) The comma ditonicum, or c. of Pythagoras, is that by which six whole notes with the ratio 9:8 exceed the octave, or $531 + : 524 +$.
- com(m)odamen'te, com'(m)odo, I. With ease.
- common. Vide CHORD and TURN. c. measure or time. 4-4 time.
- compass. Range of a voice or instr.
- compiacevole (kôm-piâ-châ'-vô-lê), compiacevolmen'te, I. Pleasantly.
- complainte (kôn-plânt), F. A religious ballad.
- com'plement. That quantity or interval which fills up an octave, as a fourth is c. to a fifth.
- complementary part. In fugue, the part added to the subject and counter-subject.
- complete. Vide CADENCE.
- completo'rium, L., com'pletory, E. 1. An Ambrosian anthem supplementary to the antiphon. 2. A compline.

counterpoint. Originally notes were called "points"; the literal meaning of counterpoint is therefore "note against (or in accompaniment with) note"; it is loosely used of the combination of independent voices as in a quartet. It is more strictly used (a) of the art of writing simultaneous melodies or (b) of the melodic part added to a given part called the cantus firmus (q. v.). The contrapuntal style differs from the harmonic in that while the latter consists of melody accompanied by chords, the former is a combination of melodic parts. The supreme contrapuntal forms are Canon and Fugue. Of counterpoint there are five species: 1. Note against note—a semibreve against a semibreve. 2. Two notes against one. 3. Four notes against one. 4. Syncopation. 5. Florid counterpoint—a mixture of the preceding species. Counterpoint is also Simple and Double. In the latter, the parts are invertible, i. e., may be enharmonic, enharmon'icus, L., enharmonique (än-är-mön-ek), F., enharmonisch (än-här-mō'-nisch), G. 1. Differing in name or notation, but not in sound, as c sharp and d flat. Mathematically and actually c # and d ♭ differ by an appreciable interval, but for convenience sake and in the name of temperament (q.v.) they are the same tone on the keyboard instruments and, by contagion, have become so in singing and the playing of stringed and wind instruments. Tones that are identical in our present artificial scale, but not in actuality or acoustics, are called enharmonic; hence chords and intervals written differently and sounding alike are called enharmonic, and the change of the key by such chords is called enharmonic modulation; the writing of the same chord in 2 notations is e. change. Instruments have been frequently invented making a distinction between such tones as c sharp and d flat, and giving them separate digitals. These instrs. are called enharmonic. The e. scale is, strictly, a scale with more than the twelve semitones of our usual scale; the term is loosely applied to scales as c sharp and d flat, having the same sound. 2. fifteenth. 1. An interval of two octaves. 2. A 2-ft. stop, two octaves above the diapasons.

- transposed an octave, or ninth, tenth, twelfth, etc., above or below one another. Counterpoint is triple (or quadruple) when 3 or 4 parts are mutually invertible. (See article, page 727.)

fifth. 1. The fifth tone of a scale, the dominant. 2. An interval containing five tones, the extremes included. as C-G (the ratio being 2:3). The tonic and the dominant of a key constitute a perfect (or less strictly, major) fifth. To widen the interval by lowering the lower (or raising the upper) tone a half-step results in an augmented (or superfluous, extreme, sharp or pluperfect) fifth, as c-g♯, or c♯-g; to narrow the interval a semitone by raising the lower or lowering the upper tone a half-step results in a diminished (or imperfect, false, flat, minor or defective) fifth. Two parts or voices according to the rules may not progress by perfect fifths either in consecutive or parallel manner, whether the fifths are open or (covered, concealed) hidden (q.v.). Though this rule is the very ABC of harmonic law, it is not justified by science, by history, or by latest practice. Circle of fifths. Vide TEMPERAMENT. fifthy. With the second partial (a fifth) noticeably marked.

figura (fē-goo'-rā), L. and I. Vide FIGURE. f. liga'ta. A ligature. f. muta (moo-ta). A rest. f. obli'qua. In old music, an oblique symbol indicating that two superimposed notes (as g-b) were to be sung obliquely (thus g-b-b-g).

figural, E. (in G. fē-goo-rāl'). Figurate. F-gesang. Cantus figuratus, counterpoint.

figuration. 1. The use of figures or ornamented passages in the variation of a theme. 2. The writing or the filling out of figured bass. 3. In cpt. the interpolation of figures, changing notes, etc.

figurato (fē-goo-rā'-tō), I., figuré (fē-gü-rā), F. figurate, or figured. 1. Ornamented with figures, hence florid, free. 2. Provided with numerals, as figured bass. Vide BASS 6, and CHORD.

figure, E. (in F. pron. fī-gür). 1. A pattern or design in grouped notes which may be repeated variously. 2. A numeral, f. of diminution. A number diminishing the duration of a note.

fil (fēl), F. Thread (of a string).

filar il tuono or la voce (fē-lār ēl too-ō'-nō or lā vō'-chē), I., filér un son or la voix (fē-lā rūn sōn or lā vwā), F. To draw the tone out to a thread of sound.

filarm'o'nico, I. Music-loving.

filét de voix (fē-lā dü vwā), F. A mere thread of tone.

filling-up. 1. Of parts, those of harmonic but not melodic use. 2. Of stops, mutation.

filo (fē'-lō), I. Thread. f. di voce.

Softest possible tone.

filpen (fēl'-pēn), G. Vide FISTULIREN.

filum, L. Stem, of a note.

fin (fān), F. The end; fine. f. à qui (fā nā kē). End here.

fi'nal. The note of rest in church-modes corresponding to our Tonic; in authentic modes the F. is on the first degree; in plagal, on the 4th. These are called regular finals. Others occur frequently and are irregular or confinals. Vide MODES. f. close. A finishing cadence.

finale (fē-nā'-lē, I.; in F. fī-nāl). 1.

The conclusion, usually elaborate, as the closing chorus of an act in opera; in sonatas, symphonies, an independent movement. 2. A final.

final'is, L. Vide ACCENTUS ECCLESIASTICI.

fine (fē'-nē), I. The end; it may appear sometimes before a da capo sign, in which case the movement is to be played to the repeat-bar and then repeated to the Fine, where it ends.

Finger (In E. fīng'-gēr; in G. fīng'-ēr). Finger. F.-bildner, finger-developer. A device for keeping the last joint of the fingers up; inv. by Seiber. F.-brett. Finger-board. F.-fertigkeit. Agility. F.-leiter (līt'-ēr). The chiroplast. F.-satz, F.-setzung. Fingering. Enger or gedehnter, Fingersatz. Close (or stretched) fingering. F.-wechsel (vēkhs'l). Change of fingers. finger-board. In a stringed instr. the neck on which the strings are stopped. finger-cymbals. Tiny cymbals fixed on the fingers. finger-holes. The holes on wind-instrs. by which the pitch is regulated.

fingering. 1. The manner of using the fingers on instrs. 2. The symbols indicating a fingering. In the German F. the thumb is marked 1, the fingers 2, 3, 4, 5; in an older German method the thumb was marked by a circle O; in the English, or American F. the thumb is marked with a cross, the fingers, 1, 2, 3, 4.

finire il tuono, I. Vide MESSA DI VOCE.

fi'nite. Of a canon, not repeated, ending with the finish of the theme; not "infinite."

finito(a) (fī-nē'-tō), I. Finished.

fino (fē'-nō), I. To, as far as, till.

finto(a) (fēn'-tō), I. Feigned. ca- denza f. Vide CADENCE (f). fa finto. Vide FA.

fio(a) (fī-ō'-kō), I. Hoarse, faint. fiochetto. Rather hoarse. fiochezza (fē-ō-kēd'-zā). Hoarseness.

fio(e) (fī-ō'-rē), I. Flower. a f. di labbre. Lightly on the lip.

fio(e)ggiare (fē-ō-rēd'-jā'-rē), I. To add figures to.

fio(e)to, I. A little ornament.

fioriscente (fē-ō-rī-shēn'-tē), I., fiorito (fē-ō-rē'-tō). Florid. fioritezza (fē-ō-rī-tēd'-zā). Embellishment.

fioritura (fē-ō-rī-too'-rā) (pl. e), I. Florid ornament.

first. 1. The highest voice-part or string; the lowest line or space. 2. A unison or prime.

Fis (fēs), G. The note F#. Fis-dur (fēs-door). F# major. Fis-fis. The note F double sharp. Fis-moll. F# minor.

Fistel (fīsh-tel), G. Falsetto (also F.-stimme).

Fistola (fēs'-tō-lā), I., fis'tula, L. A reed, a pipe. f. dulcis. The flûte à bec. f. germanica. German flute. f. panis or f. pastoralis. The Pandean pipes. f. pastorica. An oaten pipe used in Roman theatres to express disapprobation. fistulator, L., fistulato're, I. A piper. fistuliren (fīs-too-lē'rēn), G. 1. To sing falsetto. 2. Of organ-pipes, to over-blow.

fith'ele. Old English name for fiddle.

fixed-Do. That system of solmisation in which the syllables are fixed, i. e., do is given always to C (sharp, flat, or natural), re to D, etc.

fixed tone or intonation. Used of the piano and instrs. in which the player cannot change the pitch of a tone, as on the violin, etc.

Flachflöte (flākh'flā-tē), G. 1. Flageolet. 2. An organ-stop.

flag. 1. Abbr. for flageolet, or flageolet tones. 2. A hook.

flageolet', E. (F. flāzh-ō-lā), Flageolet (flā-jē-ō-lēt'), G., fiagioletta (flā-jō-lēt'ta), I. 1. A small flute played at the end, compass g'-b''' flat. double f. An instr. with 2 different-sized flageolets meeting in one mouthpiece, inv. by Bainbridge, 1800. 2. flageolet or flageolet-tones or Töne. Vide HARMONICS. 3. A 1- or 2-ft. stop.

flam. In drum music a grace note, close f., as short as possible; open f., with a brief interval.

Fla'minenorgel, G. Pyrophone.
Flaschinett (fläsh'Y-nět'), G. The flageolet.

flat. 1. A symbol (b) lowering the note before which it is placed one semitone; placed in the signature it affects every note occurring on its line or space. The double flat (bb), formerly a great flat, lowers the note two semitones. flat fifth. Vide FIFTH. flat tuning. Of a lute tuned to the former lower French pitch. 2. As a verb, to lower a note a semitone; preferably to flatten.

flatter la corde (flät-tä lä' kórd), F. To flatter or caress the string.

flautando (flä-oo-tän'dö), flautato (tä'to), I. 1. Drawing the bow gently across the strings near the bridge, producing a "fluty" tone. 2. Producing harmonics.

flauto (flä'oo-tö), I. Flute. flautis'ta. Performer on the flute. flautino (tē'no). 1. A small octave-flute. 2. A piccolo. 3. Same as flautando. f. piccolo. The shrill octave-flute. f. a bec'co. Beak-flute. f. alto. A tenor-flute used in bands. f. amabile. An organ-stop. f. amoroso. A 4-foot organ-stop. f. dolce. 1. A beak-flute. 2. An organ-stop. flauto'ne. A large bass-flute. f. tedesco, transverso, traverso. 1. The German or transverse flute. 2. An organ-stop.

flebile (flä'-bī-lē), flebilmen'te, I. Sad(ly), doleful(ly).

flessibile (flēs-sē'-bī-lä), I. Flexible. flessibilità (lī-tä'), I. Flexibility.

Flick'opera, G. An opera with new words to old tunes.

fling. A Scotch Highland dance in 4-4 time.

F-Löcher, G. F holes. Vide F.

fion-flon (fiön-flöñ), F. A refrain to old vaudevilles; hence, trash.

flor'id. Ornamental, embellished.

Flöte (flä'tē), G. Flute. flötchen (flēt'-khēn). A little flute. F-bass. A bass-flute. flöten. To play the flute. F-spieler. A flute-player. F-stimme, F-zug. A flute-stop. Flötenwerk. A small organ with only flue-pipes. F. transverso. 1. The transverse flute. 2. An organ-stop. Flötist (flä'-tēst). A flute-player.

flour'ish. 1. A trumpet-fanfare. 2. An embellishment.

flüchtig (flükh'tikh), G. Light(ly). Flüchtigkeit (kit). Fleetness.

flue-pipe-stop-work. Vide PIPE.

Flügel (flü'-gēl), G. "Wing," hence, 1. A wing-shaped instr.; or the modern grand piano. 2. The ear of a pipe. F-harfe. A small table-harp with upright sound-board. F-horn. 1. A bugle. 2. A keyed bugle or other keyed brass instrument.

flute, E. flu'ta, L., fûte (füt), F. 1. Now generally used of the transverse (or cross, or German) flute. The beak- (or direct) flute (in various sizes) is obsolete. This latter was blown at one end. The cross-flute is blown through a hole in the side near the larger end. It is a long tube (formerly slightly conical) with the larger end closed. Usually made of wood, it is sometimes of silver or other metals. The principle is that of the flue-pipe (vide PIPE), and the tone is clear, pure, and especially rich in the lower range, which is too little used. A very ancient instrument (appearing often with two tubes and one mouthpiece as the double-flute, one tube furnishing probably a mere drone-bass); its modern form owes much to the improvements of Boehm, and controls with its keys fourteen orifices, with an extreme range of b-c''''#. It is made in six sizes (including the piccolo, or octave-flute) and sounds as written, is non-transposing. The normal flute is the C; there are two others in D flat and E flat. The piccolo is in the same keys, but the lower octave is not used; it is written an octave lower than its sounds. A fourth (or quart) flute sounds a fourth higher than the normal flute. 2. An organ-stop. flute-work. Vide STOP. harmonic f. or f. armonique. An organ-stop. octave-f. The piccolo. pastoral or shepherd's f. A short beak-flute. f. à bec (ä bēk), F., Schnabel-flöte (shnä-bēl), G. Beak-flute. f. allemande (äl-mänd), F. The cross-flute. f. conique (kón-ēk), F. 1. Conical flute. 2. An organ-stop. f. d'amour (dä'-moor). 1. An obsolete flute in A or in B flat. 2. A 4- or 8-ft. stop. f. d'Angleterre (dän-glü-tär). The flageolet. f. du Poitou (dü pwä-too). The bag-pipe. f. douce (doos). The beak-flute. f. minor (mē-nór). A 2- or 4-foot stop. f. octavante (ök-tä-vi-änt). Octave-flute; an organ-stop. f. ouverte (oo-värt). An open stop. f. traversière (trä-vër-sÿ-är). The cross-flute.

flûte, F. As a direction—"use harmonics." flûtee (tä). Fluty.

fly. The lid covering a key-board.

F-moll (ëf-möl), G. F minor.

fo'co, I. Fire, passion. focosamen'te. Ardently. focosis'simo. Very ardent. focoso. Passionate.

foglietto (fö-l-yët'-to), I. A part which contains all the obbligato passages, used often by conductors instead of a score.

foire des enfants (fwär-dä-zän-fän), F. "Children's fair." Toy symphony.

fois (fwä), F. Time première f. (prüm-yär). The first time. deuxième f. (düz-yëm). The second time. deux f. (dü-fwä). Twice. dernière f. The last time.

folia (fö-lë'-ä), Sp., folli(a) di spagna (spän-yä), I., folies d'espagne (fö-lë-dës-spän), F. 1. A slow Spanish solo-dance in 3-4 time. 2. A species of air with variations.

folia'ted. Ornamented.

folk-music. The body of folk-songs, dances, etc.

folk-song. A strongly racial popular song that has become a tradition. (See article, page 731.)

folk-tone. The folk-song manner or spirit (cf. Volkston).

fondamental(e), (fôn-dä-män-täl) F., fondamentale (tä'lä), I. Fundamental, son f. Root. basse, or basso, f. Vide BASS 6.

fondamen'to, I. Fundamental bass.

fonds d'orgue (fôn dôrg), F. The foundation-stops.

foot. 1. The unit of metre, a distinct rhythmic unit of two or more syllables. 2. Of a pipe, the part below the mouth. 3. Old term for a refrain, or a drone-bass. 4. A unit for the designation of the pitch of pipes and instrs. arrived at as follows. Sound travels 1056 feet per second, the tone C, has 33 vibrations a second; $1056 \div 33 = 32$ feet, the length of one sound-wave; a 32-foot pipe will therefore sound C. The pipe giving C (two octaves below middle C) is about 8 feet long. This is taken as the normal length, and while the pipes that make up a so-called 8-foot stop (q.v.) decrease in length as they ascend the scale, they are considered as belonging to the 8-foot tone and they sound as written or played, i. e., when an 8-foot stop is on and the key of mid. C is depressed, mid. C sounds, etc. If this key is depressed when a 4-foot stop is on, the tone an octave higher sounds; when a 32-foot is on, a tone two octaves lower sounds; the 2-foot and 1-foot stops produce tones respectively two and three octaves higher than the key depressed. A stop then is named from the length of its longest pipe and lowest tone. From this use arises the designation of instruments by foot-measure, or foot-tone; an instr. sounding as written (e. g., the flute) is called an 8-foot instr., one sounding an octave higher (e. g., the piccolo-flute) is called a 4-foot instr. Furthermore, this designation is used of octaves; the letters in the great octave (vide PITCH) are known as 8-foot (as 8-ft. C, D, etc.), those in the small octave, as 4-ft. c, d, etc.; those in the once-accented as 2-foot, and those in the twice-accented as 1-foot. The word foot is sometimes abbreviated by an (') as 8', 16'. The metrical system has been applied with much inaccuracy; 8-feet = $\frac{5}{2}$ metre; 4-feet = $\frac{5}{4}$ m.; 2-feet = $\frac{5}{8}$ m.; 16-ft. = 5 m.; 32-ft. = 10 m.;

Quinte (10 $\frac{2}{3}$, 5 $\frac{1}{3}$, 2 $\frac{2}{3}$, 1 $\frac{1}{3}$, and $\frac{2}{3}$ feet) = $\frac{10}{3}$, $\frac{5}{3}$, $\frac{5}{6}$, $\frac{5}{12}$ and $\frac{5}{24}$ metres respectively.

Tierce (6 $\frac{2}{5}$, 3 $\frac{1}{5}$, 1 $\frac{3}{5}$, and $\frac{4}{5}$ feet) = $\frac{10}{5}$ (or 2), $\frac{5}{5}$ (or 1), $\frac{10}{10}$ ($\frac{1}{2}$), and $\frac{5}{20}$ ($\frac{1}{4}$) metres respectively.

foot-key. Pedal-key.

forbidden. Contrary to musical grammar. Vide HARMONY.

foreign. Alien to the given key, or tonality.

forlana (förlä'-nä), I., forlane (förlän), F. A lively Venetian dance in 6-8 or 6-4 time.

form. See article, page 733.

formare il tuono. Vide MESSA DI VOCE.

formula. A word respectfully submitted by the editor to obviate the loose use of "sonata-form," which is employed both of a movement and a group of movements—both for the part and the whole; by speaking of the dual-theme movement as written

- in the sonata formula and the group of formulæ, largo, rondo, etc., as in the sonata-form much ambiguity will be avoided.
- fort, G. Off (of an organ-stop).
- fort (fôr), forte (fôrt), F. 1. Loud. 2. Temps f. Strong beat.
- fortbien (fôr-b-yân), F. A modification of the old fortepiano, by Friederici, 1758.
- forte (fôr'-tê), I. 1. Loud. (abbr. f.) f. possibile. As loud as possible. più f. Louder. poco f. Rather loud. f. piano. (Abbr. fp.) Loud, then immediately soft. fortamen'te. Loudly.
- fortement (fôrt-mân), F. Loudly.
- forte-piano. 1. Vide PIANOFORTE. 2. Loud! then soft!
- fortezza (fôr'-têd'-zâ). Force.
- fortiss. Abbr. of fortissimo.
- fortissimo (fôr-tês'-sî-mo), I. Very loud. fortissis'simo. Double superlative of forte. f. quanto possibile (kwân'-to pös-sê'-bî-lê). As loud as possible.
- Fortrücken (fôrt'-rükên), G. The advance of the hand (as in ascending figuration) with the same fingering.
- Fortschreitung (fôrt'-shri-toongk), G. Progression. F. einer Dissonanz. Resolution. fortschreiten. To progress.
- Fortsetzung (fôrt'zêt-zoongk), G. Continuation, development.
- forza (fôr'-tsä), I. Force, power. forzan'do, forzato (fôr-tsä'-tô). Forced, sharply emphasized (marked $\vee \wedge >$). forzare (fôr-tsä'-rê). To strengthen. f. la voce (lä vö'chê). To force the voice.
- foundation-stop. Vide STOP.
- fourchette tonique (foor-shêt tôn-êk), F. Tuning-fork.
- fourniture (foor-nî-tür), F. A mixture-stop.
- four-part. Written for four parts.
- fourth. 1. The fourth tone of a scale, the subdominant. 2. An interval containing four tones, the extremes included, as d-g, the ratio being 3 : 4. Fourths are perfect and imperfect rather than major or minor. An augmented (superfluous, extreme, sharp or pluperfect) fourth is one whose upper tone has been raised a half-step, or its lower lowered. A diminished (imperfect, false, minor or defective) fourth one whose upper tone has been lowered half a step or its lower raised (cf. FIFTH). Chord of the second and fourth, chord of the 3d, 4th, and 6th, chord of the 4th and 6th. Vide CHORD. four-three, four-two. Vide CHORD. f. flute, f. shift. Vide FLUTE and SHIFT.
- fp. Abbr. Vide FORTE (2).
- français (frän-sê'), française (frän-sêz), F. 1. French. 2. A country-dance in 3-4 time.
- francamen'te, I. Frankly, boldly.
- franchezza (frän-kêd'-zâ), I., franchise (frän-shêz), F. Boldness, frankness.
- franzese (frän-tsa'-zê), I., französisch (frän-tsa'-zîsh), G. "French"; in French style. Franzton (fräntstôn), G. French pitch.
- frappe (fräp), F. A manner of beating time with force. frappé (fräp-pä). The down-beat.
- frapper (fräp-pä), F. To strike; to beat time.
- frase (frä'-zê) (pl. i), I. A phrase. fr. larga. With broad phrasing. fraseggiare (frä-zêd-jär'-rê). To phrase.
- Frauenstimme (frow'-ên-shtîm/mê), G. Female voice.
- freddo (frêd'-dô), freddamen'te, I. Cold(ly). freddezza (frêd-dêd'zâ). Coldness.
- fredon (frû-dôn), F. A trill, or other ornament. fredonnement (frû-dôn-mân). Humming, trilling. fredonner (frû-dôn-nä). To trill, also to hum.
- free. Unrestrained, not according to strict rule, as f. composition, or style. f. fugue. Vide FUGUE. f. reed. Vide REED. f. part. An independent part added to fill up the harmony of canon or fugue. f. chant. A form of reciting the Psalms or Canticles using a group of two chords for each hemistich. Vide FRET-FREE.
- freemen's songs. Little compositions for three or four voices, in use about 1600.
- fregiare (frä-jä'-rê), I. To adorn. fregiatura (too'rä). An ornament.
- frei (fri), G. Free. Freiheit (fri-hîft). License. f. Schreibart (shrip-ärt). Free composition.
- French horn. Vide HORN. French sixth. Vide ALTERED.
- French treble clef. The G on the lowest line of the staff.
- fresco (frê's'-ko), I., frescamen'te. Fresh(ly).
- fret. One of the thin projecting ridges across the neck of stringed instrs. to divide the strings into different lengths, thus producing different pitches, on pressure. fretted and fret-free. In the early precursors of the piano, there were fewer strings than keys, each string serving for several notes, through the action of tangents acting as frets. These were called tied or fretted or gebunden. Later instruments were given a string to each note, and these were called bundfrei, or ungebunden or free or fret-free.

fretteau, fretian, frestel, fretel (frü-tël), fretèle, fretetel. A Pan's pipe.

fret'ta, I. Haste.

Freude (froï-dë), G. Joy, rejoicing. Freudengesang. Song of joy. freudig (froï-dikh). Joyfully. Freudigkeit (kit). Joyfulness.

fricassée (frë-käs-sä), F. A dance with pantomime in the 18th cent. In the 16th cent. a part-song, each part having different words.

Fries (frës), G. The ornamented inlay on the border of a violin.

frisch (frish), G. Fresh, lively.

fris'ka (frish'-kä). The quick movement in the Czardas, and the Hungarian Rhapsody.

frivolo (frë'-vö-lo), I. Trifling, trashy.

fröhlich (frä-lkh), G. Joyous, gay. F-keit (kit). Gayety. Frohgesang (frö-khë-zäng). Song of joy.

Frohnamt (frön'ämt), G. High Mass.

Frosch (frösh), G. Nut (of a bow).

frottola (fröt'-tö-lä), I. A 16th century ballad.

Frühlingslied (frü'lings-lët), G. Spring-song.

Frühmesse (frü'mës-së), Frühstück (frü'shtük), G. Matins.

F-Schlüssel (ëf-shlüt'sël), G. The F-clef.

fuga (foo'-gä), L. and I. "A flight." Vide FUGUE. f. ad quintam (octavam). Fugue (also canon) at the 5th (octave). f. aequalis motus (or recta). In similar motion, the answer conforming to the ascent and descent of the subject. f. al contrario (or riverso or roves'cio) or fuga contraria (or per motum contrarium). One whose answer is the subject inverted. f. authentica. A fugue with an ascending subject. f. canonica (or inconsequenza or perpetua or totalis). A canon. f. composita (or inaequalis). One whose subject moves by degrees, not by leaps, as does f. incompressa. f. del tuono, I. A tonal fugue, opposed to f. reale, a real fugue. f. doppia, I. A double fugue. f. homoph'na. One whose answer is at the unison. f. improp'ria (or irregularis or sciolta or soluta). An irregular free fugue. f. in contrario tempo (or per ar'sin et the'sin). One in which the accented notes of the subject are the unaccented of the answer, and vice versa. f. in nomine. A fugue "in name only," i. e., a free fugue. f. inversa. One in double counterpoint and contrary motion. f. libera. One with free episodes, opposed to f. ligata (or obligata), whose episodes are entirely derived. f. mixta. One whose answer is varied by augmentation, etc. f. partialis (or periodica). One without full and perpetual canonic imitation, the usual fugue. f. per augmentationem (or diminutionem). One whose answer is by augmentation (diminution). f. per imitationem interruptam. One whose answer is broken by rests, etc. f. plagalis. One with subjects descending below the key-note. f. propria (or regularis). One in regular form. f. reddita or redita. One in which canonic progression occurs at the middle or end. f. retrograda. One whose answer is in retrograde progression. f. retrograda per motum contrarium. One whose answer is in contrary motion as well as retrograde progression. f. ricercata (rët-chër-kä'-tä). A fugue of the highest development.

gnaccare (nāk-kā'-rā), I. Castanets.

gnacchera (nāk-kā'-rā), I. A tambourine, kettle-drum.

gnomo (nō'-mō). In neumatic notation, a long bar used to indicate a sustained note.

goathorn. Vide GEMSHORN.

gola (gō'lā), I. 1. Throat. 2. A guttural voice.

goll trompo. Trumpet used by Danes, Normans, etc.

Gondellied (gōn'dēl-lēt), G., gondoliera (gōn-dōl-yā'rā), I. gondoliersong. Song composed and sung by the Venetian gondoliers; barcarolle.
2. Music in the same style.

gon'dolin. An instr. of the zitherclass with four octaves of strings and one octave of piano-keys above them.
The pressure of one key submits one tone in all its octaves to the sweep of the plectrum. Chords can thus be played in different positions.

- gong. A Chinese instr., a circular plate of metal struck with a padded stick. Also called tam-tam.
- goose. A squawk accidentally occurring in the tone of an oboe or other reed instrument.
- gorgheggiare (gôr-gêd-jä'-rê), I. To trill, shake. gorgheggiamen'to Trilling; the art of florid song. gorgheggio (gêd'jô). A trill, a shake. gorgheggi. Rapid vocalises.

- Grätias ag'imus, L. "We give thanks to Thee." Vide MASS.
- gratioso (grä'-tsi-ô'so), I. Gracious.
- grave (grä'vê in I.; in F. gräv). 1. Grave, deep, slow. 2. A slow movement. grave harmonics. Combinational tones. gravement (gräv-män), F. gravemente (grä-

- vě-mě'n'tě), I. Gravely. gravezza (gra-věd'-zä), I. Gravity.
- gravicembalo (grä-vě-chäm'-bä-lö), I., gravicem'bolo, I., gravecem'balum, L. Harpsichord.
- gra'vis, L. Heavy. Vide ACCENTUS ECCLESIASTICI.
- gravisonan'te, I. Loud-sounding.
- gravità (grä-vi-tä'), I., Gravität (grä-fē-tät'), G., gravité (grä-vi-tä), F. 1. Solemnity. 2. Relative depth of a tone.
- grayle (gräl). Early E. The "Roman gradual."
- grazia (gräts'-yā), I., grazie (gräts-yā), G. Grace, elegance. graziös (grätsi-äs), G., grazio'so, I. Graceful. graziosamen'te. Gracefully.
- greater. Major (of a scale, sixth, or third).
- great octave. Vide PITCH. great organ. Vide ORGAN. great sixth. A 6-5 chord with perfect 5th and major 6th.
- grec (gräk), F. Greek. Chorus à la G. A chorus at the end of an act, as in Greek tragedy.
- Greek Modes and Music. See page 762.
- Grego'rian, gregorianisch (grē-gō-rī-än'-ish), G., grēgori'ano (grä-gō-rī-ä'no), I., grēgorien (grä-gō-rī-än), F. Introduced or regulated by Pope Gregory I. in the sixth century (vide his name in the B. D.). Chiefly used as a synonym for plain-chant. Gevaert in his "Les origines du chant lyrique," 1890, has shown how little reason there is for continuing the traditional view of St. Gregory as a great innovator; he may have been a codifier of music. Much credit belonging to St. Ambrose has been given to him; he did not originate the notation by letters (a-g), sometimes called the Gregorian letters. The so-called Gregorian chant or song is diatonic, without definite rhythm (the words dictating the metre) and keeping to the Church modes. Of Gregorian chant, modes, tones, etc. Vide PLAIN-CHANT, and MODES.
- greifen (grī-fēn), G. To take, to finger, to play; to stop (of violin-playing); to stretch.
- grel (grël), G. Shrill. G.-heit (hīt). Sharpness.
- grelot (grü-lö), F. A small bell.
- Griff (grif), G. Touch, manipulation, fingering, stretch. G.-brett. Fing-board. G.-loch (lōkh). Hole (as of a flute). G.-saite (zī-te). A stopped, or melody, string as opposed to a sympathetic string.
- grillig (gril'-līkh), G. Capricious.
- gringotter (grān-gō-tā), F. To hum.
- grisoller (grē-sō-lā), F. To warble.
- grob (gröp), G. Coarse, deep, broad. As a prefix (of organ-pipes); "of broad scale." G.-gedäckt. A stopped diapason of full, rough tone.
- grop'po, groppe'to. Vide GRUPPO, GRUPPETTO.
- gros (grö), F. Great. g. tambour. Great drum.
- gros-fa (grö-fä). The old square notation.
- gross (grös), G., grosse (grös), F. Great, major. grosse caisse (grös kēs), F. The great drum. Grosse-nazard, G. A stop a fifth above the diapasons. grosse Oktave. The great octave. Vide PITCH. grosse Quinte, grosses Quintenbass. A stop in the pedals, a fifth or twelfth to the great bass. grosse Sonate. Grand sonata. grosses Principal. A 32-ft. stop. grosses Terz. Major third. grosse Tierce. Stop producing the third or tenth above the foundation-stops. grosse Trommel. The great drum. grossgedäckt (gē-däkt). Double-stopped 16-ft. diapason.

handle-piano. Vide BARREL ORGAN 2.

Harfe (här'-fë), G. A harp. Harfen bass (här-fën-bäss). A bass of broken chords. Harfensaite. Harp-string. Harfenspieler. Harpist. Harfenett. Vide SPITZHARFE. Harfeninstrumente. Instrs. whose strings are plucked. H.-laute. Vide DITAL.

Harke (här'-ke), G. Fork for ruling staves.

Harmo'nia, L. Daughter of Mars and Venus; music in general.

Harmonic. As an adjective. Musical, concordant; relating to harmony (i. e., to chords, etc. as opposed to melody) and to the theory of music. h. chord. A generator and its harmonics. (Vide below.) h. curve. The figure described by a string in vibration. h. figuration. Broken chords, often with passing notes. h. hand. Vide GUIDONIAN. h. mark. A small circle over a note to be played as an harmonic. h. note, tone, vide the noun HARMONIC. h. scale. The series of partials (vide ACOUSTICS, page 718). h. stop. A flute or reed stop having its pipes pierced midway, so that the harmonics predominate over the fundamental tone, hence h. flute and h. reed. h. triad. Major triad. h. trumpet. The sackbut.

As a noun (frequently used in the plural). 1. One of the many partial tones that go to make up the compound vibration we call tone, this compound being called by the name of its generator. (Vide ACOUSTICS.)

2. A vibrating string when lightly touched at a nodal point (as that of a half, 3d, 4th, or 5th, etc., of the string's length) will vibrate in divisions (2, 3, 4, or 5, etc.), each division sounding the same tone respectively an octave, a 12th, 15th or 17th, etc., higher than the string. These produce a choir-like unison of exquisite sweetness whose futiness has given them the name flageolet-tones. These harmonics if produced from an open string are called natural; from a stopped string, artificial. Harmonics are called for by the word flageolet or its abbr. fl.; or the words flautando, flautato, or flûte, or by a small circle (o) called the harmonic-mark over the note to be touched, or by writing a black note indicating the open string, a diamond-headed note above it showing where the string is to be touched, and a small note above to indicate the actual sound. Grave Harmonics. Combinational tones. "Properly speaking, the harmonics of any compound tone are other compound tones of which the primes are partials of the original compound tone of which they are said to be harmonics."

—A. J. ELLIS.

Harmon'ica. 1. An arrangement by Benj. Franklin of musical glasses in a scale, on a spindle turned by a treadle. The glasses were moistened in a trough, and as they revolved melodies and chords could be played. F. called his device armonica. 2. The mouth-harmonica or harmonicon is a reed mouth-instr. producing different tones when the breath is inhaled and exhaled. 3. A delicate stop. Harmonica-ätherisch (ä'-tër-ish), G. A delicate mixture-stop. harmonichord. Vide PIANO-VIOLIN.

harmonicello (chël'-lō). A 'cello-like instr. with 15 strings (5 of them wire) inv. by J. K. Bischoff, Nürnberg, 18th century.

harmoniçi. Vide CANONICI.

harmon'icon. 1. Vide HARMONICA. 2. A keyed harmonica with flue-stop, inv. by W. C. Müller. 3. An orchestreion.

harmoni-cor, F. A wind-instr. with harmonium-like reeds in a clarinet-like tube, inv. by Jaulin, Paris.

harmoni'cum. An improved bandonion; virtually an accordion worked with treadles, inv. by Brendl and Klosser, Saxony, 1893.

Harmonie (här-mō-nē'), G. 1. Harmony. 2. A chord. 3. (a) The wind-instruments collectively, or (b) music for them. h.-eigen, Chordal; appropriate or native to the harmony; opposed to h.-fremd, foreign. H.-lehre (lä-rē). Theory of music. H.-musik. Vide HARMONIE 3. H.-trompete. A trumpet employing stopped tones with success. H.-verständiger (fēr-shtēn'-dikh'-r). A harmonist. harmoniren (här-mō-nē'-rēn). To harmonise. harmoni'sch. Harmonious.

harmonist. One versed in the laws of music.

harmonie (är-mō-nē), F. 1. Harmony. 2. Harmonics. harmonieux (är-mōn-yū'). Harmonious. harmonieusement (yüz-män). Harmoniously.

Harmo'nika, G. 1. Accordion. 2. Concertina. H.-tone. Vide HARMONICS.

Harmo'niker, G. Harmonici. harmoniphon. An instr. with keyboard, inv. 1837, by Panis, of Paris, to supply the place of oboes in orchestras. The sounds are produced from reeds acted upon by currents of air.

harmonique (är-mō-nēk), F. Harmonic, applied to pipes of double length.

harmoniquement (är-mō-nēk-män), F. Harmonically.

harmoni'um. Vide REED-ORGAN.

har'monise. To combine two or more parts in accordance with the laws of music; to add accompanying chords to a melody.

harmonom'eter. A monochord.

harmony, chromatic (or diatonic). That characterised by chromatic (or diatonic) progression. close h. That in which the 3 highest parts do not cover more than an octave; opposed to open, dispersed, or extended h. compound h. That in which some of the tones are doubled; opposed to simple h. essential h. (a) The fundamental chords of a key. (b) The harmonic outline stripped of embellishment. figured h. That in which the chord progressions are embellished variously; opposed to plain or natural h., the common triad. forbidden h. A chord whose construction or approach is contrary to the rules of Harmony. suspended h. That in which one or more notes are suspended. pure h. (as of a string-quintet). Opposed to tempered h., as of a piano. Vide TEMPERAMENT. strict h. That which is rigidly obedient to the rules; opposed to free h. Two-part (etc.) h. That in which two (or more) parts appear. (See articles Harmony In Practice, page 744, and Modern Harmony, page 758.)

harp, E., harpe (ärp), F. A stringed triangular instr. of great antiquity and variety. The gut-strings which are plucked with both hands are necessarily diatonic. In the old single-action harp (key of E flat, compass F'-d''''') the notes could be raised a half-tone by the use of pedals. Thanks to the ingenuity of Sebastian Erard, who in 1820 perfected the "double-action harp," all keys are obtainable on the modern harp in fairly quick succession, by the manipulation of seven pedals each raising a string and all its octaves a half or a whole tone. Thus by sharpening or flattening the proper tones, any key may be obtained. The natural scale is C_b, and the more sharps in the key the less the sonority; double flats and sharps are impossible, and remote modulation difficult. There are 46 (or 47) strings, compass C' flat-f'''' (or g''''', flat). double h. One with 2 rows of differently tuned strings. triple h. (such as the Welsh). One with 3 rows. Æolian h., h. éolienne. Vide ÆOLIAN. couched h. The spinet. pointed h. Vide SPITZ-HARPE. chromatic h. Inv. by Pfranger; it has, however, too many strings. jew's harp. A small instr. with metal tongue, played upon by placing it between the teeth, and striking with the tongue and the finger; the breath determines the tone; known in the trade as "Irish harp." h. instruments. Those whose strings are not bowed.

harpechorde (ärp-körd), F., harpicordo (är-pi-kör'-dō), I. The harpsichord. harpeggiren (här-pēd-jē'rēn), G. Vide ARPEGGIATE.

harpe-lute. Vide DITAL. harp-pedal. The soft pedal of a piano.

harpo-lyre. A 3-necked, 21-stringed guitar, inv. by Salomon, 1829.

harp'secol. Vide HARPSICHORD.

harp'sichord. A precursor of the modern piano, whose strings were set in vibration by jacks carrying quills or bits of hard leather (instead of tangents, as in the clavichord). Sometimes it had more than one key-board as in the vis-à-vis (vê-zâ-vê), which had a key-board at each end. The double h. had 2 unison strings and an octave for each tone; and stops for varying the use of these. The harmonica h. is an harmonica with key-board.

harp-style. Arpeggio style.

harp-way tuning. Early English accordatures of the viol da gamba facilitating arpeggios.

hasur or hasur (hâ'-zoor), Heb. A Hebrew instr. of 10 strings.

hart, G. Major; hard; unprepared.

h. vermindeter Dreiklang. A triad with major 3d and diminished 5th.

hartklingend. Harsh-sounding.

hâte (ât), F. Haste, speed.

haubois (ô-bwâ), F. An oboe.

Haupt (howpt), G. Head, principal.

H.-accent. Principal accent. H.-akkord. Fundamental triad. H.-gesang, H.-melodie. Principal melody. H.-kadenz. Full cadence. H.-kirche. Cathedral. H.-manual. The great manual; the great organ.

H.-note. 1. The principal note in a shake, turn or trill. 2. The chord-note. 3. Accented note. 4. Melody-note. H.-periode. Principal period. H.-probe. The final rehearsal. H.-satz. Principal theme, subject or idea. H.-schluss. Final cadence. H.-septime. Dominant 7th. H.-stimme. Principal part. H.-thema. Principal theme. H.-ton. 1. Fundamental or principal tone. 2. The tonic. 3. The 5th in a minor triad. H.-tonart. The principal key. H.-werk. Great organ.

hausse (ôs), F. Nut of a bow.

hausser (ôs-sâ), F. To raise the pitch.

haut (ô), haute (ôte), F. Acute, shrill, high. haute-contre (ôt-kôntr). High tenor. haute-dessus (ôt-dês-sû). High treble, soprano. hautement (ôt-mân). Haughtily. haute-taille (ôt-tâ-ê). High tenor.

hautb. Abbr. of Hautboy.

hautbois (ô-bwâ), F., hautboy (ho'-boy), E. The oboe. 2. An 8-ft. reed-stop. h.-d'amour. An organ-stop. Vide OBOE. hautboy-clarion.

Vide OCTAVE HAUTBOY.

H.-bes (hâ-bês), G. B double flat.

H.-dur (hâ-door). B major.

head. 1. The part of the note which marks its position on the staff.

2. Point of a bow. 3. Membrane of a drum. 4. The part above the neck of violins, etc., containing the pegs.

head voice. The upper or highest register of the voice.

heel. The wooden brace fastening the neck of violins, etc., to the body.

Heerhorn (hâr'-hörn), G. A military trumpet. Heerpauke (hâr'pow-ke), G. Old kettle-drum, tymbal. Heerpauker. Kettle-drummer.

heftig (hêf'-tîkh), G. Boisterous, passionate. Heftigkeit (kît). Vehemence.

heimlich (hîm'-lîkh), G. Secret, stealthy, mysterious.

heiss (his), G. Hot, ardent.

heiter (hî'tër), G. Serene, glad.

Heldenlied (hêl'dên-lêt), G. Hero-song. heldenmüthig (mü-tîkh).

Heroic. Heldtenor. Dramatic tenor.

hel'icon, E., Hel'ikon, G. 1. A military bass brass wind-instr., carried over the shoulder; scales, F, E flat, C and B flat (the lowest tone of the bass of which is B₁). 2. Ancient 9-stringed device showing the theory of intervals.

hell (hêl), G. Clear, bright.

helper. An octave-pipe set beside one of 8-ft. pitch to add to its brilliance.

hem'i, G. Half. hemidemisemi-quaver (-rest). A 64th note (or rest). hemidiapen'te. Diminished fifth. hemidit'onos, Gr. Minor third.

hemio'la, hemio'lia, Gr. 1. The ratio 3:2. 2. Quintuple time. 3. Interval of a 5th. 4. A triplet. 5. Vide NOTATION (COLOUR).

hemiope, Gr. An ancient three-holed flute.

hemiphrase. One bar of a phrase.

hemito'nium, Gr. A semitone in Greek music (ratio 256:243).

heptachord. 1. Interval of a seventh. 2. A 7-stringed inst. 3. A Greek series of 7 tones with half-tone step between the 3d and 4th.

heptade (hêp'-tâd), hep'tadechord, E. Vide ELLS.

heptam'eris, Gr. A seventh part of a meris.

- Herabstrich (här'-äp'strikh), G. Down-bow. Heraufstrich (här'-owf'strikh). Up-bow.
- heraufgehen (här'-owf'gäen), G. To ascend.
- hero'ic, E., heroisch (här'-ō-ish), G., héroïque (ä-rō-ék), F. Bold, brave. Vide EROICA.
- Herstrich (här-strikh), G. Down-bow (on 'cello and double-bass). Herunterstrich, G. Down-bow (on the violin, etc.).
- hervorgehoben (här-för'ghē-hō'ben), hervorhebend (hä'bēnt), hervortretend (trä-tēnt), G. With emphasis.
- Herz (hërts), G. "Heart." Vide TASSEAU.
- herzig (hërts-ikh), herzlich (līkh), G. Tender.
- Hes (hēs), G. B flat when directly derived from B natural (or H). Heses, B double flat.
- heulen (hoi'-lēn), G. To cipher.
- hexachord, Gr., hexachorde (ēx-ä-körd), F. 1. A scale, or system, of six sounds. 2. A sixth. 3. A six-stringed lyre.
- hexam'eron, Gr. Group of six pieces.
- hex'aphonic. Composed of six voices.
- hey de guise (ē-dü-gēze), F. A country-dance.
- hia'tus. A gap.
- hidden. 1. Obscured, covered, yet implied; thus in the skip, say, from e to g, the tone f is implied though not struck or dwelt on; it could be called hidden. But the term is used rather of intervals similarly implied, thus in the progression, say from e-c to g-d, the tone f is passed over, and as f makes with c the same interval as g with d, that is, a perfect fifth, the progression becomes a hidden or implied fifth, and is put under the same ban by stricter theorists, though sanctioned by free practice. Similarly a progression, as of g-b' to c-c' contains hidden octaves. 2. h. canon. Close canon.
- Hief (hēf), Hiefstoss (shōss), G. Sound of the hunting-horn. Hiefhorn, Hifthorn (hīft), Hüfthorn (hūft). A wooden hunt-horn with 2 or 3 notes, and in 3 pitches: H-zinke (tsīnk-kē). High. Rüdenhorn (rüd'-n). Low. Halb-rüdenhorn. Medium.
- hierophon (här'-ō-fōn), Gr. Singer of hymns.
- higgai'on se'lah, Heb. A term, perhaps calling for stringed instr. and trumpets.
- high. 1. Acute in pitch. 2. Upper, or first, as h. soprano. high bass. A barytone. higher rhythm. A rhythm composed of smaller ones. High mass. Vide MASS. h. tenor. Counter-tenor. h. treble clef. The G clef on the first line.
- hilfs-. Same as hülfs-.
- Hinaufstrich (hīn-owf'strikh), G. Up-bow on the violin, etc. Hinstrich (hīn'strikh), G. Up-bow on 'cello and double-bass.
- Hintersatz, G. An old mixture-stop, re-enforcing the open diapason.

- His (his), G. B♯. hisid (his'is), G. B double sharp.
- H.-moll (hä'möl), G. B minor.
- Hoboe (hō-bō'-ē), Hoboy (hō-bōē), G. Oboe. Hobo'ist, G. Oboist.
- hoch (hōkh), G. High, sharp, very. Hochamt (hōkh'āmt). High Mass. h. feierlich (fī'-ēr-līkh). Very solemn. H.-gesang, H.-lied (lēt) Ode, hymn. H.-horn. Oboe. H.-muth (moot). Elevation, pride. Hochzeitsgedicht (tsīts), Hochzeitslied. Wedding-song. Hochzeitsmarsch. Wedding-march. höchsten (hēkh'-shēn), G. Highest.
- hock'et, hocku'etus. 1. An abrupt rest. 2. Old English part-music full of rests and abruptness.
- Hof (hóf), G. Court; hence, H.-kapelle (Konzert). Court orchestra (concert). H.-musikant (moo-zi-kant). Court musician. H.-organist. Court organist.
- höflich (hēf'līkh), G. Graceful. Höflichkeit (kīt). Grace.
- Höhe (hā'ē), G. Height, acuteness; upper register of; as Oboen-höhe.
- hoheit (hō'hīt), G. Dignity, loftiness.
- Hohlflöte (hōl'flā'-tē), G. "Hollow-toned flute." Open flue-stop of various pitches; in the smaller called Hohlpfeifen. The mutation-stop in the fifth is called Hohlquinte.
- hok'et, hock'et. A quint-stop.
- hold (hōlt'), G. Pleasing, sweet.
- hold. The fermate. holding-note. A note sustained while others are in motion.
- hold'ing. Old E. Burden.

Holzbläser (hólts'blā-zér), G. Player(s) on Holzblasinstrumente, or wood-wind instruments.

hölzernes Gelächter (hélts'-ér-nēs gē-lēkh'-tēr), G. Xylophone.

Holzflöte (hólts'flā-tē), G. "Wood-flute"; a stop.

Holzharmonika, G. Xylophone.

hom'ophone. A letter or character denoting the same sound as another; thus a# and bb are homophones. homophon'ic, homoph'onous. 1. Noncontrapuntal, lyric, marked by one melody in predominance. Vide POLYPHONIC. 2. In unison. Vide ANTIPHONIC. homoph'ony, E. homophonie (óm-óf-ón-ē), F. Music that is homophonic 1 or 2.

hook. The stroke added to the stem of notes smaller than $\frac{1}{4}$ notes.

hop'per. In piano action, the escapement-lever.

Hop'ser, Hops-tanz (tänts), G. Country-dance. Hopswalzer (hóps' väl-tsér), G. Quick waltzes.

hoq'uetus. Hocket.

hora (pl. horae), L. Hour(s). horae canonicæ. Canonic hours, those at which services are held: lauds. Sunrise. prime. First hour (6 a. m.). tierce (or terce). 3d (9 a. m.). Sext. 6th (noon). nones. 9th (3 p. m.). vespers. Evening. compline. Final. Services during the night are called nocturns; the word matins includes both nocturns and lauds. horae regulares. Chant sung at regular hours.

horn (G. pl. Hörner) (hörn'ér), E. & G. General name for all metal wind-instruments. Specifically, the French horn, a brass conical tube variously curved, with a flaring bell at one end, and a cupped mouthpiece at the other; the shape of this mouthpiece, and the ratio of the width to the length of the tube determining the quality of the instr. The old natural horn was diatonic, producing only the tones of its natural scale, some intermediate tones being obtained by putting the hand in the bell, or "stopping" the tone. The key of the horn was changed by taking out one section of its tube (a crook), and inserting a section longer or shorter, thus lowering or raising the key. The tone series was thus incomplete, and the stopped tones were inaccurate. The natural tones depend on the amount of wind-pressure (or in F, embouchure, liping) which must vary with each note according to the natural scale (see ACOUSTICS).

The horn of this century has gradually displaced the natural horn. It is provided with valves (or auxiliary tubes), which practically lengthen or shorten the tube instantaneously. The tone is produced by embouchure combined with valve-manipulation until a complete chromatic scale is obtainable. Stopped tones are now not necessary, though available for special effects; they are called for by the sign \dagger , by the word "stopped," or by "son bouché" (sôn boo-shā), and are weirdly tragic or romantic.

The range of the horn depends upon its key, the scale of each consisting of a fundamental tone, and the natural series of partials (vide ACOUSTICS), the intermediate tones between the 3d and the 16th partial being obtained by valves or stopping. The horn in C thus sounds C, c, g-c', from g to c' being nearly complete chromatically, the upper notes being risky. The other horns are lower by the interval between their key and C; they are B flat, A, A flat, G, F, E, E flat, D, C basso, B flat basso. The keys F# (G flat), C# (D flat), B and A basso are obtained not by changing crooks, but by drawing out a special slide which lowers the key a semitone. In valve-horns the F horn is by far most common. Music for horns is now always written in the G clef, the F clef being used for the low notes, which are always written an octave lower than they sound. For convenience of embouchure, the notes are written as if the horn were always in C, and the player so plays it; but the crook used governs the tone, and a C on the staff sounds as the F below on an F horn, as A flat on the A flat horn, etc. Alpine h. A wooden horn 8 ft. long. basset h. Vide BASSET. hunting-h. The primitive natural or French horn. horn-band. A band of trumpeters. A Russian H-B. is one in which each hunting-horn plays but one note. horning. Vide SHIVAREE. Hornmusik, G. Music for the brass. Hornquinten, G. The hidden fifths prevalent in music for two horns. Hornsordin', G. A conical or pear-shaped mute inserted in the bell.

- hornpipe. An old E. shawm with a bell of horn; hence, an old E. dance of great vivacity, in 3-4 or 4-4 time.
- Hosan'na, Hosian'na, Heb. "Save, I pray," an interjection in prayer, hence part of the Sanctus. Vide MASS.

- houl (howl). A Persian military drum.
- hours. Vide HORÆ.
- hreol (wrā'ól). 1. A Danish peasant-dance.
- H. S. Abbr. for Hauptsatz.
- huehuētl, huehuītl (wā-wāt'-l). An Aztec drum 3 feet high with a membrane that could be tightened at will, changing the pitch and furnishing an harmonic bass.
- Hüfthorn (hüft-hörn), G. Bugle-horn.
- hug'gab, Heb. 1. An organ. 2. Pan's pipes.
- huitpiéd (wēt-pi-ä), F. Eight feet (of stops). huitpiéds. An organ with no stops larger than 8 ft.
- Huldigungsmarsch (hool-dī-goongks-märsh), G. A solemn march for reviews.
- Hülf's- (hülf's), G. Auxiliary. Hülf's-linien (lě-ni-ēn). Leger-lines. H-note. H-ton. Auxiliary, accessory note. H-stimme (shīm'mē). A mutation-stop.
- Hummel (hoom'mel), Hümmelchen (hīm'mēl-khēn), G. 1. A bagpipe. 2. In organs the thorough-bass drone. 3. The Balalaika because it had a sympathetic or drone-string. 4. The drones in a hurdy-gurdy.
- hummen (hoom'mēn), G. To hum.
- Humor (hoo'-mor), G. Humour, whim.
- Humoreske (hoo'mo-rēs'ke), G., humoresque (ū-mōr-ēsk), F. A humorous or whimsical composition.
- hunting-horn. A bugle or French horn. hunting-song. Song in praise of the chase. hunt's-up. A boisterous morning-song.
- hurdy-gurdy. An old instr. with four strings, acted on by a wheel rubbed in resin. Two of the strings are stopped by certain keys, the others act as a drone-bass; compass g-g''.
- hurry. Premonitory roll of drum or tremolo of strings in stage-music.
- hurtig (hoor'tikh), G. Quick, allegro.
- H-keit (kīt). Agility.
- hydraul'icon, hydraulic organ. An instr. older than the wind-organ, inv. 180 B.C., by Ktesibios of Alexandria, the wind-pressure being regulated by water.
- hymn, F., hymne (ēm̃n), F., Hymne (hēm'nē), G. A sacred or patriotic song. h. vesper. A hymn sung in the R. C. Vesper service. hymnal, hymn-book. A collection of hymns. hymnology, hymnologie (ēm-nöl-ō-zhē). See page 749.
- hymnus, L. A hymn. h. Ambrosianus. The Ambrosian chant.
- hy'pate, Gr. The uppermost lyre-string but the lowest in tone. hypaton. Lowest tetrachord. See page 762.
- hypatho'ides. The lower tones in the Greek scale.
- hyper (hi'-per), Gr. Over, above, of intervals, "super," or "upper" (as hyperdiapa'son, the octave above; h-diapen'te, the 5th above; h-dito'nos, the 3d above, etc.); of the Greek transposition scales and ecclesiastical octave species, "a fourth higher"; the Greek octave species "a fifth higher," or "a fourth lower." Vide MODOS for such words as hyperæolian, etc.
- hypo, Gr. Below, under; of intervals, "sub," or "lower." hypodiapa'son. The lower octave. h-diapen'te. The fifth below. h-dito'nos. The third below. For the names of the Greek transposition scales and ecclesiastical modes, as hypoæolian, etc., see page 762.
- HzbI. Abbr. of Holzbläser (q. v.).

I

imitation (pron. in F. im-y-tās-yōn), imitatio (ēm-y-tā'tsī-ō), I. The repetition by a second voice (the consequent or answer) of a figure, subject or theme first announced by another (the antecedent or subject). If this repetition be exact, interval for interval, note-value for note-value, the imitation is strict or canonic, vide CANON; otherwise free. i. at the 5th, octave, etc. That in which the answer follows the subject at the interval of a 5th, octave, etc. i. augmented or i. by augmentation. That in which the answer is in notes of greater value than those of the subject. diminished i. or i. by diminution. A style of imitation in which the answer is given in notes of less value than those of the subject. freely inverted i. That in which the order of successive notes is not strictly retained. i. in contrary motion. That in which the rising intervals of the subject descend in the answer and vice versa. i. in different divisions. That in which the subject is answered in a different division of a measure; for instance, beginning on the accented is answered on the unaccented. i. in similar motion. That in which the answer retains the order of notes of the subject. retrograde i. (or i. per recte e retro), cancrizans, or cancrizante. That in which the subject is taken backwards in the answer. reversed retrograde i. That in which the subject is taken backwards and also in contrary motion in the answer. strictly inverted i. That in which note-values are precisely answered in contrary motion. tonal i. That which does not alter the key.

imitation pipes and draw-knobs are dummies of more beauty than use.

imitative music. That aiming to mimic the operations of nature, as water-falls, thunder, etc.

imitato (im-y-tā'tō), I. Imitated. imitazione (tā-tsī-ō'nē). Imitation.

interrupted. Vide CADENCE.

interruzione (root-sî-ô-nê), I. Interruption.

interval, Intervall (în-têr-făl'), G., intervale (ăn-têr-văl), F., intervallo (văl'lô), I., interval'um, L. The distance, or difference in pitch, between tones, reckoned upwards (unless specially stated). The intervals are, the first or prime (which is identity, C for instance being its own prime); the second (as c-d); the third or terce (as c-e); the fourth or quart (as c-f); the fifth or quint (as c-g); the sixth or sext (as c-a); the seventh or sept (as c-b); the eighth or octave (as c-c'); the ninth (as c-d'), etc. Those within the octave are called simple; those over the octave, compound, since a tenth is an octave plus a third, etc.

Intervals are qualified also by their mode; those in the major key of their lower tone (as a-c#) being called major, those a semitone greater than major are augmented or extreme, superfluous, redundant or sharp; those a semitone less than major are minor (as a-c); those a semitone less than minor are diminished or flat (as a-cb). The first, fourth, fifth and octave are called perfect instead of major, because they do not change their quality as do the others on inversion (q.v.). Other names for intervals are chromatic, containing a note foreign to the key, opposed to diatonic, dissonant, needing resolution; opposed to consonant, enharmonic (q.v.); harmonic when struck simultaneously instead of separately, hence opposed to melodic. Forbidden. Contrary to the rules of Harmony (q.v.). Consecutive (q.v.). A natural interval is that between two tones of a major scale. The ratios of the vibrations of diatonic intervals are prime, 1 : 1 ; second, 8 : 9 ; third, 4 : 5 ; fourth, 3 : 4 ; fifth, 2 : 3 ; sixth, 3 : 5 ; seventh, 8 : 15 ; octave, 1 : 2.

intervening. Intermediate (of a fugue subject).

intimo (în-tî-mô), I. Intimate, expressive. intimis'simo. Most expressive.

intonare (în-tô-nă'rê), I. To intone.

intona'tion. 1. The production of sound by voice or instr., as regards quality and pitch. false 1. That which is untrue to the key or pitch. 2. The initial phrase of the antiphon. 3. Method of singing plain-chant. 4. Vide CHANT. fixed 1. Vide FIXED TONE.

intonato (în-tô-nă'-tô), I. Tuned, set to music.

in'tonator. Monochord.

intonatura (în-tô-nă-too'ră), intonazione (în-tô-nă-tsi-ô-nê), I. Intonation.

intoni(e)ren (în-tô-nê'rên), G. 1. To intone. 2. To voice, as pipes. 3. The voicing.

Intonireisen (nêr'-i-zên), G. A knife used in trimming and tuning pipes.

Intrade (în-tră'-dê), G. A prelude or entrance-music.

intreccio (în-trêt'-chô), I. "Intrigue." A short dramatic work.

intrepidezza (în-tră-pî-dêd'-ză), I. Intrepidity. intrepido (în-tră'-pê-dô), intrepidamen'te. Bold(ly).

introduc'tion, E., introducimen'to (doo-chî'), introduzione (doo-tsi-ô-nê), I. The preliminary measures, or movement preparatory for the main subject.

intro'it (in F. ăn-trwă), introito (în-trô-ê'-tô), I., intro'itus, L. "Entrance"; a hymn or antiphon sung in R. C. service while the priest goes to the altar; in the Anglican Church Communion, when the minister goes to the table. In the Ambrosian ritual called Ingressa.

intuonare (în-too-ô-nă'rê), I. To intone.

- inven'tion (in F. ān-vāns-yōn), invenzione (in-vēn-tsi-ō'-nē), I. A short informal contrapuntal study with one theme.
- Inventions (horn) (in-vēn'tsi-ōns), F. A Waldhorn fitted with crooks by Werner, 1760.
- inver'sio, L., inver'sion, E. The transposition of the elements of (a), chords, (b) intervals, (c) themes, (d) parts. (a) The triad is "inverted" from its fundamental position with the root in the bass, to the first inversion with the 3d in the bass, and the second i. when the fifth is in the bass (a 6-4 chord), etc., vide CHORD. (b) The inversion of intervals is the lowering of the upper tone an octave, thus bringing the lower note above, and the upper below; for example, to invert a major 6th, e'-b-c', we lower c' an octave, securing c-e'b, a minor 3d. The new product of an inversion is always the difference between the first interval and the number 9, e. g., a 6th inverted becomes a 3d, a 5th inverted becomes a 4th, etc. The result of inversion is to change major intervals to minor, and vice versa; and augmented to diminish, and vice versa; but perfect remain perfect. (c) A theme is inverted by being repeated backwards, hence, retrograde inversion, or inversio cancrizans, "crab-like." (d) Two parts are inverted when the lower is raised by an octave (inversio in octavam acutam), or by a fifth, tenth, twelfth, etc., or when the higher is lowered by an octave (inversio in octavam gravem, or inferiorem), a fifth, tenth, twelfth, etc. (vide COUNTERPOINT).
- invert, inverted. Vide INVERSION. A pedal-point in any part other than the lowest is called inverted. A turn commencing with the lowest note is inverted.
- invi'tatory, E., invitato'rio, Sp., invitato'rium, L. 1. An antiphon in the R. C. Matins. 2. In the Anglican Church, the versicle "Praise ye the Lord," and the response sung at matins. 3. In the Greek Church the "O come let us worship" sung thrice before the psalms at the canonical hours.
- invocazione (kā-tsi-ō'-nē), I. Invocation.
- Io'nian, Ion'ic. See page 762.
- ira (ē'-rā), I. Anger, wrath. irato (ē-rā'-tō), iratamen'te. Passionate(ly).
- Irish harp. 1. An ancient instr. having more strings than the lyre. 2. Trade name for "Jew's harp."
- irlandais (ēr-lān-dē'), F., irländisch (ēr'lēnt-īsh), G. An air or dance in the Irish style.
- iron harp. A semicircular arrangement of tuned iron rods which vibrate sympathetically when a violin is played.
- ironico (ē-rō'-nī-kō), I., ironicamen'te. Ironical(ly).
- irregular, E., irregolare (ēr-rā-gō-lā-rē), I. Not according to strict rule or practice. Vide CADENCE.
- irresoluto (ēr-rā-zō-loo'-tō), I. Irresolute.
- isdegno (ēs-dān'-yō), I. Indignation.
- i'sochronal, Gr., isoch'ronous. Uniform in time.
- i'son. In Greek Church chant, the movable tonic.
- isoton'ic. Used of a system of intervals in which all concords are tempered alike, and contain twelve equal semitones.
- istes'so, I. The same. il tempo. The same time (as before).
- istrepito (ēs-trā-pē'-tō), I. Noise, bluster.
- istrionica (ēs-trī-ō'-nī-kā), I. Histrionic.
- istrumentale (ēs-troo-mēn-tā'lē), I. Instrumental. istrumentazione (tā-tsi-ō'nē). Instrumentation. istru-men'to. An instrument.
- Italian mordent. Shake or trill of a tone with the next above. Italian sixth. Vide ALTERED CHORDS.
- Italian strings. Catgut strings largely made in Rome.
- italiano (ē-tā-lī-ā'-nō), I., italienisch (ē-tā-lī-ā'-nīsh), G., italien(ne) (ē-tāl-yān [or yēn]), F. Italian.
- i'te, mis'sa est (ecclesia), L. "Depart, the congregation is dismissed." Vide MASS; from the word missa the word mass is derived.

J

Jack, I. 1. An upright slip of wood on the back end of a key-lever, carrying a crow-quill or piece of hard leather which projected at right angles (in the harpsichord), or a metal tangent (in the clavichord), and which struck and set in motion a string. The quill or the leather served as a plectrum. 2. The "hop-per."

Jagd (yäkht), G. Hunt, hunting. Jagdhorn, Jagdzink (tsínk). Hunting-horn, bugle-horn. Jagdruf (roof). Sound of the horn. J-lied (lēt). Hunting-song. J-sinfonie (sín-fō-nē'). A symphony of the hunt. J-stück. A hunting-piece.

Jägerchor (jä'-khēr-kór), G. Chorus of hunters. Jägerhorn. Hunting-horn.

jaitale (yäl'-tāj). The sole musical instr. of Tartary, a slender box of fir, about 4 ft. long, over which six wire strings are stretched. It is played with both hands.

jaleo (hä-lä'-ō), Sp. A Spanish dance in 3-8 time, moderato, for one person.

Jalousieschweller (yäl-oo-zē'-shvél-lēr), G. "Venetian-blind" swell.

Janitscharenmusik (yā-nít-shä'-rēn-moo-zēk'), G., jan'izary music. Military music for cymbals, triangles, etc.

Jankó. Vide KEY-BOARD.

jazz. See history of, page 750.

jeu (zhü) pl. jeux (zhü), F. 1. Play; style of playing on an instr. 2. A stop on the organ, harmonium, etc. 3. The organ-power, as grand j. (grän), or plain j. (plän). Full organ. demi-j. Half-power. j. à bouche (ä boosh). Flue-stop. j. céleste (sä-lēst). Vide CELESTE. j. d'anche (dänsh). Reed-stop. j. d'anges (dänzh). Vox angelica. j. d'échos (dä'-kō). Echo-stop. j. de flûtes (flüt). Flute-stop. j. de mutation (mü-täs-yōā). Mutation, or a mixture-stop. j. de timbres (tänbr). Glockenspiel. j. de violes (vē-öl). Consort of viols. j. de voix humaine (vwä ü-mēn). Vox humana. j. d'orgues (dörg). Register, or row of pipes. jeux forts (fôr). Loud stops.

Jew's harp or jewstrump. Vide HARP.

jig. A light, brisk dance in 6-8 or 12-8 time. Vide SUTRE.

jingles. The disks of metal on a tambourine.

jobel (yō'-bēl), Heb. Trumpets or horns.

joc'ulator. A jongleur.

Jodler (yöt'-lēr), G. A style of singing affected by the Tyrolean, falsetto alternating rapidly with chest-register. jodeln (yō'dēln). To sing in such style.

jongleur (zhōn-glür), F. A hired or strolling musician. Vide TROUBADOUR.

jota (hō-tä), Sp. A Spanish dance in rapid 3-8 time.

jouer de (zhoo-ä-dü), F. To play upon (as an instr.).

jour (zhoor), F. "Day." corde à j. Open string.

ju'ba. Part of the breakdown dance of the American negro.

Jubal (yoo'-bäl), G. A 2- or 4-ft. stop.

Jubelflöte (yoo-bēl-flä'-tē), G. A stop.

Jubelgesang, Jubellied (lēt). Song of jubilee. Jubelhorn. Key-bugle.

jubelnd (yoo'-bēlnt), G. Rejoicing.

Jubila'te, L. "Be joyful." The name for the roth Psalm in the Anglican Church.

jubila'tio, L. The cadence on the last syllable of "Alleluia" in R. C. music.

jubiloso (yoo-bī-lō'-sō), I. Jubilant.

ju'bilus, L. 1. An elaborate passage sung to one vowel. 2. Jubilation.

Judenharfe (yoo'-dēn), G. Jew's harp.

Jula (yoo'-la), G. An old 5 $\frac{1}{4}$ -ft. stop.

jump. 1. A progression by a skip. 2. Vide DUMP.

Jungfernregal (yoonk-färn-rä'-gäl) or J-stimme, G. Vox angelica.

Jupiter symphony. Mozart's 49th, in C major.

just. Used of consonant intervals, voices, strings, pipes, etc., that speak or sound with exactness.

juste (zhüst), F. Accurate, perfect (of intervals). justesse (zhüs-tēs'). Exactness of intonation.

K

[NOTE.—Many German words are spell either with "C" or "K," preferably the latter.]

Kabaro (kä-bä'-rō). A small Egyptian drum.

Kadenz (kä-dents'), G. 1. Cadence (q.v.). 2. Cadenza.

kalamaiika (käl-ä-mä'-kä). A lively Hungarian dance in 2-4 time.

Kalkant (käl-känt'), G. Bellows-treader. K-glocker. Signal-bell to the blower.

Kammer (käm'-mēr), G. Chamber (q.v.). K-kantate (kän-tä'-tē). Chamber-cantata. K. komponist. Court-composer. K. konzert. Chamber-concert, or concerto. K. duet,

- C. duet. K. musik, K. spiel (shpēl). Chamber-music. K. musikus (moo'-zi-koos). Member of a prince's private band. K. sänger (zēng-ēr). Court-singer. K. stil (shēl). Style of chamber-music. K. suiten. Chamber-suites. Vide SUITE. K. ton. International pitch. K. virtuosen. Court-virtuoso.

- ker'anim. Vide KEREN.
- ke'ras, Gr. A horn.
- Keraulophon (kē-row'-lō-fōn), G. An 8-ft. stop, a small round hole bored in the pipe near the top promoting the overtones; inv. by Gray and Davidson.
- keren (kēr'-ēn), pl. keranim, Heb. A horn. keren-Jebel (ya-bel). Jubilee horn.
- Kern (kärn), G. The languid (q.v.). K. stimmen. The fundamental stops.
- kerrena (kēr-rā'-nā). The kerana.
- Kes'sel, G. Cup (of a mouthpiece).
- Kesselpauke (pow-kē). Kettle-drum.
- ketch. Old name for catch.
- Ket'tentriller, G. Chain of trills.
- ket'tledrum. A brass or copper kettle over the top of which is stretched a head of vellum, tightened by a ring and tuned by screws, or by cords and braces. Kettledrums are usually played in pairs with sticks having flexible handles and soft knobs. Each has a compass of a fifth; the lower may be tuned to any note from F to c, and the higher B flat to f.
- key. 1. A family of chords and a chain of tones (i. e., a scale) finding their centre and point of rest in a certain tone (the tonic) from which the key takes its name. All keys conform to the standard for major keys, or to that for minor keys. The signature in which the number of sharps or flats of a major key is written serves as the signature for its related minor key, the tonic of which is a minor third below. The key of C has neither sharps nor flats, the key a fifth above (G) has one sharp, the key a fifth below (F) has one flat, and so the progression continues, forming (in a tempered instrument. Vide TEMPERAMENT) what is called the circle of fifths, as F# and Gb are enharmonic keys traversing the same tones. The following ingenious chart from Riemann's Dictionary tabulates the keys and their signatures concisely, the flats and sharps appearing in the same order on the signatures as here:

with piano-key action, inv. by Dietz and Second, 1819.

key-note, key-tone. The tonic. key-ship. Tonality.

key-trumpet. One with keys or valves.
khal'il. Hebrew flute or oboe.

attendant, or related k. Vide RELATED. chromatic k. One with sharps or flats, opposed to natural k. extreme k. A remote, unrelated k. parallel k. a. Related. b. Used of a major and a minor key with the same tonic but different signatures. 2. Old name for clef. 3. A mechanical lever for controlling tone, whether digital or foot-key. 4. One of such keys as those on the outside of a flute covering certain holes. 5. A tuning-hammer. 6. A lever controlling organ-pallets.

key-action. The entire mechanism of a keyed instr.

key-board. The series of digitals or pedals of a piano, organ or such instr. The idea of having a key-board so arranged that each digital can be struck in 3 different places seems to have occurred first to Paul von Jankó, who in 1882 inv. the Janko key-board, which has the look of six contiguous key-boards on a rising plane. The advantages are that all scales are fingered alike and that the reach of the hand is greatly increased, so that a good hand can cover 14 digitals. The consequent simplification and enrichment of piano-resources are inestimably valuable. It may be applied to any key-board and is sometimes called a chromatic key-board.

key-bugle. Vide BUGLE.

key-chord. The triad on the tonic.

keyed. Furnished with keys, as a flute, or piano. keyed violin. Piano violin.

key-stop violin. One having a finger-board fitted with thirty-three keys acting as stops perpendicularly upon the strings.

key-harp. An adjustment of tuning-forks over cavities of sonorous metal.

khasan (khä'zän), Heb. Chief singer in a synagogue.

Kicks, G. Vide GOOSE.

Kielflügel (kēl'-flü-khēl), G. Wing-shaped harpsichord.

kin chi (kǐn chē). A Chinese dulcimer with 5 to 25 silk strings.

Kinderscenen (kǐnt'-ě-r-zā-ně'n), G. Childhood scenes. Kinderstück (shtük). An easy piece.

king chi (kǐng chē). A Chinese instr. with sixteen pendent stones graduated and struck with a hammer.

kinnor (kîn'-nôr), Heb. A small harp, or lyre.

kin'tal. Small Indian cymbals.

Kirche (kēr'-khè), G. (in compounds Kirchen). Church. K. kantate (kān-tā'-tè). A cantata for church service. K. komponist'. Composer of church music. K. dienst (dēnst). Church service. K. fest (fēsht). Church festival. K. gesang (gē-zāng), K. lied (lēt). Canticle, psalm, or hymn. K. musik (moo-zēk'). Church music. K. schluss (shloos). Plagal cadence. K. stil (shstēl). "Church style"; in an ecclesiastical mode. K. tōne (tān'-è). The church modes.

kis'sar. 5-stringed Nubian lyre.

kit. A small pocket violin, with 3 strings, $c'-g'-d''$.

kitra (kī-trā'), A guitar-like instr. of the Arabs.

kitha'ra, Gr. Greek lyre.

Klage (klä'-khě), G. Lamentation.
K.-gedicht (gě-dīkht), K.-lied (lēt).
Elegy. K.-ton (tōn). Plaintive tune, or melody. klagend (klä'-khěnt).
Plaintive.

Klang (kläng), pl. Klänge (kläng'-ě),
G. 1. Sound, ringing. 2. Vide

CLANG. K.-boden. Sound-board.
K.-far'-be. Sound-colour, clang-tint.
K.-geschlecht (gě-shlěkht). A genus.

- or mode. K-lehre (lä-rě). Acoustics. K-folge (fól-khě). A chord-progression in point of tonality. K-figuren (fi-goo'-rěn). Nodal figures. K-leiter (li-těr). A scale. K-saal (zäl). Concert-room. K-schlüssel, K-vertretung. Vide KLANG-KEY. klanglos (kläng'lös), G. Soundless.
- Klappe (kläp'pě), G. Valve (of a wind-instr.). Klappenflügelhorn (flü'-gěl), G. Keyed bugle. Klappenhorn. Keyed horn. Klapptrompete. A keyed trumpet.
- klar (klär), G. Clear, bright. Klarheit (klär'-hit). Clearness, plainness, klärllich (klär-lkh), G. Clearly, distinctly.
- Klarinette (klä-rī-nět'-tě), G. Clarinet. klassisch (kläs'sish), G. Classical.
- Klausel (klow'-zěl), G. A cadence. Bassklausel. The progression of the bass in a final cadence from dominant to tonic.
- Klavatur (klä-fī-ä-toor'), G. Key-board. K-harfe (or Klavier-harfe). A harp inv. by Lutz, Vienna, 1893, in which the strings are plucked by plectra manipulated by a key-board. The same man in the same year inv. the K-zither, a small piano with single strings, plucked by means of a key-board.
- Klavier (klä-fēr'). 1. Key-board. 2. Key-board instr., especially the clavichord (formerly the piano). Klavierauszug (ows-tsookh). Arrangement for piano. K-harfe. Vide KLAVIATUR-HARFE. K-harmonium. An harmonium shaped like a grand piano, inv. by Woroniecki, 1893. K-hoboe. The harmoniphon. K-mässig (mēs-sikh). Suitable for, in the style of the piano. K-satz. Piano-music, or manner. K-sonate (klä-fēr'-sō-nä-tě). Piano-sonata. K-spieler (shpē'-lěr), G. Piano-player. K-violoncello. A 'cello in a frame with a key-board arrangement for the left hand, of special advantages; inv. by de Vlaminck, Brussels, 1893. K-violoncello. A viola with key-board attachment.
- klein (klīn), G. Small, minor. K-bass (klīn-bäs), K-bassgeige (gi'-khě), G. Violoncello. Kleinegedacht. A flute-stop. kleinlaut (lowt), G. Small or low in tone of voice.
- klingsbar (klīng'-bär), G. Resonant. Klingel (klīng'-ěl). A bell. klingseln (klīng'-ēln). To jingle. klingend (klīng-ěnt). Ringing. klingende Stimme. Speaking (as opposed to dummy) pipes. Klingklang (klīng-kläng). Tinkling, bad music.
- Klutter (kloot'-těr), G. A bird-call.
- Knabenstimme (knä'-bēn-shtīm-mě), G. "Boy's voice," counter-tenor.
- knee-stop. A lever worked by the knee, and (a) controlling the wind, (b) opening the swell-box, (c) drawing all the stops.
- knell. The tolling of a bell.
- Knie (knē, not nē). Knee. K-gitarre. Guitare d'amour. K-zug (tsookh). Knee-stop. K-geige (knē-gī'-khě), G. Viol da gamba. K-rohre (rō-rě), G. A mitred pipe.
- Knopffregal (knöpf-rä'-gäl), G. An obs. reed-stop.
- Knote (knō'-tě), G. Node. K-punkt. Nodal point.
- kobsa (kób'-shä), Rus. A crude lute-like instrument.
- Kollektivzug (kól-lěk-těf'-tsookh), or Kombinationspedale (kóm-bī-nä-tsī-ōns-pě-dä'-lě), G. Combination pedal.
- Kollo (kól'-lō), Jap. A Japanese harp.
- kol'lern, G. To sing in a thin reedy voice.
- Kolophon'. Resin.
- Kombinationstöne (kóm-bī-nä-tsī-ōns'-tā-ně). Resultant tones. Vide also KOLLEKTIVZUG.
- Komiker (kō'-mī-kěr), G. A writer of burlettas; comic performer.
- komisch (kō'-mish), G. Comical.
- Komma (kóm'-mä), G. Comma.
- komponi(e)ren (kóm-pō-nē'-rěn), G. To compose. komponi(e)rt. Composed. Komponist'. A composer.
- Komposition (kóm-pō-zē'-tsī-ōn), G. A composition. Kompositionslehre (lä-rě). The art of composition.
- Konservatorium (tō'-rī-oom), G. A conservatory.
- kon'tra, G. Contra. Kontrabass. Double-bass. K-fagott. Double-bassoon. K-oktave. Contra-octave. K-punkt. Counterpoint. K-subjekt. Counter-subject. K-töne (tā-ně). The deepest tones of a bass voice.
- Konzert (kón-tsärt'). Concert; concerto. K-meister (mī-shtěr). First violin; leader. K-oper. Concert opera. K-stück (shtük). A free concerto in one movement, or any short concert-solo.
- koous. A Persian brass drum.

lute (lüt, not loot), E., lut or luth (lüt), F. A very ancient string instr. now obsolete except in the small form of the mandolin and the modified form of the guitar. It was pear-shaped, and had a neck with fretted finger-board. The stringing was various; the largest form having paired strings tuned in unisons, and, besides, a series of strings that did not cross the finger-board but were played upon as a bass. This form required a double neck and was called a theorbo, arch-lute, or chitarrone. The strings, sometimes as many as 13 pairs, were played as in the guitar. Lute-music was written in tablature. Lute-players were called lutists, luters, lutanists, lutenists, or lutinists. A lute-maker was a luthier (lüt'-yā), a name also given then, and now, to violin-makers. The trade and its product are called lutherie (lüt'-rë). lutina. A small lute, or mandolin.
luttuoso (loot-too-ô'-sô), luttuosamen'te, I. Mournful(y).

lyre (lir in E.; in F. lër), lyra (lë'-rā), L., I., and G. 1. A most ancient instr. consisting of a sound-box or board with 2 long curved arms carrying a cross-bar from which descended, across a bridge, the 3 to 10 strings, struck with a plectrum. On the 8-stringed lyre, the strings were thus named, beginning nearest the body: hy'pate (h'pā-të) (the lowest in tone), parhy'pate, lich'anos, me'se, par'amese, trite (trë'-të), paranete, nete (nā'-të). The largest lyre was the cithara, the treble was the chelys. A large 20-stringed instr. on which octaves were played was the magadis. 2. The modern lyra is a rebec, and various bow-instrs. have been called lyres, or *lyre-viol*s, since the 14th cent.; some have a double neck or bijuga like the theorbo (Vide LUTE), including the lyra di braccio (brät'-chô) or arm-viol and archeviole di l., or l. doppia. The l. di gamba is a leg-viol. 1. barbarina. An old instr. resembling the guitar, but played with the bow. I. hex'achordis, Gr. A six-stringed lyre. 1. mendico rum, L. "Beggars' lyre," a hurdygurdy. Lyra-sänger (zëng'-ër), or -spieler (shpë'-lër), G. Performer on the lyre. 3. The modern Stahlspiel.

lyr'ic, lyr'ical, lyrisch (lir'-ish), G. "Fitted to be sung to the lyre," hence used of subjective moods, usually brief and enthusiastic as opposed to narrative, dramatic, or epic. lyric drama is opera. lyric tragedy. A tragic opera. 1. comedy. Comic opera. 1. opera. A ballad opera.

metamor'phoses. Variations.

meter, or metre, E., metre (mĕtr), F.

In music as in verse, the arrangement of rhythmic units, or measures. The m. of hymns is classified by the number of syllables to a line, the metrical foot and the number of lines to a stanza. In Iambic m. or common m. (C. M.), 4 lines alternately 8 and 6 syllables long; common particular, or hallelujah m. (C. P. M.), 886886; long m. (L. M.), 4 lines of 8 syllables; long particular m. (L. P. M.), or long m. six lines, 6 lines of 8; short m. (S. M.), 6686; short particular m. (S. P. M.), 668668; stanzas of 8 lines are called double (C. M. D.; L. M. D.; S. M. D.). Other line-lengths are sevens and sixes (7676), tens (four 10's), hallelujah (666688, or 66664444). In trochaic m. are sixes (four 6's), sixes and fives (6565), sevens (four 7's), eights and sevens (8787). In Dactylic m. are eights, eights, sevens and fours, etc.; elevens (four 11's), and elevens and tens (11, 10, 11, 10), etc. Classic and French metres depend on quantity or length of syllables, instead of on their stress or accentuation as with us. Vide FOOT.

method, E., methode (mă-tōd), F., metodo (mă'-tō-dō), I. A course of instruction; classification; system.

Metrik (măt'-rĕk), G. Metrical art. metrisch (mĕt'-rĭsh). Metrical.

The bass o. in C, Bb and Ab (compass Ab-a'4) the alto o. in F and Eb (compass 2½ octaves); the contrabass o. same compass as the alt. o. but an octave lower. The bass tuba (q.v.) has a richer tone and has displaced it. 2. A powerful 4 or 8 ft. reed-stop.
- opp. Abbr. of oppure.
- opposite. Contrary (of motion, q. v.).
- oppure (ōp-poo'-rē), I. Or, or else.
- opus (ō'-poos), L. Work, composition; as, Op. 10, the 10th composition, or, more commonly, the 10th publication of a composer. opus'culum. A little work. opus post'humum. A work published after the death of the composer.
- orage (ō-rāzh), F. "Storm." 1. An imitative composition. 2. A stop.
- O'ra pro no'bis, L. "Pray for us!" A response to a litany in R. C. service.
- oratoire (ōr-ā-twā), F., orato'rio, I. and E., orato'rium, L. (in G. ō'-rā-tō'-rī-oom). A sacred work constructed like an opera, but performed now without action, costume, or scenery. (See article, page 776.)
- orchésographie (ōr-kā'-zō-grā-fē), F. The science and explanation of dancing. orchestique (tēk), F. Relating to dancing. Orchestik (ōr-kēs-tēk'), G. Art of dancing.
- or'chestra, E. (in I. or-kās-tra), Orchestra (ōr-kēs'-ter), G., orchestre (ōr-kēstr), F. Literally "dancing-place," that used in front of the stage in Greek tragedy for the chorus; the name was given by the first opera-writers (see PERRI, B. D.) to the place occupied by the musicians, thence to the musicians themselves. The word now means the place and its occupants, and the instrs. in general. The modern o. may be (a) large, full, grand, symphony; (b) small. Parts of the orchestra may be designated, as string orchestra, etc. Orchesterverein (fēr-in). An orchestral society. O-stimmen. Orchestral parts. orchestral flute or oboe. A stop. or'chestra'tion. The art or act of arranging music for orchestra. or'chestrate, E., orchestrare (ōr-kēs-trā'-rē), I., orchestri(e)ren (trē'-rēn), G., orchestrer (ōr-kēs-trā), F. To write for orchestra. (See the Story of Orchestra and Band Instruments, page 811; Orchestras In America, page 787; Orchestration of Theatre and Dance Music, page 780, and The Orchestra and Orchestration, page 778.)
- orchestrina (trē'-nā), di camera, I. A small free-reed key-board instr., imitating some orchestral instr. Inv. by W. E. Evans, 1860.
- orchestrino (trē'-nō), I. A piano violin, inv. by Pouleau, 1808.
- orches'trion. 1. A large automatic barrel-organ with many imitative stops. 2. A chamber-organ devised and used on his tours by Abbé Vogler.
- ordinario (ōr-dī-nā'-rī-ō), I. Ordinary, usual, common. tempo o. 1. The usual time. 2. 4-4 time.
- ordre (ōdr), F. A suite.
- orecchio (ō-rēk'-kī-ō), I. Ear. orecchiantie (ō-rēk-kī-ān'-tē). Singing by ear.
- oreille (ō-rā'-yū), F. Ear.
- organ, E., organo (ōr-gā'-nō), I., organe (ōr-gān), F. (See article, page 728.)
- organ-bellows. A machine for supplying wind. o.-blower. One who works the bellows. o.-loft. The part of the church where the organ is placed. o. metal. A tin and lead mixture used in pipes. o. tablature. Vide TABLATURE. o. point. Vide PEDAL POINT. o. tone. A tone sustained with uniform power. buffet o. Very small organ. enharmonic, enharmonic organ. An American instr. giving three or four times the usual sounds within an octave, furnishing the precise intervals for every key, the scale of each key being produced by pressing a pedal. full organ. All the power of the organ. hand-organ or barrel-o. A cylinder turned by hand and acting

- on keys to produce set tunes. harmonium o. A reed instr. voiced to imitate organ-stops. organet'to, I. A small organ. organier (ôr-gân-yâ), F. Organ-builder. organique (ôr-gân-ék), F. Relating to the organ. organista (ôr-gâ-nēs'tâ), I. and Sp. 1. An organ-player. 2. Formerly a composer. See p. 728.
- organic. Old term for instrumental.
- organ'nicen, L. Organ-player.
- organis'trum, L. A hurdygurdy of about 1100 A. D.
- organo (ôr-gâ'-nô), I. Organ (q.v.).
- o. di campan'a. Organ with bells.
- o. di legno (lân-yô). Xylophone.
- o. pieno (pi-â'-nô), or pieno (plâ'-no). Full organ. o. portatile (pôr-tâ-tê'-lê). Portable organ. organi vocali (ôr-gâ'-nê-vô-kâ'-lê), I., pl. The vocal organs.
- organo, in, L. Vide ORGANUM.
- orga'nochor'dium. A combination of pf. and pipe-organ inv. by Abbé Vogler.
- organophon'ic. Name adopted by a band of Polish performers imitating various instrs. vocally.
- organographie (grâ-fê), F. The description of an organ. organologie (zhê). The science of building and playing the organ.
- or'ganum, L., or ganon, Gr. 1. Any instrument, thence the organ. 2. The earliest polyphonic music, a continual progression of two parts in fourths or fifths (also called diaphony); later it developed into 3 parts (triphonia), the third part called tripulum, hence our term treble; then into 4 parts (tetraphonia). 3. The part added to another in 2 part organum. in organo. Old term for in more than two parts. o. hydraul'icum. Hydraulic o. pneumaticum. The ordinary wind o. o. simplex, L. A mediæval term probably meaning the unisonal accompaniment of a single voice.
- Orgell (ôr'-gêl), G. An organ. O.-bälge (bêlkh-ê). Organ-bellows. O.-bank (bânk). Organist's seat. O.-bauer (bow-êr). Organ-builder. O.-bühne (bü-nê), or -chor (kôr), or -platz (plâts). Organ-loft. O.-gehäuse (gê-hî'-zê). Organ-case. O.-kasten (kâs'tên). 1. Cabinet organ. 2. Organ-case. O.-klang. Tone of an organ. O.-kunst (koonst). The art of playing, or constructing an organ. O.-metall (mâ-tâl'). Organ-metal. O.-pfeife (pfî'-fê). Organ-pipe. O.-punkt (poonkt). Pedal-point. O.-register (rê-gês'-têr). Organ-stop. O.-schule (shoo'le). Organ-school or method. O.-spiel (shpêl). Playing the organ; or the piece played. O.-spieler (shpê-lêr). Organ-player. O.-stein (shtîn). Pan's pipes. O.-stimmen (shtimmên). Row of organ-pipes. O.-stücke (shtü'-kê). Organ-pieces. O.-treter (trâ'-têr). Organ-treader, bellows-blower. O.-virtuose (fêr-too-ô'-zê). Organ-virtuoso. O.-wolf (vôlf). Ciphering. O.-zug (tsookh). Organ-stop or row of pipes.
- orgeln (ôr'-gêln). To play on the organ.
- orgue (ôrg), F. Organ. o. de salon (dû sâ-lôn), orgue expressif. (a) The harmonium. (b) The swell organ. o. hydraulique (ê-drô-lêk). Hydraulic organ. o. à percussion (pêr-küs'-yôn). A reed o. made by De Provins & Alexandre, Paris. o. plein (plân). Full organ. o. portatif (pôr-tâ-têf). A portable organ. o. de barbarie (dû bâr-bâ-rê). A barrel-organ, hurdygurdy. o. positif (pô-zî-têf). 1. The choir-organ. 2. A small fixed organ.
- orguINETTE (ôr-gî-nêtt), F. A small reed-organ played with a crank, the music being perforated to admit air to the reeds.
- orificio (ôr-î-fî't'-chô), I. Orifice (of a pipe).
- oris'cus. Vide NEUME.
- or'nement, E., ornamen'to, I., orne-ment (ôr-nmân), F. An embellishment, as the turn grace (q.v.), etc.
- ornamental note. An accessory note.
- ornato (ôr-nâ'-tô), ornatamen'te, I. Ornate(ly).
- orpha'ron, orphêor(e)on (ôr-fâ-ô-rôn), F. A kind of cither.
- Orphéon (ôr-fâ-ôn). 1. A piano-violin. 2. A popular male singing society of enormous proportions in France (in 1881 it had 60,000 members). orphéoniste (nêst). A member of such society.
- Orpheus (ôr-f'-yûs, or ôr'-fê-ûs). Fabled Greek lyre-player and singer of supernatural power. O.-harmo'nika, G. Pan harmonikon.
- orthog'raphy. Spelling and grammar are as necessary in music as in any other written language. Bad spelling occurs in music where, for instance, a chord is written in sharps when the key-relationship shows it to belong in the enharmonic flat notes. Sometimes, however, a note is mis-written intentionally for the sake of easier reading.

oscillation, E. Oszillation (ós-tsíl-lä-tsíl-ón'), G. Beating, vibration.

osia (ó'-sē-ä), ossia (ós'-sē-ä), I. Or, otherwise, or else. o. più facile (pī-oo' fä'-chí-lē). Or else this more easy way.

osservanza (văn'-tsä), I. Observation, strictness. osservato (vā'-tō). Strict, exact.

ostinato (ós-tí-nā'-tō), I. 1. Obstinate, continuous. 2. A ground-bass, sometimes basso o.

otez (ō-tä), F. "Off!" (of a stop).

ottava (ót-tä'-vā), I. Octave, eighth. o. alta (äl'-tä). The octave above; an octave higher (abbreviated 8va); o. bassa (bäs'-sä). The octave below (abbreviated 8va. bassa). o. supra (soo'-prä). The octave above. coll' o. To be played with the octave added.

ottavino (ót-tä-vē'-nō), I. The piccolo.

ottomole (ót-tē-mō'-lē). A group of eight equal notes.

ottet'to, I. Octet.

ou (oo), F. Or, or else.

ougab (oo'-gāb), Heb. Ancient reed-instrument.

ouïe (oo-ē), F. Soundhole.

outer voices. The highest and lowest voices.

ouvert (oo-vär'), F. Open. Vide LIVRE.

ouverture (oo-vär-tür), F., Ouverture (oo'-fēr-tür-rē), G., overtura (ō-vēr-too'-rā), I., overture (ō'-vēr-tür, not toor). An elaborate prelude to an opera, oratorio or play, often based (in the concert o.) on the sonata formula; often (in the opera o.) a mere medley of airs; sometimes an independent composition. o. di ballo (dē bäl'-lo), I. An overture introducing dance melodies. Also sinfonia, suite, or prelude to suite.

overblow. 1. To blow with enough force to produce harmonics on a wind-instr. Vide ACOUSTICS and HORN. This feat is constantly necessary in playing many wind-instrs. 2. Of defective pipes, to sound a partial instead of the fundamental.

overchord. Vide PHONE.

overspun. Used of covered strings.

overstrung. Of a piano in which the strings of two or more of the lowest octaves are stretched diagonally under other strings, the object being to economise space.

ovvero (óv-vā'-rō), I. Or.

O. W. Abbr. for Oberwerk.

oxypyc'ni. Church modes with a pyknon high in the tetrachord.

P

P. Abbr. of pedale; piano; più, as più forte (pf.); poco, as p. a. p., poco a poco; parte (as colla p.); pointe, F. (toe); and positif (choir-organ).

pad. Vide PIANOFORTE.

padiglione (pä-dēl-yō'-nē), I. The bell (of a wind-instr.).

Padovano (pä-do-vā'-nō), Padavane, or, Paduane (pä-doo-ä'-nē), I. "From Padua." An Italian dance in ternary rhythm. Perhaps the same as Pavan.

paean (pē'-än), Gr. Hymn of invocation, usually to Apollo.

pair of organs. An organ with a complete set of pipes.

paired notes. Thirds, sixths, etc., in pf.-playing.

paisana (pä-i-zä'-nä), Sp. A country-dance.

palalaika. Vide BALALAICA.

palco (päl'-kō), I. Stage of a theatre; box.

Palestrinastil (shtēl), G. The style of Palestrina (vide B. D.), i. e., a capella.

palettes (päl-ēt'), F. The white keys.

pal'let. A spring valve in the windchest of an organ.

palmadilla (päl-mä-dēl'-yā), Sp. A dance.

pam'be. Small Indian drum.

panathe'næa, Gr. An Athenian festival at which musical contests were held.

Pan'dean pipes, Pan's pipes. A primitive group of reeds or tubes of different lengths, fastened together and tuned, named for the god Pan.

pando'ran, Gr., Pandore (pän-dō'-rē), G., pando'ra, pandoura, pandura (pän-doo'-rā), I., pandure (pändür), F. Vide BANDORA.

Panflöte (pän'-flä'-tē), G. Pandean pipes.

panharmo'nicon. A kind of orchestration inv. by Maelzel.

panmelo'deon. A key-board instr. of

- wheels impinging on metal rods, inv. 1810, by Leppich.
- panorgue (ôrg), F. A little reed-organ to be attached to a pf. inv. by J. Jaulin.
- pan'symphô'nikon. An orchestration inv. by Peter Singer, 1839.
- pantaleone (pân-tâ-lê-ô'-nê), pantalon. An instr. inv. by Pantaleon Hebenstreit, in the 18th century. It was 9 ft. long, 4 ft. wide, and had 186 gut strings, played on with two small sticks. P.-zug, G. A harpsichord-stop.
- pantalón (pân-tâ-lôn), F. First movement of the quadrille.
- Papagenoflôte (pâ'-pâ-gâ-nô-flâ'-tê), G. Pan's pipes, from Mozart's Papageno (vide "Magic Flute" in Stories of the Operas).
- papillons (pâp-ê-yôn), F. "Butterflies." A frail and fitting composition.
- parallel. Of intervals, consecutive; of keys, related. Of motion, the progression of two voices in the same direction at a fixed interval. It requires care in handling. Parallelen (pâ-râl-lâ'-lên), G. 1. Sliders. 2. Consecutives. Parallelbewegung (bê-vâkh'-oongk), G. Similar or parallel motion. Parallel-tonarten (tôn-âr-tên), G. Related keys.
- parame'se, parane'te. Vide LYRE.
- par'aphrase. Free or florid transcription.
- parfait (pâr-fê'), F. Perfect (of intervals), etc.
- parlan'do, parlante (pâr-lân'-tê), I. "Speaking," in a recitative manner.
- parhy'pate. Vide LYRE.
- Parnas'sus. A mountain in Greece, sacred to Apollo, the Muses, and inspiration generally. Gradus ad Parnas'sum. Vide METHOD.
- parole(s) (pâ-rôl'), F. Word(s).
- part, E. and G. 1. The music of an individual voice or instr. 2. A division.
- part-book. 1. The music of any one voice or instr. 2. In the 15th-16th cent. a book with separate parts on facing pages.
- part-song. A song for three or more voices.
- part-writing. Counterpoint.
- parte (pâr-tê), pl. i, I. Part(s). colla p. With the part, i. e., adopting the tempo of the singer or soloist. p. cantan'te. The vocal part, the leading voice. parti di ripieno (râ-pî-
- a'-nô). Supplementary parts. a p. eguale. With more than one voice of leading importance.
- partial. 1. An harmonic. Vide ACOUSTICS. 2. Vide STOP. 3. Vide TURN.
- partic'ipating. Accessory. participa'tum syste'ma, L. Equal temperament.
- Partie (pâr-tê'), G. 1. Variations. 2. Vide SUITE.
- partie(s) (pâr-tê), F. Parts. p. de remplissage (dû rân-plî-sâzh), F. Accessory parts.
- partimen'to, I. 1. An exercise. 2. Figured bass.
- partita (pâr-tê'-tâ), I. 1. Variations. 2. Vide SUITE.
- partitino (tê'-no). A small supplementary score.
- partition, E. (in F. pâr-tês-yôn), Partitur (pâr-tî-toor'), G., partitura (pâr-tî-too'-râ), partizione (pâr-tê-tsî-ô'-nê), I. A full score for voices or instrs. p. cancella'ta. A set of staves with vertical lines for the bass. Partiturspiel (toor'-shpêl), G. Playing from the score.
- partito (par-tê'-tô), I. Scored, divided.
- pas (pâ), F. 1. Step, dance. p. ordinaire (pâ-zôr-dî-nâr). March time. p. de charge (dû shârzh). Double time. p. seul (sül). A dance for one performer; p. de deux (dû dû). For two, etc. p. redoublé (pâ-rû-doo-blâ'). A quick-step. 2. Not, as pas trop vite (pâ trô vêt). Not too fast.
- paspié (päs'-pi-ê), Sp. A kind of dance.
- pas'py. Vide PASSEPIED.
- passacaglio (päs-sâ-käl'-yô), I., passacaille (päs-sâ-ki'-yô), F., passacol'le, Sp., passagall'o, I. A chaconne with a ground-bass in 3-4 time, always in minor.
- passage (in F. päs-sâzh). 1. A phrase or section. 2. A figure. 3. A run. notes de p. Grace notes. passage-boards. Boards on which an organ-tuner may walk.
- passaggio (päs-sâd'-jô), I. 1. A passage. 2. Modulation.
- passamezzo (päs-sâ-mêd'-zô). A slow Italian dance, in 2-4 time, resembling the Pavan.
- passant (päs-sân), F. Slide (of a bow).
- passepied (päs-pî-ê), F. A lively old French dance in 3-4, 3-8, or 6-8 time; a quick minuet with three or more reprises, the first of eight bars.

- passee-rue (päs-rü). Passacaglio.
- passing. Unessential, as a passing modulation. A transient modulation. passing tone, or note, a brief dissonance on the weak beat, leading from one consonant tone to another; it does not need to be prepared.
- Passion, Passion-music. Oratorio, or play. A dramatic or musical setting of the "Passion" (suffering) of Christ. It differs from the oratorio (q.v.) in history and form only in the facts of its being always concerned with the one subject, and in the introduction usually of spiritual reflections.
- passionata or -o (päs-si-ö-nä'-tä), passionaten'te, I. Passionate(ly).
- passione (päs-si-ö'-nä). 1. Passion, feeling. 2. Vide PASSION.
- Passionsmusik (päs-si-öns-moo-zëk'), G. Vide PASSION.
- pas'so, I. Step.
- pas'sy-measure. Old E. Passamezzo.
- Pastete (päs-tä'-të), G. Pasticcio.
- pasticcio (päs-të'-chö), I., pastiche (päs-tësh), F. 1. An opera, or other work in which old airs are used to new words. 2. A medley.
- pastoral, pasturale (päs-tö-rä'-lë in I.; in F. päs-tö-räl'). An opera, cantata, song or instrumental composition of rustic nature or subject. p. flute. Shepherd's pipe. p. organ point. Vide PEDAL-POINT. pastorel'la, I., pastorelle (rël), F. A little pastoral.
- pastorita (ë'-tä). 1. A shepherd's pipe. 2. A stop, the Nachthorn.
- pastourelle (päs-too-rël), F. 1. A 6-8 movement of a quadrille. 2. A troubadour lyric.
- patetica or -o (pä-tä'-ti-kä), I., pathétique (pä-tä-tëk), F., pathetisch (pä-tä'-tish), G. Pathetic; a piano sonata in C minor by Beethoven is so-called; and a symphony by Tchaikovski. pateticamen'te, I. Pathetically.
- patimen'to, I. Grief, suffering.
- patouille (pät-oo-ë'-yü), F. Xylophone.
- patte (pät), F. 1. A special clarinet key. 2. A music-pen.
- Pauke(n) (pow'-kë(n)), G. Kettle-drum(s).
- pause, E., pausa (pä'-oo-zä), I., pause (pöz), F. 1. A rest of variable length; if very protracted called lunga (or long) pausa. 2. A fermate. 3. F. and G. A whole rest. demi-pause (dë-më'-pöz), F. A half-rest.
- pavan', E., pavana (pä-vä'-nä), I., pavane (pä-vän'), F. A grave stately dance in 3-4 time, generally in three strains, each repeated; once supposed to be derived from pavo, peacock, now from Paduna (q.v.).
- paventato (pä-vën-tä'-tö), pavento'so, I. Fearful, timid.
- pavillon (pä-vë'-yôn), F. The bell of a wind-instr. p. en l'air (än lär). "The bell upwards" (direction to horn-players). flûte à p. A stop with flaring pipes. p. chinois (shën-wä). Chinese hat, crescent.
- peal. 1. A chime. 2. A change, of bells.
- pean. A pæan.
- pearly (of runs, etc.). Bright, distinct.
- ped. Abbr. of Pedal.
- ped'al, E. (in G. pä-däl'), pédale (pä-däl), F., pedale (pä-dä'-lë), I. 1. Abbr. of Pedal-point (q.v.). 2. A foot lever of various musical uses. The piano has usually two pedals: (a) The damper (openol oud, or extension) pedal, which raises all the dampers from the strings, allowing the tones struck to be sustained and broadened by sympathetic (q.v.) vibration. The use of the damper-pedal is indicated by Ped., and its cessation by the mark * or ⊗. Wm. H. Sherwood (vide B. D.) has introduced a more accurate system of continuous lines ~ to indicate just when this pedal is to be pressed, how long held and when released. (b) The soft pedal (pétite (pä-tët), pédale) in some cases merely lets a cloth fall over the strings, but usually shifts the action so that the hammers strike only one of the two or three strings allotted each tone. Hence its use is indicated by una corda (oo'-na kör'-dä, one string), or Verschiebung (fër-shë'-boongk), and its discontinuance by "tre corde" (trä kör'-dä, "3 strings"). In the upright pf. this pedal simply moves the hammers nearer the strings. Some pianos are fitted with a (c) sustaining, or prolongation pedal. A damper-pedal holding the dampers from only those strings struck at the moment, until the pedal is released, thus permitting the sustention of a chord or tone while the hands are busy elsewhere. (d) A. B. Chase has inv. an octave-pedal, or octavo-attachment, sounding also the higher octave. Both pedals (a and b) may be pressed together; this is indicated by pedale doppio, or doppelte.

The harp (q.v.) has 8 pedals, one opening or closing a panel in the sounding-case with loud or soft effect. Reed-organs, etc., have double pedals or treads for working the bellows. In the pipe-organ (and in the pedalier, q.v.) the pedals are of great variety. There is a pedal key-board, Pedalklaviatur (pā-dāl'-klā-fi-ā-toor'), or Pedalklavier, G., clavier des pédales (dā pā-dāl'), F., pedaliera, I., with a compass of C-f, or, counting stops, from C₂ up. This is played by the feet (V over a note indicating the right toe; under it, the left: ○ similarly marking the heel). To this part of the organ, called the pedal-organ, many stops are often allotted: hence pedal-pipe, stop-soundboard, etc.; it is locked from sounding by a pedal-check (worked by a stop-knob), a bar running beneath it. The pedal-stops may be made to sound with any of the manuals by means of mechanism, called pedal-couplers, coupler-pedals, or reversible-pedal.

The word pedal is also given to the organ, to such foot-levers as the combination, or composition pedals (pédales de combinaison), which if single-acting draw out certain new, or push in certain old, stops; if double-acting produce certain combinations regardless of the previous registration. The forte-pedal draws out all the stops of its key-board; the mezzo-p. the chief 4-8 ft. stops; the piano-pedal leaving only the softest on; the crescendo-p. draws out the full power gradually, the diminuendo withdraws it; the sforzando produces a sudden fulness. Vide also CELESTE.

The swell-pedal works the shutters of the swell-box; if it remains at rest where left, it is called a balance swell-pedal.

Pedalflügel (fū'-ghēl), G. Pedalier.

Pedalharfe (pē-dāl'-hārfe), G., pedal-harp. A double-action harp.

pedalier (pēd-ā-lēr'), E., pédalier (pā-dāl-yā'), F., pedal'ion. A pedal key-board attachable to a piano and playing the bass-strings.

pedal-note, or tone. A tone sustained by the pedal or some voice, usually the bass, while the other parts move independently. As the word "point" originally meant "note," pedal-point (abbr. to pedal) is synonymous with pedal-note, but is now used rather of the phrase in which the pedal-note occurs. It is displacing the word organ-point, derived not from organ, but from organum (q.v.) and referring to the long notes of the cantus firmus against which the other voices moved, these notes being called organici puncti, or organum notes. Pedal-point is then a phrase in which one tone is sustained through independent harmonies. The tonic or the dominant is usually the tone sustained. If both are used at once it is called pastoral. If the pedal-pt. occurs in other voices than the bass it is inverted. It is sometimes exterior, or interior. It may be figured, trilled, or florid.

peg. A tuning-pin; in the violin, etc., it is set in the head, in a space called the peg-box.

pegli (pāl-yē), I. For the (from per gli).

pek'tis, Gr. A Greek lute.

pel, pel'lo, I. For the (from per il, per lo).

penil'ion. A Welsh improvisation of verses.

pennant. Hook.

pennata (pēn-nā'-tā), I. Quilled (of the spinet, etc.).

penorçon (pū-nōr'-sōn), F., from penor'kon, Gr. An ancient guitar.

pensieroso (pēn-sē-ā-rō'-sō), I. penso'so, I. Pensive, thoughtful.

pentachium, Gr. A composition in 5 parts.

pen'tachord. 1. A series of 5 diatonic tones. 2. An instr. with 5 strings.

pen'tatone, E., pen'taton, Gr. 1. An interval of 5 whole tones, an augmented sixth. pentaton'ic. Having five whole tones. pentatonic scale. A five-toned scale, the same as the usual major scale, with the fourth and seventh tones skipped; called also the Scotch scale. The black keys of the piano represent a pentatonic scale.

per, L. and I. For, by, through, in, from.

percus'sion, E., percussione (pēr-koos-sē-ō'-nē), I. 1. The actual sounding of a tone or chord (as opposed to its preparation or resolution). 2. Instrs. of percussion are those in which the tone is secured

- by striking, particularly the drums, cymbals, and triangle, also the piano, and so forth. percussion-stop. One in which the reed is struck just as it is blown, to emphasise its tone. percussive. An instr. of percussion.
- perden'do, perden'dosi, I. Dying away in both speed and power.
- perdu'na. Bourdon.
- perfect, E., perfet'to, L. 1. Vide INTERVAL, CADENCE, CHORD. 2. An obsolete name for triple time. perfection. Vide NOTATION and LIGATURE.
- Périgourdine (pā-rī-goor-dēn), F. Cheerful old French dance, in triple time, so called from the province of Périgord.
- period, période (pā-rī-ōd), F., periodo (pā-rī-ō'-dō), I. A passage containing two or more sections and some form of cadence. Vide FORM. Periodenbau (pā-rī-ōd-ēn-bow), G. The building of periods, or composition.
- perpetual, perpetuo (pēr-pā'-too-ō), I. 1. Vide CANON. 2. Perpetual motion, or perpetuum mobile, L. A piece of great rapidity and no pause till the end.
- pes, L. Foot. A ground-bass to a round.
- pesante (pā-sān'-tē), pesantemen'te, I. Heavy(ly), impressive(ly), forcibly.
- peso, di (dē pā'-sō), I. At once.
- petit (pū-tē'), petite (pū-tēt'), F. Small. choeur p. A three-part chorus. p. flute. Piccolo. p. mesure à deux temps. 2-4 time. petits notes (pū-tē' nōt). Grace notes. p. pedale. Soft pedal.
- pet'to, I. The chest. voce de p. Chest voice. di p. From the chest.
- peu (pū), F. Little. un p. A little. p. à p. Little by little.
- pezzo (pēd'-zō), pl. i, I. A piece or number. pezzi concertanti. Concerted numbers.
- pf. Abbr. of, 1. Pianoforte. 2. Poco forte.
- Pfeife (pfī'-fē), G. 1. A fife. 2. A pipe, as of an organ. Pfeifendeckel. The covering of a pipe. P.-werk. The pipe-work. Pfeifer. A fifer.
- Phantasie (fān-tā-zē'), G. Fantasy, or fantasia. P.-bilder, P.-stücke. Fanciful pieces of no strict form. phantasieren (zē'-rēn). To improvise. Phantasier-maschine. A melograph. phantasierte (zēr'-tē). Improvised.
- phil'harmon'ic. Music-loving.
- philomèle (fē-lō-mēl). Vide ZITHER.
- phonas'cus, L., from Gr. Singing-teacher.
- phisharmon'ica. An octagonal accordion.
- phonaut'ograph. 1. A name given first to a melograph, inv. by Abbé Moigno, a pencil fitted to a vibrating membrane. 2. An electric melograph for key-board instrs. inv. by Fenby. (See article, page 794.)
- phone, Gr. 1. Voice or tone. 2. Sound, a term appropriated by Dr. Th. Baker, to represent Riemann's term "clang" (q. v.), hence homophone, under phone, contro-phone, and phonic.
- phonet'ics, pho'nics. The science of sounds.
- pho'nikon. A metal wind-instr. with globular bell inv. by Czerveny, 1848.
- phonom'eter, E., phonometre (fōn-ō-mētr), F. A device for measuring vibration.
- phor'minx, Gr. An ancient lyre-like instrument.
- pho'tinx, Gr. An ancient crooked flute.
- phrase, E. (in F. frāz, in G. frā'-zē). 1. A musical clause. Vide FORM. 2. A short passage or figure. phrase-mark. A long curve covering a phrase; or any musical punctuation-mark. phrasi(e)ren (zē'-rēn), G. To phrase. phrasé (frā'-zā), F., phrasing, E., Phrasierung (zē'-roongk), G. (a) The act or art of delivering music with due regard to its melodic and rhythmic punctuation, relation and contrast. (b) Signs for such phrasing.
- Phrygian (frī'-jān), E., from Gr. phrygische (frē'-jish-ē), G. Vide MODES.
- physharmo'nica. 1. A small reed and bellows attachment to a piano keyboard for sustaining and colouring tones; inv. by Häckel, Vienna, 1878; the forerunner of the harmonium. 2. A free-reed-stop.
- piacere, a (ā pi-ā-chā'-re), a piacimen'to, I. At pleasure. piacevole (pi-ā-chā'-vō-lē), piacevolmen'te. Pleasant(ly). piacevolezza (lēd'-zā). Suavity.
- piagendo (pi-ā-jēn'-dō), I. Plaintive.
- piagnevole (pi-ān-yā'-vō-lē), I. Sad, mournful.
- pianar'tist, G. A mechanical attachment for playing the piano.
- pianente (pi-ā-nēn'-tē), I. Gently, softly. pianet'to. Very soft.

pianette (nēt'). A small piano. piangevole pī-ān-jā'-vō-lē), piange- volmen'te, I. Doleful(ly).
pianino (nē'-nō), I. An upright piano.
pianis'simo, I. Very soft. pianis- sis'simo. Extremely soft.
pianist (pī-ān'-ist, not pē'-ān'-ist), E.
 A piano-player.
pianista (nē'-stā), I. 1. A pianist.
 2. A mechanical piano.
pianiste (pī-ān'-est'), F. Pianist of either sex.
piano (pī-ā'-nō), I. 1. Soft, softly, abbr. (p), hence piano-pedal. 2.
 The common form of the word pianoforte (q.v.); this shorter form is altogether used in France, and commonly elsewhere. Many terms are used to indicate sizes and forms of the piano, as the concert grand and par'lour grand or piano à queue (ā-kū'), the semi-grand or boudoir or p. à queue écourtée (ā-koor-tā), or baby-grand. Smaller form. The square or carré (cār-rā); p. à tavolins; the upright or cabinet, or p. à secrétaire (sā-krü-tār), or droit (drwā), oblique, or à pilastres, or vertical, and still smaller sizes such as the cottage, or the piccolo, inv. by Wornum, of London, 1829. For practice there are the dumb p., or p. muet (mü), and the Virgil practice-clavier, etc.
 electric p. One employing electromagnets in place of hammers. pquatuor, or p. à archet (ā ār-shā).
 Vide PIANO-VIOLIN. p. éolien. Vide
 MEMO-CHORD. The p. harmon'icorde.
 A combination with an harmonium,
 inv. by Debain. the p. à claviers renversés (ā-klāv-yā rān-vēr-sā).
 One with 2 key-boards, one above the other, the scale of the upper ascending from right to left. p. mécanique (mā-kā-nēk). A mechanical or automatic piano. p. organisé (ār-gā-nī-zā). One with phys-harmonica attached. (Sec p. 800.) pianoforte (pī-ā'-nō-fōr-tē, or commonly pī-ā'-nō-fōrt), E. and I. piano-forté (fōr-tā), F.
piano score. An arrangement of vocal or orchestral music for piano. pian'ograph. A melograph, inv. by Guérin.
pianoharp. Vide KLAVIER HARFE. piano'la. A detachable pneumatic attachment by which a piano may be played mechanically, the performer controlling the speed, the force, and,
 in a remarkable degree, also the expression; inv. by E. S. Votey of New York, in 1897. It has 65 felt-covered fingers brought into play by airpower forced through perforated music by treadle action.

piano-organ. Vide BARREL-ORGAN (2). piano'tist. A mechanical attachment for playing the piano.
piano quatuor (kāt-ū-ōr), F. Piano-
 violin.
piano-violin. A numerous group of instrs. endeavouring to combine the fulness and range of the piano with the violin's expression and power of increasing the volume of a sustained tone. In 1610 Hans Heydn of Nürnberg inv. the Gambenwerk, in which catgut strings were pressed by resined parchment rollers actuated by a wheel (other authorities say that Heydn's instr. was called Geigen- werk, and had wire strings; and that the Gambenwerk, or Klavier- gamba, was inv. by Reich or Gleich-mann of Ilmenau, about 1750, and had gut strings). In 1754 Hohlfeld
 inv. the Bogenflügel or Bogen- klavier, with a horse-hair bow; von Meyer in 1794 provided each string with a bow. In 1800 Hübner devised the clavecin harmonique, which Pouleau developed into the orches-trin. Other instrs. of the same general idea were the gambe-clavier, inv.
 by Le Voirs, Paris, 1741; the Bog- genklavier of Garbrecht, Königsberg, 1710; the Xänorphika of Röllig, Vienna, 1707; the Bogenhammer- klavier of Karl Greiner, 1779; the harmonichord of Kaufman, 1785;
 the piano-violino, 1837. The most successful is the piano-quatuor or piano-violin, inv. 1865 by H. C.
 Baudin, of Paris, consisting of thick single strings to each of which is attached at a nodal point a projecting piece of stiff catgut, which on the pressure of the key is brought in contact with a linen roller turned by pedals, the communicated vibration causing the string to sound; the general principle of these instrs. resembles that of the hurdygurdy.
pian piano (pī-ān' pī-ā'-nō), I. Very softly.
piatti (pī-āt'-tē), I., pl. Cymbals.
pib (pēb), pibcorn. A Welsh pipe.
pibroch (pē'-brōkh), Scotch. A warlike composition for the bagpipes, consisting of three or four variations on a theme called the urlar; they are of increasing speed and close with a quick movement called the crean-luidh.

piccanteria (pĭk-kān-tēr-ē'-ā), I. Piquancy.

picchetta'to, or picchiettato (pĭk-kĭ-ēt-tā'-tō), I. Staccato, in violin playing made with a bounding bow, and indicated by slur over dots.

picciolo (pĭt-chō'-lō), I. Small.

piccolo (pĭk'-kō-lō), I. 1. Small. Vide PIANO. 2. The octave flute (q.v.). 3. A 2-ft. stop. piccolino (lĕ'-no). Very small.

pic'co, picco pipe. A small whistle with 3 holes; it was named after a blind Sardinian peasant who played it in London (1856) with great brilliancy, securing a compass of 3 octaves.

pick. 1. A plectrum. 2. To pluck (of strings).

Pic'kelflöte, G. The octave flute.

piece. 1. A composition. 2. An instrument (generally used in pl.).

pièce (pĭ-ēs'), F. 1. A piece; a composition. 2. An opera, or dramatic work. suite de pièces (swēt dü pĭ-ēs). A set of pieces.

pieno (pĭ-ā'-nō), I. Full. p. coro, or p. organo. Full chorus, or full organ.

pienamen'te. Fully.

pied (pĭ-ā'), F. Foot. avec les pieds (lā pĭ-ā). With the feet (on an organ).

pietà (pĭ-ā-tā'), I. Pity. pieto'so, pietosamen'te. Tender(ly).

pierced gamba. Keraulophon.

pifara (pĭ-fā'-rā), I. A fife.

pifferare (rā'-rē), I. To play the fife.

pif'fero. 1. A fife. 2. A primitive oboe. 3. A stop, the bifara. pif'fera'ro. A player on the fife.

pikieren (pĭ-kē'-rĕn), G. Vide PIQUER.

pilea'ta, L. "Capped" (of a covered pipe).

pincé (pān-sā), or pincement (pāns-mān), F. "Pinched." 1. Plucked (as strings). 2. Pizzicato. 3. A mordent. p. étouffé. Acciacatura. p. renversé. Inverted mordent. instruments à cordes pincées. Instrs. to be plucked, as guitar, etc., hence pincer (pān-sā). To play such an instrument. pincé bemolisé (or diésé). Trill with a flattened (or sharpened) note.

pipe. A tone-producing tube of reed, wood or metal. 1. One of the earliest musical instrs., a simple straw. 2. The tone-producing tubes of an organ. (a) flue-pipe, or lip-pipe. One in which the column of air produces tone by being forced through a small opening with a sharp edge. The lip-pipe may be compared to a great flute standing on end (the flute is in fact a lip-pipe). The foot rests on the pipe-rack; the lower part of the body is the throat; just above it is an opening called the mouth, with an upper and lower lip; the upper lip is bevelled to an edge called the leaf. An ear projects on each side of the mouth; inside the mouth is a projection called the block (if it is very thin it is called the language). The passage between lower lip and block is the windway; through this the air is driven against the leaf, which, vibrating, produces a tone from the air column that fills the upper part or body of the pipe. flue-pipes may be open at the top, or covered (stopped or plugged), the stopped-p. sounding an octave lower than the same pipe open. flue-pipes are tuned, or voiced, if metal, by flaps at the top called tuners; if wood, by small adjustable boards.

(b) reed-pipe. One depending upon a reed for its tone, the body governing the quality of the tone only. The lowest part of the reed-p. is the boot; it contains a sheet of metal called the block, which contains two apertures, one holding an adjustable tuning-wire, the other a reed, or conical tube (called a shallot) with an opening giving play to a vibrating tongue. 3. bent-pipe. A rectangular bent tube connecting the bellows with the wind-trunk; also a secondary channel from the wind-chest to the wind-trunk. Speaking pipes may be bent without altering their tone, to fit them into smaller space. pipe-metal. That of which organ-pipes are made, usually an alloy of lead and tin.

pipe-organ. Vide ORGAN.

pique (pĕk), F. Peg of a 'cello.

piqué (pĕ-kā'), F. Same as picchiettato. piquer (pĕ-kā), F., piquieren (pĕ-kē'-rĕn), G. To play in such a manner.

pirolino (pĕ-rō-le'-nō), I. Button.

piston(s). Vide VALVE and CORNET-À-PISTONS. piston-solo, G. Solo for cornet-à-pistons.

pitch. The height or depth of a tone relatively to others, or its absolute position on the complete scale adopted as the standard and divided into octaves definitely named (see the CHART OF PITCH). The vibration-number of a tone also gives it an absolute pitch according to the particular pitch accepted as the standard. The opinion of the civilised races, with the chief exception of England, has settled on the International (low or French) pitch adopted in France in 1859, and at the Vienna Congress in 1887. This gives the tone a' 435 vibrations a second and c'' 522 vibrations. An older pitch was the classical or mean pitch, in which a' lay between 415 and 429 vibrations (apparently about the same as the most ancient standards). The desire to secure a more and more brilliant tone led instrument-makers to raise the pitch to outrageous heights. A congress of physicists adopted in 1834 the Stuttgart Pitch with a' at 440. The high or concert or English pitch gives a' about 450, which is a severe and needless strain and distortion. For convenience of calculation a theoretical middle c' has been given 256 vibrations, the number being a high power of 2; this so-called philosophical pitch gives a' about 427 vibrations. The subject of Pitch-relationships is too abstruse for explanation here—though important in the tuning and temperament of instruments. The old Pythagorean theorists did not consider the third (as c to e) to be a legitimate interval; they reached it by four steps of a fifth (ignoring octaves) thus, c-g, g-d, d-a, a-e. This gives it the ratio of 64 : 81. But we now accept both the third and the fifth as intervals, and the ratio of a third is 4 : 5, or in larger terms 64 : 80. The note e may then be considered a quint-tone if reached by steps of a fifth; or a tierce-tone if reached by a step of a third. But 64 : 80 differs from 64 : 81 by the ratio of 80 : 81, which is called the comma syntonium. Starting from c' any tone may be reached by quint or tierce steps up or down. Every tierce step up is $\frac{80}{81}$ less than a quint step and the letter name of a tone reached by a tierce step may be marked with a line under it for every tierce step upward, or a line over it for every tierce step downward, required to reach it.

These lines therefore indicate the number of commas by which it is lower or higher than the same tone reached by quint steps.

Relative pitches may also be expressed in (a) fractions showing the relative string lengths required to produce them; (b) in decimals showing relative vibrations; and (c) in logarithms showing comparatively the interval-ratios.

pitch-fork. A tuning-fork.

pitch-pipe. Small reed-pipe of fixed pitch.

più (pè-oo'), I. More; as p. mosso. More speed; più tosto. Rather, as p. t. allegro. Rather faster.

piva (pè'-vā), I. 1. A bag-pipe. 2. A composition in bag-pipe manner.

pizzican'do, pizzicato (pīd-zī-kā'-tō), I. "Pinched," indicating that the strings are not to be bowed, but plucked with the fingers.

placido (plā'-chē-dō), placidamen'te, I. Placid(ly).

placito (plā'-chē-tō), I. Pleasure. A bene p. At pleasure, same as ad libitum.

pla'gal, E., pla'galis, L., plagalisch (plā-gā'-lish), G. Used of those modes accessory to the authentic (vide MODES), and formed from them by taking the fourth below as the new tonic. Vide also CADENCE.

plagiau'los, Gr. Cross-flute.

plain-chant (in French pron. plān-shān), plain-song. The old Gregorian Church-music, so-called from its smooth progress in notes of equal length. It employs 8 modes (q.v.), and is written on four-line staves, employing 3 notes, the long, the breve and semibreve, and two clefs. It is still employed in the R. C. cantillation of priests at the altar, and is the basis of the Episcopal Church service.

plainte (plānt), F. A lament. plain-tif (plān-tēf). Plaintive.

plaisant (plēz-ān), F. Pleasant.

plaisanterie (plēz-ān-tū-rē), F., pleas'-anterie. A cheerful harpsichord piece.

plana (plā'-nā), L. and I. Plain. musica P. plain = chant.

planchette (plān-shēt), F. 1. A mechanical piano. 2. A part of its mechanism, a board fitted with pegs.

planta'tion. The manner in which the pipes of a stop are arranged on the sound-board.

- planx'ty. Literally, "lament," though sometimes applied to lively melodies used by Welsh harpers.
- plaqué (plă-kă), F. Played simultaneously (as a chord); opposed to "broken."
- play-house tune. Old name for entr'act music.
- plec'toral, plec'tron, plec'trum. A small bit of ivory, metal or shell for plucking the strings of mandolins, etc.
- plec'traphone. A piano attachment imitating the mandolin.
- plein-jeu (plăn-zhŭ), F. 1. Full-organ. 2. A mixture-stop.
- ple'no orga'no, L. Full-organ.
- plet'tro, I. 1. Bow. 2. Plectrum.
- pli'ca, L. "Fold." A neume, used as a concluding ornament, indicated by a stroke up or down on the last note of a ligature.
- plu'res ex u'na, L. "Many from one." Old name for canon.
- plus (plŭ), F. More.
- pneuma (nŭ'-mă), Gr. "Breath." 1. Neume. 2. The exhausting vocalisation of the closing syllable of the early Christian Alleluia. 3. A jubilation.
- pneumat'ic. 1. Used of all wind-instrs. 2. p. action, or lever. A bellows attachment for lightening the touch of an organ, inv. 1832, by Barker. 3. p. organ. The modern wind-organ, so called originally in distinction to the hydraulic.
- pocetta (pö-chet'-tä), I., poche (pösh), pochette (pö-shët), F. Pocket-fiddle.
- pochessimo (pö-kës'-sŭ-mö), I. As little as possible. pochettino (pö-kët-të'-nö), pochet'to, pochino (pö-kë'-nö), I. Just a little.
- poco (pö'-kō), I. A little; rather; somewhat. poco a poco. Little by little.
- poggiato (pöd-jă'-tō), I. "Leant" on, dwelt upon.
- poi (pö'-ë), I. Then, afterwards, as piano poi forte. Soft then loud. poi segue, then follows; poi a poi. By degrees.
- point. 1. Old name for note. Vide NOTATION. 2. A dot. 3. Staccato-mark. 4. Head of a bow. 5. The entrance of an important theme. 6. To divide words for chanting, hence pointing. 7. organ-point. Vide PEDAL-POINT. 8. Vide SIGNS. (In French pronounced pwăñ.) A dot. p. détaché (dă-tă-shă). Staccato-mark. p. sur tête (sŭr-tët). Dot above or below a note. p. d'arrêt (dăr-rë'), or p. de repos (dŭ rŭ-pō). A hold. p. d'augmentation (dög-măñ-tăs-yôn). A dot of augmentation. p. final (fi-năl'). Final pause. p. d'orgue (dörg). 1. A hold, hence also a cadenza or flourish. 2. Pedal-point.
- pointe (pwănt), F. 1. Toe, in organ-playing.
- pointé (pwăñ-tă), F. Dotted, from pointer (pwăñ-tă). To dot, or play staccato.
- polacca (pö-lăk'-kă), I. Polonaise. alla p. In the style of a polonaise.
- polichinelle (pöl - ŷ - shŷ - nël'), F. "Punch." A clown-dance.
- pol'ka. A round dance in lively 2-4 time, originated in Bohemia about 1830. p. mazurka. A slower dance in triple time with accent on the last beat. p. redowa. Is faster than the p. m., with accent on first beat.
- polonaise (pöl-ō-něz'), F., Polonäse (pöl-ō-nă-zë), G. A Polish dance in moderate 3-4 time; strictly a march-past. Its rhythm resembles that of the bolero; it begins with a sharply accented 8th note followed by two 16th notes, and four 8th notes; its closing measure is an 8th and two 16th notes; a sharply accented quarter note, an 8th note, and an 8th rest. Also spelt polonoise (pöl-ôn-wăz). Vide CHART OF DANCE RHYTHMS.
- polska (pöls'ka), Swedish. A dance in 3-4 time, usually in the minor.
- poly- A Greek prefix, meaning "many." polychord. An instr. inv. by Fr. Hillmer, of Berlin, resembling a double-bass with 10 gut-strings and movable finger-board. polymorphous. Used of counterpoint, with a widely varied theme. polyphon'ic, or polyph'onus. 1. Used of compositions in which more than one theme at a time is given individually; loosely used of compositions of many parts, but to be sharply distinguished from a mere melody with an accompanying harmony. 2. Used of instrs. that can produce more than one tone at a time (compare homophonic, and homophonous), hence polyphony (pöl-ŷ-fō'-nŷ or pö-lŷf'-ō-nŷ). The treatment of simultaneous parts each independently, i. e., counterpoint. polytonality. A quality possessed by music the parts of which are written in several keys simultaneously.

Pommer (pôm'-mër), G. Vide BOMBARD.

pompös (pôm'-päs), G. pompo'so, pomposamen'te, I. Pompous(ly). Majestic(ally).

punctuation (pônkt-ü-äs-yôn), F. Phrasing, from ponctuer (pônkt-tü-ä). To phrase.

pondero'so, I. Ponderous, heavily marked.

ponticello (pôn-tŭ-chël'-lō), I. 1. Bridge. sul. p. A direction for bow instrs., "play near the bridge." (Abbr. s. pont.) 2. The break in the voice.

pont-neuf (pôn-nüf), F. A bridge in Paris, hence a street ballad.

poo'gye. Hindoo nose-flute.

popolare (pō-pō-lä'-rē), I. Popular.

porrec'tus. Gnomo. Vide NEUME.

port (pôr), F. 1. Portamento. 2. Vide CHUTE.

portamen'to. The passage across an interval by means of gliding with imperceptible gradations through all the intermediate tones in one continuous sound (such an effect as is gained by sliding the finger along a string while the bow presses it). Hence a legato style; so a singer is said to have a true portamento.

portan'do, I. Carrying across, i. e., producing the portamento effect; from portare (pôr-tär'-rē). To carry.

portar (pôr-tär'), I. Carry! p. la battuta. Follow the beat. p. la voce. Sustain the tone. Pl. portare.

portata (pôr-tä'-tä), I. Staff.

- programme, F., program (prō'-grām' not prō'-grūm), E., program'ma, I., Programm (prō-grām'), G. A list of compositions to be performed. program - music, Programm - musik (prō-grām' moo-zēk'), G. Music with a programme, i. e., with a more or less definite description of events or moods. It usually aims to present a suggestion (rarely in decent music an imitation) of some music of nature as a brook, bird-improvisations, forest-sounds, or of some narrative, though its main effort is to deploy the emotions arising from such scenes and thoughts. Beethoven's ideal is expressed in his famous characterisation of his Pastoral Symphony as mehr Ausdruck als Malerei, "more an expression than a painting." So long as the "descriptive" element is a mere suggestion, music is capable of most felicitous hints, and programme-music has most ancient and venerable authority, traceable farther back even than Bach (who wrote a musical suggestion of a postilion), to Jannequin, and others. When programme-music stoops to imitation direct it either grows ludicrously incompetent or ceases to be music and becomes noise.
- programmist. A devotee of programme-music.
- progrès (prō-grē), F. Progression.
- progres'sion, E., progressione (sī-ō'-nē), I. 1. melodic progression. The advance of the melody from one tone to another. 2. harmonic p. The advance of the harmony from one chord to another. These two processes, particularly the latter, are hedged round with continual difficulties and restrictions, some of them based on human nature and acoustics, others deriving no sustenance from either, but depending for their existence in the text-books entirely on tradition, history, conservatism, fashion, or a sense of being rendered artificial by long pedantry. The science of progressions constitutes the greater part of the Theory of Music, and of harmony and counterpoint (q.v.).
- progres'sio harmo'nica, I. A mixture-stop.
- Progressions-schweller (prō-grēs-sī-ōns'-shvēl-lēr), G. A device inv. by Abbé Vogler, for gradually calling in play, then gradually closing off, the stops of an organ, to produce a crescendo, then a diminuendo.

rappel', F. A military call.

rasch (rāsh), G. Fast. rascher. Faster.

rasend (rā'-zēnt), G. Raging, hence Rasegesang, and Raseliel (rā'-zē-lēt). Dithyramb.

rasgado (rās-gā'-dhō), Sp. "Scraping," hence in guitar playing, sweeping the strings with the thumb to produce an arpeggio.

rast'ral, ras'trum. Vide RAKE.
Räthselkanon (rät'-zél-kä-nôn), G.
 Vide CANON.
ra'tio. Used of the relative value of vibration-numbers.
rattenen'do, rattenuto (noo'-tô), I. Restraining, or restrained, i. e., retarded.
rattezza (rät-tëd'-zä), I. Speed.
rauco (rä'-oo-kô), I., rauh (rôw), G., rauque (rôk), F. Harsh, hoarse, rough. raucedine (rä-oo-chë-dë'-në), I. Harshness.
Rauscher (row'-shër), G. The rapid repetition of a note.
rausch- (rowsh), G. Prefix denoting a stop of 2 ranks sounding the twelfth and fifteenth, or fifteenth and octave twelfth; hence Rauschflöte, -pfeife, -quinte, -werk; and also Ruszipipe (roos'-pë-pë).
ravanás'tron. A primitive violin with one or two strings, claimed by the Ceylonese as the invention of a king who reigned about 5000 B. C. It is still used by the Buddhists.
rav(v)ivare (vä'-rë), I. To accelerate, hence, ravivan'do. Accelerating. ravivato (vä'-rë), I. Accelerated.
ray. Name for re, in the Tonic-Sol-fa. re (rä), I., rê (rä), F. 1. Vide SOLMI-SATION. 2. In France and Italy, the note D. rebab, Arab. Rebec.
re'bec(k), rebec'ca, re'bet, rebed, re-bibe, re'bible. Old E. An early violin with 3 gut-strings. Its origin has been credited to the Moors, who are said to have brought it into Spain; it has been claimed that the Spanish gave it to the Moors; it has been also derived from the British Chrotta, or crwth.
re'al. Vide FUGUE. récension (rä-sän's-yôn), F. An analytical editing.
rechange (rü-shänzh). "Change." Hence, corps (kôr) or tons (tôn) de r. Crooks.
recheat'. A hunting recall.
recht(e) (rëkht(ë)), G. Right, as r. Hand.
récit (rä-së), F. 1. Recitative. 2. A solo part. 3. The chief of several parts. clavier de r. (kläv-yä dü). Swell manual on the organ.
recitado (rä-thë-tä'-dhô), Sp. Recitative. reci'tal. A musical performance given entirely by one performer, or from one composer's works. Said to have been initiated by Liszt in 1840.

recitan'do, recitan'te, recitato (rä-chë-tä'-tô), In recitative style.
récitant (rä-së-tän), Recitante (rä'-tsë-tänt), F. A man (or woman) soloist.
recitative (rës-i-tä-tëv'), E., recitativ (rä-së-tä-tëf'), F., Recitativ (rä-tsë-tä-tëf'), G., recitativo (rä-chë-tä-të'-vô), I. Musical declamation or recitation, as opposed to strict melody. It usually aims to be a sort of musical colloquialism. In modern form it began in the first operatic works of Peri (vide B. D.), and the others; it was more or less a singing declamation with an accompaniment consisting of occasional chords to keep the singer on the key; it was well-called "dry," or recitativo secco, or parlante, and the accompaniment was indicated merely by figured bass. This accompaniment was gradually elaborated into the recitativo stromentato. "Instrumented," or accompagnato, or con accompagnamento or obbligato (in F. accompagné, or obligé). In later opera, particularly Wagner's, the whole musical structure is inclined to be in recitative with a descriptive and complicated orchestral background. Recitative is usually delivered at the singer's pleasure except when specially marked a tempo.
réciter (rä-së-tä), F. To perform a récit, or solo.
reci'ting note. That tone of a church-mode on which most of the chanting is done, usually the dominant.
rec'ord. Old E. To play the record'er. An obsolete flageolet with 9 holes, one of them covered with gold beater's skin, compass 2 octaves f'-f'''.
recorded music. See PHONOGRAPH MUSIC, page 794.
recreation, récréation (rä-krä'-äs-yôn), F. A light composition.
rec'te et re'tro, L. Forward and backward. Vide CANON.
rec'tus, L. Similar (of motion).
reddi'ta, redita (rä-dë'-tä), I., redite (rü-dët), F. A repeat.
redondilla (rä-dôn-dël'-yä), Sp. Roundelay. redoub'led. Compound (of an interval).
redoublement (rü-doob-lü-män), F. Doubling.

red'owa, redowak', redowazka (rā-dō-vāts'-kā), Bohemian. A dance in lively 3-4 time; in the Bohemian form 2-4 time is also employed.

reduplicato (rā'-doob-lī-kā'-tō), I. Redoubled.

reduciren, reduzieren (rā-doo-tsē'-rēn), G., réduire (rā-dwēr), F. To arrange or transcribe a composition in a smaller form. Hence, such condensation is called reduction, E., réduction (rā-düks-yōn), F., Reduktion (rē-dook'-tsī-ōn), G., riduzione (re-doo-tsi-ō'-nē), I.

reduc'tio, L. Reduction (of a mode to its original key).

red-note. See article, p. 767.

reed. Originally a thin and elastic strip of cane, now made of other fibres and of metal. It is fixed in an opening by one end; its free end is set in motion by the breath or by a current of air, and transmits this vibration with musical effect to the column of air in the main tube, to which it serves as a sort of quivering valve. The human larynx has a membranous reed, and the lips of horn-players serve the same purpose, the tone being determined by the tension of the lips and the length of the instrument. Vide EMBOUCHURE. free-reeds vibrate without striking the edges of their sockets. Those which strike the edges are called beating (impinging, percussion, or striking) reeds. They are used in the organ for brass effects. Some instrs., as the oboe and bassoon, have 2 reeds which strike each other, and are called double. Reeds are usually tuned by a sliding wire by which the vibrating portion is shortened or lengthened.

reed-instruments. A general name for those employing the reed mechanism, particularly the oboe and clarinet groups of the orchestra.

reed-pipe, r. stop, r. work. Refer to the pipes and stops of an organ which employ reeds.

reed-organ. Originally, a small portable organ called the regal, or a pair of regals (if it had 2 pipes for each digital). This small instr. which could sometimes be folded up like a book or Bible [hence Bibel-regal (bē'-bēl-rā'-gāl)], employed beating reeds, in the pipes. In 1810 Grénié inv. what he called the orgue expressif, because he could swell and diminish the tone. In 1843, Debain developed the Harmonium, which possessed several stops. The air pressure is usually applied by pedals worked by treadles; with levers, worked by the knees, to produce a swell. The American Organ (q.v.) employed a suction mechanism. The Vocalion returns to the harmonium style with elaborate improvements. There are many other instrs. which differ chiefly in name from the typical reed-organ.

reel. A lively dance usually in 4-4 (sometimes 6-8) time, perhaps of Scandinavian origin, but chiefly popular in Scotland. It is danced by 2 couples. The Virginia reel of America is danced by 2 long facing lines, the men on one side, and the women on the other.

refrain'. A burden, or stanza, repeated at the end of each new stanza of a song.

Re'gal (in G. rā'-gāl), régale (rā-gāl), F. 1. Vide REED-ORGAN. 2. An old suffix indicating a reed-stop. 3. An obsolete xylophone.

Regel (rā'-gēl), G. Rule.

re'genschori, L. Choirmaster.

Regi'na cœ'li, L. "Queen of Heaven." A hymn to the Virgin.

Register (rēj'-is-tēr in E.; in G. rā-jēs'-tēr). 1. The handle or draw-knob which bears the name of a stop. Hence, 2. A complete stop, or the set of pipes controlled by a single draw-knob. Accordingly registering and registration are the act or art of bringing into play and combination the different stops of an organ. Regis'ter-knopf (knöpf), G. Draw-knob. R-stange (shtāng-ē). Stop-lever. R-zug (tsookh). The mechanism of the draw-stop. Speaking stops (R-stimmen, or tönende R.) are distinguished from mechanical stops. stumme (shtoom'-mē) R. 3. A frame through which trackers run. 4. A distinct section of the tonality of a voice or instr. Vide VOICE.

registre (rū-zhēst'r), F., registro (rā-jēs'-trō), I. 1. A stop-knob. 2. Vide REGISTER (4).

registri(e)ren (rā-jēs-trē'-rēn), G. To register. Registri(e)ung (trē'-roongk). Registration.

règle (rēgi), F., regola (rā'-gō-lā), I. Rule.

reg'ula, L. 1. Register. 2. Rule.

reg'ular. 1. Strict (of fugue). 2. Sim-ilar (of motion).

regula'tion. Adjustment of touch.

Reigen (rī'-gēn), or Reihen (rī'ēn), G. A circular dance.

rein (rīn), G. Pure, perfect (of inter-vals), exact, hence reingreifen (grī-fēn). To play accurately.

Reiselied (rī'-zē-lēt), G. Traveller's or pilgrim's song.

Reitertrumpete (rī'-tēr-trōm-pā'-tē), G. A clarion, obsolete straight trumpet 30 inches long.

rela'ted. Vide RELATION.

rela'tion (in F. rû-lās-yōn), rela'tio, L., relazione (rā-lās-yō-nē), I. The affinity of keys based upon the similarity or identity of certain chords. Upon key-relationship the whole subject of harmony and modern counter-point is largely based, and upon this split hair more great theorists jostle than there were angels dancing upon the needle-point of the old monkish dogmatists. In a liberal sense all keys are closely related. For purposes of distinction those keys are said to be related (attendant, accessory, or auxiliary) which have one or more chords in common. The most nearly related (at least remote) keys to any key are those founded on its dominant and subdominant (as the keys of G and F are most nearly related to the key of C), also the absolute and relative major and minor (as c minor is the absolute minor of C major while the relative minor to C major is a minor, which has the same signature). false-relation, or rela'tio non harmon'ica. Vide FALSE.

rela'tive key, E., mode-relatif (mōd-rû-lā-tēf'), F., tono relativo (tē'-vō), I. 1. The relative key to a major is the minor key whose tonic is a minor third below. The relative major of a minor key has its tonic a minor third above. Vide RELATION.

religio'so (rā-lē-jī-ō'-sō), I., religiosamen'te. Solemn(ly), devout(ly).

rel'ish. An old grace (q.v.).

remote'. Unrelated. Vide RELATION.

remo'tus,-a, L. Remote; open (as harmony).

remplissage (rān-plīs-sāzh), F. 1. "Filling," as the inner parts of a harmony. 2. Padding. 3. Cadenzas, and bravura passages.

rentrée (rān-trā), F. Re-entrance (of a part).

renverser (rān-vēr-sā), F. To invert, hence renversé (rān-vēr-sā). Inverted. renversement (vēr-s-mān). Inversion.

renvoi (rān-vwā), F. A repeat; a sign of repetition.

repeat. A sign indicating the repetition of certain measures—marked by two or more dots in the spaces between the lines, before (or after) the double bar, which indicates the end (or beginning) of the portion to be repeated.

repeating. 1. Of action in which the hammer rebounds quickly enough to permit a rapid reiteration of the tone. 2. Of mixed stops whose overtones do not keep always the same height above the pitch, but sound an octave lower, as the pitch rises.

repercus'sa (vox), L. A "repeated tone." 1. In neumes the notes called bī-, dī-, or trī-. 2. In Gregorian music, the principal note of a mode. repercus'sion, repercus'sio, L. 1. Repetition, of a chord or note. 2. The reappearance of the subject of the fugue after the exposition. 3. The dominant of a church-mode.

repeti(e)ren (rā-pā-tē'-rēn), G. 1. Vide to BREAK (3). Hence repeti(e)rende Stimme. A mixture-stop with a break. 2. To repeat.

Repeti'tion (in G. rā-pā-tē'-tsī-ōn). 1. The rapid repeating of a note or chord. 2. (In G. Repetitions'mecha'nik). Vide REPEATING (1). 3. Vide BREAK (3).

répétition (rā-pā-tēs-yōn), F. 1. Rehearsal. 2. Repetition.

répétiteur (rā'-pā'-tē-tūr'), F., repetitore (rā-pā-tē-tō'-rē), I. Trainer of an opera chorus; the rehearsal.

repetizione (rā-pā-tē-tsi-ō'-nē), repetimen'to, I. Repetition.

replica (rā-plē-kā), I. A repeat; repetition, hence replicato (kā'-tō). Repeated; doubled.

rep'licate. The octave of a tone.

Replik (rā-plēk'), G. Complementary interval.

réplique (rā-plēk), F. 1. The octave of a tone. 2. The answer of a fugue. 3. Complementary interval. 4. Cue.

reply. Answer (of a fugue).

répons (rā-pōn), F. Response (1).

réponse (rā-pōns), F. Answer.

report. Answer.

repos (rū-pō), F. Point of repose, following a cadence.

reprise (rē-prīz'), E. The reappearance of the first theme of a sonata or symphony after the development.

reprise (rū-prēz), F. 1. Repetition. 2. Vide REPRISE. 3. Reappearance of a theme. 4. Vide BREAK (3). 5. Revival of a work.

reprendre (rū-prāndr), F. To resume.

Requiem (rā'-kwī-ēm), L. The first word and title of the Mass for the Dead (missa pro defunctis). Beginning "Requiem aeternam dona eis, domine" "rest eternal, grant them, Lord." The requiem is divided into the introit, kyrie, gradual (with tractus, "Absolve," and sequence "dies iræ"). Offertory, "Domine Jesu Christe"; Sanctus, and Benedictus; Agnus Dei; and Communion "Lux aeterna."

research'. An improvisation used as a prelude to a composition and made up of its chief theme.

reservoir. The portion of a bellows in which wind is stored.

resin (rēz'-in). A refined gum applied to the hair of the bow to improve its grip on the strings.

resolution, résolution (rā-zō-lūs-yōn), F., resolu'tio, L., risoluzione (rā-zō-loo-tsi-ō'-nē), I. 1. Firmness, determination. 2. The dissolving of dissonance into concord; the satisfaction of the mental demand for that partial repose found only in consonance. Dissonant tones are generally resolved by progressing half a tone or a whole tone down or up.

resonance, E., Resonanz (rā-zō-nānts'), G. The sympathetic response of a vibrating body to its own particular tone or tones, under the impulsion of vibrations received from another vibrating body sounding the same tone or tones. Thus if one sounds the note a' on a violin, a tuning fork of the same pitch will give forth the same tone spontaneously, as also will a piano with the damper pedal down; a pane of glass or a loose plate of metal of the proper nature will also reply; furthermore each partial tone will be affected similarly. This acoustic fact is used for the reinforcing of tones; as cavities of air and sheets of wood have this same property of resonance to all the tones and partials which they themselves contain. The violin, etc., employ a hollow space called the resonance box, or Resonanzkasten,

G. Certain old instrs. used a sympathetic string or Resonanzsaite, G. The piano, etc., use a resonance board, or sound-board, Resonanzboden, G.

respiro (rā-spē'-rō), I. "A breath"; a sixteenth rest.

respond'. A psalm (or part of one) sung between lessons at canonical hours.

response', E., respon'sum, L., respon'sio'ne, respon'so, I. 1. The reply of choir or congregation to a phrase read or chanted by a priest or officiant. in R. C. and Episcopal churches, 2. Responsory. 3. The answer in fugue.

Respon'sory, E., responso'rium, L. 1. The psalm or portion of one sung between Missal lessons. 2. The graduale. 3. A respond.

responsivo (rā-spōn-sē'-vō), I. Responsive(ly).

resserrement (rūs-sēr-mān), F. Stretto.

ressort (rūs-sōr'), F. Bass-bar.

rest. 1. A period of rhythmic silence, the tempo continuing to be counted passively. 2. A symbol indicating such rest. The rests are usually named according to the portion of a measure they occupy, as 16th rest; sometimes being called after the note which has the same duration, as quarter-note rest, breve rest. They may be augmented by dots and may extend beyond the limits of one measure, as the four-measure rest. See SIGNS and SYMBOLS. large-rest, long-rest. See p. 767.

restric'tio, L. Stretto.

result'ant. Used of secondary tones formed by the combined vibration of two independent tones. Vide ACOUSTICS. When sounded together they produce a difference tone or differential tone whose vibration equals the difference between theirs; also a summational tone whose vibration is the sum of theirs.

Resurrex'it, L. "And rose again." Part of the Credo. Vide MASS.

retard'. 1. To diminish the velocity. 2. To suspend and then resolve upwards, hence retarded progression, or retarda'tion, retarda'tio, L. 1. A suspension resolving upwards. 2. A decrease in velocity.

retraite (rū-trēt'), F. Retreat, tattoo. ret'ro, L. Backwards. Vide CANON.

ret'rograde, retrogra'dus, L., retro-grado (ră-trô-gră'-dô), I. Vide IMITATION.

ret'to, I. Direct, similar. Vide MOTION.

rêveil (ră-vê'), F., veillee (rû-vâ'-yû, in E. rê-vêl'-yê. In the American army rêv-ê-lê', in G. ră-fil'-lê). "Awakening," the first morning military signal. In old E. reveil', or revel'ly.

rev'erie. A contemplative composition.

reversed. Contrary (of motion). re-ver'sion. Retrograde imitation.

revoice. To tune an organ-pipe.

rf., rfz. Abbr. for Rinforzando.

r. h. Abbr. for right hand.

rhapsodie (răp-sô-dê'), F. and G., rhap'sody, E. "A song of patches." In ancient music a fragment of an epic poem, sung by a minstrel or rhapsode, or rhapsodist. In modern music a brilliant composition which combines the idea of a medley with the acquired idea of great joy or ecstasy.

rhythm, E., rhyth'mus, L. (in G. rêt'-moos), rhythme (rêdhm), F. The "flow" and undulation of progression, marked by the rise and fall of stress and duration. The arrangement of accented and unaccented, and of long and short sounds. Rhythm usually follows some pattern which is repeated with more or less variation through an entire movement or composition. Rhythm might be called the melody of monotone. It is distinct from melodic or harmonic progression, and can be vividly shown on such an instr. as the drum, and it can be written on a single line without reference to pitch. The rhythm sometimes is so complicated that it is not completed in less than a musical period, vide FORM; but it is usually based upon a fundamental series of pulsations that can be expressed within the limits of three or four or five beats. These are accordingly taken as a unit and grouped within the limits of a measure, and cut off by two bars; the first bar being placed before the strongest accent of the group, the second after the weakest. Time may be expressed by the regular swing of a bâton; rhythm embellishes this bâton pulsation, and usually coincides with it in accentuation, except in a syncopated rhythm.

rhythmique (rêdh-mêk), F., rhyth-misch (rêt'-mish), G. Rhythmical.

ribattuta (rê-bât-too'-tâ), I. "Restriking." The slow beginning of a trill.

ribe'ba, ribeca (rê-bâ'-kâ), I. Rebeck.

ribbechino (kê'-nô). Small Rebeck.

ribs. The sides connecting back and belly of violins, etc.

ricerca're, ricercata (rê-chêr-kâ'-tâ), I., ricercar (rê-tsêr-kâr'), G. "Searched out," cf. rêcherché. Used of compositions or passages, usually of fugal form, and employing all the resources and learning of the composer. Vide FUGUE.

richiamare (rê-kî-â-mâ'-rê), I. To imitate the Richia'mo or bird-call.

ricordanza (rê-kôr-dân'-tsâ), I. Recollection.

riddo'ne, I. A roundelay.

ridevolmente (rê-dâ'-vôl-mên'-tê), I. Laughingly.

ridicolosamen'te, I. Ridiculously.

rid'dle-canon. Vide CANON.

ridot'to, I. 1. Reduced (cf. reduciren). 2. A reduction.

riduzione (rê-doo-tsî-ô'-nê), I. Arrangement, reduction.

Riesenhafte (rê'-zên-hâr-fê), G. Æolian harp.

riformento (rê-fi-ôr-mên'-tô), I. Ornament.

riga (rê-gâ), I. Staff.

rigabel'lo, I., rigabel'lum, L. Regal.

rigadon', E., rigaudon, rigodon (rê-gô-dôn), E. A lively and humorous dance of Provençal origin, and consisting of three or four reprises, the third in a lower position. The time is usually 4-4, with an uptake of a quarter note.

rigals, rigol(e)s. Regals.

rigore (rê-gô'-rê), I. Rigour, exactness of tempo. rigoro'so. Exact.

rilasciando (rê-lâ-shân'-dô), I. Relaxing the speed. rilascian'te. With reduced speed.

rikk. Egyptian tambourine.

rilch (rîlsh), ril'ka. Russian lute.

rimett. Abbr. for rimettendo, I. Retarding.

rinforzare (rîn-fôr-tsâ'-rê), I. To reinforce, emphasise. rinforzamen'to, rinforzo (fôr'-tsô). Reinforcement. rinforzan'do, -a'to. Suddenly emphasised and accented.

Ringelpauke (rîng'-êl-pow-kê), G. A rattle with rings on bars.

Ringeltanz (rîng'-êl-tânts), G. Circular dance.

ripercussio'ne, I. Repercussion.

- ripetizione (rē-pā-tē-tsi-ō'-nē), ripetitura (too'-rā), I. 1. Repetition. 2. Refrain.
- ripieno, pl. -i (rē-pē-ā'-nō[ē]), I. "Filling." 1. Used of a part or an instr. which merely strengthens and rounds out the harmony, as opposed to solo or concertante. 2. Used in scores to indicate the entrance of the full band. One who plays a ripieno (in G. Ripienstimme, rē-pi-ān-shtim-mē) is called Ripienist, or ripienista. 3. A mixture-stop called ripieno di due, tre, quattro or cinque, according as it has 2, 3, 4, or 5 ranks.
- ripienino (nē'-nō). 4-ft. stop.
- ripigliare (rē-pēl-yā'-rē), ripien'dere (prēn'-dē-rē), I. To resume, hence, ripiglian'do, ripienden'do. Resuming. ripiglio (rē-pēl'-yō). Reprise.
- ripo'so, I. Repose, hence riposa'to (zā'-tō), repositamen'te. Reposeful(ly).
- ripresa (rē-prā'-zā), I. 1. Reprise. 2. Repeat. 3. The repeat mark.
- risentito (rē-sēn-tī'-tō), I. With energetic expression.
- risoluzione (rē-zō-loo-tsi-ō'-nē), I. Resolution, 1 and 2. risoluto (loo'-tō), risolutamen'te. Decided(ly), energetic(ally).
- risonanza, risonanza (rē-soo-o-nān'-tsā), I. Resonance.
- risposta (rēs-spō'-stā), I. 1. Consequent. 2. Answer in fugue.
- Riss, G. "Gap," between registers.
- ristret'to, I. Stretto.
- risvegliato (rēs-vāl-yā'-tō), I. Animated.
- rit, ritard. Abbr. for ritardando (rē-tār-dān'-dō). Retarding gradually.
- ritardato (dā'-tō). Retarded. ritar'do, -azio'ne. Retardation.
- riten. Abbr. for ritenuto (rē-tā-noo'-tō), I. Immediately slower, to be distinguished from ritardando and rallentando as well as from ritenendo, and ritenen'te, which refer to gradual retardation.
- ritmo (rēt'-mō), I. Rhythm. r. di due (tre) battute (dē doo-ā-bāt-too'-tā). Rhythm in 2 (or 3) measures to the beat, not in duple or triple time, which means 2 (or 3) beats to the measure. ritmico. Rhythmic.
- ritornare (rē-tōr-nā'-rē), I. To return. ritornan'do. Returning. ritornato (ā'-tō). Reverted.
- ritornel, ritornel'lo, I., ritournelle (rē-toor-nēl'), ritornelle, F. 1. A burden or repeated portion, such as the instrumental prelude, inter- and post-lude of a song, sometimes called the symphony. 2. The tutti parts in a concerto. 3. A repeat. 4. A burden, or refrain.
- river'so, riverscio (rē-vēr'-shō), I. 1. Reversed. 2. Retrograde.
- rivoglimento (rē-vōl-yī-mēn'-tō), I. Inversion or transposition, in counterpoint. rivoltato (rē-vōl-tā'-tō), rivolto (rē-vōl'-tō). Inversion.
- robusto (rō-boos'-tō), I. Robust. Vide TENOR. robustamen'te. Firmly.
- roccoco, rococo (rō-kō'-kō), I. Old fashioned, eccentric.
- rock-harmon'ic. A graduated series of rock crystals played with hammers.
- Roger de Coverley. Vide SIR R. DE C.
- Rohr (rōr), pl. Röhre (rā'-rē), G. 1. Tube. 2. Reed, usually R.-blatt, reed of oboe, bassoon and clarinet. R.-flöte. "Reed-flute" a half-covered 4, 8 or 16 ft. flue-stop. R.-schelle (shēl'-lē). The same stop in 1 or 2 ft. pitch. Doppelrohrflöte. One with double mouth. R.-quint. One sounding a fifth above. Rohrwerk. The reed-stops.
- roll (rōl), E., rollo (rōl'-lō), I. 1. The trill on drum or tambourine, produced on the kettle-drum by rapid taps with the two sticks; on the side-drum with two taps with the left stick, then two with the right; on the tambourine with the knuckles. 2. long r. (a) Battle or rally signal for troops. (b) Swift arpeggio on the organ. rollan'do. Rolling.

- roman'tic, romantique (rō-mān-tēk), romanzesco (tsās'-kō). A term much fought for and much evaded. In general, it means the striving after individuality, novelty, and personality of musical expression as opposed to the repetition of classic forms—the reaction of the molten against the mold. As every generation tries to modify, assimilate and re-spin the art of the preceding, and always meets an opposition from the schoolmen and conservatives, the word really means little more than “modern.”

Rome, prix de (prē dū rôm), F. 1. A stipend granting four years' study in Rome, annually awarded by the French government to competing pupils of the Paris Conservatoire. This is the grand prix (grān prē), the second (sū-kôn) being a gold medal. 2. Stipend awarded every other year by the Brussels Cons.

(e)-tanz (tǎnts). Dance-song. Sing-

fuge. Vocal fuge. Singmǎrchen

(mǎr'-khēn). A ballad. Singma- ni(e)ren (mǎ-nē'-rēn). Vocal embellishment. Singschauspiel (shōpshpēl). Drama with songs. Sing- schule (shōo-lē). Vocal school or method. Singspiel (shpēl). 1. The original form of German opera in the 18th cent. Simple tunes were given to peasants, etc., florid songs to the aristocracy. (Vide J. A.

HILLER in the B. D.) Singstimme.

Voice, vocal part. Singstück, Sing-

weise. Air, melody.

singhiozzando (sĭn-gĭ-ōd-zǎn'-dō), I. Sobbing.

sin'gle-action. Vide HARP.

single-chant. A simple melody to one verse of a psalm.

sinistra (sē-nĭ-ās'-trā), Sp., sinistra

(sĭn'-is-trā), L. (in I. sē-nēs'-trā).

Vide TUBA.

sink'apace. A five-step dance. Cinquepace.

sino (sē'-nō), I. To, as far as; usually sin'al.

si'ren, E., Sirene (zē-rā'-nē), G., sirēne

(sē-rēn'), F. 1. A mythological being whose vocal powers captivated the human beings on whom she preyed; hence, a prima donna.

2. An instr. for counting vibrations.

Sir Roger de Coverley. An imaginary gentleman of the old school described by Addison; hence an English country-dance in 9-4 time.

sirventes (sēr-vǎnt), F. Troubadour songs of homage.

sistema (sēs-tǎ'-mā), I. Staff.

Sister (zēs-tēr), G. Old 7-stringed guitar.

sis'trum, L. An ancient instr., consisting of an iron frame with a number of movable rings; when shaken or struck it sounded.

sit'ar. Hindu guitar.

sito'le. Citole.

Sitz (zĭts), G. Position, place.

six (in F. sēs). Six. Vide METER,

6-8 time, that in which there are six-eight notes, the accent resting on the first and fourth. six pour quatre

(poor kǎtr). Sextuplet.

sixte (sĕkst), sixième (sēz-yēm), F.

A sixth.

sixteenth note. A semiquaver; one-fourth of a quarter note. sixteenth rest. A pause of equal duration.

sixth. 1. An interval (q.v.). 2. A chord. chord of the s. or s. chord.

The first inversion of a chord (q.v.), chord of the added s. (de la s. ajoutée). Subdominant triad, with sixth added as f-a-c-d. Vide AL-TERED. little sharp s. The 2d inversion of the seventh on the second degree. extreme s. Vide EXTREME and ALTERED. six-four, six-five, etc.

Vide CHORD.

sixtine (sĕx-tēn'), F. Sextuplet.

sixty-fourth (note). A hemidemisemi-quaver. s. rest. A pause of equal duration.

Skalde (skāl'-dē), G. Vide SCALD.

skim'mington. A shivaree described in Hardy's novel "The Mayor of Casterbridge."

skip. A progression exceeding a whole step.

Skizze (skĭts'-zē), G. Sketch, a short piece.

slancio (slǎn'-chō), I. Vehemence.

slargando (slār-gǎn'-dō), slargando, si,

I. Enlarging, gradually slower.

slentan'do, I. Becoming slower.

slide. 1. A movable tube in the shape of a U, used in the slide-trumpet,

slide-horn, and the trombone (q.v.).
 2. A grace of two or more notes moving diatonically. 3. A portamento. 4. A sliding lath strip which cuts off a rank of pipes from the wind, also slider. 5. tuning-s. A sliding pitch-pipe sounding thirteen semitones. sliding-relish. 6. An old grace, a slide (2).
slo'gan. Highland war-cry or rallying word.
slur. 1. A curved line above or beneath two or more notes, which are, (a) to be played legato, (b) to be sung to one syllable, hence slurred as opposed to syllabic melody.
small octave. Vide PICTCH. smaniente (smä-ni-än'-të), smaniato (ä'-tö), smanio'so, I. Frantic.
sminuendo (smë-noo-ën'-dö). Diminishing. sminuito (smë-noo-ë'-tö). Softer.
smoran'do, I. Dying away.
smorfoso (smör-fi-ö'-zö), I. Affected.
smorz. Abbr. of smorzando (smör-tsän'-dö), I. Dying away. Extinguished.
snap. Vide SCOTCH.
snare-drum. Side-drum. Vide DRUM.
snuff-box. 1. A musical box combined with a snuff-box. 2. A famous waltz written for it.
soave (sö-ä'-vë), soavemen'te, I. Suave(ly), sweet(ly).
sobb. Damping (on the lute).
sock'et. The round joint which holds the mouthpiece of a clarinet.
soggetto (söd-jët'-tö), I. Subject, theme, motive. s. invariato (ä'-tö). The invariable subject. s. variato (vä-ry-ä'-tö), I. Variable subject of a counterpoint.
sognando (sön-yän'-dö), I. Dreamy.
soh. Tonic Sol-fa, for Sol.
sol (söl). 1. Vide SOLMISATION. 2. The note G in France and Italy.
sola (sö'-lä), I. Alone, solo.
solem'nis, L. Solemn.
solenne (sö-lën'-në), solennemen'te, I. Solemn(ly). solennità (i-tä'). Solemnity.
solfä (söl-fä'), I. 1. Gamut; scale. 2. A bâton. 3. Time, a bat'tere la s., to beat time.
solfä, E. 1. Solmisation (q. v.). 2. Solfeggio. 3. To sing in solmisation or solfeggio. 4. Vide TONIC SOL-FA.
solfège (sül-fëzh), F., solfeggio (söl-féd'-jö), I. Exercise for the voice in solmisation or on one syllable. solfeggiare (söl-féd-jä'-rë), I., solfeg- gi(e)ren (zöl-féd-jë'-rën), G., solfier (sül-fy-ä), F. To sing a solfeggio.

solì (sö-lë), I. 1. Plural of solo. 2. A passage played by one performer to each part.
sol'id. Of a chord not broken (q.v.).
so'list. Soloist, solo-player.
solito (sö-lë'-tö), I. Usual. al s. As usual.
sollecito (söl-lä'-chë'-tö), I. Careful, exact.
solmisation. "The singing of the syllables do, re, sol, mi, etc." A venerable method of teaching and singing scales and intervals ascribed to Guido D'Arezzo (or Aretinus). It is a convenient crutch for those who are not going far; but must soon be discarded.
 Greek music (Vide MODÈS) divided the complete scale into groups of four consecutive degrees or tetrachords. Guido or a disciple divided it into groups of six degrees, or hexachords. It happened that the initial syllables of the six phrases of a certain familiar hymn to St. John formed the ascending scale of one of these hexachords (the one called naturale). The device was hit upon (as an aid for weak memories) of using these syllables as names of the notes; hence the notes of this hexachord began to be called ut, re, mi, fa, sol, la. (The hymn ran as follows: "Ut queant laxis, Resonare fibris Mira gestorum Famuli tuorum Solve polluti Labii reatum, Sancte Johannes.") It was later found convenient to use these syllables for other hexachords, the ut being movable. A crude form of modulation was developed called mutation. When the modern scale came into play early in the 17th cent. it brought into use the heptachord or scale of seven degrees. A new syllable si was therefore devised and the so-called Aretinian syllables, used for singing in all the keys; ut, being always the tonic, sol, the dominant, etc. The syllables have persisted for primary use and for vocal exercises ever since. In many countries they have been since used as the definite names of the notes of the scale of C, except that the syllable do (being more easily sung) has displaced ut except in France, since its first use (perhaps by Bononcini), in 1673. This is the only change that has been accepted among the many that have been advocated, such as the bocedisation, or bodisation (bo, ce, di, ga, lo, ma, ni) of Waelraut, 1550 (Pedro d'Urenna in 1620 proposing ni for si), and the bébisation, or labecidation (la, be, ce, de, me, fe, ge)—satirically called labisation—of Hitzler in 1628. The damenisation (da, me, ni, po, tu, la, be) of Graun, 1750, was not for solmisation but for use in place of words in vocalising.

solo (sō'lō), I. 1. As adjective, "alone." 2. A passage or composition for a single voice or instr. violino solo may mean either "violin only"; or the solo (i. e., leading) vln. solo-organ. A manual of the organ (q.v.). solo pitch. A scordature (q.v.) used by a soloist. solo quartet. A group of four soloists; a composition for such a group; a solo with 3-part accompaniment. solo-stop. Vide stop. The word is used in compounds of various languages, as Solo-sänger, G. Solo-singer, etc. solomanie (sō-lō-mā-nē'). A Turkish flute, without reed.

sombrer (sōn-brā), F. To give a sombre, veiled tone.

somma (sōm'mā), I. Greatest, highest, extreme.

Sommerophone. A bombardon-like instr. inv. by Sommer of Weimar, 1843 (also called euphonion, euphonic horn).

son (sōn), F., son (sōn), Sp. Sound. s. harmonique (sō-nār-mō-nēk). Harmonic.

sonabile (sō-nā'-bī-lē), sonante (nān'-tē), I. Sounding, sonorous.

sonare (sō-nā'-rē), I. To sound; to ring; to play. s. alla mente. To improvise.

sonata (sō-nā'-tā), I., Sonate (in F. sō-nāt, in G. zō-nā'-tē). Music "sounded or played" as opposed to music sung (cantata). Originally any instrumental piece, as s. da chiesa. For church. s. da camera. For the salon. Later the term was applied to a group of three to five dance-tunes of varied rhythms. The treatment came to be less and less lyrical and more and more thematic (q.v.). Such were Bach's organ and violin sonatas. The very human Haydn added a lyric interest as contrast in the form both of counter-themes to the principal theme and of separate movements of melodious character. Mozart made no formal change but added more human interest and warmth. The sonata now consisted of 3 or 4 movements; first an allegro written on what is confusedly called the sonata-form (the editor suggests "sonata-formula" (q.v.) as a substitute term for describing the structure of this one movement, retaining the word "sonata-form" for the entire group of movements); second, a slow movement; third a minuet; fourth, a rondo, or finale on the same formula as the first movement. Beethoven substituted for the minuet a light and witty scherzo (q.v.); other composers have made other substitutions. This general group of varied movements and moods is applied to many forms, notably the symphony, the classic overture, the concerto, the string quartet, and chamber-music generally, which are hence said to be "in sonata-form." The sonata-formula, sonata-piece, or Sonatasatz (zäts), the structure of the first movement, marks the highest period of classic formalism. See article on FORM, p. 733. The word is qualified in many ways as grand, a highly elaborate form, double, for two solo instrs. A short easy composition with few movements and little development is called sonatina (sōn-ä-tē-nä). sonatilla, I., Sonatine (zō-nä-tē-nē), G. sonatore (tō'-rē), feminine sonatrice (trē'-chē), I. A man (or woman) instrumentalist.

sonevole (sō-nā'-vo-lē), I. Resounding. sonetto (sō-nēt'-tō), I. A composition based on a poetic sonnet.

song. 1. A melody for voice. 2. Lyric piece for any instr.

song-form. A structure of 3 chief sections, (a) a first theme, (b) a contrasting second theme, (c) a return of the first theme. In poems of many stanzas, the same air is commonly used for all the stanzas regardless of changed language and emphasis. This strophic treatment is discarded by more conscientious composers for a treatment in which each stanza is individually set to music with intelligent deference to its meaning. This is the through-composed or durchkomponi(e)ri (doorkh-kōm-pō-nērt') style.

song without words. A lyric instrumental piece.

sonnante (sôn-nānt), F. A scale of hanging steel bars struck with a hammer.

sonner (sûn-nā), F. To sound. s. le tambour (lû tân-boor). To sound the drum, used of a jarring G string in the 'cello.

sonnerie (sûn-rē), F. 1. Chime. 2. Military call.

sono (sô-nô'), I. Sound, tone.

sonomètre (sô-nô-mètre), F., sonome'ter. 1. A monochord inv. by Loulis to aid piano-tuners. 2. A sounding-board with two strings for acoustic experiments.

sonore (sô-nôr), F., sonoro (sô-nô'-rô), I., sonoramen'te. Sonorous(ly). sonoridad (sô-nô-rî-dâdh'), Sp., sonorità (sô-nô-rî-tâ'), I., sonorité (sô-nô-rî-tâ), F. Sonority.

sonor'ophone. A form of bombardon. sonorous (sô-nô'-rous). Capable of musical sound; sounding.

soprano (sô-prâ'-nô), I. (pl. -i), Sopran (zô-prân'), G. 1. The highest kind of human voice, differing from the alto in lying chiefly in the "head-register"; this voice is typically a woman's voice, but is also found in boys. It occurs naturally in some men (called falsestti, alti naturali, or tenorini), but was obtained artificially in others (called evirati, castrati), particularly in the last century when the eunuch "artificial" sopranos achieved marvellous power and agility. The soprano voice has an average range from c'-a'' (Vide PITCH), the tones from f' up being head-tones. The voice occasionally reaches lower, and often higher than this normal range, c''', being not unusual. A voice that reaches f''' or g''' is phenomenal (Agujari sang c'''' three octaves above mid-C). (Vide also MEZZO-SOPRANO.) Soprano voices are divided into the more powerful or dramatic (dramma'tico), and the flexible, and light or lyric (leggiero) (lêd-jâ'-rô) or légier (lâ-zhâ). 2. The part sung by the highest voice or the highest instrument. 3. The instr. which is the highest of its class (sometimes an extra high instr. is called sopranino).

4. The possessor of a soprano voice. soprana chorda (kôr-dâ). The E string of a violin. sopran'ist. A male soprano. soprano clef. The C clef on the first line of the staff; sometimes used of the G clef.

sordo (sôr-dô), I. Muffled, veiled tone. sordamen'te. Soft(ly).

sordellina (lê'-nâ), I. A small 4-piped bagpipe.

sor'dine, E., Sordino (sôr-dê'-nô, pl. -i, German pl. -en), I. 1. A small tone-softening device, damper or mute to set against piano-strings, in the mouth of a trumpet, or on the bridge of a violin. 2. A kit. con s. In piano-playing "use the soft pedal"; in playing violin, horn, etc., "use the mute." senza (sên'-tsâ), s. or s. levato (lê-vâ'-tô). "Remove the mute or damper."

sordo'no, I., sordone (sôr-dûn), F., Sordun (zôr-doon'), G. 1. Obs. bombard of 5 sizes, and 12 ventages. 2. An old stop. 3. In G. a trumpet-mute.

sorgfältig (zôrk'h'-fêl-tîkh), G. Careful(ly).

sortita (sôr-tê'-tâ), I. 1. Entrance aria. 2. Voluntary for close of service.

sospensione (sî-ô'-nê), I. Suspension. sospensivamen'te. Doubtfully.

sospiran'do, sospirante (rân'-tê), sospirevole (râ'-vô-lê), sospiro'so, I. 1. Sighing, doleful. 2. A sobbing catch in the breath.

sostenen'do, sostenen'te, I. Sustaining the tone.

sostenuto (sôs-tô-noo'-tô), I. 1. Sustained, prolonged, retarded. 2. Gradually retarded. 3. Andante.

sostinen'te, I. Used of instrs. with special device for sustaining tones.

sotto (sôt'-tô), I. Under, below. s. voce (vô'-chê). In an undertone. s. dominan'te. Sub-dominant.

soubass (soo-bâs), F. Sub-bass.

souff'arah. Oriental reedless wind-instrs. in general.

soum. Burmese harp.

soufflerie (soof-ilê-rê), F. The bellows action. soufflet (soof-flâ). Bellows.

souffler (soof-flâ). To blow. souffleur (flûr), fem. souffleuse (flûz).

1. Organ-blower. 2. Prompter.

sound. Vide ACOUSTICS.

- sound-board, sounding-board. 1. A thin resonant board which by sympathetic vibrations enlarges, enriches and prolongs the tone of the strings stretched across it (as in pianos, the belly of violins, etc.). 2. The cover of the wind-chest, sound-body or box, a resonance box; s. bow, the rim of a bell; s. hole, a hole in the resonance box to give communication from the resonance chamber to the air. s. post. Vide VIOLIN. s. register. A sound-recorder inv. in Paris, 1858. s. waves. The alternate condensation and rarefaction of air in vibration (q.v.).
- souape (soo-păp), F. Valve.
- soupir (soo-për), F. A quarter rest. semi-s. 8th rest. quart de s. 16th rest. huitième (or demi quart) de s. 32d rest. seizième. 64th rest.
- sourdeline (soor-dě-lën), F. Sordelina.
- sourdement (soord-măn), F. In a subdued manner.
- sourdine (soor-dën), F. 1. Sordino. 2. A soft harmonium-stop. 3. Céleste pedal. 4. An old spinet.
- sous (soo), F. Under, below. s.-chante (shăntr). Subcantor. s.-dominante. Sub-dominant. s.-médiate. Sub-mediante. s.-tonique. Leading note.
- soutenir (soo-tě-nër), F. To sustain.
- souvenir (soo-vě-nër), F. Reminiscence.
- Sp. Abbr. of Spitz.
- space. The interval between 2 lines of the staff, or between 2 ledger lines.
- spagnuola (spăn-yoo-ô'-lă), I. The guitar.
- spalla (spăl'-lă), I. Vide viol.
- spanisch (spăn-ışh), G., spagnolesco (spăn-yô-lës'-kô), I. Spanish.
- spanischer Reiter (ri'-ter), G. Tones made by running. spanisches Kreuz (kroits), G. Double sharp.
- spar'ta, spartita (spăr-tě'-tă), or -o, I., Sparte (spăr-tě), G. Partitura.
- spartire (tě'-rě), I. To score; particularly to rescore an old work.
- spassapensiero (pěn-si-ă'-rô), I. Jew's harp.
- spasshaft (späss'-häft), G. Sportive(ly). S.-tigkeit (tikh-kt). Sportiveness, playfulness.
- spafium, L., spazio (spă'-tsi-ô), I. A space.
- spe'cies. Kind. Vide COUNTERPOINT.
- Sperrventil, G. Vide VENTIL 2.
- spezzato (spěd-ză'-tô), I. Divided.
- spianato (spi-ă-nă'-tô), 1. Legato. 2. Calm.
- spiccato (spiĭk-kă'-tô), I. Separated. Pointed. Vide bow.
- Spiel (shpël), G. Playing; style of playing. S.-art. 1. Style of performance. 2. Touch. s.-bar. Playable. S.-leute (loi-tě). 1. The drummer and fifers of a band. 2. Strolling players. S.-manieren (mă-ně'-rën). Ornaments, graces. S.-oper. Light opera. S.-tenor, etc. Light opera tenor, etc.
- Spillflöte, G. Spitzflöte.
- spina (spě'nă), L. "Thorn," jack; quill of a spinet (q.v.).
- Spin'delflöte, G. Spitzflöte.
- spinet (spi'n'-ět or spi-nět'), E., Spinett (spi-nět'), G., spinet'ta, I. Obsolete and small square form of harpsichord, originally called the couched harp, later called spinet, from its quills, or spinae.
- spirito (spě'-rî-tô), I. Spirit, energy. spirituo'so, spirito'so, spiritosamen'te. Spirited(ly).
- spirituale (spě-rî-too-ă'-lě), I., spirituel (spîr-y-too-ěl'), F. Spiritual.
- spis'si gravis'simi, L. Hypatoides—the deep sounds of the Greek system.
- spis'sus, L. "Thick"; full (of intervals).
- Spitz (shpîts), G. Point (of bow); toe (of foot). S.-flöte (flă-tě). A soft stop with pointed pipes. S.-quint. Its quint. S.-harfe (hăr'-fě). Pointed harp. A small harp with strings on each side of its sounding-board.
- spondau'lum. Greek hymn with flute.
- spread. Open.
- spressione (i-ô'-ně), I. Expression.
- springing bow. Vide bow.
- Sprung (sproongk), G. A skip. s. weise (vi-zě). By skip.
- square. Vide ORGAN. square B. Vide B. square piano. Vide PIANO.
- squill'la, I. A little bell. squillan'te. Tinkling.
- srou'tis. The 22 degrees of the Hindu scale.
- sta (stă), I. "Let it stand"; i. e., to be played just as it stands.
- Stab'at Ma'ter Do'loro'sa, L. "The grieving Mother stood," a hymn on the Crucifixion, written by Jacoponus, 14th cent. Vide SEQUENCE.
- stabile (stă'-bî-lě), I. Firm.

stac. Abbr. of Staccato.

staccare (stāk-kä'-rě), I. To play staccato.

staccato (stāk-kä'-tō), I. "Detached," used of short, non-legato notes or a touch which leaves the key or string immediately. This crispness is marked over the notes by round dots called staccato marks; it may be modified by a slur over the dots, or emphasised by small wedge-like dots. staccatis' simo. As staccato as possible.

Stadt (shtät), G. Town, city; used of a salaried municipal musician, as S.-musik, -pfeifer, etc.

staff, stave. The five horizontal parallel lines on, between, above and below which the notes are placed, the pitch of the note being determined by the key-signature and the clef, from which the s. takes its name. The usual arrangement is a bass s. (with F clef) under a treble s. (with G clef); they form a continuous notation except for the middle C, which is sometimes given a line, making the 11-line or great s. notation is opp. to alphabetical notation. The Gregorian s. had 4 lines.

Stahlharmo'nika (shtäl), G. Steel bars played (a) with a bow, inv. by Nobe, 1796, (b) with a hammer; more commonly Stahlspiel (shtäl-shpēl).

Stamentienpfeife (shtä-mēn'-tī-ēn-pfi'-fē), G. Vide SCHWEGEL.

Stamm (shtäm), G. Stem, trunk. S.-akkord. A chord in root position, unaltered and uninverted. S.-ton. Natural tone. S.-tonleiter. Key of C major.

stampita (stäm-pē'-tä), I. A song.

Ständchen (shtēnt'-khēn), G. Serenade.

Standhaftigkeit (shtänt'-häf-tīkh-kīt), G. Firmness.

stanghetta (stän-gēt'-tä), I. A bar.

staple. The tube which holds the oboe's reed.

stark (shtärk), G. Strong, loud. stärker (shtēr'-kēr). Louder.

stave. Staff.

steam-organ. Calliope.

stec'ca, I. A choked and strained tone-production.

stecher (stēkh'-ēr), G. Sticker. Vide ORGAN.

Steg (stāk), G. Bridge.

Stellung (shtēl'-loong), G. Position.

stem. The thin stroke attached to the head of a note.

stentan'do, I. Retarding. stentato (tä'-tō). Slow and forced.

step. A progression to the adjoining note or tone, hence whole-step, and half-step or chromatic-step; a diatonic-step is a progression to the next note of the key.

sterbend (shtēr'-bēnt), G. Dying away. Sterbelied (shtēr'-bē-lēt). Death-song.

steso (stā'-sō), I. Extended, prolonged, slow.

stes'so, I. The same. s. tempo. Same time.

sthénocire (stā-nō-sēr), F. A finger-strengthener.

stibbacchiato (stīb-bāk-kī-ä'-tō), I. Retarded.

sticca'do, sticcato (stīk-kä'-tō), I. Xylophone.

stick'er. Vide ORGAN.

Stiefel (shtē'-fēl), G. Boot (of a pipe).

Stiel (shtēl), G. 1. Stem. 2. Neck.

Stift (shtift), G. Jack (of violin).

Stil (shtēl), G., stile (stē'-lē), stilo (stē'-lō), I., sti'lus, L. Style. s.

rigoro'so, or osservato (vā'-tō). Strict style. s. rappresentativo (tē'-vō). See OPERA.

still (shtīl), G. Calm, quietly. S.-gedacht. A stopped diapason.

Stimme (shtīm'-mē), pl. -en, G. 1. The voice. 2. Part. mit der S.

Colla parte. 3. Organ-stop. 4. Sound-post. Stim'mensatz. Vocal attack. Stimm'bänder (bēnt-ēr).

Vocal cords. S.-bildung. Voice-building. S.-bruch (brookh).

Change of voice. Vide MUTATION. S.-buch. Part-book. Stimmer.

Tuner; drone. stimmen. To tune, or voice. Stimmflöte, or -pfeife.

Pitch-pipe. S.-führer. Chorus-leader. S.-mittel. Vocal capacity.

S.-ritze (rīt-zē). Glottis. S.-holz (hólts), or -hölzchen (hēlts'-khēn), or -stock. Sound-post; wrestplank. S.-werkzeuge (vērk'-tsoi-khē). Vocal organs. S.-führung (fū-roongk).

Part-progression. S.-gabel (gā-bēl). Tuning-fork. S.-hammer (häm-mēr).

Tuning-hammer. S.-horn. Tuning-cone. S.-keil. Tuning-wedge. S.-krücke. Tuning-wire.

S.-zange. Tuning-tongs. S.-umfang, S.-weite (vi-tē). Compass.

Stimmung (shtīm'-moong), G. 1. Tune. 2. Accordature. 3. Pitch.

4. Mood. S. halten. To keep the key. S.-bild. Tone-picture.

stinguendo (stĭn-gwĕn'-dō), I. Dying away.

stiracchiato (stĕ-rāk-kĭ-ā'-tō), stirato (stĕ-rā'-tō), I. Retarded.

sti'va, L. See NEUMA.

Stock (shtōk), G. Bundle of 30 strings. S.-fagott. Rackett. S.-flöte. 1. Bamboo flute. 2. A flute in a walking-stick. Stöckchen (shtĕk'-khĕn). Heel (of violin, etc.). (See article on musical instruments, page 811.)

stolz (shtōlts), G. Proud.

stonante (nān'-tĕ), I. Dissonant.

stone-harmon'ica. See LAPDEON.

stop. 1. Loosely used for (a) draw-knob and stop-knob and draw-stop, which only carry the label and, by admitting wind, bring into play the stop proper. (b) A mechanical stop, which does not sound or speak, but acts as a coupler, a bell-signal, a tremulant, etc. Strictly, the sounding, or speaking stop is a complete graduated series of organ-pipes of uniform quality. It is this quality which gives the stop its individual name (as dulciana, cremona, etc.). Stops are divided into two chief classes, (a) those with flue-pipes, flue-work, or flue-stops, and (b) those with reed-pipes (q.v.), reed-work, or reed-stops. flue-work is again divided, according to the character of the pipes, into (a) the cylindrical open pipes that give the diapason, or typical organ-quality, also called principal-stops, or -work; (b) covered, plugged, or stopped pipes (without chimneys), gedackt-work; (c) pipes too broad or too narrow of scale to give diapason tone, 3 or 4 sided wooden pipes, and stopped pipes with chimneys.

stops are further grouped according to the length of their pipes as 2-ft., 4-ft., 8-ft., etc., the standard being the 8-ft., or foundation-stops, which are the basis of the organ, and to which the other stops are tuned (vide root).

stops which do not produce the unison or the octave of the key-board, but sound the third (tierce), fifth (quint) and such of their octaves as the tenth (double tierce), fifteenth, etc., are called mutation-stops.

furniture, mixture, or compound stops are composed of 2 or more ranks of pipes and produce the octave of the key depressed and also one or more of its other overtones. A stop may have its pipes divided between two draw-knobs. If it has a pipe for every key of the key-board, it is complete; otherwise it is an imperfect, incomplete, partial or half-stop.

Some stops are given only to the pedal; or to only one of the manuals; these are said to be on the pedal, on the swell, etc. A solo-stop is one complete enough in itself to sound a melody. stopped. Vide PIPE.

stop. 2. A fret, or similar position on an unfretted instr. 3. The pressure of the finger at a nodal point of a string. double stop. The stopping, hence sounding, of two or more notes at once on the violin, etc. 4. On a wind-instr. the closing with key or finger of a ventage. 5. On horns, etc., the inserting of the hand in the bell to produce a raised tone of muffled quality. Such a tone is said to be stopped, as opposed to open or natural.

stop'fen, G. To stop (of trumpet, etc.).

stopftöne (shtōpf'-tā-nĕ). Stopped tones.

stop-knob. Vide STOP.

stor'ta, I. A serpent. stortina (tĕ'-nā). A small serpent.

Stosszeichen (shtōs'-tsĭ-khĕn), G. Staccato mark.

str. Abbr. for String(s).

straccicalando (strāt-chĭ-kā-lān'-dō), I. Prattling.

straccinato (strā-chĭ-nā'-tō), I. Retarded.

Strad., Stradivari, Stradivarius, etc. A violin made by Stradivari (vide B. D.), A. D. 1650.

strain. Section, motive, theme, air.

strascicando (strā-shĭ-kān'-dō), strascinan'do, I. Dragging, playing slowly. s. l'arco. Keeping the bow of the violin close to the strings to slur the notes. strascinato (ā'-tō). Slow. strascino (strā-shĕ'-nō). A drag, a slurring race, in slow vocal music.

strath'spey. A lively Scotch dance, in common time, employing the Scotch snap freely.

stravagante (gān'-tĕ), I. Extravagant, odd. stravaganza (gān'-tsä), I. Eccentricity.

straw-fiddle. Xylophone, because its bars are often laid on straw cords.

straziente (strā-tsĭ-ān'-tĕ), I. Mocking.

street-organ. Hand-organ.

Streich (strikh), G. Stroke (as of a bow), hence S.-instrumente. Stringed instrs. S.-quartet. String quartet. S.-orchester. The strings of the orch. S.-zither. Bow-zither. streichen. 1. To draw the bow. 2. To cut (as a scene). streichend. "Stringy" (of the violin quality of certain stops). Strei'cher. Bow-instr. players.

strene. A. breve.

strenge (shtrëng), G. Firm(ly), strict(ly).

strepito (strä'-pî-tō), I. Noise. strepito'so, strepitosamen'te. Boisterous(ly).

stretch. The interval covered by the fingers of one hand.

stretta (strët'-tä), I. A concluding passage, or finale, in an opera, taken in quicker time to enhance the effect.

stret'to, sometimes stretta, I., strette (strët), F. 1. "Compressed." In fugue a closing treatment in which subject and answer are so compressed as to overlap. s. maëstrale, or maëstrale. A strictly canonic stretto. alla s. In stretto-style. andante s. A slow agitato. 2. "Hastened." A closing movement at increased speed.

Strich (strikh), G. Stroke. 1. A dash. 2. A cut. Strich'art. Manner of bowing.

strict. Used of a composition following the most rigid and severe rules. Vide CANON, FUGUE, etc.

strident (strë-dän), F., striden'te, stridevole (dä'-vō-lë), I. Sharp, shrill.

striking reed. Vide REED.

string. A sonorous cord made of various materials, the strings of violins, etc., being of gut, or cat-gut (so-called, although made of the entrails of sheep). Guitar, etc., strings are of brass, copper, or a core of steel wire or silk, sometimes covered (wound round with silver or other wire); piano strings are of drawn cast steel. Strings are measured in thickness by a string-gauge. "The strings" is a general term for the stringed instruments of an orchestra (also string-band, etc., or string orchestra). s. pendulum. A Weber chronometer. s. quartet. 1. A group of four instrs. of the violin species, 1st and 2d violin, a viola, and 'cello. 2. All the instrs. of these kinds in the orchestra. 3. A composition for these 4 instrs. s.

quintet, sextet, etc., (a) the string-quartet with addition of some other stringed instr. (as double-bass), or more of the same kind (as an extra violin).

The strings of an instr. are numbered beginning with the highest (or soprano or chanterelle). stringy is used of tone (such as that of an organ-stop), which resembles a bow and string instr.). open strings are those which are not pressed with the finger, or stopped. string-organ.

Vide SAITENORGEL.

stringendo (jën'-dō), I. Accelerating.

Stroh- (shtrō), G. Straw. S.-bass. The husky lower tones of a bass voice. S.-fiel (fë-dël). Xylophone.

stroke. 1. Vide SIGNS. 2. The rise and fall of a pedal.

strombazzata (ström-bäd-zä'-tä), strombettata (bët-tä'-tä), I. Sound of a trumpet. strombettare (tä'-rë). To play on the trumpet. strombettiere (ti-a'-rë). Trumpeter.

stromentato (tä'-tō), I. Instrumented. Vide RECITATIVE.

stromen'to, stromen'to (pl. -i), I. Instrument(s). s. da fiato (dä fi-ä'-tō), or s. di ven'to. Wind-instr. s. d'arco (där'-kō). Bow-instr. s. da cor'da. String-instr. s. da tasto. Key-board instr. s. di legno (di metallo). Wooden (metal) instr. s. di rinforzo (fôr'-tsō). An instr. used to support or strengthen an effect.

Stuben-orgel (shtoon'-bën-ör-gël), G. Chamber-organ.

Stück (shük), pl. Stücke (shük-ë), G. Piece. S.-chen (khën). Little tune.

Studie (stoo'-dë), pl. -ien (i-ën), G., studio (stoo'-dî-ō), I., stu'dium, L., stud'y, E. Vide ÉTUDE and PIANO STUDIES.

Stufe (stoo'-fë), pl. en, G. Step, degree. stufenweise (vi-zë). By degrees.

stumm (shtoom), G. Dumb. S.-regist'ar. Mechanical stop.

stürmisch (shtür'-mish), G. Stormy. Stürze (shtür'-tsë), G. Bell (of horns, etc.). S. in der Höhe (hä'-ë). "The bell turned upwards."

Stutt'gart pitch. Vide PITCH. Stutzflügel (shtoots'-flü-gël), G. "Baby" grand piano.

Styl (shül), G. Style. su (soo), I. Above, upon. arco in su. Up-bow.

- suabe-flute. A soft stop.
- suave (soo-ä'-vè), I., suave (swäv), F.
- Suave. suavitä (soo-ä-vi-tä'), I.
- Suavity.
- sub, L. Under, below, beneath.
- Subbass (soop'-bäs), G., subbour'don.
- A double-stopped 16 or 32 ft. stop.
- subcan'tor. Assistant cantor.
- subdiapen'te. The 5th below.
- subdom'inant. The fourth tone of a scale or key.
- Subflöte, G. Sifflöte.
- subito (soo-bi-tö), I., subitamen'te.
- Sudden(ly), immediate(ly). volti s.
- Turn quickly. piano subito. A soft touch immediately after a loud.
- sub'ject, E., Subjekt (soop'-yékht), G.
- A motive or theme for development usually followed by an answer, or second (secondary or subsidiary) subject, or counter-subject. See article, page 733.
- subme'diant. The sixth tone of a scale or key.
- suboct'ave. 1. The octave below. 2. Coupler producing the octave below.
- subor'dinate. Not principal or fundamental, used of chords on the 2d, 3d, 6th, and 7th degrees of a scale, and of all 7th chords except that on the 5th degree.
- subprin'cipal. Below the pedal diapason, a double open bass 32-ft. stop.
- subsemifu'sa. L. A 32d note.
- subsem'itone, subsemito'nium mo'di, L. Leading note.
- substitu'tion. The resolution of a dissonance in some other part an octave removed.
- substitution (süb-sti-tüs-yöñ), F.
- Change of fingers.
- subton'ic. Leading note.
- succen'tor, L. 1. Subcantor. 2. Bass-singer.
- succes'sion. 1. Sequence. 2. Progression.
- Sufflöte (soof-flä-tä), G. Sifflöte.
- sudden modulation. Modulation to a remote key without intermediate harmony.
- suffocato (soof-fö-kä'-tö), I. "Suffocated," muffled.
- sugli (sool-yè), sui (soo-è), I. Vide SUL.
- suite (swët), F., or suite de pièces (dü pi-ès'). A set or series of pieces. Originally a group of dances, the s. has followed the line deserted by the sonata. Strictly it is a cycle series of classic dance-forms in one key. The number varies from three to five, often with a prelude. The dance-forms are chosen from the following: allemande, courante, sarabande, bourée, gigue, gavotte, minuet, passepied, loure, anglaise, polonaise, pavane. The allemande is usually first, the gigue last; the first dances named were the regular constituents, the others being called intermezzi. The modern suite aims chiefly at lightness even when extended to the orchestra, and great liberty is now taken with keys and forms.
- suivez (swè-vä), F. "Follow" (the soloist); continue similarly.
- sujet (sü-zhä), F. Subject.
- sul (sool), sull', sulla (sool'-lä), I. On the, near the, as sul a. On the a string. sulla tastiera. Near the finger-board (of bowing). sul ponticel'lo. Near the bridge.
- suma'ra. A two-piped Turkish flute.
- summa'tional tones. Vide RESULTANT.
- sumpun'jah, Heb. Sambuca.
- sumsen (zoom'-zën), G. To hum.
- suonare (soo-o-nä'-rè), I. To play, sound, ring. suonata (soo-o-nä'-tä). Sonata. suonatina (tè'-nä). Sonatina.
- suono (soo-ö'-nò), I. Sound. suo'ni armonichi (är-mö'-ni-kè). Harmonics.
- su'per, L. Over, above.
- superano (soo-për-ä'-nò), Sp. Soprano.
- superdom'inant. The 6th tone in the scale.
- super'fluous, E., superflu (sü-për-flü), F. Augmented.
- sup'e'rius, L. Higher, i. e., the highest part.
- superoc'tave. 1. The octave above. 2. A stop two octaves above the diapasons. 3. Coupler producing the octave above.
- superton'ic, E., supertonique (sü-për-tön-ék'), F. The second tone of a scale.
- supplicant'do, supplichevole (soop-pli-kä'-vö-lè), supplichevolmen'te, I. Pleading(ly), appealing(ly).
- support'. Accompaniment, reinforcement.
- supposed bass. The lowest note of an inverted chord (q.v.).
- sur (soor), I., sur (sür), F. On, upon, over. sur une corde. On one string.
- surabondant(es) (sür-ä-bôn-dän(t)), F. Used of triplets, quintoles, etc.
- suraigu (sür-è-gü), F. Over-acute.
- surdeline (soor-dä-lè'-nä), I. Small bagpipe.

surprise. 1. Vide CADENCE. 2. Name of Haydn's 6th symphony with an unexpected crash breaking in on a long, soft movement.

susdominante (sü-), F. Superdominant.

suspended cadence. 1. Vide CADENCE. 2. Vide SUSPENSION.

suspen'sion. 1. The holding back of one note of a chord with the result that it causes, with the following chord, a clash that earnestly demands its progress to the destined note in which it will find resolution (q.v.). 2. The note so suspended. A s. may be unprepared, that is, it may be the only note of a group that is not proper to a sudden chord. s. may be double or triple, by occurring in more than one note of a group at once.

suspir'ium, L. 1. A quarter rest. 2. More anciently, a half-rest.

süss (züs), G. Sweet(ly). Süssflöte. A soft flute-stop.

su(s)urrando (soo(s)-soo-rän'-dō), su(s)urrante (rän'-tē), I. Whispering, murmur. susurra'tion, E. A soft murmur.

sustain. To hold a note during its full time-value; to perform in legato manner, vide also PEDAL-POINT. Vide PEDAL.

svegliato (sväl'-yā'-tō), I. Lively.

svelto (svēl'-tō), I. Light, easy.

sw. Abbr. of Swell-organ.

swell. 1. Gradual increase (and decrease) of sound. 2. The device for increasing and diminishing a sustained tone on an organ, hence swell-organ, and swell key-board. Part of an organ (the swell-organ) is surrounded by a swell-box, the front of which is filled with Venetian swell-blinds (Jalousie, G.), opened or closed by a lever worked by a swell-pedal. In old organs, there was but one shutter (nag's-head swell); in harpsichords the cover moved.

Swing. See article, page 818.

Sylbe (zēl'-bē), G. Syllable.

syllab'ic, E., syllabisch (zēl'-lāp'-ish), G., syllabique (sēl'-lāb'-ēk), F. Of an air in which each syllable has its own note.

syllable-names. Do, re, mi, etc., as opposed to letter-names, C, d, e, etc. Vide SOLMISATION.

sym'bal. Cymbal.

sympathet'ic. Of strings, etc., which are made to sound by sympathetic vibration (q.v.), and strengthen some other tone by unison or by sounding some overtone.

symphon'e'ta, L. Polyphony.

sympho'nia, Gr. 1. Agreement. 2. Hurdygurdy. 3. A symphony.

symphon'ic, E., symphonique (sän-fō-nēk), F., symphonisch (zēm-fō-nīsh), G. Pertaining to or relating to the symphony. symphonic poem, poëme s. (pō-ēm' sän-fō-nēk), F., sympho'nische Dichtung (dīkh-toongk), G. A composition of symphonic demands on orchestra and intelligence, but not built on the sonata form and rather descriptive than thematic. The name was first given by Liszt to some of his best works.

Symphonie (sän-fō-nē in F., in G. zēm-fō-nē'). 1. Symphony. 2. Concord. 3. Instrumental accompaniment. 4. String-band. 5. Orchestra. Symphonie-Ode (ō-'dē), G. Choral symphony.

sympho'nion. 1. A combination of flute-stop with piano, inv. by Kaufmann. 2. A music-box with interchangeable disk in place of a cylinder. sym'phonist, symphoniste (sän-fō-nēst'), F., Sympho'niker, symphonien-seser (zēm-fō-nī-ēn-zā'-zēr), G. A composer of symphonies; in F. also a church-composer, or member of an orchestra.

sympho'nious. Harmonious.

sym'phony, Symphonie (in F. sän-fō-nē', in G. zēm-fō-nē'). 1. A sonata for orchestra with all the elaboration and extension permitted by the larger resources. Beethoven (and followers of him) even added a chorus, hence choral symphony. Historically founded on the overture. Haydn, the father of the sonata (q.v.), established the form, which has survived with minor substitutions (as in the sonata) till now. 2. In E. and elsewhere the instrumental pre-, inter-, and post-ludes, of vocal composition. 3. Old name for hurdygurdy, etc.

sympo'sia. Convivial compositions.

syn'copate. To perform syncopation.

syncopato (sīn-kō-pū'-tō), F., Syncopated.

syn'copation, E., syncopa'tio, L., syncope (sän-kōp in F., in G. zēn'-kō-pē). A pleasantly confusing rhythmic "intersection" caused by suppressing a natural accent or strong-beat, or moving it from its natural place to a weak beat, usually by means of tying over a note on a weak beat across the time belonging to a strong beat. The note so prolonged is said to be syncopated. In piano-music, only one hand usually has the syncopation. Synkope (zēn'-kō-pē), G. Syncopation. synkopi(e)ren (pē'-rēn). To syncopate.

synnem'menon. (See article, page 762.) synonyme (sē-nō-nēm), F. Homophone.

synton'ic. Vide COMMA.

syntonolyd'ian. Hypolydian.

sy'ren. Siren.

sy'rinx, Gr., syringe (sē-rānz), F. 1. Pandean pipes. 2. A portion of a hymn to Apollo sung by candidates for Pythian prizes.

sys'tem (in G. zēs'-tām). 1. A group of staves. 2. In G. a staff.

syste'ma, Gr. 1. A tetrachord, or other interval. 2. In L. Staff. 3. Hexachord series. (See MODES, p. 762.)

système (sēs-tēm), F. 1. All musical tones. 2. Compass.

syzygi'a, Gr. and L. A chord. s. perfect, or simplex. Triad. s. composta. Triad with a tone doubled. s. propin'qua (remo'ta). Close (open) chord.

szopelka (shō-pēl'-kā). Russian oboe with brass mouthpiece.

T

T. Abbr. of Talon, Tasto, Tempo, Tenor, Toe, Tre, Tutti.

tabal'lo, I. A kettle-drum.

tabar (tä-bär'), I., tab'arde, tab'arte, Old E. A tabor.

tabl. Egyptian drum.

tablatura (täb-lä-too'-rā), I., tablature (tä-blä-tür'), F., tablature (täb'-lä-tür'), E., Tabulatur (tä-boo-lä-toor'), G. 1. The Tonic Sol-fa notation. 2. The rules of poetic and musical composition established by the Meistersinger. Vide "Stories of the Operas." 3. An early form of notation from which our present system got its vertical character, the bar and the tails of its notes. Old tablature had many forms. In lute-tablature the French and English used letters, the Italians, numerals, designating the frets to be touched on the lute. These were written on a staff with as many lines as the instr. written for had strings; beneath were stems with tails, indicating the time-value of the notes; these tails represent our modern values except that our whole note (their semibreve) had a stem like that of our half-note; our half-note (their minima) had the tail of an eighth note; our  $\frac{1}{4}$  note (semiminima) a double-hooked-stem, our  $\frac{1}{8}$  note (fusa) three hooks, our  $\frac{1}{16}$  note (semifusa) the tail of a 64th note. The hooks of consecutive notes were often run together in thick lines as in our music. organ (or German) t. was used for key-board instrs., and employed the letter-names of the notes, the melody being marked on a staff with chord-accompaniment in vertical rows of letters beneath.

1. A table of chords, intervals, etc.

2. Sound-board.

table d'instrument (täbl dän-strü-män), F. Belly.

ta'ble-music. 1. Part-songs. 2. Music printed so that singers at opposite sides of a table could read it.

ta'bor, taboret', E., tabourin (tä-boorān), F., tab'ret. A small drum; a tambourine without jingles.

ta'cet, pl. ta'cent, L., tace (tä'-chē), pl. taci (tä'-chē), taciasi (tä-chi-ä'-sl), I. "Be silent!" as oboe tacet, let the oboe be silent.

tac'tus, L. The stroke of the hand or bâton in conducting.

Tafel (tä'-fēl), G. Table. T.-förmiges (fēr-mikh-ēs), klavier, or T.-klavier. Square piano. T.-musik (moo-zēk').

1. Music sung at a banquet. 2. Vide TABLE-MUSIC.

tail. Stem. tail-piece. The wooden brace which holds the strings of violins etc., below the bridge.

taille (ti'-yü), F. 1. Tenor. 2. Viola, also t. de violon, t. de basson. Oboe da caccia.

tagiko'to. 1. Japanese dulcimer.

Takt (täkt), G. 1. Time. 2. Measure. 3. Beat. im T. In time. ein T. wie vorher zwei. Double the former time. T.-accent. Primary accent. T.-art. Species of time, as duple or triple. T.-erstückung (ēr-shtik-oongk). Syncopation. T.-fach (fäkh). Space. T.-fest. Steady in keeping time. T.-glied (glēt). Measure-note. T.-führer (fü'-rēr). Conductor; leader. T.-halten. To

- keep time. takti(e)ren (tāk-tēr'-ēn) or t.-schlagen. To beat time. T.-linie (līn'-ē), T.-strich (strīkh). Bar-line. t.-mässig (mēs-sikh). In time. T.-messer. Metronome. T.-note. Whole note. T.-pause. Whole rest. T.-stock. Bâton. guter T.-teil. Strong beat. schlechter T.-teil. Weak beat. T.-vorzeichnung, or Taktzeichen (tsī-khēn). Signature.
- talabalac'co*, I. Moorish drum.
- ta'lan*. Hindu cymbals.
- talon* (tā-lōn), F. Heel. 1. Of a bow. 2. Of the foot.
- tambour* (tān-boor), F. 1. Drum. 2. Drummer. t. de basque (dū bāsk). Tambourine. t. chromatique. Timbalarion. t. roulante (roo-lānt). Long drum. t. major (mā-zhōr). Drum-major.
- tamb(o)u'ra*. An ancient instr., used in the East, like a guitar, struck with a plectrum.
- tambouret* (tān-boo-rā), F., tambourine (tām'-boo-rēn), E., Tambourin (tām-boo-rēn'), G. 1. A small drum, with little bells (called jingles) pivoted in the rim. Notes with waved stems indicate a roll; notes with vertical lines above, call for the jingles. tambourineur (nūr'), F. Tambourine-player.
- tambourin* (tān-boo-rān), F. 1. A tambourine without jingles. 2. A lively dance in 2-4 time with t. accompaniment.
- tamburaccio* (tām-boo-rāt'-chō), I. A large drum. tamburel'lo, tamburel'to, I. 1. Tabor. 2. Drummer.
- tamburino* (tām-boo-rē'-nō), I. 1. Drummer. 2. Tambourine.
- tamburo* (tām-boo'-rō), I. Side-drum.
- tamburone* (tām-boo-rō'-nē), I. The great drum.
- tamis* (tā-mē'), F. Pipe-rack.
- tam'tam'*. 1. Indian drum. 2. Gong.
- Tanbur* (tān-boor'), G. Tamburo.
- tändelnd* (tēn'-dēlnt), G. Playful, trifling.
- tan'gent*, E., Tangente (tān-jēn'-tē), G. Vide CLAVICHORD. Tangentenflügel. A "wing-shaped" clavi-chord.
- tantino* (tān-tē'-nō), I. A little.
- tanto* (tān'-tō), I. So much; as much; but allegro non t. Not too quick. allegro t. possibile. As fast as possible.
- Tan'tum er'go*, L. "So much therefore." A hymn sung at the Benediction in the R. C. service.
- Tanz* (tānts), G., pl. Tänze (tēn'-tsē). A dance. Tänzer (tēn'-tsēr). A dancer. Tänzerin (tēn'-tsē-rīn). A female dancer. T.-lied (lēt). Dance-song. T.-musik, or T.-stück (shtük). Dance-tune.
- tap*. A single note on the drum. taps. The last military signal at night. It is also used at the funeral of a soldier.
- tapada* (tā-pādh'-ä), Sp. Stop. tapadillo (dhēl'-yō). Baxoncillo.
- ta'rabouk*. Instr. used by Turks, a parchment over the bottom of a large earthen vessel.
- tarantella* (tā-rān-tēl'-lā), tarentelle (tār-ān-tēl'), F. Perhaps of Tarentine origin, but claimed to be derived from the tarantula, two explanations being given, one that the bite of the spider incites a mania for dancing; a more probable one that the fatal effects of the poison find an antidote in violent exercise. The dance is a wild presto in 3-8 or 6-8 time, with increasing frenzy and alternately major and minor.
- tarau*, theyau thro. Burmese violin with 3 silk strings.
- tar'do*, tardato (tār-dā'-tō), tardan'-do, tardamen'te, I. Slow(ly).
- Tartini's tones*. Resultant tones, first observed by Tartini. (Vide B. D.).
- Taschengeige* (tāsh'-ēn-gī-khē), G. Kit.
- tasseau* (tās-sō), F. The mould on which violins are built.
- tastame* (tās-tā-mē), I., Tastatur (tās-tā-toor'), G., tastatura (tās-tā-too'-rā), I., tastiera (tās-tī-ā-rā), I. Key-board; finger-board. sulla tastiera. Near the finger-board (of a vln.).
- Taste* (tās'-tē), G. The touch, hence a key. Tas'tenbreit. Key-board. Tastenstäbchen (stēp-khēn). Fret. Tastenschwanz (shvānts). Extremity of key-board. Tastenwerk. A keyed instrument.
- tasto* (tās'-tō), I. 1. Touch. 2. Key. 3. Fret. 4. Finger-board. sul t. "Near the finger-board." t. solo. "One key alone," a note to be played without other harmony than the octaves.
- tatto* (tāt'-tō), I. Touch.
- tattoo'*. The drum-beat at night recalling soldiers to quarters for sleep. It precedes taps (q.v.).
- tche* (chē). A Chinese stringed instrument.

te. Tonic Sol-fa name for the 7th tone sz.

té (tā). F. C sharp.

technic(s) (těk'-nik(s)), E., Technik (tėkh-nėk'), G., technique (tėk-nėk'), F. The mechanical side of musical performance, including dexterity, velocity, distinctness, shading as opposed to the poetical or interpretative side. The means, not the end, of a properly balanced musical ambition.

tech'nicon. A device for training the fingers, inv. by J. Brotherhood, 1889.

tech'niphone. First name of the Virgil Practice-Clavier.

technisch (tėkh'-nėsh), G. Technical, used to indicate proficiency.

tedesco (-a) (tė-dės'-kō), I. German. alla t. In the German style, in waltz-rhythm. lira t. Hurdygurdy.

Te De'um Laudamus, L. "Thee, Lord, we praise," a hymn attributed to St. Ambrosius. Vide MASS.

Teil (tıl), G. Vide TRAIL.

tel'ephone-harp. An instr. for transmitting music by telephone.

tell'tale. An indicator of wind-pressure.

tema (tā'-mā), I. Theme; subject; melody.

tem'perament, E., tempérament (tān-pā-rā-mān), F., temperamen'to, I. A method of tuning, representing the triumph of practice over theory; of art over science. It is a system of compromise, whereby, for practical musical purposes, the octave is divided into twelve intervals, none of which is quite true. In the present piano, and similar instrs. the tones c♯ and d♭, for example, are identical, and are given the same string and digital. As a matter of acoustical fact there is a difference between them. If they were given different digitals and tuned exactly, the present freedom of modulation from one key to another would be impossible without some elaborate device, and the piano, organ, etc., would need a greatly increased finger-board, with 53 digitals to the octave instead of 12 as now. The present tuning was not reached without a war of the bitterest sort; but since the 18th century began, only 12 degrees have been given to the octave. The earliest method was unequal temperament, the key of C major being tuned true, and the other tones forced to conform. In the twelve-semitone system, the octave was divided into twelve equal parts, no interval being quite true. The mean-tone system had the major thirds tuned true, the intermediate space being divided into two equal intervals; this system produced much discord called the wolf. equal temperament is now generally employed; it is the practice of tuning by fifths. A series of twelve fifths beginning with c lacks only 74/73 of forming a perfect seven octaves; by dividing this slight discrepancy equally among the 12 fifths, the circle of fifths is tempered and made perfect; thus in major C-G-D-A-E-B-F♯ (or G♭)-D♭-A♭-E♭-B♭-F- C (B♯); in minor a-e-b-f♯-c♯-g♯-d♯ (or e♭)-b♭-f-c-g-d-a; and one can modulate by means of dominant harmony (chords on the fifths) through the whole succession of keys with almost imperceptible acoustic falsehood. It is this great convenience and simplicity of Equal Temperament that has prevented thus far the acceptance of any of the many instruments invented with the rival method of just intonation. Nevertheless the music we know and enjoy has no perfect intervals except the octave; the fifths are a 12th of a comma flat; the fourths a 12th of a comma sharp; the major thirds 1/4th of a comma sharp, etc.

Temperatur (tām-pē-rā-toor'), G. Temperament.

tempestoso, tempestosamen'te. Tempestuous(ly), furious(ly).

tempête (tān-pēt), F. "Tempest." A boisterous quadrille in 2-4 time.

tem'po, I. "Time." 1. Rate of speed, ranging from the slowest to the fastest, thus Grave, largo, lento, adagio, andante, moderato, allegro, presto, prestissimo. 2. Rhythm, measure. 3. Beat. a tempo. In exact time (usually appearing after retardation). t. primo (or rimo), or primiero. Original speed. t. alla breve (brā'-vē). Vide BREVE. t. a. piacere, or senza t. The time at pleasure. t. bina'rio (terna'rio). Duple (triple) time. t. como'do. Convenient, moderate time. t. debole (dā'-bō-lē). Weak beat. t. di bal'lo. Dance-time. t. di bole'ro, gavot'ta, mar'cia, etc. In the time of a bolero, gavotte, march, etc. t. di cappel'la. In the Church-time.

Vide BREVE. t. di pri'ma par'te. In the same time as the first part. t. for'te. Strong beat. t. giusto (joos'-tō). In strict time. l'istesso (or lo stesso), t. Continue at "the same speed." t. maggiore (mäd-jō'-rē). Vide BREVE. t. mino're, or t. ordina'rio. 1. Common time, 4 beats to the measure. 2. The original time of the piece. t. perdu'to. "Lost," unsteady time. t. reggiato (rēd-jā'-tō), same as colla parte. t. rubato. Vide RUBATO. T. wie vorher (vē fōr-hār), G. Same time as before.

tempo-mark, Tempo-Bezeichnung (bē-tsikh'-noongk), G. A word or phrase indicating the standard or unit of time for a composition, as andante; or indicating some deviation from this unit, as meno mosso.

temporiser (tän-pōr-ī-zā), F. In an accompaniment, to follow the soloist's time.

temps (tän), F. 1. Time. 2. Beat. t. faible (fēbl), or levé (lū-vā). Weak beat. t. fort (fōr), frappé (frāp-pā'). Strong beat.

tempus, L. Time, i. e., of the breve. t. perfec'tum (marked O). That in which the breve equalled 3 semibreves. t. im'perfectum (marked ( )). That in which it equalled 2 semibreves. t. bina'rium (or terna'rium). Double or triple time. Vide NOTATION.

tenete (tē-nā'-tē), I. Hold.

Ten'ebæ, L. "Shadows, Darkness"; R. C. Evening Service, during Holy Week, in commemoration of the Crucifixion, the candles being extinguished one by one.

tenen'do, I. Sustaining (as the melody).

tenero (tā'-nē-rō), tenero'so, teneramen'te, I. Tender(ly). tenerezza (tā-nē-rēd'-zā). Tenderness.

teneur (tū-nūr), F. Cantus firmus of a hymn.

tenor (in G. tā-nōr'), ténor (tā-nōr), F. tenore (tā-nō'-rē), I. 1. The highest male voice produced "in the chest." Vide SOPRANO. (a) The more powerful tenor is almost a barytone and is called dramatic (Heidentenor'), teno're robu'sto, or di mezzo carattere (dē mēd'-zō kārāt'-tā-rē), or di forza (dē fōr'-tsā). Compass c-b' (b). The more light and flexible tenor is called lyric, lyrischer (lēr-Ish-ēr). Tenore leg- giero (lēd-jā-rō), légier (lā-zhā), or di grazia (dē grāts'-yā). Compass d-c'', sometimes higher. 2. The part corresponding to the tenor voice in compass. 3. The highest of a chime of bells. 4. The viola, as tenor violin. 5. As a prefix for instrs. of tenor range; e. g., tenor trombone (Tenorposaupe), etc. 6. tenor C is an octave below mid-c. 7. tenor-clef, Tenor-schlüssel or -zeichen, the C clef on the fourth line. 8. The lowest string of the viola. 9. In Gregorian music, the principal melody taken by a medium male voice, above which sang the counter- or contra-tenor, or the altus or alto. 10. In mediæval music, (a) fermate, (b) ambitus, (c) tone of a mode of the evovæ. tenorino (tā-nō-rē-nō), I. Falsetto or castrato tenor. Tenorist (tēn-ō-rēst'), G., tenorista (tān-ō-rēs'-tā), I., ténoriste (tā-nō-rēst'), F. A tenor-singer.

tenoroon'. 1. Old tenor oboe, compass downward to tenor C. 2. A stop that does not go below E.

ten'sile. Applied to stringed instruments.

tenth. 1. An interval of an octave and a third. 2. A stop a tenth above the diapacons. 3. Decima.

tenu(e) (tū-nū), F., tenuto (tā-noo'-tō), I. "Held." 1. Sustained. 2. A sustained note or pedal-point. 3. Legato. 4. Constantly, as forte t. Pl. tenute (note).

téorbe (tā-ōrb), F. Theorbo.

teoretico (tā-ō-rā'-tī-kō), I. Theoretical.

teoria (tā-ō-rē'-ā), I. Theory.

tepidità (tā-pē-dī-tā'), I. Indifference, lukewarmth. tepidamen'te. Calmly.

teponaz'tli. An Aztec drum still used in Central America; a log about a yard long, hollowed from below, then cut through till two tongues of wood are left. These sound an interval when struck with padded sticks.

ter (tēr), L. Thrice, three times (of a passage to be repeated twice). ter un'ca. "Three-hooked"; 16th note.

ter sanctus. "Thrice holy," referring to the "Holy, holy, holy," of the Te Deum.

terce. 1. Tierce. 2. Vide HORÆ CANONICÆ. tercet (tēr-sā), F. Triplet.

ternaire (tēr-nār), F., ternario (tēr-nā'-rī-ō), I., ter'nary, E. Triple, three-fold. ternary form. Rondo-

- form. ternary measure. Triple time.
- terpo'dion. 1. An instr. inv. 18x6 by Buschmann, resembling the harmonium, the tone being produced from sticks of wood. 2. An 8-ft. stop.
- Terpsichore (têrp-sîk'-ô-rê). The muse of dance and song.
- ter'tia, L., Terzia (têr'-tsî-â), G. 1. Third, tierce, tertia modi. The 3d degree. 2. A stop sounding a third or tenth above.
- tertian Zweifach (têr-tsî-ân tsvî'-fâkh), G. A stop combining tierce and larigot.
- Terz (têrts) (pl. en, G., terzo-(a) (têr'-tsô), I. 1. Third, (a) the interval, (b) in number. 2. Tierce, terzo mano. Octave-coupler. terzadecima, Terzde'zime. A 13th. Terzquart'akkord, or Terzquartsext'-akkord, 6-4-3 chord. (Vide CHORD.) Terzquintsext'akkord, 6-5-3 chord. (Vide CHORD.) Terztöne. Tierce-tones. Terzflöte. 1. Small flute, a minor third above. 2. A stop.
- Terzdecimole (dâ-tsî-mô'-lê). A group of thirteen equal notes.
- Terzett (têr-tsêt'), *G., terzetto (têr-tsêt'-tô), I. A trio.*
- terzina (têr-tsê'-nâ), I. A triplet.
- tessitura (têss-sî-too'-râ), I., tessiture (têss-sî-tür), E. "The web." The general "lie" of a song or phrase—its average pitch, whether high or low.
- tes'ta, I. Head. di t. In the head as the voice.
- testo (têss'-tô), I. "Text." 1. Subject, or theme. 2. The words of a song.
- testu'do, L. "Tortoise." The lyre.
- tête (têt not tât), F. Head, of a note; of a vln., etc.
- tet'rachord, E., tetrachorde (têt-râ-kôrd), F., tetracor'do, I. 1. A 4-stringed instr. 2. The interval of a fourth. 3. The 4 diatonic tones of a perfect fourth. (Vide MODES.) tetrachordal system. Original form of Tonic Sol-fa.
- tetrachor'don, Gr. A small piano-like instr. with a rubber cylinder, impinging on strings.
- tet'rad. Chord of the seventh.
- tet'radiapa'son. Interval of 4 octaves.
- tet'raphone. Tetratone.
- tetrapho'nia. Organum in 4 parts.
- tetrato'non, Gr., tet'ratone. An interval of four whole tones.
- T(h)eil (tîl), G. Part. T-ton. Partial tone.
- the'ma, Gr., Thema (tâ'-mâ), G., thème (têm), F., theme, E. Loosely, the general idea of a composition. Strictly, the structural molecule, of which motive or subject and answer are the component atoms. The theme of a "theme with variations," tema con variazioni, is an extended air. Such a work as a sonata has contrasting themes which are developed. themat'ic treatment refers to the contrapuntal handling of a musical design as opposed to a lyric treatment, though the theme itself may be lyric in nature.
- Theorbe (tê-ôr'-bê), G., théorbe (tâ-ôrb), F., theorbo (thê-ôr'-bô), E. A large bass lute with two necks, the longer carrying a set of bass strings.
- Theoretiker (tê-ô-râ'-tî-kêr), G., théoricien (tâ-ô-rês-yân), F. A theorist.
- theoria, Gr. and L., théorie (tâ-ô-rê), F., theory (thê'ô-rî), E. The science of music, particularly of its composition.
- the'sis, Gr. The accented downbeat. Vide ARSTS.
- Theur'gic hymns. Songs performed in Greek mysteries.
- theyau. Vide TARAU.
- thin. Used of chords and harmonies that lack support and fulness.
- thior'bo. Theorbo.
- third. 1. Vide INTERVAL. 2. The mediant. third-flute. Vide TERZFLÖTE.
- third-tones. Vide QUINT-TONES.
- thirteenth. An octave and a sixth.
- thirty-second note. A demisemiquaver. 32d rest. A rest of equal duration.
- thorough-bass. Vide BASS.
- thorough-composed. Vide SONG.
- three-eighth time. That in which each measure contains three eighth notes.
- threefold. Used of triads.
- three-lined. Vide PITCH.
- three-time. Triple time.
- threno'dia, L. and Gr. A song. thren'ody. Lamentation.
- thrice-marked, or lined. Vide PITCH.
- thro. Vide TARA.
- through-composed. Vide SONG.
- thumb-position. On the 'cello, a high position where the thumb quits the neck.
- thumb-string. Banjo melody-string.
- Thürmer (tûr'-mêr), G. Town-musician.

tib'ia (pl. tib'iae), L. "Shin-bone." 1. Ancient name of all wind-instrs. with holes, such as the flute, pipe and fife, originally made from the human leg-bone. tibiae pa'res, L., pl. Two flutes of the same length. t. impares. Unequal flutes, one for the right hand and the other for the left, which were played on by the same performer; those for the right hand, t. dextrae, being perhaps of higher pitch than those for the left (sinistralae). t. obli'qua, or vas'ca. Cross-flute. 2. Name of various flute-stops, as t. major, a 16-ft. covered stop. 3. t. utric'ularis. The bagpipe.

tib'icen (pl. tibic'ines, feminine tibic'ina), L. Flute-player. tibicin'ium. Piping.

tie. A slur; a curved line placed over notes on the same degree which are to be sustained as one tone. Vide SIGNS. tied-notes. 1. Those thus tied. 2. A series of notes (16th notes, etc.) with a single tail.

tief (tēf), G. Deep, low. tiefer (tē'-fēr). Lower. 8va tiefer. Octave below. tieftönend (tēf-tā'-nēnt). Deep-toned.

tier (tēr). Rank (of pipes).

tierce (tērs), E. 1. A third, hence tierce-tones, those reached by skips of major thirds. Vide PTCH. 2. The 4th in a series of harmonics. 3. A mutation stop 2½ octaves above diapason. 4. Vide HORÆ CANONICÆ.

tierce (ti-ērs'), F. 1. A third. 2. Vide HORÆ CANONICÆ. t. de Picardie (dü pē-kār-dē), F. Tierce of Picardy; a major third introduced in the last chord of a composition in minor; supposed to have originated in Picardy. t. coulée (koo-lā). A sliding grace in thirds. Vide GRACE.

timbala'ion. A series of 8 drums chromatically tuned and fitted with pedals.

timbale (tān-bāl), F., timbal'lo, I. A kettle-drum. timbalier (tān-bāl-yā), F. A kettle-drummer.

timbre (tān-br), F., tim'bro, I. 1. Quality and colour of tone. 2. A ball struck with a hammer. jeux de timbres (zhū-dū-tān-br). A chromatic series of small bells or metal bars. 3. The snare of a drum.

tim'brel. Hebrew tambourine.

time. A word used loosely and interchangeably with its Italian equivalent tempo, to indicate: 1. Rate of movement, or speed. 2. Rhythm.

Speed is indicated in various ways by descriptive words, such as slow, andante, largo, etc., or by the metronome mark.

Rhythm is generally indicated by a fraction, as 2-4 or 3-8 set at the beginning of the composition or movement. The denominator indicates the unit of note-value; the numerator fixes the number of those unit-notes in each measure. Thus 2-4 means that the quarter-note is the standard of value, and that each measure contains two quarter notes or their equivalents.

With the exception of such rare rhythms as the 5-8 time, all musical time-patterns are divisible by 2 or 3, and are called duple or triple. Thus in 2-4 time there are two beats to the measure, in 3-4 time there are three. In more elaborate times the beats may themselves be divided by twos or threes. These are called compound duple or compound triple times.

The chart gives the various times in various languages. (See also Accent and Tempo.)

timido (tē'-mī-dō), I. Timid. timidezza (tē-mī-dēd'-zā), Timidity.

timoro'so, timorosamen'te, I. Timid(ly). timore (ti-mō'-rē). Fear.

timpano (tīm'-pā-nō) (Pl. -i), I. Kettle-drum. t. coper'to. Muffled drum. timpanis'to. Drummer.

tin'termell. An old dance.

tinnab'ulum, L., tinnabolo, I. (tīn-tīn-nā'-bō-lō), tintinna'bulo (boo-lō). 1. A little bell. 2. A small rattle of bells.

tintinnamen'to, tintinnio (nē'-ō), tintin'no, I. Tinkling.

tin'to, I. Shading.

tiorba (tē-ōr'-bā), I. Theorbo.

tipping. Vide DOUBLE-TONGUING.

tirade (tē-rād), F. A slide across an interval.

tiran'na, S.p. A national air with guitar.

tirant (tē-rān), F. Stop-knob. t. à coupler (ā'-koo-plā). 1. Coupler. 2. Button. 3. Drum-cord.

tirarsi, da (dā tē-rār'-sē), I. "With a slide," as tromba da t.

tirasse (ti-rās), F. 1. A pedal-coupler. 2. A pedal key-board acting only on the manual pipes.

tirata (tē-rā'-tā), I. A group of equal notes, moving in joint degrees.

NOTE.—Some English writers classify times also as quadruple and octuple, and indicate compound times by the signatures of the corresponding simple times with a dot added after the denominator.

tirato (tē-rā'-tō), I. 1. Down-bow.
2. Pedal-coupler.

tira tutto (tē-rā toot'-tō), I. A pedal mechanism controlling the full power of an organ.

tiré (tē-rā), F. Drawn, pulled; a down-bow. tirez (tē-rā). "Use the down-bow."

Tischharfe (tīsh'-hār-fē), G. "Dish harp," an autoharp.

tit'ty. Hindu bagpipe.

tirolienne. Tyrolienne.

tlap'anhuehue'tl. Huehuatl.

toccata (tōk-kā'-tā), I. From toccare, to touch, to play. In its 16th century form, a prelude made up of runs and arpeggios. The modern toccata develops with great thematic hilarity and contrapuntal informality a brilliant, swift and showy improvisation. toccatina (tē'-nā), toccatella. Short toccata.

toccato (tōk-kā'-tō), I. A fourth-trumpet part in place of kettle-drums.
toc'sin. An alarm-bell.

To(d)tesgesang (tōt'-ēs-gē-zāng). To(d)teslied (lēt), G. A dirge.
To(d)tenglöckchen (glēk'-khēn). Funeral-bell. To(d)tenmarsch (mārsh). Funeral ("dead") march.

tombeau (tōn-bō), F. "Tomb." Dramatic elegy.

tomb'estere. Old E. A dancer with tambourine.

tom'tom. Hindu drums.

Ton (tōn), pl. Töne (tā'-nē), G. 1. Tone. T.-bestimmung, or -messung. Calculation of tones. Tongattung (gāt'-toongk). The division of the octave. The selection of tones. Hence, mode. T.-rein. True in pitch. T.-bildung. Tone-production; voice-training. T.-bühne. Orchestra. T.-dichter. Tone-poet, composer (also T.-setzer). T.-dichtung (dīkh-toongk) or satz. Composition. T.-farbe (fār-be). Tone-colour, timbre. T.-folge. Series of tones. T.-führung. Melodic progression, modulation. T.-fuss, T.-fall (or -schluss). Cadence. T.-setzung, or -verhalt. Rhythm, measure. T.-gang. Melody. T.-gebung. Intonation. T.-kunde. Science of music. T.-kunst (koonst), Music; the art of music. Tonkunstschule. School of music. Tonlehre (tōn'-lā-rē). Acoustics. Tonleiter (lī-tēr). Scale. T.-loch. Ventage. T.-malerei. "Tone-painting," programme music. T.-

messer. Monochord, siren, sonometer. Tonschlüssel (shlūs'-sēl). Key-note. T.-runge. Fugue. T.-setzkunst. Art of composition. T.-sprache. Music. T.-stück or -werk. Piece of music. T.-schrift. Musical notes. T.-verwandschaft. Relation of tones. T.-verziehung. Tempo rubato. T.-veränderung. Modulation. T.-werkzeug. Instrument (including the voice). T.-system, or wissenschaft. Theory of music. T.-zeichen. Note or other musical sign.

2. Pitch. den T. angaben (halten). To give (keep) the pitch. T.-höhe. Pitch. T.-lage. Register.
3. Key, octave-scale, mode, usually Tonart (tōn'-ärt). T.-anverwandschaft (fēr-vānt'-shāft). Key-relationship. T.-geschlecht (gē-shlēkht'). Mode (i. e., major or minor). Tonabstand (āp-shtānt). Interval. T.-achtel. Eighth note. T.-stufe. Degree. T.-umfang. Compass.

ton (tōn), F. 1. Tone. t. bouché (boo-shā). Stopped tone of a horn. t. entier (ān-tī-ā). Whole tone. t. feint (fān). Old term for flatted tone. t. ouvert (oo-vār). Open tone, of a wind-instr. t. générateur (zhā-nā-rā-tūr). Fundamental. 2. Pitch, donner le t. Give the pitch. 3. Key, scale, mode. t. majeur (mineur). Major (minor) key. t. relatif. Related key. t. de l'église (dū lā-glēz). Church-mode. 4. Crook of a horn. t. de réchange, or du cor. Tuning-fork.

tonadica (tō-nā-dē'-kā), tonadilla (dēl'-yā), Sp. Cheerful song with guitar.

to'nal. Relating to a tone, a key, mode, etc. Vide FUGUE, and IMITATION.

Tonalität (tōn-āl-y-tāt'), G., tonalité (tōn-āl-y-tā), F., tonality, E. The unity in key-relationship of a phrase or composition. It may pass out of the predominant key, but so long as it does not stray beyond the limits of easy return and constant relationship with this key, the composition has not overstepped its general tonality.

ton'do, I. Round, full (of tone).

tone. 1. A sound of musical quality and regular vibration as opposed to

- noise. 2. A sound, (a) of definite pitch, (b) of a definite quality. 3. A full interval of two semitones. 4. A mode. 5. Of aliquot, combinational, differential, partial, resultant, summational, etc., tones or difference-tones, overtones, etc. Vide those words, also ACOUSTICS. Of fifth-tones, quint-tones, third tones. Vide QUINT-TONES. bridge-tone. Vide TONIC SOL-FA. tone-colour. The distinctive quality or timbre of a tone. tone-painting. Description by music. tone-poem. A musical expression of sentiment. determination of t. The investigation of vibrations, or tone-values, tone-relationship, etc. tone-relationship. Tones which concur in a major or minor chord are said to be of the first degree of relationship; c is so related to g, f, e, ab, a, and eb, etc.
- tönen (tā'-nēn), G. To sound. tō'nend. Sounding.
- tongue. 1. Reed, or the vibrating metal slip of a reed; hence, tongue-pipes. 2. As a verb, to use the tongue in playing wind-instr.; called tonguing. Vide DOUBLE-TONGUING. Triple-tonguing is the rapid iteration by tongue-thrust with the consonants, t-k-t, t-k-t, etc.
- ton'ic, E., tonica (tō'-nē-kā), I., To'-nika, G., tonique (tō-nēk), F. 1. The key-note of a key, that on which the scale begins and ends, the tone from which a key takes its name as C. 2. The tonic-chord, the diatonic chord built on the key-note. t-pedal. Pedal-point on the key-note. t. section. One which closes with a cadence to the tonic of the chief key of the movement.
- Tonic Sol-fa. A system of teaching singing, inv. by Sarah Ann Glover, of Norwich, and improved by Rev. John Curwen, and his son John Spencer Curwen. It consists, first, in analysis with constant reference to key-relations, or "tones in key"; the second element is a notation modified from solmisation (q.v.), and consisting of doh for do, ray for re, me for mi, fah for fa, soh for sol, lah for la, te for si. These take the place of notes and are written on one line by their initials, d, r, m, etc., an accent being affixed below or above the letter to indicate an octave lower or higher as d' r'. Sharps are sung dē, rē, etc., flats dā, rā, etc. In modulation, bridge-tones are indicated by the new key-value of the tone large with its old key value small as *d. In notation, rhythm is expressed by time-spaces, the number varying according to the beats or pulses in the bar; a thick bar before a letter marks a strong accent; a colon a weak accent; a dot and a comma mark half and quarter beats, a dash indicates prolongation of tone, a rest is marked by a vacant space.
- to'no, I. 1. Tone. 2. Key.
- to'nos, Gr., to'nus, L. 1. A whole tone. t. grav'is, tris'tis, mys'ticus, harmon'icus, laet'us, devo'tus, angel'icus, perfect'us, respectively the 1st, 2d, 3d, 4th, 5th, 6th, 7th, and 8th tones in church-music. t. cur'rens. Reciting note. t. peregr'i'nus. Foreign tone. 2. Mode.
- touquet (tō-kā). touquet, F. Toccato.
- toomour'ah. Hindu tambourine.
- too'rooree'. Brahmin trumpet.
- toph (tōf), Heb. Hebrew tambourine.
- torcelli (tōr-chēl'-lē), I. Organs.
- tosto (tōs'-tō). Quick, rapid. più tosto. Rather; sooner.
- touch. 1. Act or style of pressing the keys of a key-board instr. 2. The response or resistance of the action.
- touche (toosh), F. 1. Touch. 2. A digital. 3. A fret. 4. A finger-board.
- toucher (too-shā), F. 1. As a noun, touch. 2. As a verb, to touch, play.
- touchette (too-shēt'), F. Fret.
- toujours (too-zhoor), F. Always. Vide SEMPRE.
- touquet (too-kā), F. Toccato.
- tourdion (toor-dī-ōn), F. See SALTARELLA 2.
- tourmenté (toor-mān-tā), F. Over-elaborated.
- tourne-boute (toorn-boot), F. An instr. like a flute.
- tour de force (toor dū fōrs), F. Bravura passage, etc.
- tourniquet (toor-nī-kā), F. Plug, cap.
- touta'ri. Hindu bagpipe.
- tout (too), pl. touts (too), or toutes (toot), F. All. t. ensemble (toot-tān-sān'-bl). All; the whole together; the general effect.
- toy. A trivial air or dance. toy symphony. A comic work, particularly one by Haydn employing toy cuckoo, trumpet, etc.
- tp. Abbr. of Timpani.
- tr. Abbr. for trumpet or trill.

track'ers, E., Tractur (trāk-toor'), G.
Vide ORGAN.

tract, E., trac'tus, L. Solemn melodies sung from the Psalms during Lent in the Requiem Mass. The words are taken from the Psalms.

tradolce (trā-dōl'-chē), I. Very sweet.
tradotto (trā-dōt'-tō), I. Translated, arranged.

Tra'gen/der Stim'me, G. Portamento.
trainé (trē-nā), F. 1. Slurred. 2. A slow waltz.

trait (trē), F. 1. Passage as t. de chant. Vocal run. 2. A phrase, progression. t. d'harmonie. Sequence. 3. Rule. t. d'octave. Rate of the octave.

traité (trē-tā), F. A treatise.

Traktur (trāk-toor'), G. Trackers. Vide ORGAN.

tranquillezza (trän-kwīl'-lēd'-zā), tranquillità (trän-kwīl'-lī-tā'), I. Tranquillity. tranquil'lo, tranquillamente. Calm(ly).

transcription (in F. trān-skrēps-yōn). A rearrangement of a composition for a different instr. or instrs. t. uniforme. The notation, common in French bands, of writing all the transposing instrs. in the G clef.

trans'ient. Used of notes, chords and modulations that are merely passing and secondary, the means, not the end.

tran'sito, L., transi'tion (in F. trān-ses-yōn). 1. A modulation of transient value; so also in Tonic Sol-fa.

tran'situs, L. A passing note (usually t. re'gularis). t. irre'gularis. Changing note.

transponi(e)ren (pō-nē'-rēn), G. To transpose. transponi'rende Instrumēte. Transposing instrs.

transpose, E., transposer (trān-spō-zā), F. To change the pitch of a composition to a key higher or lower. Thus the tonic is replaced by the tonic of the new key, the old dominant by the new, etc.

transposing. 1. Used of instruments, which are not written as they sound, but always in the key of C major. This is done so that the player's ease and accuracy may be insured, by keeping the fingering, etc., the same in all keys, the key of the instr. being changed by changing the instr. entirely or merely changing a crook. The extent of this transposition is the interval between the key of the instr. and the key of C major. So an instr.

in B, sounds a half-tone lower than written; an instr. in E♭ sounds a major 6th below or a minor 3d above the actual note. 2. t. piano, etc., one in which, by a mechanism, the action is shifted to higher or lower pitch. t.-scale. Vide MODES.

transpositeur (trāns-pō-zī-tūr'), F. 1. One who transposes. 2. A single-valve inv. by Gautrot as a substitute for the series usually used. 3. A key-board instr., piano t., inv. by A. Wolff, 1873.

transposition (in G. trāns-pō-zē'-tsi-ōn). The changing of the key of a composition. T.-skalen. Transposing Scales. Vide MODES.

transverse flute. Vide FLUTE.

traquenard (trāk-nār), F. A brisk dance.

trascinando (trā-shī-nān'-dō), I. Dragging, retarding.

trascrit'to, I. Copied, transcribed.

trasportato (trā-spōr-tā'-tō), I. Transposed. chiavi trasportati. Vide CHIAVETTE.

tratt. Abbr. of trattenuto.

trattato (trāt-tā'-tō), I. Treatise.

trattenuto (noo'-tō), I. Retarded.

Trauer'gesang (trōw'-ēr-gē-zāng), G. Dirge. Trauermarsch (mārsh). Funeral-march. trauervoll. Sad. traurig (trōw'-rīkh). Heavy, sad.

travailler (trā-vī-yā), F. To work; to lead, play solo part. travaillé (vī-yā). Worked up elaborately.

Travers'flöte. 1. A cross-flute. 2. A 4-ft. stop.

traversiere (trā-vērs-yār), F., traverso (trā-vēr'-sō). Vide FLUTE.

tre (trā), I. Three. a tre. For three voices or instrs. tre cor'de. Loud-pedal. Vide PIANO. tre volte. Three times.

treble. 1. The highest voice, soprano (from trip'lum, q.v.). 2. Highest part of a comp. 3. Highest register. 4. The highest of a group of instrs. t. clef. The G clef. t. forte stop. A stop for cabinet organs, increasing the treble at will, while the bass remains soft. t. staff. The staff on which the treble clef is placed.

Tredezime (trā-dā'-tsē-mē), G. Thirteenth.

treibend (trī'-bēnt), G. Hurrying, accelerating.

treizième (trēz-yēm), F. Thirteenth.

tremblant (trän-blän), F., tremen'do, I. Shaking. trembler (hlā), F. To trill. Vide TREMULANT. trem-

- blement (trāā-bl-māā), F. A trill, shake.
- tremolando (trām-ō-lān'-dō), tremolate (lā'-tē), tremolo (trā'-mō-lō), tremulo (trā'-moo-lō), I. Trembling, trilling, quivering, reiterated with great rapidity.
- trem'olant, trem'ulant. A stop which gives to the tone a waving or trembling effect.
- tremore (trā-mō'-rē), tremoro'so, I. Tremor(ous).
- tremuli(e)ren (trā-moo-lē'-rēn), G. To trill.
- trench'more. An old English dance in triple or compound duple time.
- trenise (trā-nēz), F. Vide QUADRILLE.
- trenodia (trā-nō'-di-ā), I. A funeral-dirge.
- trēs (trē), F. Very.
- trēs'ca, trescone (trēs-kō'-nē), I. A country-dance.
- Treter (trā'-tēr), G. Bellows treader.
- tri'ad, E., triade (in F. trē-ād; in I. trē-ā'-dē). A chord of three tones. Vide CHORD. harmonic t. Major triad.
- tri'angle, E. (in F. trē-āngl), Triangel (trē'-āng-el), G., triangolo (trē-ān'-gō-lō), I., triangulo (trē-ān'-goo-lō), S.p., triang'ulus, L. A small steel rod bent into a triangle and tapped with a straight rod, for emphasising rhythm. Triangular harp. Vide HARP.
- tri'as, L. Triad. t. defic'iens. Imperfect chord. t. harmo'nica. Perfect chord.
- tri'chord. The three-stringed lyre. t. piano. One with three strings tuned in unison for each note. trichord'-on. 3-stringed colachon.
- Trichter (trikh'-tēr), G. 1. Tube of a reed-pipe. 2. Bell of horn, etc.
- tricin'ium, L. An unaccompanied trio.
- tricorde (trē-kōr'-dē), I. 3-stringed.
- tridiapa'son, G. A triple octave.
- tri'gon, trigo'num. A 3-stringed lyre-like instrument.
- trihemito'nium, G. Minor third.
- trill, trille (trē'-yū), F., Triller (tril'-lēr), G., trillo (tril'-lō), I. The rapid alternation of a principal note with an auxiliary, usually the major or minor second above (a small chromatic sign being set above the note when its auxiliary is not to be diatonic). The trill begins on the auxiliary note only when the auxiliary is written as a grace note before the principal, in this case the trill ends on the principal; normally it ends on the auxiliary. A trill is long or short (trillette (trē-yēt), F., trillet'ta, trillet'to, I.) according to the duration of the principal, the short trill sometimes amounting only to a mordent. A series of trills on different notes is a chain of trills (Trillerket'te). A mere rough rattle on one note instead of two notes crisply trilled is called goat-trill, Bockstriller, chèvrotement, or trillo caprino. trillettino (tē'-nō), I. A soft trill. imperfect t. One without a turn at the close. In Caccini's Method, 1601, the trillo was the reiteration of a single note, our trill being called gruppō. trillando (trē-lān'-dō), I. 1. Trilling. 2. A succession, or chain, or shakes on different notes. trillern (tril'-lēr'n), G. To trill. Vide GRACES and SIGNS.
- trine (trēn). A triad, with 2 major thirds.
- Trinkesang (trink'-gē-zāng), T-lied (lēt), G. Drinking-song.
- trino'na. Open 8-ft. stop.
- trio (trē'-ō), I. 1. A composition for three instrs. or voices, often in sonata form. pianoforte trio. pf., vln., and 'cello. string trio (vln., viola (or 2d vln.), and 'cello). (The name was formerly used for 3 instrs., accompanied by a fourth playing basso continuo.) organ trio. A strongly contrasted work for 2 manuals and pedal or for 3 manuals. 2. In the dance-form, the contrastingly quiet or lyrical second division. Gaining its name from being once written in 3 parts, the word should now be laid aside as meaningless and confusing, and the phrase second part, or second subject used instead.
- Triole (trī-ō'-lē), G., triolet (in F. trē-ō-lā). A triplet.
- trionphale (trē-ōn-fāl), F., trionfale (trē-ōn-fā'-lē), I. Triumphal. trionphant (trē-ōn-fān), F., trionfante (trē-ōn-fān'tē), I. Triumphant.
- tripar'tite. In three parts.
- tripel (trē'-pāl), G. Triple, as T. fuge, triple fugue. T.-konzert. Triple concerto. T.-takt. Triple time. T.-zunge. Triple-tonguing.
- triph'on'y. Three sounds heard at once. triph'o'nia. Organum in 3 parts. triphonisch (trē-fō'-nīsh), G. Triphonic, 3-voiced.
- tripla (trē'-plā), I. Triple time. t. de min'ima. 1. 3-2 time. 2. Triplet.

trip'lum, L. The third part in organum, hence the highest; in 4-part next to the highest, the 4th being called quadruplum; if there is a 5th it is called quintuplum, etc.

tripola (trē'-pō-lā), I. Tripla.

Trisa'gion, Gr., Trisa'gium, L. "Thrice Holy," the Sanctus.

trise'mito'nium, L. Minor third.

triste'zza (trīs-tēd'-zā), I. Sadness.

tristro'pha, Gr. Triple square note of the greater stress.

triton (trē-tōn), F., tritone (tri'-tōn), E., tritono (trē-tō'-nō), I., tri'tonus, L. (in G. trē-tō'-noos'). An augmented fourth; long a forbidden interval in strict writing, since it was augmented and was said to be hard to sing. mi chord of the t. Third inversion of the dominant seventh, which contains the tritone. Vide MI.

tri'ton a'vis, L. "3-toned bird," a West-Indian bird, capable of singing a note, and its twelfth and seventeenth, all at the same time.

Tritt (trīt), G. Treadle, pedal. Tritt'-schuh (shoo). Place for the foot on bellows. Tritt'harfe. Pedal-harp. Tritt'bret or T-holz. The board on which the bellows-treader steps.

tri'tus, L. Lydian Church-mode.

triumphirend (trē-oom-fē-rēnt), G. Triumphant. Triumphlied (lēt). Song of triumph.

trois (trwā), F. Three. mesure à trois-deux (trwā dü). 3-2 time. A trois-huit (trwā zwēt). 3-8 time. trois-quatre (trwā kätr). 3-4 time.

troll. 1. Round or catch. 2. As a verb, to sing a catch.

tromba (trōm'-bā), I. 1. A trumpet. 2. 8-ft. reed-stop. t. croma'tica, I. Valve trumpet. t.-bas'sa, or di bas'so, or spezzata (spēd-zā-tā). The bass trumpet. t. da tirar'si. Old slide trumpet, perhaps a soprano trombone. t.-marina (ma-rē-nā), I. Marine trumpet. spezzata (spēd-zā-tā), I. An obsolete name for the bass trombone. t. sor'da. Muted trumpet. trombadore (dō'-rē), trombaceloclyde. A B♭ ophicleide. trombet'ta, trombettino (tē'-nō), trombettatto're or -iere (t-ā'-rē). 1. Trumpet. 2. A small trumpet.

trombone (in E. trām'-bōn; in I.

trōm-bō'-nē; in F. trōn'-būn), I., pl. -i. 1. A trumpet-like instr. with valves; or more anciently, with a tube that may be lengthened or shortened by means of a U-shaped portion to be pushed in or drawn out. This slide moving by semitones has seven positions, each of which, virtually, makes a separate instr. of it with a distinct key, the partial tones of this being obtained by variations of pressure (vide EMBOUCHURE). The tone of the instr., though suffering from misuse in bad hands, is of the utmost richness, dignity and humanity. Berlioz calls it "epic." It is a non-transposing instr. in four sizes, the tenor being most used; the tenor and alto are written on the C clef, the bass and contrabass on the F clef, compasses, tenor, chromatic E-b♭ (with pedal-tones G-B♭, and difficult tones b'-d'), alto, A-e'♭; bass B-f'. 2. A powerful 8, 16 or 32 ft. stop.

Trommel (trōm'-mēl), G. Drum. gros'se T. Bass drum. Militär-t., or Wirbel-t. Side drum. Roll-t. Tenor drum. T.-bass. A bass note thumped drum-wise. T.-boden (bō'-den). Bottom of a drum. T.-kas'ten. The body of a drum. T.-klöpfel (klöp-fēl), or T.-schlägel (shlā-gēl). Drumsticks. T.-schläger. Drummer. trom'meln. To drum; drumming.

Trommelstück (trōm'-mēl-shtük), G. Tambourine, tabor.

trompe (trōnp), F. 1. Hunt-horn. 2. Reed-stop. t. de Béarn (dū bā-ār), or à laquais (ä lāk-ē'). Jew's harp.

Trompete (trōm-pä'-tē), G. 1. Trumpet. 2. A reed-stop. Trompetengeige. Marine trumpet. Trompetenzug (tsookh). Trumpet-stop.

Trompeter (trōm-pä'-tēr), trompéteur (trōn-pä'-tūr), F. Trumpeter.

trompette (trōn-pēt), F. 1. A trumpet. 2. Trumpeter. 3. A reed-stop. t. à coulisse (ä koo-lēs). Slide-trumpet. t. à clefs (ä klā). The trumpet with keys. t. à pistons (ä pēs-tōn). Valve trumpet. t. d'harmonie (dār-mū-nē). Orchestral t. harmonieuse (ār-mōn-yūz). Trombone. t. marine. Marine trumpet. t. harmonique (ār-mūn-ēk). A reed-stop.

troop. 1. A quick march for trooping the colours. 2. The 2d drum-beat as a march-signal.

trope, tro'pus. 1. A Gregorian formula for the close of the lesser doxology. 2. Mode.

troppo (tróp'-pō), I. Too, too much, lento ma non t. Slow, but not too slow.

troubadour (troo-bā-door), F., trovador (trō-vā-dhōr), S.p., trovatore (trō-vā-tō'-rē), I. A poet musician, usually of noble rank, skilled in singing, chiefly of love. The cult arising in Southern France, flourished widely from the 11th Century. The t. sometimes had hired minstrels (ménestrels, ménétriers, or jongleurs) in attendance on him. trouvères (troo-vār), F. A cult of poet-musicians contemporary with and often confused with the troubadours, but more characteristic of the north of France, and singing songs rather of war and epic struggle than of love.

trüb(e) (trüp or trü'-bē), G. Sad.

Trug (trookh), G. Deception. T.-fortschreitung. Progression of a dissonance, not to its resolution, but to another dissonance. T.-kadenz, or -schluss. Vide CADENCE.

Trumscheit (troomp'-shit), G. Marine trumpet.

trump. 1. Trumpet. 2. Jew's harp.

trump'et. 1. A metal wind-instr. with a tube half as long as that of the horn, but bent in longer folds, and with a smaller bell. The tube is narrow and cylindrical till near the bell; the mouthpiece is hemispherical and cupped. It is a transposing instr. written in the G clef (almost always), and in the key of C. Its pitch is an octave higher than that of the horn, and it is used in fewer keys. It is the most commanding of all brass instrs., but its stopped tones are unpleasant. It should be written for in a distinctly vocal manner. It is fitted with crooks to give it any key, the tone being produced by embouchure (q.v.) except in the valve, or chromatic, trumpet; which is displacing the older form. Its extreme compass is d-b''b. In England the slide trumpet is used, working like a trombone but with shorter slide. Trumpets of the same key but sounding an octave apart are called alto (high), and basso (low). 2. An 8-ft. reed-stop.

marine trumpet. An old instr. once used for signalling in the English navy, hence its name; also used in convents, whence it was called "nun's fiddle." It was played chiefly in harmonics, and had one thick gut string, sometimes an octave string, and one or more drone-strings. The box was long and thin with short neck and flat belly; one foot of the bridge rested loosely producing a powerful resonance. harmonic t. A sackbut. reed-t. A trumpet with 36 brass-reeded pipes inclosed, arranged in a circle, so that each pipe was brought in turn between the mouthpiece and the bell.

Trumscheit (troom'-shit), G. Marine trumpet.

t. s. Abbr. of Tasto Solo.

tscheng (chéng). Cheng.

tschung (choong). Chinese gong.

tuba (too'-bā), I. 1. The lowest of the saxhorns (q.v.), an enormous brass horn with four pistons, a trombone-like mouthpiece, and a compass of 4 octaves. It is a non-transposing instr. (except in the case of a tenor-tuba in Bb, and a bass-tuba in F so written by Wagner), and is written in the G clef. It is usually made of 3 sizes, the bass or the euphonium, in B flat (compass available Bb-f'), or in Eb; the bombardon, a fifth lower; and the contrabass tuba (or bombardon) in Bb an octave lower than the euphonium. 2. The straight Roman trumpet, or t. communis; the t. duc'-tilis, being curved. 3. t. curva. A limited natural French trumpet of the 18th Century. 4. A powerful 8-ft. reed-stop. t. major, t. mirab'ilis, t. clarion. A 4-ft. stop.

tu'bicen, L. A trumpeter.

tuck'et. A flourish of trumpets.

tuiau (twā-ō), F. Tuyau.

tumultuoso (too-mool-too-ō'-sō), I. Agitated.

tun. Ancient Yucatan drum.

tune. An air or melody, usually short and simple.

tu'ner. 1. One who tunes instruments. 2. The flap or cut in the top of a pipe by which it is tuned. 3. Tuning-cone.

tu'ning. 1. The correction of the tone-production of an instr. 2. Accordature. t.-cone or horn. A cone of horn or metal which can be inserted in the top of an organ-pipe; by "coning out" or increasing its flare and raising its pitch; by "coning in" or pressing it, point upwards, over the top of a pipe, it decreases the flare and lowers the pitch. t-crook. Vide CROOK. t-fork. A small steel instr. with two prongs which upon being struck sounds a certain fixed tone. t-hammer or key. A hand-wrench. t. slide. 1. An English instr. for producing thirteen semitones. 2. An adjustable U-shaped portion of the tube of certain brass instrs. t. wire. Vide REED and PIPE.

tuono (too-ō'-nō), I. 1. Mode, as t. ecclesiastico. Church-mode. 2. Tone.

tuorbe (twōrb), F. Theorbo.

tur'ba, pl. -æ, L. "Crowd, multitude." The heathen or Jewish chorus in Passion music.

turbinoso (toor-bī-nō'-so), I. Tempestuous.

turbo (toor'-bō), Gr. A seashell trumpet.

turco (toor'-kō), I. Turkish. alla turca. In the style of Turkish music.

turdion (toor'-dī-ōn), Sp. turchesco (toor-kā'-skō), I. An old dance.

türkisch (tür'-kīsh), G. Turkish. Turkisch-muzik. Janizary music.

turn. An embellishment consisting of a principal tone (struck twice) and one higher and one lower auxiliary a diatonic second removed, unless a chromatic sign accompanies the symbol; if a sharp or flat is placed above the turn-mark, it alters the higher auxiliary; if below, the lower. The common, direct, or regular turn usually begins on the upper auxiliary; the back or inverted t. begins with the lower; the rebounding or trilled t. begins with a passing shake; the double t. affects two notes at once. Vide GRACES.

turr. 3-stringed Burmese violin.

Tusch (toosh), G. A triple flourish of trumpets and drums.

Tute (too'-tē), G. Cornet.

tutta (toot'-tā), tutto, pl. tutte (toot'-tē), or tutti (toot'-tē), I. All; the entire band or chorus; in a solo or concerto it means that the full orchestra is to come in. tutte corde (kōr'-dē). "All the strings"; i. e., release the soft pedal. tutti. Full band or chorus—the entire force.

tutto ar'co. With the whole bow.

tuyau (twe'-yō), F. 1. Tube, as of a horn. 2. Pipe. t. à anche. Reed-pipe. t. à bouche. Flue-pipe.

twelfth. 1. An interval of an octave plus a fifth. 2. A stop twelve tones above the diapasons.

twenty-second. A triple octave.

twice-marked, or -accented. Vide PITCH.

two-lined. Vide PITCH. two-time. Duple time. two-step. A dance in 6-8 time, somewhat resembling the waltz, but in duple accent.

tymb'estere. Vide TOMBESTERE.

tym'pan. 1. Timbrel. 2. Drum. 3. Irish instr., perhaps the crowd. tympani (tīm'-pā-nē), I., pl. Kettle-drums. tympanis'ta. Kettle-drummer.

tympanischi'za. Marine trumpet.

tympan'on (tēm-pā-nōn), F. 1. Dulcimer. 2. Kettle-drum.

tym'panum, L. 1. Ancient drum resembling the kettle-drum. 2. Kettle-drum. 3. The water-wheel in old hydraulic organs.

ty'pophone. A piano-like instr., with steel wands instead of strings, compass c'-c''''''.

tyrolienne (tē-rōl-yēn), F. 1. Song, or dance peculiar to the Tyrolese; and characterised by the jodel. 2. Round dance in 3-4 time.

tzeltze'līm, Heb. Cymbals.

tzet'ze. Abyssinian guitar.

tzi'ti. Hindu bagpipe.

U

Übelklang (ü'-bēl-klāng) or -laut (lowt), G. Discord. üben (ü'-bēn), G. To practise.

über (ü'-bēr), G. Over, above. Ü-einstimmung (in-shtīm-moongk). Harmony. ü-geführt (gē-fürt). Divided (of stops). ü-greifen (grī-fēn). (a) To cross the hands; (b) to lift the thumb from the neck of a 'cello. ü-greifendes System (zēs'-tām). Hauptmann's plan of forming a new key-system by adding to the group of triads of one key, a triad in its dominant or sub-dominant key.

Ü-blasen (blä'-zēn). Overblowing, to overblow. Ü-gang (gāng). Transition, modulation. Ü-leitung (li-toongk). Transition passage. ü-mässig (mēs-sikh). Augmented. ü-schlagen (shlā'-gēn). (a) To cross over (the hands). (b) To overblow. (c) To break. ü-setzen (zēt'-zēn). To pass a finger over the thumb; or one foot over the other. ü-steigen (shftī'-ghēn). For a part to soar temporarily higher than the part normally above it.

- Übung (ü-boongk), G. (pl. -en). Exercise; a study. Übungsabend. Pupils' concert.
- ugab (oo'-gäb), Heb. An organ.
- uguale (oo-gwä'-lë), I. Equal, like. ugualità (li-tä'). Equality. ugualmen'te. Equality, alike.
- umana (oo-mä'-nä), I. Human. voce u. (vö'-chè). 1. The human voice. 2. A stop.
- Umfang (oom'-fäng), G. Compass. umgekehrt (oom-gë-kärt'), G. Reversed, inverted.
- Umkehrung (oom-kä'-roongk), G. Inversion.
- umore (oo-mö'-rë), I. Humour.
- um (oom), G. Prefix about, around.
- umschlagen (slä'-gën). 1. To break, to make a pronounced change of register. 2. To overblow. 3. To make the goose. Um'stimmung (shtim-moongk). (a) Change. (b) Cordature, pitch or key.
- un. Abbr. of Unison.
- un (ün), F., un (oon), una (oo'-nä), uno (oo'-nō), I. A, an, one.
- unaccented. Vide PITCH.
- unaccompanied. Without instrumental accompaniment.
- unacknowledged. Used of passing or unessential notes.
- un'ca, L. "Hooked"; quarter note. bis unca. 16th note.
- uncoupled. With coupler released.
- und (oont), G. And.
- un'da ma'ris, L. "Wave of the sea." A stop tuned sharp or flat and producing an undulating effect by means of beats; sometimes a pipe with two mouths, one higher than the other.
- undecima (oon-dä-chë'-mä), L. and I. An eleventh.
- undecimole (oon-dä-chë'-mō'-lë), I. A group of eleven equal notes.
- underchord. The minor triad.
- underpart. That beneath, or subordinate to others.
- undersong. A burden.
- undertone. A lower partial sometimes produced by the simultaneous sounding of two higher tones. (Vide ACOUSTICS.)
- Undezime (oon-dä'-tsë-më), G. An eleventh. Unde'zimo'le. Undecimole.
- undula'tion, E., undulazione (oon-doo-lä-tsi'-dë), I. Vibrato effect on bow instruments.
- une (ün), F. A, an, one.
- uneigentliche (oon-i'-gënt'-likh-ë). Irregular (of fugue).
- unendlich(er) (oon-ënt'-likh-ër), G. Endless (of canon).
- unequal. 1. Vide TEMPERAMENT. 2. Of voices = mixed.
- unessen'tial. Used of passing and grace notes, etc.
- unfret'ted. Vide FRETTED.
- ungar (oon'-gär), ungarisch (oon-gä'-rish), G. Hungarian.
- ungebunden (oon-gë-boont'-ën), G. 1. Vide FRETTED. 2. Unconstrained.
- ungeduldig (oon-gë-dool'-dikh), G. Impatient.
- ungerade Takt (oon-gë-rä'-dë täkt), G. Triple time.
- ungestrichen (oon-gë-strikh'-ën). Unaccented. Vide PITCH.
- ungestüm (oon'-gë-shtüm), G. Impetuous.
- ungezwungen (oon-gë-tsvoong'-ën), G. Easy.
- ungleich (oon'-glikh). Unequal. Vide COUNTERPOINT. ungleichschwebende (shvā-bën-dë). Unequal, of temperament (q.v.).
- unharmo'nischer Querstand (kwär'-shtänt) or umstand (oom'-shtänt). False relation.
- u'nichord, E., unichor'dum, L. 1. Monochord. 2. Marine trumpet.
- union (ün-yōh), F. Union. u. des registres (dä rä-zhëstr). Blending of registers.
- unione (oo-ni'-ō'-në), I. Coupler.
- u'nison (in G., oo-ni'-zōn'), uniso'nus, L., unisono (oo-në-sō'-nō), I.; unisson (ü-nis-sōh), F. 1. Identity of pitch. 2. Any octave of a pitch. 3. A tone of the same or octave pitch. 4. A prime, hence augmented unison. 5. A group of 2 or 3 strings tuned in the piano to one note. all' unisono, à l'unisson, in unison, or progressing in the unison or the octave.
- unis'onant, unis'onous. In unison or octave.
- unito (oo-në'-tō), unitamen'te, I. United(ly). uniti cancels divisi (q.v.).
- unmeasured. Without definite measure.
- uno (oo'-nō), una (oo'-nä), I. One; A., an. uno a uno. One by one; one after another.
- unrein (oon'-rīn'), G. Impure; out of tune.
- unruhig (oon-roo'-likh), G. Restless; uneasy.
- unschuldig (oon-shool'-dikh), G. Innocent.

unsingbar (oon-zǐng'-bār), G. Not singable.

unstrung. Of strings (a) relaxed in tension, (b) removed entirely.

unter (oon'-tēr), G. Under, below, sub. U.-bass (bäs). Double bass. U.-brechung (brëkh'-oongk). Interruption. u.-brochen (brökh-ën). Interrupted. U.-dominante (dō-mī-nän'-tē). Subdominant. U.-halbton (häl-p-tōn). Half-step below. U.-haltungsstück (häl-toongs-shtük). Divertissement. U.-leitton (lit-tōn). Dominant seventh. U.-mediante (mā-dī-änt'-ē). Submediant. U.-satz (zäts). Supporter; a 32-ft. stop on the pedal. u.-setzen (zët'-zën). To pass the thumb under a finger; or one foot under another. U.-stimme. Lowest voice, or part. U.-tasten (täs-tën). The white keys of the piano or organ. U.-töne (tä-nē). Untertöne (ri-ē). Vide UNDERTONES.

unverziert (oon-fēr-tsért'), G. Unornamented.

unvollkommen (oon'-fól-kóm-mën), G. Incomplete.

uomo (oo-ō'-mō), I. A man. Vide PRIMO.

up-beat. 1. The raising of the hand or bâton, hence 2. An unaccented part of a measure.

up-bow. Vide BOW.

upright. Vide PIANO.

ura'nion. An instrument like the harpsichord or piano.

uhr-heen. Chinese violin.

upper-clang. Vide CLANG.

uscir di tuono (oo'-shër dē too-ō'-nō), I. To get out of tune.

u'sus. L. 1. The rules of music. 2. Old synonym for neumes and the neume system.

ut (üt in F.; in I. and L. oot). 1. In France the key and note C, so used also in indicating pitch, as ut 2. Vide SOLMISATION. 3. In Latin, as, like that. ut supra. As above, as before.

V. Abbr. for vide=see; violin(s); volti; voce.

va (vä), I. Go on. va crescendo (krë-shën'-dō), I. Go on increasing the volume.

vacilando (văt-chī-län'-dō), vaci- lante (län'-tē), I. Wavering, irregular.

va'gans. L. Vague. Vide QUINTUS.

vago (vä'-gō), I. Vague, rambling.

valce (väl'-chē), I. Waltz.

valeur (vä-lür), F., val'or, L., valore (vä-lō'-rē), I. Duration (of a note).

valse (väls), F. Waltz; used in E. rather of a concert-piece (v. de salon), than of a strict dance-tune. v. chantée (shän-tä), vocal waltz. v. à deux temps (dü täñ). A quick waltz, with two steps in each measure.

value. Duration of a note or rest.

valve, valvola (väl'-vō-lä), I. 1. The device inv. by Claggett, 1790, and Blümel, 1813, by which natural brass instrs. are made chromatic. A natural horn produces the fundamental tone naturally made by a column of air of its exact length; it can be made to produce a series of partials of this tone by the method of blowing. Vide EMBOUCHURE and ACOUSTICS. The key of the horn can be changed by substituting for one section of its tube a longer or shorter section called a crook, which alters the length of the horn, and the column of air, and alters therefore its fundamental key and gives it a new series of partials. Until the valve-mechanism was invented a horn could therefore play only in one key at a time. Valve instrs. have auxiliary tubes fitted to the main tube; they are, in fact, merely stationary crooks. The pressure of a certain valve acts as an instantaneous change of crook by shutting off the air in one crook and turning it into another of different length. This device permits the sounding of a complete chromatic scale along the instrument's whole range. The valves are usually three in number, the first lowering the pitch a semitone, the second a tone, the third three semitones, thus giving a command of all keys (cf. HARP), (a) the piston, or piston-valve, is a plunger in an air-tight cylinder; by means of two holes the plunger at rest carries the air through the main tube; when pressed it shuts off the main tube and opens a side-tube, thus changing the key; a spiral spring restores it after pressure to the natural position. (b) the rotary valve is a stop-cock with four holes which produce the same effect. 2. organ-valves are (a) suction-valves, or

- suckers, which admit the wind to the bellows and retain it there; (b) joint-valves which regulate the air-density in the wind channels. (c) key-valves or pallets, which are worked by a draw-stop; and (d) the waste-pallet relieving the bellows of surplus air.
- valzer (vāl-tsār), I. Waltz. v. a due passi. Two-step.
- vamp. 1. To improvise an accompaniment or prelude. 2. Such an accompaniment or prelude.
- variamento (vā-rī-ā-mēn'-tō), I. Variation, difference. variamentē. Varied, freely.
- Varia'tion, E. (in G. fā-rī-ā-tsi-ōn', pl. -en; in F. vār-i-ās-yōn), variazione (vā-rī-ā-tsi-ō'-nē, pl. -i), I. The manipulation of a given theme or air. In the old sense (called doubles), and in cheap modern usage such as "Home, sweet Home with variations," the air is simply smothered in ornaments, arpeggios, etc.; in the better sense (character variations) the theme is subjected to as much remodelling, inversion, change of note-value, etc., as is possible without losing entire sight of its original meaning; sometimes merely the chord-relations are preserved. variato (vā-rī-ā'-tō), I., varié (vā-rī-ā), F. Treated with variation.
- varsoviana (ā'-nā), I., varsovienne (vī-ēn), F. "Warsaw dance." Slow Polish dance in 3-4 time with an up-take of a quarter note, and an accented down-beat in every other measure.
- vaudeville (vōd-vēl), F. 1. A country ballad or roundelay, usually satirical. 2. Operatic or musical comedy.
- vc., vcello. Abbr. for violoncello.
- veemente (vā-ā-mēn'-tē), I. Veement. veemenza (mēn'-tsā). Force.
- veiled, velato (vā-lā'-tō), I. Marked by a desirable softening of the metallic quality of a tone; usually acquired by a slight escape of breath.
- vellutato (vē-loo-tā'-tō), I. Velvety, smooth.
- veloce (vē-lō'-chē), velocemen'te, I. Swift(ly). velocis'simo. With extreme rapidity. velocità (chē-tā'). Rapidity.
- veneziana (vē-nā-tsi-ā'-nā), I. Venetian.
- vent'age. A hole in flutes, etc., to be stopped with finger or key.
- Ventil (in G. fēn'-tīl), ventile (vēntē'-lē), I. 1. Valve, hence Ventil-horn or -kornett. 2. Organ-valve.
- venusto (vā-noos'-tō), I. Beautiful, charming.
- vêpres (vēpr), F. Vespers.
- Veränderungen (fēr-ēn'-dēr-oong-ēn), G., pl. Variations.
- Verbindung (fēr-bīn'-doongk), G. Binding, combination. V.-s Zeichen (tsī-khēn), G. Tie.
- verdeckt (fēr-dēkt'), G. Hidden.
- verdoppelt (fēr-dōp'-pēlt), G. Doubled.
- Verdop'pelung (oongk), G. Doubling.
- Verengung (fēr-ēng'-oongk), G. Diminution of value or interval.
- vergellen (fēr-gēl'-lēn), G. To diminish.
- vergliedern (fēr-glē'-dērn), G. To articulate.
- vergnügt (fēr-gnūkt), G. Cheerful.
- Vergrößerung (fēr-grēs'-sēr-oongk), G. Augmentation.
- Verhältniss (fēr-hēlt'-nīs), G. Ratio or proportion.
- verhallend (fēr-hāl'-lēnt), G. Dying away.
- ver'ilay. Vaudeville.
- Verkehrung (fēr-kā'-roongk), G. Imitation in contrary motion.
- Verkleinerung (fēr-klī'-nēr-oongk), G. Diminution.
- Verkürzung (fēr-kūr'-tsoongk), G. Diminution of value.
- Verlängerungszeichen (fēr-lēng'-ēr-oongs-tsi-khēn), G. Dot of prolongation.
- verlöschend (fēr-lēsh'-ēnt), G. Dying away.
- vermindert (fēr-mīn'-dērt), G. Diminished.
- Vermittelungssatz (fēr-mīt'-tēl-oongks-zāts), G. Episode.
- verrillon (vē-ē-yōā), F. Mouth-harmonica.
- Verschiebung (fēr-shē'-boongk), G. "Shift," soft pedal. ohne V. Without soft pedal. mit V. With soft pedal.
- verschwindend (fēr-shvīn'-dēnt), G. Dying away.
- verse. 1. Portion of an anthem or service to be sung by a soloist to each part, and not by the full chorus; hence Verse-anthem, and Verse-service for solo voices. 2. Line. 3. Stanza.
- verset' (in F. vēr-sā), versetto (vēr-sēt'-tō), I., Versette (fēr-sēt'-tē), G. 1. Short piece for the organ. 2. Versicle. versetzen (fēr-zēt'-sēn), G. To transpose. Verset'zung

(zoongk). Transposition. Verset- zungszeichen (tsī'-khēn). The sharp, flat, and natural.
vers'icle, E., Versikel (fēr'-sīk-əl), G.
A short phrase or line, combining with the response to form one sentence.
versila're, L. To sing antiphonally.
verso (vēr'-sō), I. 1. Verse. 2. Air.
Verspätung (fēr-shpā'-toongk), G. Retardation.
verstärkt (fēr-shtērkt'), G. Sforzando.
verstimmt (fēr-shtimt'), G. 1. Out of tune. 2. Depressed.
ver'tatur, ver'te, L. Turn over. v.
subito. Turn quickly.
ver'tical. Of piano-strings, in one plane; opposed to overstrung.
vertönen (fēr-tā'-nēn), G. To die away.
verve (vērv), F. Spirit, energy.
verwandt (fēr-vānt'), G. Related, relative. V.-schaft (shāft). Relationship.
Verwechselung (fēr-vēkh'-sēl-oongk),
G. Change, mutation, of key, etc.
verweilend (fēr-vī'-lēnt), G. Retarding.
Verwerfung (fēr-vērf'-oongk), G.
Transposing.
verzi(e)rt (fēr-tsērt'), G. Embellished.
Verzi(e)rung (tsē'-roongk). Ornament. Verzögerung (fēr-tsākh'-ēroongk), G. Retardation.
verzweiflungsvoll (fēr-tsvī'-floongs-fōl),
G. Full of despair.
Vesper (fēs'-pēr), G., vespero (vēs'- pē-rō), vespro (vēs'-prō), I., ves'-
vespertī'ni psal'mī, I., pl. Evening psalms.
vezzoso (vēd-zō'-sō), I., vezzosamen'- te, I. Graceful(ly), tender(ly).
vi. Abbr. for violini.
vibrante (vē-brān'-tē), I. Vibrating, quivering.
vibrato (vē-brā'-tō), I. 1. Vibrating, resonant. 2. A strongly tremulous tone of distinct vibrations.
vibra'tion (in F. vē-brās-yōn). The regular oscillation of an elastic body, as a string, sounding-board, etc., contributing rapid periodic changes in the density of the air, which conveys the motion in sound-waves to the ear (without the air the vibrations are not conveyed to the air as sound; in a vacuum, a bell, for example, is not audible). The strength of the tone varies according to the amplitude or breadth of vibrations (travelling-distance of the elastic body back and forth); the pitch of the tone varies directly with the rapidity of the vibrations. The vibration-numbers of sounds vary in inverse ratio with the length of their sound-wave. A single vibration is from the point of rest to one extreme of motion, but is often calculated from one extreme to the opposite. A double vibration is measured from one extreme to the opposite and back again. sympa- thetic v. is that which is set up in an object (as a string, tuning-fork or even a plate) when the tone to which it vibrates naturally is sounded by some other instrument. Thus press the loud pedal of a piano, to remove the dampers, and sing or play on a violin any note. This note will be heard at once sounding on the piano-string. Furthermore, its partials will be similarly heard.

vic'ar-choral. Lay vicar of a cathedral choir.
vicenda (vē-chēn'-dā), I. Change. vicendevole (dā'vō-lē). Vacillating.
Vic'timæ pas'chali laudes, L. "Praise the paschal offering." Vide SE- QUENCE.
vi'de, vi'di, L. See. vi- is often put at the beginning of a passage to be cut, and -de at the end.
vide (vēd), F. "Empty"; open, of strings, as corde à v. opp. to corde
à jouer, a string to be stopped.
Videl (fē-dēl), G. Fiddle.
viel (fēl), G. Much, many. v.-chörig (kā-rīkh). For several choruses. v.-
facher (fākh-ēr). Polymorphous.
v.-stimmig (shtīm-mīkh). Polyphonic.
viël(l)e (vī-ēl), F., viella (vī-ēl'-lā), I.
1. Hurdygurdy. 2. Old viol. viël- leur (vī-ēl-lūr), F. Player of the viol.
vier (fēr), G. Four. V.-achteltakt.
4-8 time. v.-doppelt. Quadruple.
v.-fach (fēr'-fākh). With four ranks of pipes, etc. v.-füssig (fēr'-fūssīkh). Four-foot (of pipes). V.-
gesang. 4-part song. v.-gestrichene
Note. 3rd note. v.-gestrichene
Oktave. Four-marked. Vide ПРЧ. v.-händig (hēn-dīkh). For four hands. V.-klang (fēr'-klāng).
Chord of four tones; a seventh chord.
v.-mässig (fēr'-mēs-sīkh). Containing four measures. v.-saitig. Four-stringed. v.-stimmig. In four-parts.

- V.-stück. Quartet. vierte (fēr'-tē). Fourth. viertel or viertelnote. Quarter note. Viertelpause. Quarter rest. Viertelton. Quarter note. Vierundsechzigstel (fēr-oont-zēkhs'-fkh-shtēl). 64th note. Vierviertel-takt (fēr-fēr'-tēl-tākt). 4-4 time. vierzehn (fēr'-tsān). Fourteen. vierzehnte. Fourteenth. Vierzweiteltakt (fēr-zvi'-tēl-tākt). 4-2 time.
- vietato (vē-ā-tā'-tō), I. Forbidden. vif (vēf), F. Brisk, quick.
- vigoroso (vē-gō-rō'-sō), vigorosamen-te, I. Bold(ly).
- vigueta (vē-goo-ā'-lā), vihuela (vē-hoo-ā'-lā), Sp. A primitive guitar.
- villageois (vē-lā-zhwā), villageoise (zhwāz), F. Rustic.
- villancio (vēl-yān'-thē-kō), villancio (vēl-yān'-thī-ō), Sp. 1. A church festival anthem. 2. A beginning and ending with chorus.
- villanella (vēl-lā-nēl'-lā), I., villanelle (vē-yā-nēl), F. "Village song," 15th cent. Italian folk-song of rustic tone and artless grace.
- villanesco (nēs'-kō), villareccio (vēl-lā-rēt'-chō), I. Rustic.
- villot'to, I. Secular song; cf. VILLANELLA.
- vi'na. Ancient fretted 7-stringed Hindu instr. with body of bamboo, and two gourds for resonance.
- vinata (vē-nā'-tā), I. A vintage-song. vinet'ta. Little vinata.
- vi'ol, viola (vē-ō'-lā), I., viole (in F. vē'-ōl; in G. fē-ō'-lē). 1. The viola in modern usage is the tenor or alto violin, a little larger in size than the normal violin, and tuned a fifth lower c-g-d'-a'. It is written on the C clef (except high notes, which are written in the G clef). Its tone is more sombre (very richly melancholy and elegiac indeed), and its harmonics are more limited. 2. The prototype of the violin. A fretted bow-instr. with 6 strings (sometimes 5 to 8); flat and tapering back; belly usually flat; sound-holes circular; bridge low to facilitate chords; tuned in fourths with one midway third. In 4 sizes treble (alta), alto (alt or tenore), bass (bassa), contrabass (violone). The bass-viol still persists in England. v. di bardone (bār-dō'-nē), I. A barytone viol, of the size of the 'cello, with 6 or 7 gut strings, and a number of wire resonance strings lying along the belly and tuned diatonically. v. bastarda (bās-tār'-dā), I. "Bastard viol." Large viol da gamba. v. da braccio (dā brāt'-chō). "Arm-viol" as opposed to v. da gamba, "Leg-viol." v. da spalla. "Shoulder-viol," a larger arm-viol. viola d'amore (dā-mō'-rē), I., viole d'amour (dā-moōr'), F. 1. Richly beautiful, but obsolete instr., larger than the viola, furnished with frets and more strings, some above, and some below the finger-board. 2. A stop. v. pic'-cola or marina (mā-rē'-nā). An instr. resembling the v. d'amore. v. pomposa (póm-pō'-sā). A large viol of the compass of the 'cello, but with a fifth string. Inv. by J. S. Bach. viol da gamba (dā gām'-bā), viol di (dē) gamba. "Leg-viol." A small obsolete violoncello, with frets, and five or six strings. viola alta. An enlarged viola inv. by Hermann Ritter of Wismar, Germany, 1877.
- violento (vē-ō-lēn'-tō), violentemente (lēn-tē-mēn'-tē), I. Violently. violenza (lēn'-tsā). Fury.
- vi'olin, E., Violine (fē-ō-lē'-nē), G., violino (vē-ō-lē'-nō), I., violon (vē-ō-lōn), F. 1. "Small viol." A universally popular 4-stringed bow-instr. Developed possibly from the Viol, it has also been traced to the lira da braccio; it passed through many changes from about 1480-1530, when it assumed a shape little varied since. Though the name usually applies to one size, it may also be stretched to include the whole string quartet (which is the harmonic basis of the modern orchestra): the violin (or treble), the tenor violin or viola, the violoncello and the double bass. The violin proper has four gut or metal strings with the accordature, g-d'-a'-e'. Its tone is capable of great variety, sentiment and brilliance, its range extending from g to the highest note in the orchestra, e'''. It is rich in harmonics, but its resources in chords are limited and must be handled with great care for the fingering. Instrs. of the violin family consist of a curved body, or resonance-box, whose upper surface or belly is joined to a vaulted back by ribs; the body is curved in at the waist, the incurving being accentuated by bouts, whose corners are braced with triangular blocks; the belly (on which the bridge rests between slits called sound-holes, or from their shape f-holes) is braced with a thin strip (under the G string) called the bass-bar. A round prop or soundpost beneath the treble foot of the bridge connects the back and the belly. The finger-board is on the neck, which terminates in a head ornamented with a scroll and containing a peg-box, in which are four movable pegs from each of which a string passes across a ridge called the nut, along the finger-board and over the bridge to the flat tail-piece which is fastened by a loop of gut to a button in the lower end of the body. 2. A 2, 4, and 8 ft. stop. Violinbogen (fē-ō-lēn'-bō-khēn), G. A violin-bow. Violin-clef, Violinschlüssel or -zeichen, G. The G clef. violinier (līn-yā), violiniste (nēst), F., violinista (nēs'-tā), I., Violinspieler, G. A violin-player. violino alto, I. A small tenor viol. violino piccolo (pīt'-chō-lō), pic'colo, pochetto (kēt'-tō), I. A small vln. tuned a fifth higher. v. pompo'so, I. A viola with an additional higher string. Violin-principal. A 4 or 8 ft. stop. Violinsaitte. Violin-string. Violinsteg (stāk), Violin-bridge. Violinstimme. Violin-part. Violin-tenor. A vln. of low tone. violon de fer (dū fēr). Iron fiddle. violinata. A piece for violin, or in violin style. violinozō'li. 8-ft. stop on the swell. Violon (fē-ō-lōn'), G. The double-bass. violier (vē-ōl-yā), violiste (lēst'), F. Viola-player. violonar (vē-ō-lō-nār'), F. Double-bass. violonaro (nār'-ō). Octo-bass. Violoncell (fē-ō-lōn-tsēl'), G., violoncelle (vē-ō-lōn-sēl'), F., violoncello (vē-ō-lōn-chēl'-lō), I. "Little violone." Commonly abbr. 'cello. Large 4-stringed instr. of vln.-family (vide VIOLIN) held between the knees and resting on a standard or peg. It is tuned an octave below the viola, C, G, d, a. Its music is written chiefly in the C clef, save high notes in the G clef, and low in the F clef (formerly it was all written in the G clef, an octave higher than it sounded). Chords and harmonics are little used, except in solos. The 'cello is one of the most important of orchestral instrs., and one of the most expressive, especially of the graver or more yearning emotions, its gayety being rather sardonic.

violone (vē-ō-lō'-nē), violono (lō'-nō), I. "Large viol." 1. Double-bass. 2. Pedal-stop. violot'ta. A large viola devised by Stelzner, Dresden, 1895, and tuned G, d, a, e'. vir'elay. Vaudeville (also from the town of Vaux de Vire). vir'gil, L. A neume. Virgil practice-clavier. A mechanical piano inv. by A. K. Virgil, 1883, for practice-purposes, the heaviness of touch being adjustable in 6 gradations; a click answering the depression of a key, and another click its release. vir'ginal(s). A small spinet-like instr. popular in the time of Queen Elizabeth and placed upon a table. Virtuos (fēr-too-ōz'), G., virtuoso (vēr-too-ō'-sō), I., virtuose (vēr-tū-ōz), F. A performer of marked skill. Virtuosität (ō-zī-tāt'), G. Virtuosity. Remarkable execution. vis-à-vis (vē-zā-vē'), F. "Face to face." A large double piano with 2 opposite key-boards. vista (vēs'-tā), I. Sight. a prima v. At (first) sight. visto (vēs'-tō), vito (vē'-tō), vi(s)ta-men'te, I. Swift(ly). vite (vēi), vitement (vēt-mān), F. Quick(ly). vitesse (vē-tēs), F. Swiftmess. vivace (vē-vā'-chē), I. Lively, faster than Allegro. vivacemen'te. Briskly, quickly. vivacēt'to (chēt'-tō). Rather lively. vivacezza (chēd'-zā), vivacità (vē-vā-chī-tā'), I. Vivacity. vivacis'simo. Very fast. vivamen'te. Briskly. vive (vēv), F. Brisk, quick. viven'dum, ad., L. "To live" i. e., for permanence. Written, as opposed to improvised, counterpoint. vivente (vē-vēn'-tē), vivido (vē'-vī-dō), vivo (vē'-vō), I. Animated. vivezza (vē-vēd'-zā), I. Liveliness. vla. Abbr. for viola. vo'cal, vocale (vō-kā'-lē) in I.; in F. vō-kāl'), voca'lis, L. Relating or appropriate to the human voice. vocal chords. The two membranes in the larynx whose tensility is regulated at will to produce desired pitches. Vide GLOTTIS. rima voca'lis. The opening between the vocal chords. vocalezzo (vō-kā-lēd'-zō), I. A vocal exercise. voca'lion. Vide REED-ORGAN.

vocaliser (vō-kāl-i-zā), F., vocalizzare (vō-kā-lid-zā-rē), I., vo'calize, E. To practise exercises for the voice without words.

vocalis'tion (in F. vō-kā-lē-zās-yōā). 1. The practice of exercises for the voice. 2. Display of vocal agility.

vocalizzo (līd'-zō, pl. -i), I. Vocal exercise.

voce (vō-chē), I. Voice. colla v. "With the voice," i. e., adopting the tempo of the solo part. v. angelica (ān-jā-lī-kā). "Angel voice." Delicate reed-stop. v. di bianca (dē bī-ān'-kā), I. "White voice." Applied to pale and colourless tones, such as the voices of young women, children and poorly trained adults. v. di ca'mera. A small voice for the chamber. v. di go'la. A guttural, throaty voice. v. di pet'to. The chest voice. v. di tes'ta. Head voice, the falsetto, upper register. v. granitā (grā-nē-tā). A "granite" or massive voice. mezza voce (mēd'-zā). Half the power of the voice; a moderate tone. v. pasto'sa. A soft, flexible voice. v. principale (prēn-chī-pā-lē). Principal voice. v. rauca (ra'-oo-kā). A hoarse, rough voice. v. so'la. The voice alone. v. spianata (spē-ā-nā'-tā). Drawn out; smooth, sustained voice. v. spiccata (spīk-kā'-tā). A clear, distinct voice; well articulated. v. umana (oo-mā'-nā). The human voice. Vide vox HUMANA. vociaccia (vō-chī-āt'-chā). A bad, disagreeable voice. vocina (vō-chē'-nā). Thin little voice.

voces, L., pl. of vox. v. aequa'les. Voices of the same kind.

Vogar (fō'-gār), G. Fugara.

Vogel (fō'-gēl), G. Bird. V-flöte or pfeife. A bird-whistle. V-gesang. "Singing of birds"; stop in old German organs, of small pipes standing in water, through which the wind passes; a merula.

voglia (vōl'-yā), I. Ardour.

voice. 1. The sound produced by the larynx of human beings or animals. 2. Part (for any instr.), often voice-part. 3. The tuning and tone of organ-pipes.

Of the human voice, these are the following divisions: basso, tenor, counter-tenor, contralto or alto, mezzo-soprano, soprano (Vide each of these words). Each voice is also divided into registers (or groups of tones of a uniform quality), the transition from one to another register being sometimes distinct enough to be called a break; there are usually two breaks in a male, and three in the female voice. The registers are chest, head and falsetto (q.v.).

voicing. The adjustment of the pitch and quality of a pipe.

voilée (vwā-lā), F. Veiled.

voix (vwā), F. 1. Voice(s). 2. Part(s).

v. angélique (vwā-zān-jā-lēk). Vox angelica. v. céleste (sā-lēst), F. "Celestial voice," a stop formed of two dulcianas, one slightly sharp, thus giving a vibrato. v. de poitrine (dū pwā-trēn), F. Chest voice. v. de tête (dū tēt). Head voice, falsetto voice. v. glapissante (glā-pē-sānt). A shrill voice. v. grêle (vwā grēl). A sharp, thin voice. v. humaine (ū-mēn). Vox humana.

vokal (fō-kāl'), G. Vocal. V-stil (shtēl). Vocal style.

volante (vō-lān-tē), I. "Flying," light, swift.

volata (vo-lā'-tā), I., Volate (vō-lā'-te), G., volatine (vō-lā-tēn), F. "Flight," run, rapid series of notes. volatina (vō-lā-tē'-nā), I. A little volata.

volée (vō-lā), F. A volata.

Volk (fōlk), G. Folk; of the common people. V. gesang (fōlk' gē-zāng). V. s-lied (slēt), V. stückchen (stük'-kh'n), V. sweise. Folk-song or folk-music. im Volkston' or Volkswaise. In folk-tone or style. volkst(h)ümliches (tüm-līkh-ēs). Lied. Popular folk-song.

voll (fōl), G. 1. Full; mit vollem Werk, Chore, Orchester, with the full organ, chorus or orchestra. völler (fēl'-lēr). Fuller, louder. volles Werk (fōl'-lēs vār). Full organ. Voll-gesang. Chorus. vollgriffig (grīf-fīkh). "Full-handed," with full chords. vollkom'men. Perfect, complete. vollstimmig. Full-toned, full-voiced. Vollstimmigkeit. Fullness of tone. volltönend, G. Sonorous. 2. As a suffix = full, as gedankenvoll. Thoughtful.

volonté (vō-lōn-tā), F. Will, pleasure. à v. At will.

volta (vōl'-tā), I. 1. Time. 2. A kind of galliard. prima v. (prē-mā). First time. una v. One. due volte. Twice.

voltare (völ-tä'-rě), I. To turn, to turn over.

volte (völ'-tě, I.; in F. völt). 1. An obsolete bounding dance in 3-4 time resembling the galliard. 2. Pl. of VOLTA.

volteggiando (völ-těd-jän'-dō), I. Crossing the hands. volteggiare. To cross hands.

volti (völ'-tě), I. Turn over. v. subito. Turn quickly.

volubilità (vō-loo-bē-lī-tä'), I. Volubility. volubilmen'te. Fluently.

vol'ume. Quality of tone.

vol'untary. 1. An introductory organ-piece often extemporaneous. 2. An introductory anthem. 3. A species of toccata in two or three movements.

volver a la misma cancion (völ-vār ä lä mēs'-mä kăn'-thī-ōn), Sp. To return to the same (original) air.

- waste-pallet. Vide VALVE.
- water music. Handel's name for certain airs, performed on the water, for the King.
- water-organ. Hydraulic organ.
- wayghtes. Old E. Waits.
- Web'er chronom'eter. Metronome, inv. by Weber. A cord divided into five inch-spaces, with a weight at the lower end. Abbr. Web. Chron.
- Wechsel (vēkh'-sēl), G. Change. W-chor (kōr). Alternate choir. W-gesang. Antiphonal song. W-note (nō'-tē). Changing note.
- Wehmuth (vā'-moot), G. Sadness. wehmüthig (vā'-mü-tīkh). Sad, sorrowful.
- Weiberstimme (vī'-bēr-shtīm'-mē), G. A female voice.
- weich (vīkh), G. 1. Soft. 2. Minor.
- weight of wind. Vide INCH.
- Weihnachtslied (vī'-nākhts-lēt), G. Christmas hymn.
- weinend (vī'-nēnt), G. Weeping.
- Weise (vī'-zē), G. 1. Melody. 2. Manner; as a suffix = -wise.
- weisse Note (vīs'-sē nō'-tē), G. "White" note; half or whole note.
- weit (vīt), G. Dispersed, open (of harmony).
- Welle (vēl'-lē), G. Roller of an organ.
- Wellatur (toor'). Roller-system.
- Wel'enbrett. Roller-board.
- well-tempered. In equal temperament, as in Bach's "Well-tempered Clavichord," a series of clavichord pieces ranging through all the keys. Vide TEMPERAMENT.
- Welsh-harp. Vide HARP.
- weltlich (vēlt'-līkh), G. Secular.
- wenig (vā'-nīkh), G. Little. ein wenig. A little, rather.
- Werk (vērk), G. 1. Work. 2. Movement. 3. Action. Vide HAUPTWERK and OBERWERK. 4. A stop. 5. The set of stops belonging to one keyboard.
- Wert(h) (vērt), G. Value, duration.
- wesentlich (vā'-zēnt-līkh), G. Essential. wesentliche Dissonanz. A dissonant chord-tone, opposed to passing-note. wesentliche Septime. Dominant seventh.
- Wetter-harfe (vēt'-tēr-hār-fē), G. "Weather-harp." Æolian harp.
- Wettgesang (vēt'-gē-zāng), G. A singing-match.
- wheel. Refrain, burden.
- whiffler. A fifer.
- whipping bow. A swift and violent violin attack.
- whistle. A small, shrill wind-instr. blown at the end, like an old English flute.
- whole note, rest, shift, step, tone, etc. Vide the NOUNS.
- wie (vē), G. As. wie aus der Ferne. As from a distance. wie oben. Again as above. wie vorher (fōr-hār). As before.
- wieder (vē'-dēr), G. Again. W-gabe (gā'-bē). Performance. W-herstellungszzeichen (tsī'-khēn). The natural sign (h). w-anfangen. To begin again. W-holung (hō-loongk). Repetition. W-holungszzeichen. Sign of repetition. W-klang (klāng), W-schall (shāl). Echo.
- Wiegenlied (vē'-gēn-lēt), G. Cradle-song.
- wild (vēlt), G. Wild.
- wind (wind). To blow, as a horn.
- Wind (in G. vīnt). Air. w. band. 1. A band of wind-instrs. 2. The instrs. or the music for them. wind-chest. Vide ORGAN. w. instruments. A general name for all instrs. whose tone is produced by the breath or by bellows. wind-trunk. A passage conveying air from the bellows to the wind-chest. Windmesser (mēs-sēr), G., wind-gauge. Vide INCH. W-harfe, G. Æolian harp. Windlade (lā-dē), G. Wind-chest. Vide ORGAN. Windstock (shtōk), G. Cover of organ-pipes. Windzunge (tsoong-ē), G. Tongue of a pipe. W-harmō'nika, G. Æolodion.
- winselig (vīn'-zē-līkh), G. Plaintive. Winselstimme. Plaintive voice.
- Wirbel (vēr'-bēl), G. 1. Peg (of a violin). Wirbelkasten. Peg-box. 2. Stopper of a pipe. 3. Drum-stick. 4. Roll (on a drum). Wirbeltanz (tänts). A whirling dance.

wogend (vō'-gēnt), G. Waving.
wohl (vōl), G. Well. Wohlklang (vōl'-klāng), Wohllaut (lowt). Harmony. wohlklingend. Harmonious. wohltemperi(e)rt (vōl-tēm-pē-rērt'), G. "Well-tempered" (q.v.).
Wolf (in G. vōlf). 1. The disagreeable snarling of two pipes not quite in perfect tune. 2. Vide TEMPERAMENT. 3. In bow-instr. the roughness of certain tones due to faulty workmanship. 4. Vide ORGELWOLF. 5. The 12th and most troublesome of the circle of fifths. Vide TEMPERAMENT.
wood-wind. 1. The whole group of wooden instrs. in the orchestra. 2. Organ-stops of wood.
working-out. Development. Vide FORM.
Wortklang (vōrt'-klāng), G. Accent, tone.
wrest. A tuning-hammer. wrestpins. In a piano movable pins round which one end of the string is wound; by turning this the instr. is tuned.
wrestplank. A plank of several layers of wood in which the wrestpins are driven.
wristguide. Vide CHIROPAST. wuchtig (vookh'tikh). Weighty, emphatic.
Würde (vūr'-dē), G. Dignity. würdevoll, würdig (vūr'-dīkh). Dignified.
Wut(h) (voot), G. Madness. wüthend (vū'-tēnt), wüthig (tikh). Furious.

X

Xenophika (ksān'-ōr-fī-kā), G. A piano-violin with a bow to each string, inv. by Röllig, 1797; he also inv. the somewhat similar orphika.
xylopharmō'nica or -con, Gr. Utro's improvement in 1810 upon his xylo-siston, inv. 1807; a euphonion with wooden, instead of glass, rods.
Xyloorganon (ksēl'-ōr'-gā-nōn), Gr. Xylophone.
xylophone (zīl'-ō-fōn). A graduated series of bars of wood upon bands of straw or cord, played with wooden mallets, compass 2 octaves.

Y

Yabal (yā'-bāl), Heb. Trumpet blast.
yang kin. A Chinese dulcimer with brass strings.

yo. Indian flute.
yo'del, yod'ler. Vide JODEL, JODLER. yue'kin. Chinese guitar.

Z

Za (zā). Formerly applied by the French to B $\flat$  to distinguish it from B $\sharp$  or S $\sharp$ .
zahlen (tsā'-lēn), G. To count. zähle. "Count!" Zahlzeit (tsit). A count.
zaleo (thā-lā'-ō), Sp. Vide JALEO. zampogna (tsām-pōn'-yā), zampugna (poon'-ya), I. 1. Ancient bagpipe. 2. A shawm. Vide CORNAMUSA and CHALUMEAU. zampognare (pōn-yā'-rē). To play the pipes. zampognato're. A piper. zampognet'ta or -ina (pōn-yē'-nā). A small bagpipe.
za'ner. Egyptian bassoon.
zanze. Vide AMBIRA.
zapateado (thā-pā-tā'-ā-dhō), Sp. A dance whose rhythm is emphasised by stamping the heel.
Zapfenstreich (tsā'-pfēn-strikh), G. The tattoo.
zarabanda (thā-rā-bān'-dhā), Sp. Saraband.
zaramel'la (tsā-rā-), I. Rustic double-reed pipe with bell-mouth.
Zargen (tsār'-khēn), G., pl. Sides of violin, etc.
zart (tsärt), G., zärtlich (tsärt-likh). Tender, delicate. mit zarten Stimmen, with delicate stops. Zartflöte. A very soft 4-foot flute-stop.
zarzuela (thār-thoo-ā'-lä), Sp. A 2-act drama with music, something like the vaudeville; originating in the 17th century at the royal castle Zarzuela.
Zauber (tsow'-bēr), G. Magic. Z-lied (lēt). Magic song.

ACOUSTICS

BY J. S. SHEDLOCK

THE TERM Acoustics is derived from a Greek verb signifying to hear, and the science of acoustics tells us about the production and propagation, also the comparison, of sounds. When a pianoforte string is struck by a hammer or a violin string by a bow, it trembles, sways to and fro and thus sets the surrounding air into successive condensation and rarefaction, producing a wave as a light breeze sets a corn-field waving; so we speak of waving air, or waves of air. These waves strike the ear and their motion is passed on to the brain and becomes what is called sound; but by what wonderful process one changes into the other does not concern us here. ¶When the swaying to and fro of the particles of an elastic body is steady and sufficiently rapid, a musical sound results, otherwise, only noise. The word sound indeed is generally understood to mean a musical one, hence sound is contrasted with noise. We speak of the noise of thunder or of battle, but of the sound of an instrument or of the human voice. Nature frequently offers a mixture of sound and noise, as in a waterfall, in which sometimes the one, sometimes the other, predominates. ¶Vibration is the name given to the swaying to and fro of the particles of an elastic body, and of this motion the clock pendulum gives a clear and simple idea. The particles only sway but the motion is passed on. When a glass ball is pushed against one end of a row of glass balls touching one another, the ball at the other end flies off. The motion of the first ball has been passed on from ball to ball until it has reached the extreme one. Vibrations when steady and sufficiently rapid produce sounds which may be higher or lower, and the higher the sound the greater the number of swayings to and fro, or vibrations, within a given time. There are two special instruments by means of which air-vibrations can be easily counted: one is Savart's toothed wheel, the other the Siren. When one sound is higher than another, it is said to be of higher pitch; when lower, of lower pitch. The shorter a string, the higher its pitch. If a violinist, setting one of the strings of his instrument in motion by means of the bow, slides his finger along that string toward the bridge, the sound will become continually of higher pitch: for the string is gradually shortened, the ever-increasing portion behind the finger being cut off from the vibratory movement caused by the bow. There is, therefore, a topsy-turvy connection between the number of vibrations produced by a string, and the length of that string. ¶Vibration can be felt if a glass jar over which a bow has been drawn is touched lightly with the finger. Vibration can be seen when the string of a piano or violin is struck by a hammer or bow. Vibration can be shown by attaching a strip of sheet copper tapering to a point to one of the prongs of a tuning-fork. If the latter be set in motion, and the copper point be placed on a piece of smoked glass, it will give the exact record of the exact swaying to and fro of the fork. ¶Strings such as are used in the pianoforte and violin when set in motion would of themselves create very faint sound-waves. The sound has to be strengthened. In the pianoforte the motion is not communicated directly to the air, but first to a massive sound-board. In a violin the little sound-post plays an important part in passing on the vibrations from the string to the back of the instrument. The strengthening of tone by such means is apt to be overlooked. ¶Particles of air when set in motion by a vibrating body first move from their point of rest to a certain distance and then back through the point of rest to a similar distance in an opposite direction; the distance between these extreme points is the extent, or as it is named, the amplitude of the vibration. As the vibrating body returns to a state of rest, that distance gradually diminishes and finally vanishes, just as it does when, the chain giving out, the clock pendulum slows down and finally stops. The degree of loudness or softness of a sound depends on the extent or amplitude of the vibration, the wider the one the louder the other. Sound travels at freezing temperature at the rate of 1090 feet per second; with increase of temperature there is increase of velocity, for the air thus becomes more elastic. Sound travels faster in water than in air because the former is more elastic. The degree of closeness of the particles of the medium, air, water, gases of different kinds, through which sound travels has also an influence on velocity. ¶Sound diminishes in intensity according to the distance. Throw a stone into a pond and see how the expanding waves become feebler and feebler in proportion as they are distant from the spot which generated them. So it is with sound-waves. Intensity varies inversely as the square of the distance, i.e., if a sound is heard twenty feet away from the instrument producing it, at forty feet, twice the distance, it will only be a quarter as loud: the square of 2 = 4, and the relationship of the two sounds is as one to four, or  $\frac{1}{4}$ . This is of course theory; in practice sound is mostly intensified in various ways so that it does not lose its strength at this exact rate. ¶A string set in motion, that is into a state of vibration, produces a note higher or lower according to its length. That note, however, is not a simple sound, but one made up of many sounds. For in addition to the whole string vibrating, it divides into two, three, four, and indeed into many portions, all of which vibrate in themselves at the same time that the whole string is vibrating. And these portions being shorter give out higher sounds than that of the whole string, and they bear themselves the self-evident name of overtones. They are also called upper partials because they are higher sounds produced by parts of the string. The swaying to and fro of these parts is not so great as that of the whole string, therefore the sounds they produce are fainter. The halves give a louder sound than the thirds, the thirds than the quarters and so on. All these sounds mix so thoroughly together as to give the impression of one simple sound, and it is upon their order and number, which differ in different instruments, that quality of tone depends. Here are the first eleven notes of such a compound sound—they can be heard and analysed by pressing the “loud” pedal of a pianoforte, striking the low c indicated and listening intently and long. Out of the overtones which are repeated we secure easily the simplest of all chords in harmony. ¶If the key of the lowest note  is pressed down on a pianoforte without producing any sound, and so held, then if the above chord is struck sharply, the fingers after the blow being instantly removed from the keys, then that chord will continue to sound, although the strings which produced it have ceased to vibrate. Portions of the string of the lowest note have been set swaying to and fro, for the key pressed down removing the damper from its string left it free to vibrate. These portions vibrate by what is called sympathetic attraction. Repeat the experiment, but immediately after the chord has been struck, raise the key of the lowest note, and the chord is no longer heard. ¶It has already been stated that by means of certain instruments the numbers of vibrations of sounds can be counted, and they can therefore also be compared. Of any two notes an octave apart the upper one has twice as many vibrations as the lower. Of any two notes a perfect fifth apart the relationship between upper and lower is as 3 to 2. Of any two notes a major third apart as 5 to 4, and a minor third as 6 to 5. We see then that the perfect consonances, the 8th, 5th, and 4th, have the simplest relationship, 2 to 1, 3 to 2, 4 to 3. Next in order come the imperfect consonances, the major and minor thirds, 5 to 4, and 6 to 5; in no case is a higher figure than 6 required. From these relationships the major diatonic scale can easily be constructed, and then if the relationships between each note of the scale and the succeeding one be taken, it will be found that the intervals between c and d, f and g, a and b are equal, that d to e and g to a are slightly smaller and that e to f and b to c are alike. The former are called tones, either major or minor, and the last two semitones. (See Dictionary entry, page 548.)

ALTERED CHORDS

BY CHARLES W. PEARCE

A CHORD originally formed by a combination of notes belonging to the Diatonic Scale of any key can be chromatically altered by the addition of an accidental #, b, or ♮, to one or more of its intervals. A chord ceases to be chromatic when it induces modulation: being then a diatonic chord in the new key. In modern harmony, the combinational tendency of the Diatonic Scale is to arrange itself in a perpendicular series of thirds above the 5th degree or dominant of the scale, according to this formula: ¶Reckoned from the lower note (or root) the intervals are: 1. Major 3d; 2. Perfect 5th; 3. Minor 7th; 4. Major (or minor) 9th; 5. Eleventh (compound 4th); 6. Major (or minor) 13th (compound 6th). ¶Thus the first sign of chromatic alteration is the interchangeability of the major and minor 3d and 6th of the scale. The harmonic formula shown in Fig. 1 can be built up on the dominant notes of the two adjacent keys (viz.: those keys having one sharp or one flat more or less than the signature of the tonic key). And as these additional formulæ can be used in the tonic key without modulation to either of its adjacent keys, their roots are conveniently called supertonic and tonic to show their relationship to the scale of the tonic. ¶The supertonic root is dominant of the next sharp key. ¶The tonic root is dominant of the next flat key. ¶In the supertonic formula the necessary major 3d of the root (1 of the series) is an invariable chromatic alteration. The interchangeability of the major and minor 3d of the scale (4 of the series) is a confirmation of No. 6 of the Dominant formula (Fig. 1). The interchangeability of the major and minor 7th of the scale (6 of the series) is the characteristic chromatic alteration of the supertonic formula. ¶In the tonic formula the necessary minor 7th of the root (3 of the series) is an invariable chromatic alteration. The interchangeability of the major and minor 6th of the scale (6 of the series) is a confirmation of No. 4 of the Dominant formula (Fig. 1). The interchangeability of the major and minor 2d of the scale (4 of the series) is the characteristic chromatic alteration of the tonic formula. ¶From the harmonic formulæ shown in Figs. 1, 2, 3, the chromatic scale is derived. This chromatic scale is the same for both major and minor keys having the same tonic; but the difference of key signature induces changes in the number of accidentals used. Compare Figs. 4 and 5. ¶With the introduction of the

FIG. 1.—The small black notes indicate those intervals above the Dominant which are most susceptible of chromatic alteration.

FIG. 4—Signature of C Major

FIG. 5—Signature of C Minor chromatic element into harmony, the absolute distinction of major and minor disappears, and the key tonality becomes one. ¶To facilitate the notational convenience of the chromatic element in harmony, the enharmonic equivalents of several degrees of the chromatic scale are freely admitted. ¶Chromatic alteration is chiefly observable in triads and in chords of the seventh with their inversions. ¶Fig. 6 shows the triads on the seven degrees of the diatonic scale. Fig. 7 shows how these triads may be chromatically altered in the same key without necessitating modulation to any other key. ¶Of these Nos. 1, 4, 18, 19, and 28, show an enharmonic substitution of C sharp for D flat; Nos. 4, 5, 11, 22, and 25 have G sharp instead of A flat; Nos. 10, 21, 25, and 34 have D sharp for E flat; Nos. 3 and 15 have G flat for F sharp; and No. 30 has C flat for B. It may also be remarked that Nos. 30 and 15 are the only triads of the series which have all three of their notes altered from the notation of the diatonic scale of C; but it will be observed that in No. 30 two of these altered notes (A flat and E flat) are the notes shown in Fig. 1 to be those first susceptible of chromatic alteration in the key of E; and in No. 15 two of the altered notes belong to the super-tonic formula shown in Fig. 2. A glance at Fig. 7 is sufficient to show that "enharmonic substitution" is only made use of in modern music in order to throw the altered chords into an easily recognisable harmonic shape such as triads or sevenths (or their inversions). ¶Distinguishing names of a purely fanciful character have been given to the first inversions of several of the chords in Fig. 7 (see Fig. 8). ¶One other triad containing three altered notes remains to be shown—this can be written either as the major triad of the flattened dominant or its enharmonic equivalent, the sharpened subdominant of the key, as in Fig. 9. ¶Fig. 9 exemplifies also the ordinary treatment of chro-

FIG. 8

FIG. 9

matically altered triads, viz.: they are usually followed by some form of dominant harmony. ¶The chords of the seventh built on the seven degrees of the diatonic scale (see Fig. 10) may (like the triads in Fig. 6) undergo chromatic alteration. ¶A chromatic alteration of Fig. 10, I, III, V, VII, has already

FIG. 10

that a chord of the seventh may consist of the following different series of intervals from the bass: ¶I, and II, Major 3d: Perfect 5th: Minor 7th; III, and IV, Minor 3d: Dim. 5th: Minor 7th; V, Minor 3d: Perfect 5th: Minor 7th; VII, Major 3d: Perfect 5th: Major 7th. ¶A further reference to Figs. 1, 2, and 3, shows that the harmonic superposition of three minor 3ds one above the other—that familiar combination of notes known as the chord of the Diminished 7th—is possible over every note of the unaltered Diatonic Scale by chromatic or enharmonic alteration without necessitating modulation. ¶Accordingly

each note of the Diatonic Scale may bear the chromatic alteration of its own chord of the 7th as shown in Fig. 13. ¶And with the chromatic alteration

(Fig. 14) of the root itself the permutations are almost endless. ¶It only remains to give the distinguishing names which have been fancifully applied to one or two of the chromatically altered chords of the 7th in an inverted shape.

¶Of these (1) is the second inversion of VII in Fig. 10, with the sixth of its bass chromatically raised. (2) is the second inversion of II in Fig. 11 with its bass chromatically lowered. (3) is the second inversion of V in Fig. 10, with its bass chromatically lowered. (4) is the first inversion of II in Fig. 10 with its root chromatically raised. (5) and (6) are respectively chromatic alterations of the first inversions of IV in Fig. 11, and VII in Fig. 12. ¶It will be observed that the distinguishing feature of the chords in Fig. 14 is the interval of the Augmented 6th. In the usual resolution of such chords, care should be taken to let the two notes forming the Augmented 6th proceed outwardly, each by step of a semitone.

THE CONDUCTOR AND HIS ART

BY DEEMS TAYLOR

THE SYMPHONY CONDUCTOR, as we know him, is a comparatively modern invention. In the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries he was little more than a time-beater, dividing his time between filling in the harmony at the harpsichord and keeping the players together by waving a roll of music or a violin bow, or pounding on the floor with a cane. Even as late as Beethoven's time he did little more than indicate entrances and mark the tempo. A contemporary performance of a Beethoven symphony must have been distinguished by the almost complete absence of two of the qualities that we of to-day expect as a matter of course to find in a satisfactory orchestral performance: dynamics and variations in instrumental tone colour. ¶Even in our times there have been serious attempts to do without him. Only ten years ago a group of New York instrumentalists organised an orchestra, rehearsed, and gave a concert without any conductor at all. The attitude of the average lay listener seems to vacillate between worshipping him as the creator and sole source of the music and regarding him tolerantly as a more or less superfluous ornament, someone placed on the podium to entertain the audience with a display of calisthenic agility. It is, therefore, decidedly worth while discussing just what his functions are. He certainly did not write the music that the orchestra is playing, and he is certainly not playing it. Just what does he do? What qualities must he possess, what are his duties, and what are his responsibilities? ¶There is one quality that he must possess, first of all. He may possess it without being a good conductor, but he will never be a good conductor if he does not possess it. And that is the intangible thing that we call leadership, the faculty of being able to impress other people with his authority and knowledge, and to induce their minds and bodies to obey his will. He must not only know his business, but he must be able to make the members of the orchestra believe that he does. If he cannot do that, no orchestra will ever play well for him. For on his relations with the players depend the morale, the esprit de corps, the team-work of the orchestra as a whole. ¶Second, he must know the technique of conducting. No two conductors beat time exactly alike, but all conductors do describe certain definite patterns in the air with their hands or bâtons, do make certain gestures indicating shades of expression or entrance cues. These patterns and gestures must be sufficiently clear that any one of his players, reading notes with one eye and watching the conductor with the other, knows when he is to come in, when a bar begins, and when it ends. These signals of the conductor's, like the motions one makes when driving a car, must be so habitual and automatic that he doesn't have to think about them, and can leave his mind free to concentrate on the music. ¶Besides conducting technique, he must have enormous theoretical technique. He must be able to take a new orchestral score that he has never heard and by studying it analyse its structure, identify its themes and trace their development; determine the instrumental balance at any given moment; and determine the important instrumental entrances . . . all with the ease and surety with which a skilled architect or builder reads the blue-prints of a building that has not yet been erected. This score-reading must be done, of course, before rehearsals begin; for the players come in the expectation that he will tell them what to do. ¶He must not only be able to read new scores; he must be thoroughly familiar with the old ones. Just as there are traditional performances of the classic rôles in the drama, so there are traditional interpretations of the standard works in the orchestral repertoire. Take, for example, Beethoven's Fifth Symphony. During the 130 years that have elapsed since that work was first heard, there has grown up what might be called a "standard" performance of it. Generations of conductors have agreed that the various movements should be played at a certain speed, that certain passages be played a little louder or a little softer than they are marked, that certain other passages be hastened or retarded. Needless to say, virtually every conductor departs at times from that traditional performance (in fact, that is one of the reasons why we can tell them apart); but it is expected of any first-rate conductor that he be perfectly familiar with the traditional interpretation before he ventures to try out any different ideas of his own. The Beethoven Fifth is one of perhaps a hundred works with whose traditions he is expected to be familiar. ¶Our conductor must not only be a leader. He must be prepared to follow, as well, on occasion. . . . In other words, he must be a good accompanist. It is hard work to make an orchestra accompany any soloist. Only a player-piano or a record ever gives two identical performances of the same piece, and no matter how carefully a concerto or an aria may have been rehearsed, at the actual performance the conductor must have the alertness to anticipate the slightest variation in the soloist's playing or singing, and the skill to convey that variation instantly to a hundred men, most of whom can neither see nor hear the soloist. ¶He has many other duties and responsibilities. For one thing he is largely responsible for making up the programmes of his orchestra. Not only must the conductor determine the order of events on any musical programme, but he must determine the balance and proportion of his series as a whole. He must see to it that the season's programmes contain a sufficient number of the classics; otherwise half his audience will call him a wild-eyed radical: he must also play enough modern music to keep the other half from calling him a hide-bound conservative; and he must play enough new music to keep the critics from calling him a lazy-minded reactionary. It is this planning, by the way, that keeps conductors from having time heavy on their hands during the summer months. ¶In the actual performance of his programmes he is responsible for a number of things that we take for granted. He is at least one-half responsible for the quality of tone that his players produce. Naturally, if he has poor material he can do little about it; he can't make men play better than they can. But the fact that he has a superb body of instrumentalists at his command does not mean that they will invariably give their best unless he knows enough to ask for it. A wind instrument may play a fraction of a tone flat or sharp; and the player, with his ears full of the sound of the other instruments beside him, may be totally unconscious of the fact. It is the conductor who must hear the sour note and correct it. His string section has an infinite variety of tone colour at its command; but it is the conductor who must decide with what quality of string tone any given passage is to be played. ¶Aside from trying to make his orchestra play as beautifully as it can, the conductor has certain responsibilities that are fairly obvious to anyone, in other words, for the details of performance that we call the interpretation of a work. He must determine tempi and rhythms, the speed at which any portion of the work is to be taken, and the degree to which its rhythms are to be accentuated. Incidentally, it is in speed that conductors tend to vary most widely. Superficially their performances may sound alike, but a difference in speed amounting to only a small fraction of a second in any one measure may assume rather impressive proportions in a work that is four or five hundred measures long. I have known two great conductors to vary as much as six or seven minutes in their playing of the same symphony. Also, I have heard a semi-amateur orchestra, under not quite so great a conductor, take an hour and eight minutes to play Dvořák's "From the New World" symphony, the regulation playing time of which is some forty-odd minutes. ¶Dynamics are another great responsibility of the conductor, and dynamics, not just in the simple sense of playing loudly or softly—the players could manage that by themselves fairly well if they watched the markings on the music—but in the sense of how loudly and how softly at any given moment. One of the things that distinguishes a great conductor is his sense of climax, his power of leading the music up to one high peak of volume and then drawing gradually away from it. Now in his performance of any given work you would probably find, if you had a machine for measuring and recording volume of sound, that there is one point at which the intensity of the sound of the orchestra is greater than at any other. There is a legend that in one of Schumann's symphonies there is a passage marked "forte possibile" . . . "as loudly as possible"; and that four bars later the composer has written "crescendo" . . . "louder." Now I've never tracked that passage down, and it may not exist; but it does illustrate a situation in which any conductor may find himself if he is not careful . . . that of having fired off all his orchestral ammunition on one climax, only to find that another, greater climax, is expected of him later on. Therefore, in general, even though a work may contain five passages for full orchestra, all labelled, "fortissimo," the skilful conductor generally selects one fortissimo to be louder than any of the others. To be able to do this he must be tremendously sensitive to slight variations in tonal volume. He must carry in his mind a sound-picture, so to speak, of the climax that he wants long before he gets to it; in addition he must manage to get the orchestra to give him plenty of volume in the lesser climaxes, and still keep the players from getting overenthusiastic and anticipating his effect. The same problem, naturally, is involved in the playing of quiet passages. It all sounds complicated, and it is complicated; and only a first-rate conductor can do it. ¶Having determined at least some of the things for which a conductor must be responsible, I have still to answer one fundamental question: Is the conductor essential at an actual performance? He is, of course. The orchestra may have mastered the minutest details of the performance at the rehearsals. Nevertheless, when they come out on the platform, the players are still dependent upon the conductor in many ways. To begin with, somebody has to start and stop them; and the conductor is the logical man to do that. In the second place, they depend on him for the important entrance cues. The first oboe may be perfectly capable, theoretically, of counting thirty-seven bars' rest and then coming in, on the precise beat of the bar, with a difficult solo. But it's one thing to be able to do that, unassisted, and quite another to have to do it, knowing that a false entry may ruin the whole performance. It makes a very real difference in the quality of any player's performance to know that he can rely upon the conductor to give him the nod or gesture that will bring him in at the proper time, leaving his mind free to concentrate on his playing, without having to worry about bars. Furthermore, no matter how great the orchestra, or how thoroughly it has been rehearsed, it is impossible for the players to memorise every detail of any one performance. The number of concerts in a season is so great, the orchestral literature is so enormous, that the instrumentalists are bound to forget almost as speedily as they learn. They must be reminded of what they know. The gestures that you see the conductor make when he stands on the platform are those that he made at the rehearsals; they serve, as I say, as a reminder to the players of what he has taught them. Without him, the orchestra might play the notes; but it would fail to give you a thousand subtleties that the conductor, and the conductor alone, can evoke. ¶Incidentally, one of the qualities of a conductor to which the audience is likely to pay great attention is of no importance at all; and that is the grace or awkwardness of his gestures, the way he handles his body; in general, what are known as his platform mannerisms. Only the audience cares about those. All the orchestra asks is, "Is his beat clear, and does he know how to get what he wants?" Unfortunately, this being something less than a perfect world, a certain number out of any audience are likely to watch the conductor instead of listening to him, to judge a performance on the merits of the conductor's back instead of on the playing of his men. As a matter of fact, it is difficult not to do so. There have been times when I, too, have been fooled by an authoritative pair of scapulae! (See Dictionary of Terms entry, page 577.)

COUNTERPOINT

BY HOMER A. NORRIS

THE ART of combining melodies is called counterpoint. When a pianist "plays 'Old Hundred' in one hand, and 'Yankee Doodle' in the other" he illustrates the contrapuntal idea. Weingartner's arrangement of Weber's

The image displays four systems of musical notation, each consisting of a treble and bass staff joined by a brace. The first two systems show a melody in the treble staff and a bass line in the bass staff. The third system is labeled "Inversion of above example" and shows the treble staff with the bass line from the previous system, and the bass staff with the melody from the previous system. The fourth system shows another variation of the counterpoint. The notation includes various note values, rests, and bar lines, illustrating the concept of counterpoint through melodic inversion and combination.

"Invitation to the Dance" represents most ingenious counterpoint. In strict (plain, simple) counterpoint, no combination of notes representing more than three sounds is allowed; no dissonances except passing notes; no chromatics. ¶Counterpoint is double when it may be correctly used either as an upper, or a lower part; i.e., when it admits of double employment. Double counterpoint may be so written as to invert in the 8th, 9th, 12th, or any other interval. The foregoing is an example of double counterpoint. ¶Within the confines of strict counterpoint ecclesiastical music reached its loftiest expression through Palestrina, in about 1600. ¶In modern harmony chords may be built up of three, four, five, and even more different sounds. When the contrapuntal idea is applied to modern harmony, the result is called free counterpoint. Free counterpoint is simply a contrapuntal manipulation of modern harmony, as opposed to strict counterpoint which is limited to chords of three sounds. Bach re-established the counterpoint of Palestrina on the modern harmonic bass. In his fugues the contrapuntal, or polyphonic, idea is found in its most perfect form. ¶The very essence of Wagner's music is counterpoint. When the melodies of "Die Meistersinger" are brought together in the overture it is modern counterpoint; not an end in itself, but as a means to direct, emotional expression. ¶So from out this old counterpoint has come a new, which to-day permeates all music. Neither Brahms nor Richard Strauss could exist but for the industry of those early savants, who, piling notes upon notes, laid a foundation for the cathedral of music which has risen majestically under Bach, Handel, Mozart, Beethoven, Brahms, and Wagner. It is modern counterpoint, counterpoint with a soul in it, which distinguishes all great work to-day and stamps it for posterity. (See Dictionary of Terms entry, page 579.)

THE ELECTRIC ORGAN

BY RUDOLPH GANZ

THE ELECTRIC ORGAN, invented by Laurens Hammond, is a striking example of contemporary improvement upon an instrument of great antiquity, and of decided value in the progress of music as an art. It furnishes an individual flavour to the modern ensemble, and it is gradually replacing, for home use and as an orchestral voice, and in many churches, its staid and orthodox predecessor, because it is an instrument instead of a structure, and can be installed with comparative ease and economy. ¶As to the peculiar facility of tone which enables the electric organ to take its place in the modern orchestra as a distinctive voice of undeniable beauty, I can say with the authority of long experience that I believe it has come to stay. ¶Let us look into the past of the organ, that we may understand why the electric organ is an adaptation, rather than an ultimate expression, of the original instrument. In the first place, let us disregard at once a vague but popular idea that the organ was first conceived as an orchestra and choir compressed within a single unit. This idea, of course, is absurd. ¶"The first instrument used in art music," says W. J. Henderson in The Story of Music, "was the organ." He explains that, as it was first employed in the church, "it came under the consideration of the only musical scholars of the Middle Ages. ¶"The best organist of our time would not know what to do.

with one of those early cathedral thunderers. According to the historian Wulstan, who wrote in 951, an organ built in Winchester Cathedral had 400 pipes and thirteen pairs of bellows, requiring seventy blowers. ¶“This instrument sounded but ten tones and was built simply to make as big a noise as possible. Only one note at a time was played on these organs, and that had to be pressed down with the fist or elbow. As long as only a plain chant was required, this system answered well enough; but when harmony was invented, the cumbersome organ could not double the newly-arranged voice parts. The mechanism of the organ, therefore, began to improve in answer to the demands of the music of the church.” ¶These crudities of an early beginning evidently had given way to a vast improvement by the time of Bach, for the organ was the instrument upon which Bach performed some of his greatest works. Dr. Spitta gives the following account of Bach’s organ at Arnstadt: ¶“The organ was splendidly constructed, all the diapasons being seven-ounce tin, the gedackt also being of metal, instead of wood, as was more usual. The character of the ‘Brust-Positiv’ must, indeed, have been somewhat shrill, owing to the preponderance of four-foot stops; and it was only by using all the stops in combination that even a moderately good effect could be produced; nor was there on the pedals any deep stop of moderate strength, still the ‘Hauptwerk’ was well arranged.” ¶The Oberwerk, or upper manual, had twelve stops; the Brust-Positiv, or choir, seven; and the pedals, five; in addition to the coupler. This organ existed until 1863. A new one was then erected as a memorial to Bach, but as many of the old stops as were available were retained. ¶The origin of the organ, second only to the reed instruments in antiquity, supposedly was Roman. The ancient antecedent of the organ apparently was that group of loosely related reeds known as the Pipes of Pan, consisting of a series of hollow reeds of different lengths fastened together, and played by blowing each tube separately. ¶“Of the many Roman instruments,” writes Marion Bauer, “the organ, because of its importance in later Christian music, interests us more than all the others. ¶“There had been evidence of the water-aulos (hydraulos) in the writings of Philo of Alexandria (200 B.C.) who credited Ctesibus, engineer, with the invention; of Vitruvius, writer on architecture in Augustus’ reign and of Hero of Alexandria. This evidence was not substantiated until 1885, when a pottery model made by Possessor in 100 A.D. was found. A complete description of this organ is given in Stanford & Forsythe’s A History of Music. ¶“The Romans, however, had a pneumatic as well as a water organ. Primitive types persisted until our own era. They used them in portable forms for their revels and coarse and gaudy circuses. For this reason, the early Christians and many later Christian societies banned the organ, as well as other instruments, as pagan and profane.” ¶Keys were first introduced into the organ toward the end of the eleventh century; at first 16, later 22. The large keys were so stiff and clumsy that they had to be pressed down with the fist. The addition of foot-pedals added materially to the musical resources of the organ. The addition of stops to imitate various orchestral instruments, and the invention of the swell to increase or diminish the sound, came in the seventeenth century. The first American-built organ was erected in Trinity Church, New York, in 1737. ¶My purpose in thus alluding to the past of the organ is to bring forward a proper consideration of the electric organ as a new instrument; “adapted” from the organ itself, yet possessing certain definite powers which must be regarded as individual and capable of further development. ¶The musical world is indebted to Laurens Hammond for a pioneer effort in the direction of the electric organ, adopting a principle of electric vibration hitherto ignored in the production of pitched tone. ¶The Hammond organ is designed specifically for the home, and amateur use; for the orchestra, and professional use. It has a greater tonal range than most cathedral organs, is instantaneous in action, perfect in pitch—all in a space smaller than a baby grand piano. ¶The tonal pitch of this instrument cannot vary; humidity and temperature do not affect it; it consumes current at the average rate of one cent an hour; and I am told more than 253,000,000 tones are available; its volume is unlimited. ¶Creation of tone depends upon amplification of electrical impulses into sound waves. The impulse is generated by tone-wheels about the size of a silver dollar, which revolve at constant speed close to small magnets, each with a coil wound at one end. They are, in effect, tiny rotating electric generators. ¶On the rim of each tone-wheel is a series of protrusions, regularly spaced, similar to teeth in a gear. As the wheel rotates, these high spots regularly disturb the magnetic field and a tiny electric current is induced in the coil. ¶For instance, one tone-wheel is so constructed that the ridges on the rim pass the magnet and coil at the rate of 440 per second. When the electric impulse created by the wheel is amplified and made audible the result is a simple tone with a frequency of 440 vibrations, Middle A in International Pitch. There is a separate tone-wheel for every frequency used. ¶Tone-wheels are geared together and are driven by a single constant-speed synchronous motor; each tone-wheel must revolve at its predetermined uniform speed. ¶As the entire process is electrical, the response to the depression of a key is instantaneous. In the traditional organ there is a noticeable lag of tone behind each key depression. For this reason music of rapid tempo, formerly impractical for the organ, can be played as readily as on a piano. ¶Variation of tone in this instrument is purely a matter of physics. The harmonic principle of the third and fifth of a single note vibrating in unison with the note itself forms a basic rule of construction for the Hammond. ¶Every complex musical tone consists of a fundamental tone plus a series of harmonic overtones of certain strengths relative to the fundamental. When the harmonics and their relative strengths are specified, the quality or timbre of the tone is specified. A change in the strength of any overtone will alter the quality of the whole tone. ¶The Hammond organ, instead of supplying pipes or reeds with fixed tones, supplies the simple tones which constitute the fixed tones, and the means for combining them. This is done through a series of nine draw-bars of eight strengths each, located above the top manual. Each draw-bar is a small strip on which are marked eight graduations or strengths, the full-closed bar giving a ninth position. One of these draw-bars governs the fundamental tone, and the other eight the overtones. ¶The degree to which each bar is pulled out determines the volume in which the overtone it governs is present in the tone produced when a key on the manual is depressed. Thus an almost inexhaustible variety of tone colours can be produced at the will of the player simply by varying the extent to which the bars are pulled out in relation to each other. Tone colours frequently used, such as the flute, French horn, diapason, full organ and others, can be set permanently on the organ and are brought into use simply by depressing a single pre-set key of which there are 11 located at the extreme left of the keyboard of each manual. Thus the organist has instantly available 22 ready mixed tones in addition to the facilities provided for creating new tone colours. ¶In considering the musical future of this instrument, one must realise that composers in the past usually utilised musical instruments offered on the market by the manufacturer, as Mr. Joseph Schillinger pointed out in a recent address before the League of Composers. "Richard Wagner had a desire to create new instruments," said Mr. Schillinger, "and they proved impractical. The parts he wrote for these instruments are seldom played to-day on the instruments that were specially constructed for them under his direction (contra-bass trombone and tenor tuba). ¶"The education of composers will not be complete," he added, "without the study of the physics of sound in relation to musical composition. . . . There has been a great deal of disappointment in the electrical instruments among the musicians and composers because they have always been trying to compare these instruments with the ones that are constructed on an entirely different principle and offer an entirely different group of characteristics." ¶But the electric organ is still in its infancy, employing entirely new principles and offering new opportunities which we can only realise by earnest application and sympathetic study. A myriad of effects are available to a performer of musical intelligence, one who is willing to study patiently the proper touch, attack and release, and bring into play the unending combinations of properly balanced tone for legitimate musical expression. As with all musical instruments, when degraded by misuse, this organ may be made ridiculous. However, when used in good taste by a competent and interested person, the instrument proves itself an artistic creation of distinction and dignity. ¶The Hammond organ, as it is now constituted, has great possibilities for outdoor use, in performance of the greater choral and orchestral works. Composers are realising its potential grandeur; conductors, myself included, are glad to use it as a sensitive and superior instrument, particularly as the organist is able to respond instantly to the indications of the bâton. I look forward to a time when the electric organ will have attained a state of development which will make it as necessary a part of contemporary musical life as the piano. ## FOLK-SONG

THE BEARING which Folk-music (i.e., Folk-song and Folk-dance) has on national schools of composition gives propriety to an attempt at accurate definition of the subject to which this article is devoted. Folk-song is not popular song in the sense in which the word is most frequently used, but the song of the folk; not only the song admired of the people but, in a strict sense, the song created by the people. It is a body of poetry and music which has come into existence without the influence of conscious art, as a spontaneous utterance, filled with characteristic expression of the feelings of a people. Such songs are marked by certain peculiarities of rhythm, form, and melody which are traceable, more or less clearly, to racial (or national) temperament, modes of life, climatic and political conditions, geographical environment and language. Some of these elements, the spiritual, are elusive, but others can be determined and classified. Peoples living in northern climates, for instance, are predisposed to the minor mode, which has melancholy for its most marked characteristic. Here the influence is generally climatic and geographical. But peoples living in cheerful and salubrious climes may also be dominated by gloom if they have long suffered under oppressive political and social conditions. ¶Both propositions are illustrated in the case of Russian Folk-song, which is overwhelmingly minor in spite of the fact that the Czar's empire extended over nearly thirty degrees of latitude and had a mean temperature varying from thirty-two degrees Fahrenheit at Archangel, to fifty-eight degrees in the Caucasus. It would seem to be a paradox, moreover, that heavy-hearted song should be paired almost universally with singularly boisterous and energetic dances; but the reason of this becomes plain when it is remembered that a measured and decorous mode of popular amusement is the general expression of equable popular life, while wild and desperate gayety is frequently the sign of reaction from suffering. There is a gayety of despair as well as of contentment and happiness. ¶Intervallic peculiarities are more difficult to explain than rhythmic, and may be said to be survivals of primitive artistic conditions. The modern scale was an evolution, not an inspiration, and the study of savage music discloses many rudimentary forms of it. The most idiomatic music of the Finns is confined to the first five tones of the minor scale, which was the compass of the ancient Finnish harp—the kantele. Old Irish and Scotch songs share the pentatonic scale (i.e., the modern diatonic scale omitting the fourth and seventh steps) with the popular music of China, Japan, and Siam. In the songs of the negro slaves of America, I have found the same scale, a major scale with a flat seventh and a minor scale with a raised sixth, to be predominant. César Cui mentions the prevalence in Russia of two major scales, one without the fourth, the other without the third and seventh. Hungarian melodies make frequent use of the interval called the augmented second, which compasses three semitones and is common to Oriental music. There is a hint in this of the origin of the Magyars, who are not Slavs, as is so commonly supposed, but Scythians; they belong to the Finno-Ungrian stock, and are more nearly related to the Turks than to their neighbours, the Poles and Russians. The profusion of ornament which characterises Hungarian music is an importation from the Orient by the Gypsies who, while the national musicians of Hungary, are nevertheless a Hindu people. ¶These facts, gathered at random from the vast but as yet unexplored storehouse of Folk-music, indicate the possibility of using the study as an aid in the determination of many things in ethnology and ethnography; for Folk-song elements have a marvellous tenacity of life. In the study of Folk-music, however, the purpose of the student should be primarily to discover and, if possible, account for the elements which differentiate the creations of one race, people, or tribe from those of another. This done it will be possible to explain and describe the distinguishing characteristics of the national schools of composition based upon Folk-song idioms, such as the Scandinavian, Russian, Polish, Bohemian, and Hungarian. ## FORM

A DEFINITION of Form would have this disadvantage: that it would convey absolutely nothing save to those who understood perfectly what the meaning is; and, further, it would occupy much more space than is here available. So instead of trying to reach a perfect definition, let us try what is a much better plan from the lay point of view—let us trace the growth of the mass of principles and their methods of application which are included in this one comprehensive term Form. ¶In the beginning, we may assume, music was without Form, though not always quite void. The savage tootled his melody, caring nothing about repeating phrases, nothing about middle sections, nothing about development. But in the earliest traditional melodies that come down to us we find the germ of all that is now known as Form. ¶In any collection of popular songs the reader will find examples built on the following plan:—first a strain is delivered; then another strain, in another key, is delivered; and finally the first strain is repeated, bringing the whole thing to a satisfactory close. Let us consider for a moment the inwardness of this arrangement. No one wants to sing only one strain and be done with it. To sing a second strain in the same key would prove tiresome, so a feeling of relief, of variety is produced when the thing is lengthened by the addition of a second strain in a new key. But to end in the new key would be quite unsatisfactory: it would be like breaking off in the middle of a sentence. So the first key is re-introduced and the whole song rounded off and made to end with a sense of perfect completeness by a repetition of the first strain in the first key. ¶From this simple example, then, we may infer the whole object of Form: it is to secure, whether in songs or in instrumental movements or in choruses, a piece of music sufficiently long and combining variety with unity. ¶Length, variety, and unity—to attain these is, so far as instrumental music, music without words, is concerned, the whole aim and object of Form. When once music is used in association with words, other than the simplest lyrics, other considerations enter. These we will touch upon later; let us for the present try to get as far as the first instrumental music written in anything approaching regular Form. Naturally this grew out of the polyphonic vocal music, which came before it. If we examine the old music, in a great deal of it we find nothing corresponding to Form as we understand the word to-day. A phrase is delivered by one voice. Let us call that phrase A; it may be two, four, or six bars, or indeed any length. After the first voice has sung it a second voice takes it up, while the first voice proceeds to a second theme or strain which we will call B—a third voice enters with A, the second takes up B, while the first proceeds to yet another new strain, C. Roughly, this is the way in which whole movements are spun out. The modulations are more or less haphazard and dictated entirely by the composer's desire to achieve expression: there is nothing done in obedience to any rule. The first instrumental pieces are built after this plan. ¶These pieces may be compared to the harmless amoeba, the tiny speck of protoplasm which swims about, sans eyes, ears, mouth or limbs: simply a shapeless bit of life capable of existing, so long as it remains small. But even the older composers were not content to let their musical creations remain small. They wanted to display their skill in weaving a longer web of music; some of them had something to say, something which demanded length; most of them had the architectural instinct which forces man to build out of any material he can lay his hands on. Now a long movement, a too long movement, spun on the old plan necessarily becomes tedious, monotonous and difficult to follow—it is at best like a very long sentence or paragraph with never a comma or a period. Moreover, if the music is all the same, if it is homogeneous, it is obvious that one of the principal methods of getting expression, contrast, is ruled out. Last, no musical architecture is possible with a mere series of musical phrases that can only be compared with a lot of strips of wood more or less carelessly nailed together. So gradually the principle of the popular song already referred to was adopted, probably, nay, certainly, quite unconsciously, and there was evolved a very simple and useful Form, one which has been vastly used by all composers and will doubtless be used constantly in the future, however music may develop. ¶In place of the one strain of the simple song one section consisting of many strains was introduced. Following that, in a new key, for the sake of variety, came a second section, also consisting of many strains. Finally the first section was repeated in the original key, bringing the whole movement to a satisfying conclusion. Of this form there are hundreds of examples in the shorter movements of Haydn, Mozart and Beethoven. When a more modern composer uses it, however, he by no means sticks to a couple of keys. Our sense of tonality has grown, we perceive relations between keys, which our forefathers were totally unable to perceive; and the first and second sections may both pass through many keys. But the general principle remains the same. Now this very excellent Form is also very primitive. In Haydn's time, and before it, the instinct to build, to crystallise, music was still at work; more than ever composers wanted to express something; and more than ever it was necessary to secure contrast. ¶So what is commonly called sonata form came to be invented. In the simplest examples of this a first theme—corresponding to the first strain of a popular song, as aforesaid—is announced. Then comes the second theme in a fresh key. But after that, instead of a repetition of the first section, there is what is called a development or working-out section, in which both first and second themes are treated with all the skill and fancy the composer possesses and shown in a dozen or more unsuspected lights. Only after that does the first theme return, and then the second theme. This is called the Reprise. But the second theme, if repeated in the key in which it first appeared, would of course end the work inconclusively: wherefore it is placed, on its last appearance, in the key of the first theme. ¶The ingenious reader will observe that if variety is obtained only by change of key then there would be no more variety from the beginning of what is called the reprise. Nor, for that matter, is the mere change from the original key to that of the dominant enough to produce any great variety. The second theme therefore is made as unlike the first in every respect as possible: if the first is bold and rugged, the second may be gentle and soothing; if the first moves rapidly, the second may be long drawn out; if rhythm is strongly marked in the first, the second is in a more subtle and elusive rhythm—in fact contrast is secured by any of the thousand ways open to the composer, and quite easily understood when heard, though anything but easy to describe. ¶Now if we take a symphonic movement of Mozart we find a first theme of marked character; after its delivery (and perhaps brief expansion) all the orchestra goes to work at a cadence in a hammer-and-tongs fashion and lets you know unmistakably that you have reached the end of a section. Then the second theme is announced, clearly. Then we have "development" in which the old tunes are turned into new ones as unlike the old as possible, yet obviously growing out of them. Finally we have the reprise, and then the coda, a few bars in the case of Haydn and Mozart stuck on to make an effective conclusion. ¶This is simple sonata form. There was an enormous lot of waste in it: those thumping conventional series of chords at the end of each section, for example, never mean and never did mean anything. At the time they were written the tendency to formulate music, to get conscious control of the material of music, was at its strongest; one of the most powerful desires of Mozart and Haydn was to make their form as clear and distinct as possible; and to that everything else was, in an emergency, sacrificed. In fact, composers of that time seem to have felt as keen a pleasure in the mere regularity and balance of the various parts of movements as in the poetic and sheer musical quality of the parts, even when the balance was secured by the introduction of conventional padding altogether at war with beauty and expression, quite destructive of both. ¶With Beethoven came a change. His music must at first have been very difficult to understand, for instead of the trumpet and drum passages marking the close of the different sections, one section leads straight into another by means of passages of as high musical and poetic quality as any other portions of his movements. Further, he went in for third themes following the second (the second and third being so proportioned as to balance the first), and he mightily extended the coda. Instead of a few noisy bars to end up each movement he started out and developed his theme in new ways, thus adding a fourth main section to the three existing before his time—the first, in which the themes are announced; the second, in which they are developed; the third, in which they are repeated. This was an inevitable corollary of the enormous increase he made in the size of the forms he used. After such huge themes, such lengthy developments, a few chords were not sufficient to wind up; a tail was needed by the symphonic movement before it could be felt to be satisfactory, just as much as a tail is needed by a kite before it will ascend. ¶Let us pause for a moment to sum up. In the early days music had form as a flower or a blade of grass has form; each piece grew more or less by haphazard into some shape, starting from its one theme. The utmost that could be done in that way was done by Bach in his fugues. But the fugue itself was the result of the tendency to formulate music, to press it into the bonds of strict rule, to get a conscious mastery of the material. That tendency, together with the desire to express more complex emotions and the natural instinct of man to build, resulted in certain clearly defined forms, with hard outlines, so to speak. Beethoven came and softened the outlines, hiding the bones of music, as it were, under a beautiful expressive veil of tone. The form is there just the same, and can easily be grasped by anyone who takes the trouble to listen carefully. The fact that for the sake of expression, he prodigiously varied his themes on their repetition, does not alter the fact that they are repeated in a satisfying way. The reader who can follow the form of say the first movement of the Eroica symphony (a symphony being only an orchestral sonata) understands not only the abstract principles of form but the manner of applying those principles to the concrete. ¶The results of these applications are various forms—the Rondo, the Minuet and so on: all are based on one of the two plans; in short pieces one theme is used, set forth and finished with; in longer pieces variety and unity are secured by two or three (or even more) themes of different character placed in different keys. The mere setting of themes one after another can always secure variety of a kind; but whether there is at the same time unity depends entirely upon whether the composer is or is not an artist. There is no rule for that: only genius can solve the problem. So much then for pure music. ¶The application of the principles may be widened in a thousand ways; ten themes may be used instead of two or three or four, the order and relation of the keys used may be altered and added to; but the principles remain the same. ¶But when music ceases to be pure music, when words are added to it, or it is intended to tell a story, then these principles can no longer be applied—or rather, there is no longer any need to apply them. Instead of following the architectonical faculty, the composer must follow the dictates of the dramatic or lyrical faculty. The number, character, mode of development, etc., of the themes is derived from the thing to be conveyed to the listener; and then we get what is called Programme music. But just as in a fine novel the writer reveals architectonical sense, so in a really fine piece of Programme it is revealed. There is very little difference in form, for example—at any rate no essential difference—between a Bach fugue and the Valkyries' Ride of Wagner; the themes are stated and developed in a certain order, and all one's faculties are satisfied—the emotions, the sense of pure beauty in melody and harmony, the architectonical sense, the intellectual appreciation of right handling of the material. ¶Whether music is pure music or Programme music, it must satisfy all these. And though, in the future, we may use quarters and eighths of tones, and though we may arrive at complexities unknown to-day and be able to express subtleties of feelings as yet never felt, the principles by which our feelings are expressed in noble and beautiful Form cannot but remain the same.

FUGUE

BY HOMER A. NORRIS

A FUGUE is a composition in which a theme, called the subject, is announced by one voice and imitated by other voices. The word comes from the Latin fuga (a flight), suggesting the thought of one part starting alone after which the others enter in pursuit. A fugue may be written for any number of voices, but we shall here discuss a four-voiced fugue. ¶The subject is usually short and of such marked character as to fix itself readily on the mind, and is usually so constructed as to admit of overlapping; i.e., so that a second voice may enter without musical friction before the first voice has completed the phrase. This overlapping process is called stretto. ¶The subject may be announced by any voice. At its completion there comes a very short passage called codetta, after which a second voice sings the subject-matter in another key. This is called the answer. ¶In the majority of fugues the answer is a transposition of the subject into the key a perfect fifth above the subject, so that subject and answer correspond to the keys of tonic and dominant. Certain subjects instead of being reproduced literally are changed. Subjects which are changed are known as tonal subjects; subjects which remain unchanged are known as real subjects. ¶While the second voice is singing the answer, the first voice accompanies it, and usually in one of the forms of double counterpoint. It is then intended for subsequent use. Such an accompanying part is called counter-subject. ¶The answer is followed by another codetta, leading back to the original key, where a third voice sings the subject, but in a different octave than that in which the first voice announced it. The other voices continue with contrapuntal accompaniment. Another codetta follows, leading to a fourth voice which sings the answer in the dominant. The part of the fugue that we have discussed is called the exposition. The exposition closes the first of the three big divisions of the fugue. ¶The exposition is followed by the first episode. In the episode the composer has more freedom than in any other portion of the fugue. New material may be presented; brief modulations to related keys introduced, together with free imitation. ¶After the first episode comes the middle section. ¶Here the four voices again present the subject-matter in somewhat the same order as in the first section but in other keys. The principal keys are altogether avoided or only incidentally touched. In this group often occur variations of the subject; it may be shortened or lengthened; the answer may be presented in contrary motion, etc. ¶In the third, and (usually) final section a return is made to the original keys. Here the subject and answer are generally combined in stretto. ¶A strict fugue is one in which there are either no episodes, or in which the episodic material is drawn entirely from the subject or counter-subject. Nearly all the fugues in Bach's "Das Wohltemperirte Clavier" are strict fugues. ¶In a free fugue the episodes are constructed of new material. ¶In a fugato passage one voice announces a theme, after which other voices enter in free imitation. ¶A fughetta is to a fugue what a sonatina is to a sonata: i.e., it is a little fugue. ¶An academic fugue is the most elaborate, artificial, and purely intellectual expression of musical art. (See Dictionary of Terms entry, page 604.)

GRACE

BY RUPERT HUGHES

ONE of the innumerable decorative details of melodic progression. Grace notes are musical parasites borrowing their entire sustenance and duration from the note to which they are tied by a slur. They are consequently vitally affected by the rapidity of the tempo. They are almost invariably written small, and are frequently abbreviated, or indicated by some form of musical shorthand. It is to be noted in playing old music that the appoggiatura was written small merely as a bit of academic hypocrisy to smuggle in thus an unprepared suspension. Though written small it was given one-half (sometimes only a third) the value of the note it was bound to, and two-thirds of the value if the note were dotted. ¶The Chart gives first the modern graces, as written and executed, then a series of old graces made up from Bach's own list, and from those of Couperin and Rameau. ¶Composers who desire to escape the wide diversity of interpretation put on all grace-abbreviations are coming, more and more, to write their ornaments out in full, a procedure for which there is every reason but the one of laziness.

HARMONY IN PRACTICE

BY A. J. GOODRICH

[NOTE.—Many of the terms touched upon here will be found treated in more detail under their names—Ed.]

IN ITS BROADER SENSE Harmony embraces the origin and classification of chords, their rearrangement, inversion, and progression; modulation, resolution, transition, false relation, sequence, suspension, chromatic harmonisation and other topics too numerous to mention here. Yet the fundamental principles of harmony may be easily explained and readily understood. ¶We begin with concords because they are most euphonious and not subject to the somewhat complex theories of resolution. A concord or consonant triad consists of a normal ("perfect") 5th and a major or minor 3d from the root. When the intervals stand in this order the lowest note is the root, or the name-note of the chord. It would thus appear to the eye all upon lines or all upon spaces; thus G b d form the chord of G major. G, b flat, and d, would form the chord of G minor. ¶Every major key bears six concords, the imperfect triad on the leading note not being a concord. ¶The reader may now sound upon a piano or organ these six concords, each in its first or root position. After sounding the first chord and before proceeding to the next, ascertain the gender,—that is, whether it is masculine (major) or feminine (minor). These distinctions should be determined by the auricular sense, and also by the visual sense. Practice and theory should be thus combined. ¶From the theory of scales and keys and intervals [vide these terms] the reader is supposed to know whether a given chord represents a major or a minor key. The 1st, 3d, and 5th, of every major scale form a major concord: the same numbers in a minor key yield a minor concord. But it is still more important that the ear shall be trained to distinguish between these genders, because music appeals most directly to the auricular faculties.

CONCORDS CLASSIFIED

When all the concords have been sounded and their characteristics recognised, they should be classified. How many major? How many minor? Which degrees of the scale bear major and which minor concords? ¶Technical terms may be then applied: chord of the tonic, 1; chord of the sub-dominant, 4; chord of the dominant, 5; chord of the super-dominant (relative minor of the tonic), 6; chord of the super-tonic, 2; chord of the mediant, 3. In other words we have as elemental material, the chords of the tonic, sub-dominant, and dominant (always major in a major key) and the relative minors [vide RELATIVE] of these. This process should be repeated in all the major keys.

CONCORDS REARRANGED

A chord has as many close positions as it has letters. In the first position the root is lowest. In the second position the root is highest, while the third is below. In the third position the root is in the middle, the 5th being below and the 3d above. ¶At first the different positions are to be effected by rearranging the letters thus: C, e, g, root position of the C chord. Place the C last

(an octave higher), and the second position will result e, g, C. Now place the e last (an octave higher), and the third position will appear,—g, C, e. Since no new element has been introduced it is evident that the chord still remains and that C is the root. The capital letter serves to indicate to the eye whether the theoretical root is below, in the middle, or at the top. (A distinction is to be made between these simple rearrangements of concords and the actual inversion of chords. Inversion comes much later.) Every concord in the key is to be rearranged by means of letters, as indicated, and the different positions are to be numbered in regular order 1, 2, 3. ¶The six concords are now to be rearranged on the key-board, using the letter schemes as a preliminary guide. After the six chords have thus been played in their three close positions the process should be continued in other keys without the aid of letters or written notes. ¶Care must be exercised not to add any new element to the tones of a given chord while its rearrangements are being played. For instance, in the second position of the F chord pupils sometimes produce the A minor triad by playing a, C, e, instead of a, c, F. Sound all the concords in their three close positions in every major key. (See Ex. 1.) ¶Also it is desirable to play the rearrangements in this manner descending, as well as ascending. (Interesting examples in this style may be invented.)

EXAMPLE I

PRELIMINARY HARMONISATION

The six rearranged chords in any given key are now selected as a guide. These must appear in notation. Every tone in the major scale of C is to be harmonised with as many concords as contain the note to be illustrated. This is to be accomplished at the instrument. 1. Select c'' (an octave above middle c). This is a stationary tone representing, for instance, a soprano part. 2. How many of the six concords in this key contain c? (Examine the chart of rearranged chords in C, always beginning with the first chord, and ascertain how many contain c,—whether above or below is immaterial.) 3. What is the first chord that contains a c? What position has c at the top? 4. Play this. 5. What is the next chord containing c? 6. What position has c uppermost? 7. Play this, keeping the same finger (5) upon 3d space c''. 8. What is the third chord containing c? In what position is c uppermost? 9. Play this, the c being still in the soprano part, highest. If this much has been correctly executed the following results will appear: The C chord will be in its second position, the F chord in its first position, and the A minor chord in its third position, e, A, c. Each chord is to be sounded simultaneously, the letters which represent notes are read from below, upward, therefore e, g, C', indicate that the chord of C is to be struck, C being uppermost. Repeat the process at the piano: C chord, 2. F chord, 1. A minor chord, 3. The fingering should be 5 5 5
2 3 3. (See Ex. 2.) ¶The second chord of the scale is now selected, and this is to be harmonically illustrated in the same manner. 1. How many concords in the key of C contain d? (Do not use the imperfect triad in any of these elementary exercises.) 2. What is the first chord containing d? 3. What position has d at the top? 4. Play this. 5. What is the other chord having a d? (Mention the letter-name of the chord and say whether it be masculine or feminine.) 6. What position of the G chord has d at the top? 7. Play it, then repeat. In this manner every tone in the key of C should be harmonically illustrated. Only the six concords in this key are to be used, though each one may be played in any of its three close positions, according to circumstances. Transpose to other major keys.
1 1 1

EXAMPLE II

SIMPLE THEORY OF STRICT CHORD PROGRESSION

Any tone which occurs in any two different chords is called a connecting tone. Every connecting tone is played by the same finger in both chords or sung by the same voice. When there are two notes in common between two chords in progression, the connecting tones are retained, or remain stationary—tied or played by the same finger. (The previous elementary progressions agree with this theory.) ¶Now arrange a score of four staves, the bass staff below and three treble staves above. On the first treble staff write the progression C, F, A minor, keeping the connecting notes stationary. On the second treble staff write the C chord in its next position above, g, C, e. Then write the F chord (with c in the middle) and the A minor chord with a and c tied from the preceding. On the third or highest treble staff write the C chord in its first position and proceed to make the same progression, i. e., C to F, and F to A. It is to be understood that the progressions on the two upper staves are similar to those on the lowest treble staff, 2 and 3 being rearrangements of 1. In each instance the same principles are to be applied. For instance in progressing from the C to the F the connecting note (c) will appear alternately in the soprano, mezzo-soprano, and contralto parts. When the first measure is completed in the three treble parts, vertically, add the roots in the bass staff immediately beneath the treble chords. The bass part moves fundamentally, from root to root, while the treble parts progress melodically, that is without skipping. Do not skip the bass part up or down more than a 5th. ¶Proceed to harmonise d with the two concords which accompany it: then write two rearrangements above. Observe strictly the connecting-note principle. When the second measure is completed in the treble parts add the roots in the bass as before. Every tone in the scale is to be treated similarly—2, 4 and 7 having but two chords each as accompanying harmonies. (See Ex. 3.) ¶After this scheme has been worked out on paper, choose another key and proceed to make a similar example at the keyboard, without the aid of notes except perhaps the rearranged chords, which may be used as a chart. Continue this process in several other major keys, until the progressions can be played readily and correctly.

MELODIC SKIPS OF A 3D

When the melody skips up or down a 3d the accompanying harmony remains the same. In other words the melody skip may be accompanied by any chord in the key which contains both notes of the melodic interval. This has been partially illustrated in the rearrangement of concords. Therefore c and e may be accompanied by the C chord or the A minor chord, but not by both chords. When the melody skips, the bass remains stationary as a connecting note. Consequently there is always a connecting note either above or below in the present examples. A skipping theme is given and this should be harmonised at the piano and on paper. (See Ex. 4.)

EXAMPLE IV

SKIPS OF A 4TH

These are harmonised by the same principle, though a skip of a fourth admits but one chord as accompaniment: that chord which contains both notes of the skip furnishes the solution. During the skip the bass remains, and acts as a connecting note. Example 5 is to be harmonised practically and theoretically, as explained. (See definition of harmony, Dictionary of Terms, page 614.)

HARMONIC WARNINGS FOR COMPOSERS

BY A. J. GOODRICH

NOTE: These are some of the traditional rules, but are often broken.

1. DON'T use any intervals in parallel movement except these:

(a) Unisons, and octaves when the latter are above or below, with no harmony between the octaves.

(b) Major or minor thirds, ascending or descending diatonically.

(c) Minor thirds ascending or descending chromatically.

(d) Major thirds ascending or descending chromatically. (These were formerly forbidden, but modern composers use them freely for certain purposes. They are, however, rather harsh and incisive.)

(e) Major or minor sixths ascending or descending diatonically—like the thirds.

(f) Major sixths up or down chromatically.

(g) Minor sixths up or down chromatically. (These are inversions of the major thirds, and therefore the same remarks apply.)

(h) Augmented fourths may ascend or descend chromatically where they form parts of diminished chords in succession. (The exigencies of notation will require that the imperfect fifth—which is an harmonic equivalent of the augmented fourth—shall appear occasionally in place of the latter. Thus, c and f sharp may be followed by b and f natural. Practically the two intervals are identical and interchangeable.)

(i) Descending augmented fourths may occur in a series of dominant seventh chords proceeding according to the dominant relation—up a fourth or down a fifth.

2. DON'T use any of these intervals in parallel movement:

(a) Major or minor seconds, ascending or descending.

(b) Normal or "perfect" fifths, especially between bass and soprano, or contralto and soprano. The imperfect may follow the perfect fifth. But the reverse of this is rather rough and generally ineffective.

(c) [Normal fourths, when they are accompanied by diatonic thirds, above or below, have been frequently employed. A succession of triads in their second or third close positions necessarily involves parallel fourths, as in the Finale to Beethoven's op. 2, II.] Parallel fourths ought to be excluded from strict two-part counterpoint, as they are too much inclined to vacuousness.

(d) Major or minor sevenths are not to be used in parallel succession. Diminished sevenths sound like major sixths. Therefore these two intervals may succeed each other alternately.

(e) Parallel octaves have always been forbidden, and usually their effect is awkward or confusing. Yet hundreds of instances might be quoted from the masters. A simple illustration is the little Romance from Schumann usually coupled with his "Träumerei"—the theme above is doubled by a solo bass part below.

(f) Cross relation or false relation is another pitfall into which the young composer is likely to stumble. The effect is sometimes very unpleasant and at other times perfectly satisfactory. ¶The student should avoid at all times all interdicted or suspicious progressions, even though the "evil" be more fancied than real. If he becomes a creative artist he must eventually act on his own responsibility, free and independent of all prescription and formula.

HYMNOLOGY

By H. E. KREIBIEL

HYMNS, in the sense in which we apply the term, as an adjunct of Christian worship, appear to have been used from the earliest days of the Church. The early Christians naturally borrowed their music from their forefathers in Judea, Greece, and Rome, and the Church thus was quite lacking in any uniformity in this element of worship. Not till the various branches of the Church in the Roman Empire were united under a Christian Emperor, Constantine, is there evidence of attempts to form a system. The first result of this was the Ambrosian chant, and later, the Gregorian, at first congregational, later confined exclusively to the priest. Famous Latin hymns, like the "Te Deum," "Magnificat," "Benedictus," etc., were in use from very early days of the Church, being sung to plain-chant melodies. In the period of the great Church composers—Josquin des Prés, Palestrina, Orlando di Lasso, and others, these hymn-tunes were often used as canti fermi for masses and motets; and Palestrina also used them as the basis for a set of "Hymns for the Entire Year," one of the most important of his works. ¶In the meantime a more popular development of hymnal music had been going on in the Mysteries and Miracle-plays, outside the immediate supervision of the Church, that were so conspicuous a feature of popular life and worship in the Middle Ages. In the Church itself the music had been entirely in the hands of the priests and the regular choirs. At the time of the Reformation, however, Luther introduced a great change in this respect, for which the ground was already prepared by the popular development of hymn-singing just mentioned. The chief note of the Reformation was individuality in worship, the transfer of its chief features from the priest to the congregation; and in line with this principle Luther laid great stress on the reintroduction of congregational singing, which had been abandoned since the early days of the Church. Luther produced a great number of hymns, the words of which he fitted to popular melodies of the day. The first Lutheran hymn-book was published in 1524; it was in the vernacular and its popularity in Germany soon became enormous, leading to the speedy issue of innumerable other works of the same kind. Luther not only used the melodies of folk-songs for these hymns, but caused new tunes to be written, and some of them—notably the most famous, "Ein' feste Burg ist unser Gott,"—he is said to have composed himself. It ought to be said, however, that his authorship of the music of this "Battle Hymn of the Reformation" has been disputed. They were all broad choral tunes simply harmonised, such as remain to-day in constant use in Germany, and formed the model for the hymns of the whole Protestant Church. In France the metrical psalms of Marot and Beza were as enthusiastically received by the Protestants as Luther's hymns in Germany; they were originally sung to popular tunes of the day as contained in a psalter published in 1542, by Calvin, in Geneva. Thereafter numerous other collections were published, notably one by Claude Goudimel, in 1565. ¶In England the general cultivation of part-singing in the madrigals made the acceptance of popular hymnody as a part of the new religious movement facile and speedy. Here, as in France, the first hymns were metrical versions of the Psalms in English, and numerous collections of them were published in the last half of the sixteenth century, at first for one part only. "The Whole Psalmes in foure parts," harmonised in the simplest manner possible, published in 1563, was the first harmonised collection of English hymn-tunes. Numerous collections of such tunes were issued thereafter, the most notable being Ravenscroft's, in 1621, and Playford's, in 1671. ¶With the composition of hymns by Wesley and his followers in the eighteenth century came a new poetic material of which musicians were not slow to avail themselves, and which resulted in new hymn-tunes of greater warmth of feeling, differing entirely from the older school of hymns in both melody and harmony. These have had a great, if not always beneficial, influence on the modern development of hymnal music. ¶Hymnology has held a notable place in the history of American music. The stern piety of the Puritan immigrants in New England developed a great activity in this branch of musical art, after it had been freed from the shackles that at first confined it, and the number of early American hymn-tune composers was large. Among these were William Billings (who in 1770 published "The American Psalm Singer: or American Chorister," containing hymns of his own composition), Samuel Holyoke, Andrew Law, Jacob Kimball, Oliver Holden, and others. In the earlier years of the nineteenth century Thomas Hastings, Lowell Mason—whose influence in a secular way on the development of music and musical taste in America was marked—and Nathaniel Gould were the most prominent. (See Dictionary entry, page 618.)

JAZZ

BY ROBERT C. BAGAR

MANY and confusing are the theories concerning the origin of jazz. The most selfless of investigators would be hard put to it to avoid favouring this appealing probability or that. And to add to the dismay the word jazz itself is also of extremely uncertain derivation. If, perhaps, the jazz idiom had, in a manner of speaking, risen suddenly, and as suddenly achieved the highest plane of musical speech there to rub friendly elbows with its proud confreres of the classics, there would, naturally, be no mystery. The facts attendant on the rise and the making of the grade would then be before us in systematic array. ¶It is not jazz's obscure beginning that is remarkable, but rather that it should be so in a manifestation—to call it that—comparatively recent as jazz. And that takes into account its predecessor, ragtime, and ragtime's predecessors in turn, all of which have been links in a chain of existence spanning no more than four decades or a little over, including, of course, the years of swing, which are now upon us. The legendary births of a galaxy of musical speeches we accept calmly. The remote past is the remote past, hence legend becoming fact and fact legend—a not infrequent phenomenon in either case, as the incessant explorations show—brings about no undue quickening of the pulse, save for a flickering instant at most. The dust is on the ages, and there it reposes is the reasonable attitude. Yet such is not the resignation that would apply to a contemporary product. The desire to know all is the keener because of nearness. And the inevitable answer to that desire is mystery. However, it is generally agreed that jazz came out of New Orleans, all speculation as to how it got there aside for the moment. ¶In all of jazz's serio-comic saga there is, perhaps, nothing as amusing as the proposals respecting the emergence of the word jazz. For instance, one contention has it that it was first known in the Creole argot. It meant "to speed up." Another is that it was born in ugly circumstances in the dance halls of the old West. Still another offers darkest Africa as its spawning ground, and that the spelling was variously jas, jass, jaz, jazz, and so on ad infinitum. But the prize is the one that points to the abbreviation of the name Charles to Chaz as its catapult into the scheme. The Chaz in the case was a drummer named Charles Washington, who flourished in the city of Vicksburg, Mississippi, around the turn of the century. He was a star percussionist; in fact, the bright, shining light of a small combination. Whenever things lagged during a musical session the leader of the band would call on that worthy to liven them up with the provocative phrase, "Now, Chaz. Now, Chaz." Thus it can be seen how Chaz could easily have become jazz. ¶The days of the minstrel show had an important part in the paving of the way for jazz. The minstrels took spirituals and work songs, distorted them in an elaborate manner unknown up to that time, and they called their concoction "ragging." A mild syncopation—as compared to the present-day complicated expression—ragging, prepared the foundation, nevertheless, for ragtime and, through it, jazz. In 1897 a composer, Kerry Mills by name, turned out a piece titled "Georgia Camp-Meeting." It was a great success. And this, probably, was the first to be recognised as a ragtime number. Bert Williams' "O I Don't Know, You're Not So Warm" had the distinction to be the first printed song whose front cover carried the designation "ragtime." ¶In these items, as in many others of their period, the feature which specifically set them apart as ragtime consisted of a steady, four-beat bass accompaniment to syncopated fillips in the melody. The compositions in this sphere fairly gushed forth from the inventive geniuses of the day, "My Gal's a High-Born Lady," for example, was another of the current favourites. ¶In the meantime the orchestral side of the story was undergoing its own development. In 1895 or thereabouts a blind Negro newsboy, who answered to the surprising name of Stale Bread, hawked his papers in a novel manner. He had picked up a fiddle somehow, and his specialty was to attract buyers through the playing of wailing tunes. Soon he was joined by others of his calling and, as a result, a group of four or five newsboys formed a band, which became known as Stale Bread's Spasm Band. Five years later another ensemble made its bow, Razz's Band, which like its forerunner served the fickle goddess of ragtime-metamorphosing-into-jazz. Records being unavailable, it is safe to say that many such organisations must have split the New Orleans air with their odd-assorted screechings. The elementary instrumentation, of course, had something to do with the blatant cacophony. But jazz was imminent, which was sufficient justification. ¶At about the time when America was seeing herself slowly drawn into a world war, a four-piece combination, Brown's Band, made its way up to Chicago for an engagement at Lamb's Café. For the sake of geographical accuracy the group's name was elaborated to Brown's Band from Dixieland. The musicians belonging to this outfit were Raymond Lopez, cornet player; Tom Brown, trombonist; Gus Miller, clarinetist, and William Lambert, drummer. It is significant to note that the patrons of Lamb's emporium did not know what to make of this new music, for by this time, it can be well assumed, the style of playing had already grown to the free-for-all improvisation point, although still in a formative stage. Those hardy members of that first audience, however, were not long holding out. Encouraged by the proprietor of the place to step out on the floor, the patrons soon took to the innovation (for Chicago) with a will. ¶Bert Kelly, a Chicago dance-band manager, had been using the word jazz as an adjective in designating his many ensembles, all collectively called Bert Kelly's Jazz Bands. So that to Mr. Kelly are due the honours for applying that word first in the title of a band. This is of particular importance, for when in 1916 Gus Miller, clarinetist of the Brown Band from Dixieland, severed his connection with the latter organisation he joined the Kelly forces. He was sent out to play an engagement at the Booster's Club in White City. The band remained there a year. But the guests had become converted to this type of orchestra, so the manager, in order to please, obtained another group from New Orleans. When the players arrived they were immediately given the name of the Original Dixieland Band, and the manager, who had liked the sound of the word jazz as communicated to him by the Gus Miller quintet, appropriated the word so that the name now became the Original Dixieland Jazz Band. ¶That was the beginning of an era. Not only did the Original Dixieland Jazz Band take the country by storm, make innumerable recordings, but thereupon every ambitious tyro, as a consequence, got together a combination of five and lorded it in the dance halls, at school hops and so on, contributing to the confusion and, at the same time, doing something for the propagation of the jazz gospel. ¶Advanced as is the present-day swing, it owes its very existence to the "hot" idiom of the Dixieland orchestras. Usually consisting of clarinet, saxophone, banjo, piano and drums, these apostolic delegations featured improvisation to the heart's content and, needless to add, to the dancing feet's exhaustion. There was nothing "straight" about the playing of Dixieland bands, taking straight to mean unembellished melody. But what opportunities hot playing gave to the imaginative performer! Hot music became the expression of the hour. Improvisation by one musician over a steadily flowing groundwork of rhythm was one thing, but two and even three players improvising at the same time was something else again. What has been lately called a new musical form—swing, to be exact—has its roots deeply imbedded in that early mass extemporising. ¶The composer was as nothing compared to the stature of the hot performer. Any simple tune could be treated in the vogue idiom. In truth, the only part of a song retained was the harmonic structure, the melody being made free with and put through innumerable variations in free polyphonic style. One of the most famous leaders of the day was Ted Lewis, whose arpeggiated clarinet runs have been preserved for posterity through his phonograph recordings. But with all this to-do about hot playing there was also the undownable conservative element in jazz concerned with glorifying the melody as well as the harmony of a tune. There was rhythm, of course, as a prime feature of straight playing, but a fluidly moving rhythm, not over-stressed to the neglect of the melody. Even to-day we are aware of the same condition. We have "swing" bands and "sweet" bands, which correspond, respectively, to the hot and straight of the jazz age. ¶Such bands as Paul Whiteman's Orchestra, Isham Jones' Orchestra, Vincent Lopez' Orchestra, which came directly on the heels of the Dixieland ensembles, have retained to this day their essentially sweet or straight characteristics, although if the occasion arises there are musicians in any of these outfits that can sail blithely into split-second "licks," or peculiarly accented figures. The words "corny" and "McGee" came to signify phrasing that was definitely of an elementary order in hot playing. Corny, with its Corn-Belt connotations, meant either farm or small-town expression, not urban, as it were. McGee is of obscure origin. The fox-trot was becoming more and more perfected. Darius Milhaud, the French composer, took up the idiom with great zest. So did Igor Stravinsky. ¶While the craze for hot music was at its height Paul Whiteman, who had been leading an orchestra at the Hotel Alexandria, Los Angeles, in 1920, where he was devoting himself to the purification of jazz music, hit upon the idea of writing out parts for his musicians. Up to that time the playing was all to the unorganised side. A group of players would get the melody from the pianist and then fall into line with melodies, counter-melodies, and harmonies on the way. All very uncertain and lacking system. Ferde Grofé, Whiteman's arranger and pianist, rose quickly to fame through his ingenious orchestrations. A trained musician, possessing a talent far beyond the average, he was responsible in great measure for the sudden return to the "legitimate" (sweet or straight) kind of playing, but this time it was symphonic, orderly, following, as closely as jazz could, the well-intentioned rules of orchestration. ¶Paul Whiteman and his orchestra came East. They appeared nightly at the Palais Royal in New York. The new style with its extremely clever arrangements caught on solidly. But Whiteman was nurturing a secret ambition. Schooled in classical music spheres, he had given up his orthodox career in favour of the sirenish beckoning of jazz which promised much in the way of financial success and, logically enough, glory. Yet he had not freed himself completely from the shackles of his musical education. Symphonic music was still to him the highest form of tonal expression. The extraordinary talent he had surrounded himself with, and with the ever-growing reputation of a young composer, (George Gershwin, to urge him on, he commissioned the latter to write a work for his orchestra. The composition was to be a jazz creation, but fitting within the frame of one of the serious music forms. The result was the "Rhapsody in Blue." On February 12, 1924, it was given its world première performance at Aeolian Hall by the Whiteman orchestra. George Gershwin and Zez Confrey were the solo pianists. The work was an immediate success. It was acclaimed by critics and public alike as a fine example of American jazz elevated to concert pitch. There were subsequent concerts, again at Aeolian Hall, and at Carnegie Hall. Thus were Whiteman, Gershwin, and Grofé, who orchestrated the piece, propelled into world prominence. There were tours in this country and in Europe. Everywhere Whiteman and Gershwin were received as visiting potentates. ¶A most illuminating sidelight on the importance achieved by Whiteman is the fact that almost all of his musicians have since climbed to the top as leaders, star performers, or composers. Ferde Grofé, particularly, a respected composer, has a number of successful works to his credit, notably, the "Grand Canyon" and "Hollywood" suites, "Mississippi," "Three Shades of Blue," and others. ¶Perhaps, because the "Rhapsody in Blue" was the first of Tin-Pan Alley's brain children to scale the heights, it will remain for many a year to come the prime favourite of all jazzists, a category that seems to be growing with leaps and bounds to the point of including some of the most noted composers of our time. Of these Darius Milhaud and Igor Stravinsky have already been mentioned. There are others; Aaron Copland, Louis Gruenberg, John Alden Carpenter, Leo Sowerby, Emerson Whithorne, Kurt Weill. Ravel, in his salad days, had not disdained investigating the "blues." An Italian, Sonsogno, had a work of his, "Il Jazzista Romantico," played in Carnegie Hall by the Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Arturo Toscanini ¶Gershwin had not stopped with his "Rhapsody." Its success could only be a great incentive to carry on. And carry on he did, as witness his production of several other works also in the high-plane jazz manner. His Concerto in F, which was introduced to a Carnegie Hall audience by Walter Damrosch, who had commissioned him to write the piece, was one of them. "An American in Paris" was another. Then there were several piano preludes (subsequently orchestrated by Roy Bargy, Paul Whiteman's present pianist) and a Rhumba composition. And, of course, the folk opera "Porgy and Bess." Nor had he lessened his activities in composing music for Broadway shows and, latterly, films. ¶But the other American composers, referring particularly to those out of Tin-Pan Alley, worked on with a supreme nonchalance, perhaps a little surprised at all the attention the world was giving their creations. Among these we find Rube Bloom, Thomas Griselle, Dana Suesse, John W. Green, Harold Arlen, Zez Confrey, Matt Malneck, Frank Signorelli, Eastwood Lane, Duke Ellington, slaving away at a beloved task, striving for new ideas, constantly keeping pace with every new trend. In this category, too, but several notches above because of more ambitious efforts fit William Grant Still, Ferde Grofé, and Robert Russell Bennett. ¶While all credit is due the jazz performers for infinite progress made in the direction of extending the scope of the idiom, the song writers whose tunes inspired the players to greater heights are deserving of a full measure of attention. Among these the casual survey reveals Irving Berlin, who graduated from singing waiter in a Bowery saloon, Nigger Mike's, to the tremendous hit writer he is to-day; Jerome Kern, a well-trained musician, provider of many of Broadway's successful shows; Richard Rodgers, who together with his partner, Lorenz Hart, has written some of the nation's cleverest songs; Vincent Youmans; Ray Henderson, of the famous trio De Sylva (Buddy), Brown (Lew), and Henderson; George M. Cohan, Walter Donaldson, Lew Pollack, Nathaniel Shilkret, Abel Baer, Abner Silver, Vincent Rose, and, reaching further back, Harry von Tilzer, Charles K. Harris, and so on. If some of the oldsters have been included in what is really a very sketchy outline, it is because the jazz musicians—and, in like manner, the swing musicians—have tootled, pounded, sawed and slapped their hot colorature to everything and anything that ever came out of a popular composer's creative mind. ¶Irving Berlin wrote "Alexander's Ragtime Band" in 1912. But time can do nothing to age that classic. It is as fresh and invigorating to-day as it ever was, perhaps more, considering the superb orchestral garb that can be given it now. Hits from the Berlin pen have been numerous and each has been a finely wrought piece of writing, both musically and as to text. Consider some of his famous songs: "When I Lost You," "All Alone," "What'll I Do?," "Remember," "Always," "Say It Isn't So," not to omit his innumerable show tunes, his movie tunes. It would be a tremendous task to find another popular composer whose hits could equal, let alone outnumber, Berlin's. ¶Some of the pieces turned out by the other song writers give an extraordinary insight into the variety of expression that has found favour with the American public. Mentioned at random they might be "Birth of the Blues," "That's Why Darkies Were Born," "Over There," "You're Driving Me Crazy," "Charmaine," "Jeanine," "Farewell to Arms," "Whispering," "Avalon," "Linger a While," "Tea for Two" and "After the Ball Was Over." ¶The bands that made these numbers famous have been part of a fragment of American life that is not to be duplicated in any other side of it. For instance, the records show Paul Whiteman, Isham Jones, Vincent Lopez, Ted Lewis, Rudy Vallee, Fred Waring, Guy Lombardo, Ben Bernie, Wayne King, George Olsen, Ben Pollack, Jean Goldkette and others. ¶No picture of the jazz era would be complete without inclusion of blues songs and their originator, the coloured composer, William C. Handy. Briefly, Handy took the simple darky songs of his time and gave them something of his own which something, specifically, called for the introduction of a minor third into any tune in a major key. The frequent insertion of the minor third or blue note made the piece what was called a "mean" blues. It made the song wail and moan. At the beginning of this century Handy concocted a campaign song for a political candidate who had little chance of victory. It was played with such regularity and affection that it helped put the office seeker into the desired place, besides which the song became a local favourite. Having obtained his end, Handy gave the number a new title, "Memphis Blues." It was sent to many publishers and was rejected by all. But Handy, undaunted, printed the tune himself, and a very unfruitful venture that turned out to be. Nobody would buy it. Finally he sold his rights to it for one hundred dollars, which, as is often the case, was the signal for it to become one of the big money earners of that period. In rapid sequence Handy wrote the "St. Louis Blues" and the "Beale Street Blues," thereby bringing into existence three pieces that have withstood nobly the ravages of time. ¶Since it is to the musicians themselves, the men who played in the bands, that we owe the real development of jazz (witness the continuance of this phenomenon in the world of swing) it would be an omission of huge proportions to neglect naming some of the most prominent in the field, some of whom are busily engaged in the very task to-day. Leon "Bix" Beiderbecke, born 1903—died 1931, was one of the greatest jazz artists known. A disciple of Louis Armstrong, the gifted Negro trumpet player, Beiderbecke, also a trumpet player, is held as the example of what the perfect hot player should be like. He had an extraordinary tone, impeccable taste, flaming imagination, and a technic that few can equal now or could equal then. Also a talented composer, Beiderbecke played the piano almost as well as the trumpet. One composition of his (he wrote several pieces) "In a Mist" is, perhaps, a perfect example of the best jazz writing of the period. Beiderbecke was for a time a member of the Paul Whiteman Orchestra. ¶Tommy Dorsey, a trombonist, who is now the leader of his own band, is another of the top-flight performers. There are also Jack Teagarden, trombonist; Benny Goodman, clarinetist, now a band leader; Fletcher Henderson, Claude Hopkins, Fats Waller, all coloured pianists; Red Norvo, xylophonist; these a handful of musicians who had their beginnings in the jazz era and have moved lock, stock and barrel into the current sphere of swing, all of them tremendous influences in the moulding of the idiom from the one to the other. ¶During jazz's most flourishing period, in the years immediately following the Great War, the struggle between the sweet and hot adherents continued unabated. The peculiar and even comical phase of the situation was that those who held out for sweet were usually incapable of playing hot and vice versa. It would seem that the contest is to be a permanent one, for both sides have their constituents, and they are legion. And perhaps more than the musicians the listeners fight on indefatigably for their espoused causes. Whatever the result—and apparently only crossed swords will bring it about—the very combat has, undoubtedly, given greater impetus to the promulgation of jazz. ¶If asked the question, "What is jazz?" the answer might be any one of a hundred loose definitions, each having something to do with the meaning, and not all of them combined capable of expressing it fully. But there must be some working basis, some common ground on which minds may meet to discuss the subject intelligently. The temptation to retort, "What has intelligence to do with it?" might prove too strong, but there would still be the necessity to reach a happy medium of communication through the employment of words. And one might respond that, roughly, jazz, either sweet or hot, is a musical form in which there is an established rhythmic figure in the bass while the original melody is made to fit an improvisatory scheme, second to the purposes of the moment. Loosely, but very loosely, this definition takes care of both sweet jazz and hot jazz. In the case of the former the "improvisatory scheme" is an elementary one; in the case of the latter a complicated one. Even in the playing of the simplest tunes, for instance, the jazz pianist pays little attention to the score; that is, the pianist performing for his own or his friends' enjoyment. Syncopation, spontaneous and pertinent to the harmonic and melodic manifestations, is of the essence, however. ¶Something of the same applies equally to orchestral performance, except that here the improvisation has been scored in great part. Wherever the orchestrator has purposely left a sequence unwritten for some solo instrument is the place for that instrument to take a lick or a "break," which terms have to do with spontaneous improvisation in the nature of some specially accented figure. ¶The variations of this procedure are many and intricate even in jazz playing. Despite the many attempts of commentators to supply definitive tracts on jazz, the fact remains that it can only be played and not talked.

LEADING-MOTIVES

BY GUSTAVE KOBBE

OTHER COMPOSERS before Wagner used typical phrases to express some personal characteristic or idea, and repeated them in a manner which suggests what is now termed a leading-motive. Such is the "Idée fixe" in Berlioz's "Fantastique" symphony; or the phrase in Weber's "Euryanthe" which occasionally even is spoken of as the "Tomb Motive." I, however, have always considered that Beethoven in the use he made of the opening theme of his Fifth Symphony more nearly approached the leading-motive than any of Wagner's predecessors. The theme recurs with great variety of effect throughout the symphony, the second movement excepted. It is found as a mysterious threatening figure accompanying the second theme of the first movement, while in the Allegro, the scherzo of the symphony, it partakes of a joyous character, to reappear as a disturbing element in the finale. It has the plasticity of a leading-motive, but it may be questioned whether Beethoven intended to use it for any other than a purely musical effect. In fact any suggestions Wagner may have received from other composers were so slight that the leading-motive in the modern sense may unhesitatingly be said to be his invention. ¶It is easier to say what a leading-motive is not, than to give it a fixed definition. The first idea to disabuse one's self of is that a leading-motive is anything like a label. The "Walhalla" motive in the "Ring of the Nibelung" is not a guide-post which reads "Walhalla to the right—3 miles"—nor does it even represent Walhalla as a pile of masonry. It expresses, in its simple yet lofty measures, the rulership of Wotan, the hegemonia of the gods. A leading-motive is a musical searchlight or X-ray which illuminates and enables us to look deep into every character, thought, mood, purpose, idea, and impulse in the drama. Even conscience itself does not escape Wagner. Witness how he lays it bare with his scalpel of leading-motives in the first meeting of Siegfried and Hagen in "Goetterdaemmerung" with the Curse Motive, which hints at Hagen's fell purpose, darkening the noble Siegfried Motive. The use of the Curse in this episode clearly foreshadows the death of the Volsung hero at Hagen's hand and lays the gloom of impending tragedy heavily upon the hearer's soul. ¶How plastic a leading-motive may be, how closely welded to the ever-changing phases of the drama and how clearly it expresses them, the wonderful variants of the motive of Siegfried the Fearless—the call Siegfried sounds on his silver horn—will show. Joyous and buoyant in its simplest form, it becomes when he takes leave of Brünnhilde to sally forth in quest of adventure, heroically grand, and in the Death Music, that strain of triumphant mourning which thrills every hearer and stamps the episode as the greatest climax ever achieved in a musical work for the stage. Indeed, the whole scene is a triumph for the leading-motive idea, since here, as Siegfried's lifeless body is borne up on the mountain crest, the orchestra gives a musical epitome of his career by voicing successively the motives most intimately relating to him which have been heard in the cycle of music-dramas. ¶But Wagner's use of leading-motives singly and in complex combinations according to the trend of the drama however interesting analytically would wholly have failed were not the motives themselves musically valuable. They are enunciated chiefly by the orchestra (which thus forms a constant commentary upon the proceedings of the stage) and they are considered by those who are in the van of musical opinion to have resulted in the most eloquent and sublime—if at times the most tedious—scores ever penned. To appreciate what a genius Wagner really was, it is only necessary to listen to the works of some of his imitators. ¶Liszt in his Symphonic Poems adapted the leading-motive to instrumental music, in which respect Richard Strauss followed him. ## MODERN HARMONY

BY QUINCY PORTER

BEFORE undertaking a discussion of some of the important trends of modern harmony, it is essential to consider what came before. It is amazing to contemplate the wealth of music which conformed itself to the classic, tonal system of harmony. That it could have satisfied so well the needs of so noble an array of musical geniuses, men as strikingly contrasted as Bach and Schubert, Mozart and Wagner, Händel and Beethoven, testifies to the richness of its resources, but at the same time demonstrates conclusively that harmony is only one of the constructive elements of music, by no means explaining all that is often asked of it. The genius of Beethoven, for example, manifests itself to a far greater extent in his subtle use of rhythm, the curiously expressive accent of his melody, his dynamic power, than in his harmonic practises, which were fairly conventional. ¶We must review briefly a few of the resources of this system, which many still consider unexhausted. The elimination of modes which did not lend themselves to tonic, dominant, and subdominant relationships, left the listener with only two scales, the major and minor, asymmetrical in their construction, and hence capable of easy definition. Great opportunity was created for modulation, tonal contrast, a feeling of inevitability in harmonic progression based on surprisingly simple acoustical relationships. (Schönberg eloquently explains the simplicity of these relationships in the first part of his book, Harmonielehre.) The well-defined and contrasting characteristics of the major and minor scales offered in themselves a wealth of resource; the unification of a complicated work about a single tonal centre gave increased power to musical speech. The mass of associations which develop when any language becomes familiar gave the possibility of increasing freedom in the treatment of dissonance, new ways in which to use chromatics, interesting omissions of what could be taken for granted, but the fundamental structure of the system remained the same for over three hundred years. ¶Beethoven himself made a rather unsuccessful attempt to free himself from the bondage of this system, when he wrote the slow movement of his string quartet in A minor, in the Lydian mode, but it was not until the latter part of the nineteenth century that the older modes began to assert a real influence on art music. Men like Moussorgsky and Grieg found new freshness in their native, modal folk music; others, like Franck and d'Indy, more inspired by the modal music which had successfully survived in the church, made some interesting departures from the conventions of the old system by a curious mixing of the modal with the chromatic. ¶Reaction against the conventions of the classic system became widespread. Experiment after experiment was made, using new scales, some oriental in origin, some especially manufactured, but all tending toward a newer and freer conception of harmony. ¶These new departures may be roughly and somewhat arbitrarily classified as: (1) those which can be explained as further extensions of simple, acoustical relationships; (2) those which seem more artificial in character. ¶It is well to state at the outset that those which fit in the second category are not necessarily of less artistic value than those in the first. In the evolution of all arts there is a tendency away from the more natural and simple toward the more artful; away from the spontaneous toward the more carefully reasoned. The mere placing side by side of two sets of four notes to make a mode was already a long step in the direction of the artificial. The major triad fits perfectly into the chord of nature; the minor triad is already an artificial imitation. The major scale, though an artificial arrangement of notes, has many natural relationships, more than any other scale yet found, and lends itself to the use of chords which fit fairly well into the chord of nature. ¶Under the first category let us consider, to begin with, the discovery of new, consonant-sounding chords. Although Debussy may have thought his highly sensitive ear was at fault when he noticed that a major triad with the minor 7th or the major 9th or both added to it sounded to him quite consonant, actually he was beginning to expand the possibilities of reposeful harmonic colour. Soon the augmented 11th was found to fit agreeably. These new chords were built by simply adding more partials (the 7th, 9th and 11th, respectively) to the fundamental. There had been a lapse of seven or eight centuries since any such extension of consonant resources had been made. Since the time of Debussy many other similar chords have been discovered, and whether their innovators evolved them in consideration of acoustical principles or merely by acute listening may well remain their own secret. ¶When two different notes are played, not only the fundamentals but also the partials of both actually sound. Composers have discovered that by actually writing these partials into their chords they can achieve a great variety of clear, well-defined colours, ranging from very consonant to extremely dissonant. Striking effects may be obtained by varying the position of the upper notes of major triads built on two fundamentals separated by the interval of a major 2nd, or a perfect 4th, or a minor 6th. To separate two fundamentals thus reinforced, contemporary composers frequently employ the interval of a major 7th (witness the combination in Stravinsky's "Sacre" of the 1st, 3rd, 5th, and 7th partials of E flat, above the 1st, 3rd, and 5th partials of F flat, in the rhythmically repeated chords just after the introduction). Another favourite interval is that of the augmented 4th (see the superposition of the major triad on F sharp above that on C during a long passage in the same composer's "Petrouchka"). ¶At another point in the "Sacre" Stravinsky has reinforced by adding the more artificial minor triad to fundamentals separated by a major 7th and a minor 9th, giving a darker though similarly conceived effect of colour. There is not space to deal with more intricate combinations which have recently extended the harmonic palette of music, but merely to call attention to a curious quality which some of them possess. Though they may be extremely complicated in their make-up, the various dissonances seem to neutralise one another, producing a state of equilibrium which gives an almost paradoxical effect of consonance. Since all the notes disagree more or less similarly, there is no clear tendency implied; one does not feel the necessity for any one or more of them to move in order to make it less dissonant. These equilibrium chords are accepted as reposeful, and have made satisfactory conclusions for certain types of modern works. ¶In their use of colour-chords, modern composers have frequently gone back to the principles of the old "organum." Instead of limiting themselves to 4ths or 5ths and 8ves in the reinforcing of a melodic line, they have been using some of these colourful, harmonic combinations, such as triads, chords of the major 9th, major 7ths, or minor 2nds. The use of such chords or intervals to strengthen a line is not far removed from the practise of giving a single melodic line to an instrument of a striking colour, to make it stand out from its background with clarity. ¶Coming to the second category, the realm of the more artificial, let us consider chords and scales which are evenly spaced. Although the most important relationships in the tonal system, as in the other arts, are asymmetrical, composers seem unable to resist the lure of perfect symmetry. Like blocks which can be easily fitted together in many different ways, symmetrical chords and scales offer amusing possibilities. The symmetrical diminished 7th chord was worked to death by the romantic composers. Any of the three combinations of sounds that make it can be written so as to relate to any of the 24 major and minor keys. Bach and Beethoven used them freely, but preserved a tonal background that enabled one to keep one's relative position. Liszt often left the listener bewildered, wondering where he was. Nevertheless, the symmetrical has its uses, for it is sometimes temporarily desirable to blindfold the listener. ¶Modern composers have used all varieties of equi-spaced chords and scales. Spacing by perfect 5ths produces an equilibrium chord, whose colour varies chiefly with the number of 5ths that are added. The effect is, of course, particularly brilliant with stringed instruments which are themselves tuned in 5ths. ¶Spacing by perfect

4ths creates a quite different colour. Scriabine and Satie often varied the chord from the perfect by the addition of one augmented fourth, achieving a slight effect of asymmetry. Scriabine, in his effort to expand the possibilities of his system, built of superimposed 4ths as a substitute for the 3rds of the classic system, came to include diminished 4ths as well, and frequently arrived in territory that had already been discovered. ¶Little use has recently been made of the augmented triad, which divides the scale into three equal intervals. It is one of the few chords which harmonise the whole-tone scale, but its possibilities for giving a nebulous, undefined quality to harmony were fairly well exhausted many years ago, more recent and varied ways of giving similar effects having tended to eradicate its use. ¶The diminished 7th chord, to which reference has already been made, is decidedly artificial in its construction. Its colour has become perfectly familiar, however, and it is now used frequently in combination with other chords. Ernest Bloch often combines it with other diminished 7th chords. At the beginning of his sonata for violin and piano, for example, he maintains one of them in the middle register while he presents successively in the bass the notes of a diminished 7th chord a half tone lower. ¶The possibilities of the whole-tone scale were nobly exploited by Debussy, and this is one of the less natural of his discoveries. New uses for it have been found by Hindemith and others, but since only two whole-tone scales exist, its possibilities are very limited. New uses may be discovered, in combination with other, more diatonic factors. ¶During the entire period in which tonal harmony held sway, the chromatic scale was employed frequently, and with growing freedom. Wagner effected an amazing variety of colours by using it on a background of tonal harmony. Without a stabilising factor, this rather artificial spacing of intervals (both unnatural melodically if repeated contiguously, and remote from the simpler harmonic relationships in the chord of nature) may create music which lacks definition. Other methods are being discovered, however, of stabilising chromatic materials by relating them to other modes and scales. The architecture of Schönberg's "Twelve-tone" music depends almost entirely upon the structure and use of its melodic motives. In order to create a feeling of atonality, it meticulously avoids harmonic or melodic emphasis on any one, more than on any other, of the 12 chromatic notes. While experimentation is necessary for the expansion of musical resources, it may also result in rather one-sided emphasis, and there is a growing feeling that present efforts at innovation along the line of symmetry forego much that is of value in the asymmetrical tonal system. ¶Finally we come to a consideration of quarter-tones, whose only justification seems to be their relation to the familiar semi-tone, which, as we have remarked, is in itself quite an arbitrary interval. Ernest Bloch has used them in a piano quintet, but the more faithfully they are executed the more certain is the average audience that the players have produced false notes. They have some melodic value, particularly as passing notes, but little harmonic value. Any step toward increasing the present number of possible tones should give access to consonant intervals, such as the 7th and 11th partials, which we cannot now use. Since they accomplish no other harmonic service, it is the opinion of the writer that they constitute a uselessly long step in the direction of the artificial. ¶No discussion of modern tendencies can omit mention of certain elements which do not properly fall within the scope of the title of this article. Considerations of rhythm, line, and melody, for example, are of foremost importance. Much of the most striking music of the present owes its effectiveness less to harmony than to vitality of line and forward motion of rhythm, which in themselves create plausible and artistically justified harmonies. Just as the earlier composers set off their melodic ideas against one another contrapuntally by the use of instruments with contrasting colours, so the modern composer sets off his melodic ideas by putting them in contrasting, non-blending tonalities. In traditional counterpoint, only rhythmic and directional independence existed between the different voices; in polytonal counterpoint, harmonic independence is also achieved. The music of Hindemith is perhaps more understandable from this point of view than from the harmonic one which he himself exposes. ¶Whether or not the vast experimentation of the past fifty years has yet given rise to works of first magnitude, it is certain that the goddess Euterpe is no person upon whom to inflict limitations. She has sung most eloquently for many years on a basis of tonal harmony. In the future she will sing new melodies on new harmonies, but some of the characteristics of the music which has stood the test of time will doubtless remain. Great art will continue to be at bottom simple, but with its enormously increased resources music will become increasingly universal in its ability to reflect the infinitely varied phases of human experience and feeling.

MODES

BY RUPERT HUGHES

PERHAPS the most graphic definition of modes to the modern mind would be:—overlapping portions of the C major scale; or successive octave-stretches along the white keys of the pianoforte. Ecclesiastical modes were the Middle Age perversion of the Greek modes. While overthrown by Nineteenth Century scales and tonality, traces of their influence persevere, and many of the old chants still in use in the Roman Catholic and Anglican services are more or less exact specimens of the capabilities of the modes. The Twenty-first Century will probably qualify and develop our own system of keys out of shape and recognition. The complete overthrow of the ideas of tonality and modulation of the earlier part of the Twentieth Century is indeed even now beginning. We are already over the doorsill of the nullitonic or omnitonic harmonies, and the multitude of accidental sharps and flats and naturals required to notate the highly chromatic music of our day renders inevitable some radical change in the system of keys; meanwhile, the obsolete modal systems have at least a keen historical interest and importance. There is place here for only an allusion to a few of the salient points. Full statement of the details and the controversies on them would fill a large library. ¶Though the Greeks properly gave music a very high place in their educational system, they were too much engrossed in theories, rules, and restrictions to build up large material. Their musical resources were of the slenderest. While their noble tragedies were exactly Wagner's idea of opera, the music to which they were set seems to have been of the most limited range and variety; and furthermore, absolutely lacking in harmony even in the Middle Age sense. ¶The Greek system differs from ours in being all of a minor tendency, in having the notes named downwards, and in paying attention only to melody and not at all to chords. The white piano keys from  $e'$  (just above middle C) to the E an octave below, represent their oldest and central mode, the Dorian. By remembering that all these steps are whole tones except the two semitones from  $c'$  to  $b$  and  $F$  to  $E$ , and by representing a whole step by a  $(+)$  and a half step by a  $(-)$ , it will be seen that this Dorian mode descends by the following steps,  $++-++-$ . These make two similar groups of three steps or four notes, which were called tetrachords. The word chord with them meant "string" not "harmony," for their whole music took its rise from their lyre, a stiff and limited, unfretted instrument of many poetical associations but stunted in practical possibilities. The pattern of tetrachord  $(++-)$  into which this Dorian mode divided was called the Dorian tetrachord. They superimposed on the top note  $e'$  a similar tetrachord of the tones  $a', g', f', e$ , and added below another  $e, d, c, B$ . To these they added the low  $A$  as a supplementary (in Greek proslambanomenos). The outer couples of tetrachords overlap. Between the middle two is an imaginary line of separation (diaxeuxis). Each of these was therefore a "disjunct" (di-zenomenon) tetrachord. The "complete system" (systema teleion) of two octaves ( $a'$  down to  $A$ ) was divided thus into four tetrachords, each of them given the name which (with its English translation) is shown in the chart herewith. For purposes of modulation they laid across the middle of this system an overlapping or "conjunct" (synemmenon) tetrachord in which the  $b$  was flattened,  $d', c', bb, a$   $(++-)$ . ¶The octave from  $e'$  down to  $E$  was, as already stated, called the Dorian mode. Other portions of the systema were given other names,  $d$  to  $D$  being called the Phrygian,  $c'$  to  $C$  the Lydian, and  $b$  to  $B$  the Mixo-Lydian. ¶They conceived a way of extending these octaves by duplicating one of the tetrachords below (in Greek "hypo"). Thus, if the upper tetrachord ( $e'$  to  $a$ ) of the Dorian mode be transferred an octave below, and fastened to the lower tetrachord, we shall no longer have  $e', d', c', b, a, g, f, e$ ,  $(++-++-)$  but  $a, g, f, e, d, c, B, A$ , which also is  $++-++-$ , with the added step  $+$  (proslambanomenos). This is called the Hypo-Dorian mode. ¶The Phrygian, Lydian, and Mixo-Lydian modes do not descend by the same whole and half steps as the Dorian, but as follows: Phrygian  $(+-++++)$ , Lydian  $(-++++-)$ , Mixo-Lydian  $(++++-)$ . It will be found, however, that these modes are capable of the same hypo-treatment, thus making two more modes, Hypo-Phrygian and Hypo-Lydian,—for the Mixo-Lydian ( $b$  to  $B$ ) being too low to add a tetrachord beneath, it is added above, giving  $e'$  to  $e$ , which is identical with the Dorian. The principal note (tonic) of the regular modes was the top note. Each hypo-mode kept for its chief note the chief note of the original (or its octave). The names and ranges of these seven modes with two others added later are shown in the chart, which shows also the names (and their translations) given each note and each tetrachord. ¶With this system as a foundation and with the use of the conjunct tetrachord and its  $b$  flat as an entering wedge, the Greeks gradually added several notes above and below their systema, and inserted half steps between the full steps until they acquired a complete chromatic scale on which they transposed their scales with much melodic freedom. Harmony, of course, they did not have. These transposed scales were not named like the original modes from their chief notes, but were given the name of the scale whose steps they resembled. By making use of the  $+$  and  $-$ , or other signs for indicating half or whole steps, it is easy to plot out the steps of any scale and find its prototype and its name in the original modes. ¶The Greek notation was by letters and symbols. It is too complicated to explain here. ¶A method of manipulating their scale melodically may be mentioned. The tetrachords as described were called diatonic, but in the Dorian e, d, c, b, if the d were omitted, the tetrachord became e — c, b, and was called the older enharmonic. A later plan was to keep the d, but lower it by half a tone (that is, to tune the d string to c sharp), making the four strings e, c#, c, b. This was the chromatic genus. A still later plan, called the newer enharmonic, was to tune the d to a pure third with the e, making the tetrachord e, c, c, b; the two c strings differing slightly in tone (see the word COMMA). ¶This group of three tones, c, c, b, or c#, c, b, was the pyknon (plural pykna). Other variations in the treatment were called chroai (colourings). Definite melodies were given definite names, a melody being a nomos (i. e., arrangement, order, or setting). ¶Upon this false, but elaborate, system, enormous ingenuity was spent, and appalling complexity and scholarship of a kind were made possible, to the delight of the typical theorist. In respect of melody the Greek modes offered far more freedom than the church modes, which, however, possessed the modern invention of harmony.

ECCLIASTICAL MODES

Music, along with all the other early Christian arts, borrowed largely from the Greeks, but rejected their warmth and ornate sophistication for a stark rigidity. ¶Early church musicians took the Greek modes as best they could understand them, making as many mistakes as was usual in the degenerate classicism of those times. The Byzantine school perverted Greek music and passed it along, as it had done with painting and architecture. The range and the chromatic graces of later Greek melody were deserted for a heavy march through one octave of one key. Furthermore, the scale was considered now as ascending, instead of descending. ¶St. Ambrose is traditionally credited with establishing four modes for church music. From these St. Gregory was believed to have derived four new modes. The original four are called Authentic, i. e., "governing," or "chief." The latter four are called Plagal, i. e., "oblique" or "inferior." To these were added other modes, some of them being denied a right to exist. As with all the old Greek modes, all the church modes are to be found on the white keys of the piano; no chromatic was allowed except, finally, b flat, which was admitted to avoid the forbidden tritone and the diminished fifth. A melody that did not stray out of its octave mode was called perfect; one that did not use all of its range was imperfect; one that overstepped its octave was superfluous; one that used up both a mode and its plagal was in a mixed mode. ¶Greek names were used for the church modes, but with many differences from the old nomenclature. ¶An authentic mode is based on its Final or lowest note; the next most important note, usually a fifth or a third above, is its dominant. A plagal mode is found a fourth below its authentic, and the final of the authentic serves also for the plagal. The dominant of a plagal is a third below that of its authentic (save where it falls on b, in which case c is used). ¶Curiously enough, the two modern keys which we think of as white keys, c major and a minor, were not added until the sixteenth century, and then as the Ionian and Æolian modes. ¶Besides many impressive hymns the church modes have been unconsciously allowed to fit many popular modern tunes. It is not hard to test the mode-ship of any air. First, if necessary, bring the melody into a range requiring no key-signature. If it now contains any accidentals save b flat, it is not in any of the modes. Otherwise note the tone on which the air ends. This will be the final of its mode. If this is the lowest, or almost the lowest note used, and if the melody does not soar higher than an octave above it, the air is in an authentic mode. If the final is in approximately the centre of the melodic range, and if the range does not exceed the fifth above, or the fourth below, it is in a plagal mode, or it may be in a mixed mode. The name of the final indicates the mode. The airs "God save the King" (or "America") and the "Blue Bells of Scotland" are authentic melodies. The "Old rooth" and "Eileen Aroon" are plagal. "Jock o' Hazeldean" is in a mixed mode. ¶Much of the music in the old church modes is as shocking to the modern sense of tonality as our modern music would seem anarchistic to an old master. Superb treasures were given to immortality in those stiff and arbitrary forms. Yet, after all, the modes deserve their eternal obsolescence. They were unsatisfactory and arbitrary in their own day. They are hopelessly inappropriate to the modern musical ideas and ideals. The majestic beauties of some of their results are but as the impressive fossils of earlier evolution. Their fate should warn us against stolid satisfaction with our own musical system.

NOTATION

BY RUPERT HUGHES

THE MUSICAL PARALLEL of writing and printing as the means of expressing in universal and permanent symbols the ideas, emotions, and memories of the mind. ¶The Greeks, having only unharmonised melodies to record, made use of the letters of the alphabet in positions and combinations of a most complex yet definitive variety. These letters had reference to tetrachords and transpositions of the most subtle sort (see MODES). The business-like Romans swept away a mass of detail by giving each letter a definite position on the whole scale without reference to tetrachord relations. These letters were written on a straight line over the text to be sung. In the Eighth Century this alphabetical notation had given way before a system of symbols looking much like the hooks and curves of modern shorthand. These were called neumæ (q. v.) and were of numberless sorts and names. Thus a short single note was a punctum; two or three of these in a group were bipunctum or tripunctum; the standard long note was the virga which could be grouped as bivirga or trivirga. Other terms were podatus (a low note joined to a higher), and its reverse called clivis, clinis, or flexa; the scandicus (three ascending notes) and its reverse, climacus; the quilisma (a repeated note), the gnomo, ancus, distropha and many others. These neumæ were written over the text and were set higher or lower in a rough form of melodic contour. They were only an aid to the memory and frequently defy decipherment. In time, a few letters were added as abbreviations of speed or force. ¶But about the year 900 a genius (who in his way was almost as great as the inventor of the wheel) hit upon the inspiration of ruling above the text a thin red line and calling it "F." Every neuma on this line stood positively for the tone F, and those above or below the lines were of higher or lower pitch. The genius was soon followed by a man of talent who ruled a yellow line a little higher and called it "C." The ornamental letters set at the head of these lines soon took the forms known to-day as the clefs. Not long after, the monk Hucbald erected a series of lines and used the spaces between them to indicate definite pitches, writing at the beginning T for a whole step and S for a semitone. The hymn to be sung was written in these spaces, each syllable being placed on its proper space. (This gave the verse a stepladder effect resembling the refrains of certain modern humorous poems.) Spaces were added above or below as the melody needed them and each voice had its own set of shelves. ¶This awkward plan suggested the use of the lines instead of the spaces, for notes instead of syllables. Each line was given a definite pitch marked by a letter. ¶Recurrence was now made to the two-line system and somebody (Guido of Arezzo was usually credited with the scheme) added two black lines and made a 4-line staff in which both lines and spaces had fixed pitch values. It only needed the later addition of one more line to give the five-lined staff we still use to-day. ¶The neumæ gradually exchanged their scraggly outlines for the square black heads of the choral note (the nota quadrata or quadriquarta). ¶It now being possible to express the relative pitch of notes, an effort was made to express their relative duration, for the old Plain Song with its notes all of the same length could not satisfy many human musical needs. The modern division into measures of equal length by means of bars was a long time coming. There were two centuries of clumsy mensurable (i. e., measurable) music. Notes to be sung to the same syllable were grouped together by ligatures; they were either set so close together as to touch, or were, if ascending, placed one above the other like a chord; if descending, they were merged in a thick black slanting line (figura obliqua). When white or open notes came into use the thick line became an open rectangle sloping in the desired direction. When the first note of the ligature was a breve, it was said to be "cum proprietate"; if the first note were a long, it was sine proprietate; if a semibreve, it was cum opposita proprietate; if the last note were a breve it was imperfecta; it was a ligatura perfecta when the last note was a long. ¶The method of expressing rhythm was, as said, very cumbersome. Rhythm was classified under three ratios: mode (modus), time-value (tempus), prolation. ¶The Modus major or "Great Mode" concerned the division of the large into longs, being perfect(us) if there were three longs to a large, and imperfect(us) if there were two. Modus minor or the "Lesser Mode" concerned the division of the long into breves, with the same classes perfect or imperfect. ¶The division of the breves into semibreves was the tempus and was similarly called perfect(um) or imperfect(um), a circle indicating perfect time and a semi-circle, imperfect. ¶The relation of semibreve to minims was called prolatio(n), being major or minor (greater or lesser) prolation as the semibreve equalled 3 or 2 minims. The former was indicated by a dot in the time signature. ¶The position of the notes also indicated their proportion; a long or a breve followed by a note of its own value was perfect by position; a note accompanied by another of less value was imperfect. ¶Colour played a part; the red (nota rubra) or white (alba) or black (nigra) note among others of a different colour marked a change from perfection to imperfection. There was later the proportio hemiol(i)a, or 2 : 3, indicated by grouped black notes among white. ¶Speed was open to slackening (augmentatio) or acceleration (diminutio), the latter being marked by a bar through the time-signature, or by the use of numerals or fractions, called signs of proportion, a term referring to the rhythm of simultaneous voices. ¶The value of a note was open to alteratio(n) by position or by use of the dot (punctum augmentationis, alterationis, (im)perfectionis or divisionis). ¶Expression marks appeared, along with many other symbols, in the Seventeenth Century; the bar was brought over from lute-tablature, and mensurable music disappeared before the convenient complexities of our own era.

THE OPERA

BY ROBERT E. BRADY

OPERA as we know it to-day is an art form whose origins extend back only to the end of the sixteenth century. It is true that music in some form played an important part in the representations of the dramas of the ancient Greek tragic poets. There is evidence that the verses of Sophocles and Aeschylus were declaimed to the accompaniment of stringed and wind-instruments, and that the chorus sang or chanted its comment on the action and progress of the drama. Music was also employed in more or less dramatic fashion by the religious and secular composers of the thirteenth, fourteenth, and fifteenth centuries, by the trouvères in France, and by the players in the mystery and miracle plays which were common throughout Western Europe in the Middle Ages. ¶But this music was of a type that gave little opportunity for the expression of strong emotion or for the delineation of character. The need of a new form better suited to dramatic representations was felt by a group of Florentine scholars in the last decade of the sixteenth century. Enthusiastic devotees of the Revival of Learning, they worshipped the art of ancient Greece with all the fervour characteristic of the period. What finer contribution to the cause of music could be made, they asked, than to rediscover and recreate the ancient modes which had been of such service to the great tragic poets of the antique world? ¶Such a task was, of course, impossible of achievement, since little was known of the music of two thousand years ago. But, undisturbed by the difficulties which were in their way, the little band of scholars set to work to evolve some new system which they believed might at least approximate that employed by the Greek dramatists. The result of their labours was a revolution in musical theories which contained the germs of modern music drama. ¶Three members of this coterie which habitually met at the palace of one Giovanni Bardi, Conte di Vernio, a patron of the arts, were Jacopo Peri, Vincenzo Galilei (father of the famous astronomer), and Giulio Caccini. The year 1597 saw the first fruits of their efforts. "Dafne," a dramatic work by Peri in the new style of accompanied recitative, was received with enthusiasm at a private performance in the palace of a Florentine nobleman. ¶So successful was this first experiment that it was followed, in 1600, by another work by the same composer, "Euridice," which was performed at the wedding festivities of King Henry IV of France and Maria de' Medici. Acclaimed with the same enthusiasm that had greeted its predecessor, it became the model for a series of dramatic pieces on classical subjects by other composers. Opera thus became recognised as a legitimate art form, at first patronised exclusively by the nobility, but destined soon to achieve a place in the lives of the people. ¶Monteverdi's famous opera "Orfeo" (1607) marked a further advance in the development of the new genre. Unlike Peri and Caccini, Monteverdi was a musician of distinguished attainments in other forms of composition, especially the madrigal; and he brought to opera all the technical resources of a skilled craftsman. He had already composed an opera "Arianna," which had made a deep impression; but "Orfeo," in the richness of its instrumental accompaniment—more than thirty instruments were employed—and by virtue of its emotional quality, far surpassed previous works of its kind. ¶So widespread was the interest aroused in the new type of entertainment that soon there was a demand for public performances. The first opera house was opened in Venice in 1637. Numerous composers, including Monteverdi, wrote a long list of works which firmly established the vogue of opera in the North. Between 1637 and 1699 eleven theatres were built in Venice, which became the leading city of opera in all Italy. But soon lyric theatres sprang up in all the principal towns. During this period opera itself was undergoing certain changes. The austere classicism of the founders gave way to a freer use of melody and rhythm. The beginnings of the aria were already discernible. Despite opposition of the conservatives, who held to the original pseudo-Greek ideal, opera was taking on the characteristic patterns which foreshadowed the modern Italian school. ¶Alessandro Scarlatti did more than any other composer to further this development. A past master in the art of composition, he boldly swept aside the rigid rules which to a great extent had stemmed the tide of creative impulse, and introduced many innovations which added immeasurably to effectiveness of opera both from the musical and dramatic standpoint. Chief among these departures were a more eloquent type of recitative and a richer instrumentation, together with an elaboration of the prelude. Gifted disciples of Scarlatti turned out scores of pieces every year, until opera became the most popular entertainment of the day. This democratisation, indeed, began to sow the seeds of decay. The public was already becoming more interested in lavish spectacle, huge choruses, and favourite singers than in musical worth. But in dignity, passionate sincerity, and technical virtuosity Scarlatti set an example that inspired the best of his successors for more than a century. ¶Meanwhile there were arising in France and Germany, more or less independently, types of lyrical drama that were essentially national in spirit. The roots of French opera are found in the music of the thirteenth-century trouvères, as in Adam de la Halle's "Le jeu de Robin et de Marion," which has come down to us intact. It was the ballet, however, dating from the latter half of the sixteenth century, which was the immediate forebear of seventeenth-century opera in France. ¶Jean Baptiste Lully (1639–1687) was the most famous composer for French ballet in its later development. A talented and resourceful musician, he brought it to a state of perfection that soon won it the favour of the populace as well as the nobility. It thus passed from the court to the theatre. Lully is regarded as the first composer of true French opera. His "Les Fêtes de l'Amour et de Bacchus," produced in 1672, was the forerunner of a long series of similar pieces, both grave and gay. Lully's most distinguished successor was Rameau

(1683-1764), a musician in many respects of greater originality than Lully, but who never attained the latter's popularity. This was partly due to the inferior quality of his libretti. But his music has a freshness, charm, and variety not to be found in the work of his many contemporaries. ¶The rise of opera in England is associated with the name of Henry Purcell (c.1658-1695). His "Dido and Aeneas," composed between the years 1688 and 1690, was a work of astonishing originality and beauty. Purcell was to some extent influenced by French and Italian masters, but his art is strongly national. The origin of opera in England is commonly ascribed to the masque, and this is partly true. But another, and perhaps a more direct source of opera lies in the numerous plays for which popular composers of the day provided incidental music. Purcell had been active in this field. He left no successor, the only purely English development which followed being the Ballad Opera, of which John Gay's "Beggar's Opera" is the most famous example. But this form eventually disappeared with the introduction of the French and Italian schools. Balfe's "Bohemian Girl" and Wallace's "Maritana," to be sure, may be regarded as nineteenth-century survivals. The fact that "Dido and Aeneas" is Purcell's sole contribution to the operatic literature of his time in England may be explained by the circumstances of its production. It was performed by "young gentlewomen" at the private school of a Mr. Josias Priest at Chelsea. The composer was thus relieved of the necessity of catering to the fashionable public taste of the moment. ¶In Germany, as elsewhere, secular and religious plays of the Middle Ages prepared the soil for the development of opera. But the introduction of Italian works marked the real beginning of German operatic history. Vienna, Munich, and many provincial cities saw productions of the favourite Italian composers. But it was in the North, especially at Hamburg, that German national opera had its inception. ¶The first German opera house was opened in Hamburg in 1678, for the purpose of giving works in the vernacular. Here was produced the first truly German opera, Johann Theile's "Adam und Eva." It seems to have been a pretentious, pietistic, and generally dull piece, as were many of its successors, both religious and secular. But with the coming of Reinhardt Keiser in 1694 there was a distinct advance. During the first half of the eighteenth century he composed numerous works, thoroughly German, melodious, and well designed for character delineation. Though they have not survived they exerted an enormous influence in Germany and abroad. ¶One of Keiser's associates in Hamburg was the youthful George Frederic Handel (1685-1759). This man who was to become the greatest composer of his day wrote four operas on classic subjects during his Hamburg days. They showed the talent of the composer but were overshadowed by the brilliant operas with which he dazzled London audiences some years later. ¶"Rinaldo," an opera fashioned after the Italian models, was produced in lavish style in London in 1711. It created a sensation, the beauty of its arias winning instant response from a charmed and delighted public. From this time up to 1737 Handel produced a long series of operas along the same lines. The influence of various Italian masters, notably Scarlatti, appears in the suavity and grace of the vocal writing. Indeed, it was as a vocal and choral composer that Handel from the first excelled. ¶Handel's contemporaries included Johann Hasse, of Dresden, born in 1699, who left more than one hundred operas. They were second-rate, however, and depended for their success largely on the extraordinary singing of his wife, Faustina Bordoni. Hasse himself was a singer of the Italian school; and he was one of the first of those opera composers in Germany who worshipped vocalism for its own sake, and played into the hands of favoured singers. Domenico Scarlatti and Buononcini were other leading contemporaries of Hasse. ¶The rise of opera buffa in Italy was an important development during the middle of the eighteenth century. This genre, which had its prototype in France and Germany, was an outgrowth of the comic interludes and intermezzi which were interpolated between the acts of serious works. The opera buffa introduced some innovations that influenced serious opera—a more naturalistic style and greater freedom from convention. The earliest example of this form which has survived is Pergolesi's "La Serva Padrona" (1733). Other later examples are Paisiello's "Barbiere," Cimarosa's "Il matrimonio segreto," Mozart's "Così fan tutte," Rossini's "Barber of Seville," and Donizetti's "Don Pasquale." ¶The first French piece modelled on Italian opera buffa was Jean Jacques Rousseau's "Le Devin du Village" (1752), which was inspired by "La Serva Padrona." ¶Despite the trend toward naturalism in opera buffa, the serious forms were slow in shaking off classic conventions. Arias were formal, and must follow a definite pattern. A certain number of arias must be allotted to each singer. There must be no trios or quartets. Naturally, all this was fatal to a free development of the drama. Librettists and composers alike were handicapped. Moreover, the voice parts, instead of reflecting the thoughts and feelings of the character, were often mere show-pieces. Great composers like Handel could in a measure surmount such difficulties, but the rank and file were content to abide by the rules and let all truth and dramatic verity go by the boards. ¶Such was the state of opera when Christoph Wilibald Gluck began to compose. His first attempts proved to his satisfaction that he could not succeed by following the antiquated formulas. For years he pondered over new methods whereby he could make music serve the cause of drama as it was originally intended to do. The fruit of his speculations was "Orfeo" (1762), a masterpiece that brought about a revolution in opera that was comparable to the political and social upheaval that was to come some years later. ¶In "Orfeo," Gluck swept aside all the fustian of the old forms. Elaborate but meaningless arias overburdened with ornamentation gave place to broad, majestic melodies of profound emotional significance. The opera met with the qualified approval of a public which was not altogether ready to transfer its allegiance from Hasse and his school. Five years later Gluck produced "Alceste." In a preface to the published work he outlined his artistic credo. It was his purpose, he wrote, to strip the aria of outworn conventions; to provide an orchestral prelude which should apprise the spectator of the action to be represented; to reduce the disparity between recitative and the aria; and finally to achieve "a grand simplicity." ¶Gluck decided to go to France, since he was dissatisfied with the reception of these two works in Vienna. In Paris, under the patronage of his former pupil, Marie Antoinette, he brought out his "Iphigénie en Aulide," in French, in 1774. Its success was immediate, though there was a powerful faction of reactionaries who championed the Italian school represented by Piccinni. But with his next opera, "Iphigénie en Tauride," Gluck's triumph was complete. A new era in French opera had dawned, which was to have a lasting influence. Gluck to-day is recognised as the first great exponent of modern music drama. ¶But Gluck's reforms, far-reaching as they were, did not divorce opera from an artificial world wholly removed from reality. His was essentially an aristocratic art, in the narrowest sense, which was concerned with the thoughts and feelings of characters having little in common with life and actuality. With the spread of the humanistic cult of naturalism the time was ripe for a composer to interpret the new and restless spirit of the day. ¶One of the great musical geniuses of all time was destined to accomplish this mission: Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart. Only in his first opera, "Idomeneo" did Mozart pay homage to Gluck. With "Die Entführung aus dem Serail" he forsook the Never-never land of pseudoclassical antiquity for a world peopled by human personalities. In "The Marriage of Figaro" and "Don Giovanni" he portrays human aspirations, follies, and sorrows with masterly insight, by means of music of incomparable beauty. Like Gluck he avoids extravagant vocal ornamentation except in arias like that of the Queen in "The Magic Flute," where it is used for definite dramatic effect. Though Italian influences are apparent in his work, Mozart is essentially a German. To be sure, he used Italian in three of his operas as a language better suited to his purpose. ¶With the spread of the Romantic Movement at the turn of the nineteenth century there came a body of work which marked the transition between eighteenth-century classicism and the new romanticism. The most celebrated opera of this period was Beethoven's "Fidelio," which combines the old classic forms with the new revolutionary spirit. Beethoven had no special urge toward the stage, but after he accepted a commission from the Vienna Theater-an-der-Wien to write an opera he undertook the task with ardour. He chose for his libretto a story of wifely devotion which had already been utilised by Ferdinando Paer, and by Pierre Gaveaux. "Fidelio" is an example of the Singspiel in that spoken dialogue alternates with arias, duets, and concerted numbers. Beethoven made many revisions of his original score—he wrote four overtures—and several versions of the work were presented after its initial performance in Vienna in 1805. ¶"Fidelio," despite certain faults, remains the finest example of German opera between Mozart and Wagner; a work of intense dramatic power and musical beauty. Other composers of this transitional period include Cherubini, whose work was greatly admired by Beethoven, and Spontini, whose "La Vestale" was revived at the Metropolitan Opera House in 1925. ¶The Romantic Movement was in full flower when Weber's "Der Freischütz" was produced in Dresden in 1822. National feeling in Germany was running high. The public had tired of the tragic and heroic subjects favoured by the Franco-Italian Spontini, and the time was propitious for a work deriving from German folklore. "Der Freischütz" fulfilled in brilliant fashion this desire. It was acclaimed with the wildest enthusiasm, and its author, a picturesque, Byronic figure, became the hero of the day. His great gift for popular melody, his skill in choral writing, and the imaginative treatment of the supernatural made "Der Freischütz" the most beloved opera ever written in Germany. Its extraordinary popularity soon spread to other countries, as witness the story of the choleric English gentleman who advertised for a valet who couldn't whistle a tune from "Freischütz." Unfortunately Weber's later operas were less successful. The best known are "Euryanthe" and "Oberon." ¶Meanwhile Rossini was infusing new life into Italian opera which, at the beginning of the nineteenth century, had fallen on evil days. He was not a reformer like Gluck, but he determined to substitute for the old clichés of his immediate predecessors a new spirit, at the same time conforming to the prevailing taste of the day. This he accomplished by virtue of his amazing facility, his sparkling brilliancy, and his robust comic gifts. These qualities made him for years the most popular composer in Europe. His serious works are dramatically ineffective, though they contain a wealth of ingratiating melody. "The Barber of Seville" (1816) is perhaps the greatest opera buffa ever written. Rossini's style was florid, and he loved vocal display. The same may be said of his chief contemporaries, Bellini and Donizetti. While not of a particularly high order their music is uniformly tuneful and appealing. ¶The popularity of Rossini was partially eclipsed for a time by the advent of Meyerbeer, a German whose career was largely confined to Paris. His grandiose operas created a sensation. "Robert le Diable," "Les Huguenots," "L'Africain," and "Le Prophète" are said to have made the fortune of the Paris Opera. Wagner's caustic indictment of Meyerbeer as a "miserable music maker" is hardly deserved. He possessed undeniable gifts, which would have carried him to greater heights had he not chosen to seek the applause of a fashionable, uncritical Parisian audience. Meyerbeer left no disciples, though his chief contemporary was Halévy, whose "La Juive" retains its popularity to-day. ¶Giuseppe Verdi (1813-1901) was in many respects the greatest Italian composer of the nineteenth century. His early works reveal no radical departures from accepted conventions, though he introduced a dramatic and virile spirit not to be found in the sweet and graceful operas of Bellini and Donizetti. The works of his middle period like "Il Trovatore," "La Traviata," "The Masked Ball," and "Rigoletto" are perhaps his most characteristic and popular operas though by no means the best. In the operas of his third period, "Aida," for example, the set aria is already disappearing and the orchestra plays a more prominent part. In his old age Verdi produced two masterpieces, "Otello" (1887) and "Falstaff" (1893), which exhibit to an astonishing degree a new spirit and a new technique in Italian opera. Set arias are few, and the orchestra is infinitely more complex than in his earlier works. The characters of Iago and Falstaff are portrayed with a penetrating insight almost Shakespearian. Verdi was fortunate in having the distinguished singing actor, Victor Maurel, as the interpreter of these rôles. ¶The operatic Titan of this same period in Germany was, of course, Richard Wagner whose stupendous genius produced works of such revolutionary character and sustained grandeur as have never been remotely approached by any of his successors. The four operas of the "Ring"; "Tristan and Isolde," perhaps the greatest love tragedy of all time; "Die Meistersinger," a comic opera of epic proportions; and "Parsifal," the great religious festival drama—these monuments of a unique genius tower above all the other musical works of the nineteenth century. In these masterpieces of his maturity Wagner developed the leitmotif system to a state of perfection never equalled. ¶Among the composers of the latter half of the century whose work was significant were Arrigo Boito, whose "Mefistofele" may have influenced Verdi; Gounod, whose "Faust" is perhaps the most popular opera ever written; Bizet, whose "Carmen" ranks as the outstanding French opera of the period; Ponchielli and his successor Puccini, whose "Tosca," "La Bohème," and "Butterfly" are in the repertory of opera companies the world over. In the last decade of the century Mascagni, with "Cavalleria Rusticana" and Leoncavallo, with "Pagliacci" achieved an enormous popularity which has continued ever since. Giordano, Wolf-Ferrari, and Charpentier are among the host of popular composers of a somewhat later date. ¶The name of Puccini stands out as that of the most popular Italian composer of his day. His first work, "Le Villi" (1884), was successful. "Manon Lescaut" (1893) made up in part for an earlier failure "Edgar" (1889); but it was "Bohème" (1896) that firmly established Puccini's fame. This was enhanced with "Tosca" (1900) and "Madame Butterfly" (1904). Of his later works, in which he attempts a more modern idiom with qualified success, "La Fanciulla del West" ("Girl of the Golden West,") which had its world première at the Metropolitan in 1910, and "Turandot," produced in 1924 after the composer's death, are best known. Puccini had a flair for the theatre unequalled by any of his contemporaries, and his music has a lyrical intensity admirably suited to dramatic expression. ¶Not long after Germany threw off the shackles of foreign domination with "Der Freischütz" a national opera also began to emerge in Russia. Glinka was the creator of a new school with his "Life for the Tsar." The music is native in origin, fashioned and adapted in a manner to make it acceptable to Western ears. Suggestions of the Orient provide piquant contrasts to the Russian themes. The same holds true with Borodin's "Prince Igor," set to an epic poem comparable to the Arthurian romances. Borodin's music abounds in melody, impassioned and richly coloured. Moussorgsky was preëminently realistic in his treatment of the national material he employs. His writing for voice and chorus is superior to his orchestration, which is often stark and bare. His masterpiece, "Boris Godounoff," contains superb choral passages and a profoundly tragic and realistic death scene reminiscent of Macbeth. Rimsky-Korsakov excelled his predecessors in technical skill. All his works, with one exception, are based on national themes. The most popular of his operas are "The Snow Maiden," "Sadko," and "Le Coq d'Or." ¶The Czech composer Smetana was also the creator of a national opera. His works for the most part are little known outside Central Europe, with the exception of "The Bartered Bride," one of the loveliest of modern comic operas. ¶The present century has seen the production of scores of new works by composers of varying importance; but whatever the verdict of posterity may be concerning their merit the fact remains that few of them have achieved a permanent place in the standard repertory. Only a scant half dozen have won sufficient favour to justify frequent performance. ¶The first of these was Debussy's lyrical drama "Pelléas et Mélisande," written to a poetic play by Maeterlinck. This unique work, first performed at the Opéra Comique in Paris in 1902, is a landmark in the history of opera. It founded no school, and by reason of the special nature of its book and music it is unlikely to become universally popular. But it remains the finest example of impressionism in modern operatic music; elusive, delicately atmospheric, filled with a wan and wistful beauty wholly indescribable. ¶An opera not unlike "Pelléas" in subject matter, but wholly unlike it in other respects, is Italo Montemezzi's "Love of Three Kings." It was first produced in Milan in 1913 and one year later, under Toscanini's direction, at the Metropolitan Opera House. Though the composer was virtually unknown and the opera unheralded, it achieved an instantaneous success. The libretto was the work of Sem Benelli, the Italian poet and playwright. The excellence of the book no doubt contributed to the success of the opera; but Montemezzi's music received the highest praise from press and public. It is truly original, owing nothing to Puccini and very little to Verdi or Wagner. The vocal line is graceful and finely melodic. The music is continuous and free, with few recurrent themes. Of external realism there are only some fugitive touches. ¶The third operatic work by a living composer which belongs to the present century is "Der Rosenkavalier" by Richard Strauss. It marks a complete change of style from the turgid, neurotic, and melodramatic "Salomé" and "Elektra." The opera is a tour de force of brilliant orchestration which weaves a glittering web of tone fashioned out of Viennese waltz tunes and Mozartean melody. The full modern orchestra is employed with masterly skill to invest these naïve and fragmentary themes with a sophisticated and pungent quality wholly captivating. The trio of women's voices is a reminder of the "Meistersinger" quintet, and the monologue of the Marschallin is another high spot in a score that is matched perhaps only by Wagner's comic masterpiece. ¶"Salomé" and "Elektra" were performed in the United States not long after their European premières. But despite the notable impersonations of such artists as Fremstad, Mazarin, and Mary Garden the public did not take kindly to the hectic and cacophonous music and the lurid books. In recent years, notably in the season of 1937-1938, they were revived at the Metropolitan with conspicuous success. ¶Post-war composers whose contributions to opera have attracted favourable notice from the more critical and, in some cases, substantial support from the general public include Francesco Malipiero ("Pantea," "Sette Canzoni," "Le Baruffe Chiozzotte," "Orfeo"); Louis Gruenberg ("Emperor Jones"); Deems Taylor ("The King's Henchman," "Peter Ibbetson"); Alban Berg ("Wozzeck," "Lulu"); Darius Milhaud ("Christophe Colomb," "Le Pauvre Matelot," "Minute-Operas," "Juarez et Maximilien"); Paul Hindemith (three one-act operas, "Cardillac," "Neues vom Tage," "Mathis der Maler"); Mario Castelnuovo-Tedesco ("Mandragola"); Jaromir Weinberger ("Schwanda"); Ernst Krenek ("Die Zwingburg," "Der Sprung ueber den Schatten," "Orpheus," "Jonny Spielt Auf," two one-act operas, "Orest," "Das Leben Karls V"); Kurt Weill ("Mahogany," "Dreigroschenoper," "Der Jasager," "Die Burgschaft," "Der Silbersee"); Dmitri Shostakovich ("Lady Macbeth of Mzensk"). (For synopses of many of the operas mentioned see the Opera section, page 819).

THE ORATORIO

BY H. E. KREHBIEL

AN ORATORIO is a musical composition for chorus and solo voices, with orchestral accompaniment, to a poem on a religious or sacred subject, generally in narrative form, though often with dramatic episodes, but without scenery, action, or costume. The origin of the oratorio is to be found in the so-called mysteries and miracle-plays of the thirteenth and fourteenth centuries, which enacted an important part in the life of the common people. These were sung and acted, and though, on account of abuses that crept into them they were frowned upon by the Church, their popularity was never destroyed. The oratorio was brought into existence upon the model of these religious plays by St. Philip of Neri (1515-95), who recognised in them a means of opposing the influence of the Reformation upon the common people. In his chapel or oratory (whence the name oratorio) in Rome he had spiritual songs sung after sermons and other devotions, to "allure young people to pious offices." St. Philip induced capable Italian poets to write the words, and the best composers to furnish the music. By degrees the spiritual songs gave place to musical settings of sacred stories sometimes in dialogue form. The invention of dramatic recitative at the end of the sixteenth century had a marked influence on oratorio. The first to use it was Emilio Cavaliere, whose allegory, "The Soul and the Body," performed in a Roman Church, was the first oratorio corresponding to the modern form. It was, however, intended to be acted in costume, and only gradually did this feature fall into disuse. The later Italian composers, Carissimi, Stradella, Cesti and Alessandro Scarlatti, first developed the new form on the lines in which it has come down to us. Carissimi greatly improved the recitative, giving it more character and musical expressiveness than his predecessors had done, and ventured more boldly into the field of broad choral writing. Cesti and Stradella cultivated still further the natural resources of the chorus at a time when the general tendency in Italy was toward the more obvious and pleasing forms of solo song. Alessandro Scarlatti, who was one of the chief forces in this direction, also contributed to the development of the oratorio by the increased stress he put upon the solo arias in it. But on the whole, as Dr. Parry has remarked, the oratorio had to wait for representatives of more strenuous nations for its ultimate development. ¶That development was destined to come in Germany. While oratorio had thus been taking shape in Italy, there was an important movement going on in Germany by which the Passion was brought into existence. This came about, after a long line of tentative and experimental efforts, through the works of Heinrich Schütz, who had received his training in Italy and carried thence to his native land some of the new ideals of music. His first Passion was produced in 1645. The various attempts that followed this culminated in the settings by J. S. Bach. These works were intended for performance in church in Passion Week, as a religious service partly narrative, partly dramatic and partly reflective in character. The narrative was put into the mouth of the Evangelist, usually the principal tenor, who related the Passion of Christ; the personages in the story spoke for themselves. The chorus was often treated dramatically, representing the emotions of the onlookers, while the solo airs were of a piously reflective character. There was a plentiful interspersing of chorales in which the congregation joined. In the middle there was an intermission for the sermon. The Passion music was also an outgrowth of the mediæval miracle-plays, but it soon fell into disuse and displayed no vitality after the great creations of Bach, the "Passions according to St. Matthew" and "St. John," respectively, composed in the first quarter of the eighteenth century. German art was thenceforward turned into the channels of the oratorio as it was developed in Italy; and the form was brought to its highest perfection by George Frederick Handel. As thus perfected it was not, like the Passions, a part of religious exercises, nor a direct expression of devotional feeling, but epic or narrative, with certain quasi-dramatic traits and sometimes with the use of vivid local colour; but always with the most impressive use of the chorus as the most important medium of expression. Handel's first oratorio "Esther" was written in 1720 and performed first in England in 1732, oratorio being then quite unknown in that country. The long line of masterpieces he produced thereafter gave the final and definite character to the oratorio form which has remained to this day. The greatest of them are "The Messiah," "Judas Maccabæus," "Israel in Egypt," and "Samson." Handel's strength lay chiefly in broad choral writing, and it was natural that the oratorio should develop mainly on this line, as affording a vehicle for more descriptive and characteristic music, thus making up for a lack of pantomime, costume, and scenery. ¶For a considerable period after Handel's death, little of importance in the field of oratorio was produced. Haydn's "Creation" and "The Seasons," written in 1795 and 1801 respectively, still retain some of their vitality and freshness. Beethoven's "Mount of Olives" does not. Oratorios by Spohr and Schneider attained a great but transient popularity, but the next really important works in this form were Mendelssohn's "St. Paul," performed first in 1836, and "Elijah," in 1846. In both of these the dramatic element is foremost, and the musical characterisation of the various persons presented is perhaps more vivid than any previous attempts in this line. Works like Liszt's "St. Elizabeth" and Rubinstein's "Moses" are conceived as operas in which descriptive directions take the place of scenery, costume, and incident. ## THE ORCHESTRA AND ORCHESTRATION

BY W. J. HENDERSON

THE MODERN ORCHESTRA dates from the early part of the seventeenth century. Previous to that no attempts at a systematic combination of instruments can be found. The original use of the orchestra was in the accompaniments of operas, and even here the earliest combinations were fortuitous and without special purpose. The earliest writer who seemed to have distinct ideas as to instrumental effects was Claudio Monteverde (1568-1643). His orchestra was the first in which a considerable body of strings, including two violins, figured. He invented some special instrumental effects, and led the way toward the establishment of the string quartet as the foundation of the orchestra. Alessandro Scarlatti (born 1659) wrote for a string quartet similar to that employed in the present orchestra, and used oboes and flutes as his principal wind-instruments. ¶Handel (1658-1759) used all the ordinary instruments of the present orchestra except the clarinet, but not in the same combinations as those of to-day. The orchestra of his time contained a much larger number of oboes and bassoons than ours, because these instruments then were much less powerful. In the early part of the eighteenth century, when the seeds of symphonic music were just beginning to sprout, the orchestra consisted of the same body of strings as now used, but the violoncello was not yet appreciated at its true value, trumpets and tympani being added when brilliancy was needed. Clarinets had not entered the orchestra, but flutes were common. The trombone was employed only in the opera, where alone also the harp was heard. ¶Joseph Haydn (1732-1809) wrote his first symphony in 1759 for first and second violins, violas and basses, two oboes and two horns. Mozart (1756-

gr) introduced clarinets and Haydn learned their use from him, so that his D major symphony, written in 1795, is scored for 2 flutes, 2 oboes, 2 clarinets, 2 horns, 2 kettle-drums, violins, violas, 'cellos and basses, adding in the first movement 2 bassoons and 2 trumpets. In the "Eroica" he introduced a third horn, and in the fifth symphony a piccolo, a contra-bassoon and three trombones. Four horns were used in the Ninth symphony, and this work contains the entire modern orchestra, except such instruments as have since been introduced for special effects. The operatic writers in their search after dramatic colouring led the way in such introductions, and the romantic composers of symphonic music, building up their great colour schemes, were not slow to accept every suggestion. ¶Nevertheless the orchestra as now constituted is practically that of Beethoven. As ordinarily distributed it is composed of a piccolo, 2 flutes, 2 oboes, 2 clarinets, 2 bassoons, 4 horns, 2 trumpets, 3 trombones, 2 kettle-drums, first and second violins, violas, 'cellos, and basses. The wood-wind instruments are now frequently used in triplets instead of pairs, and the whole wind choir is extended at will by the use of the English horn, the bass clarinet, the tuba, the saxophone or other less common instruments. The harp is also employed at times. ¶ORCHESTRATION, the art of writing for orchestra, has developed rapidly in recent years, yet the fundamental principles are those which guided Mozart and Beethoven. The modern efforts have been in the direction of increased sonority and richness of colour. These ends are obtained by writing for a larger number of instruments and by dividing the old ones into a greater number of parts. The orchestra naturally separates itself into three groups of melodic instruments and one of merely rhythmic ones. The first three groups are the wood-wind, the brass, and the strings, and the other is the "battery," as the group of percussive instruments is called. In this last group only the kettle-drums have musical pitch, except when bells are employed. ¶The wood-wind is divided into flutes, which have no reed mouthpieces; oboes and bassoons, which have mouthpieces with two vibrating reeds; and clarinets, which have mouthpieces with one reed. Flutes used in triplets are capable of independent harmony, but all of a high pitch. Bassoons are the basses of the oboe family, and hence with two oboes and two bassoons, composers can write in full four-part harmony for this class of reed instruments, and let them play by themselves when their peculiar thin, reedy quality is desired. The English horn, the alto of the oboe, can be used as another part. Clarinets have a compass extending through the alto and soprano ranges of the human voice, while the bass clarinet covers the tenor and the bass. Here again the composer can get a full harmony in one family of wood. Thus the wood alone offers three distinct orchestral tints. But the instruments of the different families combine to make new tints. Flutes go well with clarinets or oboes, and clarinets combine admirably with bassoons. Furthermore, the whole wood-band can be used at once with fine effect. The older composers had conventional methods of writing for these instruments, almost always allotting the same parts of the harmony to the same instruments. The moderns have learned to vary this practice with excellent results. All the wood-wind instruments can be used profitably as solo voices. ¶The brass offers three groups, horns, trumpets and trombones, each of which is capable of independent harmony, while each may be combined with the other, or with any part of another to make variety of effects. All are useful for solo effects, the horn being especially good for this purpose. The brass can also be used in many combinations with the wood-wind. Horns, clarinets, and bassoons, for example, are frequently combined. The foundation of the orchestra, however, is the string quartet, as it is called, though it is really a quintet. Violins supply the soprano and alto parts of the harmony, violas part of the alto and all of the tenor; 'cellos run from bass up to low soprano, and basses give the deepest notes. The older composers made but poor use of the viola and the 'cello, but the moderns take every advantage of their compass and their individuality of timbre. Furthermore, the moderns subdivide the strings very often, writing at times for first and second violins in as many as six parts, for violas in two parts, and 'cellos in the same way. In this way the harmony becomes many-voiced and extremely rich. ¶The essential requirements of good orchestration are solidity, balance of tone, contrast and variety. Solidity is obtained by a proper distribution, among the instruments, of the notes of each chord, so that the proper sounds are made the more prominent. The foundation of solidity is good writing for the strings, the mainstay of the orchestra. Balance of tone also depends on a proper dispersal of the harmony, so that the instruments which are providing the harmonic support will not drown out the voices of those which are singing the melody. A perfect understanding of the relative powers of the various instruments is necessary to success in these two matters. Especially must the middle voices be skillfully treated to obtain solidity. If they are too loud, the effect is "muddy"; if they are too weak, the orchestra is "all top and bottom," as the musicians say. ¶Contrast is obtained by transferring the melodic ideas frequently from one of the three divisions of the orchestra to another, while variety is the result of mixing the tints. A theme is never confined to the strings, but is often handed over to the brass, or the wood-wind. But even this would not be sufficient. Consequently the various effects of mingling the voices of the different instruments, flutes and horns, or clarinets and 'cellos, or oboes and violas, are employed. The composer must, of course, know his orchestral colours thoroughly before endeavouring to mix them. Students of orchestral music will find the simplest and most solid colour schemes in the scores of the classic symphonists, while in the modern operas and symphonic works he will hear all the results of the most complex treatment of orchestral tinting. ## ORCHESTRATION OF THEATRE AND DANCE MUSIC

BY ROBERT RUSSELL BENNETT

MORE PROGRESS is seen in the orchestral treatment of light music than in any other feature of this type of entertainment, not excluding the melodic and harmonic substance of the pieces themselves. Music designed for immediate popular approval must, of course, work in the direction of the obvious, therefore it can add not more than one experimental feature to what is already well planted in the public ear, and composers do best when they can avoid even that one and still be fresh and appealing. ¶Instrumentation is not so limited; in fact great inventiveness is often shown. Its more imaginative flights are protected from popular failure by the success of the tune and the almost barbaric simplicity of the underlying rhythm, and the arranger finds himself free to borrow at will from all the striking orchestral effects of the masters with no necessity for the hearer to "analyse and understand" him. With the development of recorded music and broadcasting, orchestration assumes greater and greater importance. Robbed of one of its primary ingredients, namely the personal magnetism of the performers, music must look to so-called orchestral colour for a great portion of its individuality, if any is to be achieved. This point is hardly controversial, but if anyone questions it let him make a list of the human imperfections of playing freely pardoned and often enjoyed in the concert-hall, yet simply unpleasant when recorded or transmitted by mechanical instruments. ¶In other words, the spread of radio and phonograph over the world has tended largely to reduce ensemble playing to a chemical mixture whose component parts must be as pure as possible. (For the purposes of this article, the term music will refer to what is known as "popular," "light," "commercial," etc., and is not to be confused with the great art of music for musicians and cultured listeners, who might pardonably wonder why we spend time on the details of the scherzo—so to speak—without taking up the profounder movements of life's symphony.) ¶The vast majority of this music is first introduced in the form of songs. Every arrangement for orchestra of these songs falls into one or another formula, depending on the nature of performance intended. This formula changes and develops in each branch as new combinations are successfully tried, but there is never any very revolutionary novelty introduced with success—as a deep study of every new development will reveal. The introduction of greater or smaller combinations, the addition of unusual instruments, the sudden discovery of new playing tricks of instruments and groups of instruments already in use, and the use of the voice or voices with the orchestra to present the words of the song; all these "innovations" are made to cling desperately to the original tune or the semi-barbaric rhythms already mentioned, or both, and the result will not go down as revolutionary.

THEATRE ORCHESTRAS

With no attempt to go deeply into its history one can say that theatre music has always been composed of songs, dances, and incidental music. For many, many years the formula for the orchestral score of a "number" for the theatre was something as follows: ¶In general, a transcription for orchestra of the piano copy as printed and sold. More specifically, an introduction, vamp, verse, and chorus. The chorus was marked to repeat, with certain instruments playing the second time only, and certain others playing an octave higher on the repeat. This repeat version served either for an accompaniment to the ensemble on the stage, singing fortissimo, or for dancing, either by the chorus or by the "principals" (actors or actresses who went into their dance after singing the song through). ¶This loud refrain, or chorus—both of which terms are avoided as confusing in the music of Jerome Kern, where the word "burthen" supplants them—merits a little deeper study, as it has long remained the basis of all arrangements for the purposes enumerated above. Examining briefly the instruments and their treatment, we find something like this:

¶Flute or Flutes: portions of the melody and little variations at frequent intervals, all placed an octave higher than the soprano voice would be on the melody. ¶Oboe: the melody, in the register of the soprano voice, with certain allowances for breathing. ¶Clarinets (2): the second and third voices of the flute part. ¶Bassoon: a mixture of 'cello and bass parts, with sometimes both bass notes and afterbeats. ¶Horns (2): mostly afterbeats with an occasional sustained note or a doubling of the counter-melody of the 'cello for a few measures. ¶Trumpets (2): the melody and an accompanying line in thirds, sixths, or other pleasant-sounding harmony notes for the second trumpet. These parts were marked "second time only." ¶Trombone: bass notes, occasionally the melody and occasionally the counter-melody of the 'cello, also marked "second time only." ¶Drums: "oom-pahs" in the loud version—that is—bass-drum and attached cymbal on the bass beats and snare-drum on the afterbeats. Sometimes the strain was written out, with bells (glockenspiel) playing the first time through, principally on the melody, and drums for the repeat. ¶First Violin or Violins: the melody, marked "8 va 2nd time." ¶Second Violin: afterbeats, arranged so as to form a full chord with the viola, for the most part by means of double stops, the lower note of which was usually lower than the higher note of the: ¶Viola, which served as a "big second fiddle" and completed the harmony of the afterbeats. ¶Cello: a counter-melody, or low harmony note under the melody of the first violin. This counter was preferably on the A string and was sustained in character especially if the tune of the composition was not. ¶Bass: the bass notes, arco or pizzicato. It is to be borne in mind that this whole strain served, played softly and as marked, for a vocal accompaniment to soli voices on the stage the first time through. All instruments marked "2nd time only" joined in during the "1st Ending" (or "First Time Bars," as they call it in England) and proceeded with the repeat version, ff as just described. This briefly detailed résumé is given, not to indicate that it was the first orchestral make-up of a popular refrain, nor that it continued in vogue for a longer period than some other way has or will in the future, but chiefly because it assumes importance as the starting point for all that has followed. ¶It is well to avoid individual names in a study of this kind, but two names, one well known and the other quite obscure, are indispensable. These names are Victor Herbert and Frank Saddler. The former influenced theatre orchestration tremendously by enriching the pattern described above in several details; the latter by the introduction of combinations of colours and flights of imagination that lead to practically all the subsequent styles employed by the countless band arrangers of our era. Victor Herbert was a great musician in every sense of the word—his knowledge of the classics was such that he conducted symphony orchestras for many seasons without reference to scores during rehearsal or concert, and his feeling for the structure of a sound orchestration was infallible. His only concern in the arrangement of his operettas was the simplest, most effective method of presenting his charming melodies, and his technical contributions to our formula were the result of no search for unusual sounds, but merely of his desire to make his music sound as beautiful as possible. Frank Saddler, however, was not at home with the broader beauties of a Victor Herbert style of arrangement. He was a champion of small orchestras, filling up his refrain with charming tricks of muted brass, unexpected bass progressions, pizzicato effects, duets for two violins against the melody in the lower instruments and many other devices. The main addition of Victor Herbert was the dividing of the violins into three or more expressive parts, the high vibrant 'cello just beneath the melody, and the dramatic, full-sounding brass choir at the climaxes. He detested the usual variations of the flutes and clarinets and kept them low, simple and sonorous. ¶Frank Saddler wrote no operettas of his own. He was an orchestrator, versatile and inventive, with a fine ear for every novel effect of the great writers of symphonic music and a genius for adapting their tricks to the current musical-comedy tunes. His arrangements fairly sparkled and a melody of no distinction whatsoever became alluring in his interpretation. No subsequent arranging has done more for the tunes themselves than Saddler's although much has been added to his technique. It is not too much to say that he established once and for all the position of the orchestrator as a personality quite apart from the composer of the songs. He is responsible for the fact that even composers who can make creditable arrangements for the orchestra decline to do so in view of the great advantage to their melodies of having new and equally inspired brains create the orchestrations. ¶Continuing a bit on the technical side, one feature that both of these men struggled for was not fully realised until after their death. Both had visions of emancipating the second violins and violas so that they might play cantabile—with the first violins and 'celli—instead of incessant short afterbeats. Saddler eliminated second violins or rather included them with the firsts, and left the rhythm to two or more divided violas. (See the opening bars of Mozart's G Minor Symphony for a perfect example of this distribution.) Herbert at times left the rhythm to the harp, often used in metropolitan theatres, whilst his second fiddles soared away with the firsts. After both of these gifted men had passed away a new style of guitar playing came into being and, with a piano or two and a very much refined and softened pulse of drums, solved the oom-pah problem completely and left all other instruments free to indulge in counterpoint or their particular rendition of the melody. Not all music will admit of such an accompaniment but the majority will and the seconds and violas have gone free! ¶Theatre orchestration was undoubtedly the main source of ideas for dance orchestras, at first in its effect on the printed arrangements from which all dance bands played and, later, as the bands elaborated on these printed arrangements, in its more imaginative combinations. However, the use of saxophones, which dates back much farther than one might think, added great possibilities to the dance combinations, and eventually the saxes, plus the rhythm combination of piano (or pianos) and guitar, invaded the theatre and coloured its music. Saxophones are of great value because they are easy to play and can almost be "sung" on without great concern over technical difficulties such as beset flutes, oboes, bassoons, and even clarinets. This does not mean that anyone with a good ear can play them, but a good clarinetist, for example, feels he is on a vacation when playing alto or tenor saxophone. ¶Naturally their development has taken a turn not purely technical. They have grown in warmth of tone and lip and tongue effects, and they are the last answer (up to this writing) to an arranger's prayer when he deals with small bands. They can play loud enough not to be drowned out by trumpets and trombones, and in the softer bits, their peculiar timbre seems to combine low strings, horn, bassoon, and human voice tone, so that (always remembering the simple chord structure of the type of music we are concerned with) the sensitive ear of the sincere musician must acknowledge the live, vibrant pulse they add to an orchestra with inadequate strings, horns and low winds. ¶ This becomes even more important where rhythm is the prime factor, since it is almost axiomatic that the smaller the group the better and cleaner the rhythm. ¶ In the theatre as one sits in the back rows of a crowded house with a "legitimate" (i.e., saxless) orchestra, the impression is that there are two moods in the orchestration—with brass, and without brass. With saxophones added one is distinctly conscious of three colours: one with predominating brass, and one with wood-wind and saxes. This leaves the "without brass" mood still to be used for the tenderer, more delicate moments and we have actually gained one whole colour. This is of course speaking very broadly of the effect when seeing the show for the first time, and wasting no time listening consciously to the orchestra. ¶ It would be silly to say that theatre music cannot do without saxophones. Many productions are so conceived that the tone would be entirely out of place—vulgar and blasphemous. Their great value to the majority of shows is nevertheless incontestable.

This is not meant to be a lesson in theatre arrangements for orchestrators, yet a few of the problems of this most limited of all orchestration jobs will be interesting to all music-lovers. ¶ In the first place the general rule to observe is that we are not arranging for the concert stage but for the orchestra pit, and the broad brush of the opera composer is more our pattern than the more precious pastels of symphonists. Not at any time during the performance are we given the undivided attention of the audience. Even overtures, entr'actes and outmarches are accompaniments to a babble of the audience's own conversation and movement, and the orchestra must either be so garish as to stop momentarily the flow of talk or resign itself to the enhancing of a general mood of enjoyment while being practically ignored. The latter is by far the safer plan. ¶ In accompanying singers of the musical-comedy stage, a great problem was presented when the popular fancy turned away from big voices to little, thin ones of personal appeal but no vocal power. This necessitated for years the presence of the melody strongly played in the orchestra, since the singer would leave some doubt as to just what the melody was if left to his or her own devices in the matter. Not until the use of microphones, which transform a "croon" into a full vocal tone, was it thought possible to make the orchestration into a pure accompaniment. Somehow a wave of such orchestration followed the radio and motion-picture boom. High sustained violins (divided), piano, guitars, and pizzicato bass for rhythm, low sustained wood-wind (maybe sax, pianissimo) or a harmless counter-melody in low unison clarinets, with trumpets and trombones chirping out the moment the voice pauses for breath—that became the accepted architecture of song orchestration when voices were "miked." ¶ It is also used where no loud-speaker system is present. The reason is vague but somehow the hammering of the public ear by "miked" music has caused voices to grow fuller and more penetrating when left unaided. ¶ When the full chorus comes on and the dance begins the orchestra comes nearer to being the feature than at any other time in the show. As suggested above, before the use of saxophones the full brass was indispensable throughout the whole dance except on rare occasions when a delicate four-measure phrase came as a surprise (and "got by" the producer of the show). After the development of the sax it was possible to carry a few measures on the winds for variety, giving the brass a short rest for higher and louder doings later. ¶If we take up the cinema as a part of theatre orchestration we are concerned not so much with music as with sound. In recording, a solo muted violin can be made to drown out a full orchestra playing fff by means of a small dial. This may bring up many different possibilities in the facile mind, but the final condition is something like this: The limit of effect is merely the limit of the orchestrator's imagination. There is practically nothing ineffective, there are no boundaries of safe combination of instruments, there is no art in doubling or reinforcing in different sections of the orchestra. All this is theoretically true because of the curious feature known as sound-mixing. However, a sound, well-balanced orchestration renders the task of recording, both by the conductor of the orchestra and by the sound-mixer, very much easier. Although it harnesses the mind of the orchestrator very much as the original art of theatre orchestration has, it makes possible a much simpler system of microphones, and brings a consequent saving in terms of a great deal of time and money for the studios. At least one of the film industry's best musical directors prefers to play the music all into one "mike" and of course the orchestration must in this case be practically as well made as for the concert platform. The orchestras used are in most cases larger than for theatres and an experienced arranger knows that the larger the band the easier his task. As one fine orchestrator, Stephen O. Jones, once said when told of a great orchestration someone had made for a fifty-piece band, "Who can't make a good one for that sized bunch?"

DANCE ORCHESTRAS

Years ago when trumpets were more than hazardous in their upper tones, a coloured band had a star player who, after many attempts at a high C sounding B flat, finally resigned himself to missing it and substituting the major second lower which comes out with the same fingering and less effort of the lips (for the studious reader, he sounded the seventh tone of the harmonic series—rather false in intonation—instead of the eighth, for which he was striving). Who shall say that this resultant seventh was not the sire of the W. C. Handy-George Gershwin-Darius Milhad line of "blues" chords that found such a vogue? ¶Likewise in the heart of Kansas there was (also years ago) a small orchestra with no 'cello player. One harness maker had an E flat alto saxophone and one day he discovered that he could read the 'cello part. Looking at a 'cello part one sees at once that all he had to do was use a little imagination in the key signature and read it in the G (treble) clef, and the missing 'cello was missed no more. Who will take the trouble to go farther in a search for the birth of the sax choir in our dance bands? The treatment of this choir by the best dance-arrangers lends credence to the theory at least. This of course ceases to apply when the saxes are doubling on other instruments, a practice that has grown universal since they were introduced. ¶The art of doubling, an art so advanced that many an arrangement for the modern dance orchestra has the names of persons in place of the names of instruments in the wood-wind section, has carried the matter of colouring to an almost fantastic point. Instead of the accustomed "1st Clarinet in B♭" we see on the score

"Elmer," followed by the first measure of his part over which appears "Flute in G" or "Oboe" or "Bb Tenor" or whatever other instrument Elmer owns and the orchestrator needs. A wood-wind section of six players will give you at various intervals all the tone combinations of a full symphony orchestra's wood-wind, plus beautifully-played saxophones, plus a light-hearted and enthusiastic quality to whatever phrase is played, making up for the lack of virtuosity with spirit and a feeling for ensemble not always obtainable in the larger orchestras. ¶Dance orchestration has long since taken its place as the most imaginative and productive of all arranging. Bands that remain together for long periods develop what is known by the over-worked name of "style" to a degree not possible in any other group. Very much as the old glee clubs and minstrels used to do, the modern dance band discovers its most striking effects in rehearsal and playing. Usually the arranger is one of the band himself and he is thus "in" at the inception of any new twist the players discover. To make the point clearer, a trombonist may arrive at a rehearsal and, in warming his instrument up, play some phrase with a certain personal amplification—some slur with lips instead of the slide, a "rip" which is a series of grace notes up to a high tone, made possible by the harmonic series, playable with no change of slide or valve position, or a hundred other little variations on the usual. Another player hears it or he calls the other's attention to it, they gather in one or two more players and a new find in orchestration is realized. If the effect is sufficiently appealing it sweeps the land; if not it is tried and soon discarded. ¶A glossary of terms such as "rip," "flare," "lick," "break," "release," "redow," etc., provocative as they are, would be of little value because they are out-moded so quickly that a student who took the trouble to learn them would risk that most damning of all stigmas—"corny" (originally "corn-fed," the jazz-player's translation of the French "rococo"). ¶Each of these terms and a great many others may be safely assumed to have grown up in the course of rehearsal and playing by individual instrumentalists, as already described. Not all of the names were originated with the players who discovered the tricks, in fact the majority of the names spring from the picturesque vernacular of the Negro bands. These Negro bands, incidentally, are in a class by themselves as to rhythm, a fact probably due to a simpler set of vibrations in the bodies themselves, but that would be for a student of something besides music to say. In many ways they are pioneers in dance music and a number of them can boast of splendid musicians as their arrangers. They have influenced enormously all popular music, which is not surprising if we consider that the American contribution to popular music is the direct offspring of the "Coon Song." Were it not for the Viennese and English ingredients in our finest operettas we could merely say, "The Negroes continue to set the pace in light music." ¶The "Coon Song" got a new name in Ragtime. Ragtime was later christened Jazz. Jazz became trite as a name before the music did, so its name was again changed to Swing Music. Swing Music became rococo—corny if you like—as a title, but hearts still beat oom-pah, oom-pah, and so do dancing feet; and all nature, bisected, according to Emerson, by an inevitable dualism, continues under different names to go oom-pah, oom-pah, oom-pah, oom-pah. (See "Orchestras and Orchestration," page 778; "Orchestra and Band Instruments," page 811; "Orchestras in America," page 787; and Dictionary of Terms entry, page 648.)

ORCHESTRAS IN AMERICA

BY LEONARD LIEBLING

SYMPHONY ORCHESTRAS in the best sense are a comparatively recent development in America, which did not become generally interested in such organisations until about three hundred and fifty years after its discovery. Previously there had been many small and sporadic instrumental ensembles, but it was not until about the middle of the nineteenth century that symphonic bodies came into existence which approximated those then flourishing in Europe. ¶Singing, largely psalmodic, constituted almost the sole tonal utterance of the early settlers and found its greatest practise in New England after the 1620 landing at Plymouth Rock. Instrumental music was banned not only in church but also in the homes, the good Pilgrim Fathers basing their ban on the Bible passage in Amos, v. 23, "I will not hear the melody of thy viols." Four-part hymns represented the ultimate in harmony until well into the eighteenth century. ¶While the New England Puritans were making up their minds whether it was impious even to sing and not merely read the psalms, Palestrina, Vittoria, and Lassus had already composed monumental choral music; oratorios and lyrical and sacred music dramas (soon to blossom into opera) were winning popularity abroad; and soon after, Purcell, Bach, Handel, the Scarlattis, and others grandly gifted, perfected great forms for pure instrumental music. ¶Beethoven was born in the same year that saw the Boston tanner, William Billings, publish his first crude composition, "The New England Psalm-Singer or American Chorister." In 1713 the first organ came to Boston from England. Other instruments imported by the early colonists were the harpsichord, pianoforte, violin, bass viol ('cello), flute, clarinet, and bassoon. Accompaniments for the choir, after instruments slipped into the church, usually consisted of a flute, bassoon, and bass viol. Frequently only the last-named supported the voices. In 1786 the Stoughton, Mass., Musical Society was organised and performed excerpts from oratorios, accompanied by small groups of instruments. In 1798 Gottlieb Graupner, a German who played in Haydn's orchestra in London (1791-92), went to Boston where he put together the nucleus of the first meagre combination which could at all be considered an orchestra. Then in 1810, with mostly amateurs, he founded a "Philharmonic Society," which met socially and practised Haydn's symphonies. Subsequently, public concerts were held, the last one in 1824, with an orchestra of sixteen—violins, a viola, 'cello, double-bass, flute, clarinet, bassoon, French horn, trumpet, tympani. ¶In 1839 Boston had its Academy Orchestra, started by Henry Schmidt, who at the eight concerts in 1841 introduced the city to Beethoven's First and Fifth symphonies. When the group disbanded in 1847, Boston had made favourites of six of the nine Beethoven symphonies, as well as Mendelssohn's "Scotch," Haydn's "Militaire," and Mozart's "Jupiter." From twenty-four to forty players performed those works. The society's annual report for 1843 mentions that the season brought for the first time a conductor (Professor Webb) who used a bâton and did not play in the orchestra himself. ¶Succeeding the Academy, came the Musical Fund (1852) with about sixty players, and lasting a number of years. Other aggregations were formed on and off, the only one having a tolerably long life being the Orchestra Society with concerts under the auspices and management of the Harvard Musical Association, born in 1837 at a meeting of the Pierian Sodality composed of alumni of Harvard College. The Harvard Musical Association also had its own orchestra from 1865 to 1882, and prepared the way for the Boston Symphony Orchestra, whose outstanding activity began in 1881 through the generosity of Colonel Henry Lee Higginson, Boston banker, for the next thirty-seven years the sole guarantor of the operating funds. George Henschel was the initial conductor and remained for three years. In 1884-85 he was succeeded by Wilhelm Gericke who improved the orchestra by importing players from Europe. After five years came Artur Nikisch, and for the next four seasons the orchestra rose to a peak of excellence which has never declined since. Emil Paur followed Nikisch for five years. In 1898 Gericke was recalled and stayed until 1905-06 when Karl Muck came from Berlin for two years. Max Fiedler reigned from 1908 to 1912. Then Muck was again the leader until 1918, followed by Henri Rabaud for a single season, Pierre Monteux for five, and some guest conductors until Serge Koussevitzky, the present incumbent, took the bâton in 1924. In 1918 the orchestra was incorporated, and is sponsored financially by a board of directors, fortified by a $1,000,000 endowment fund left by Colonel Higginson. The orchestra's home concerts are held in its own auditorium, Symphony Hall. ¶[New York started its orchestral cultivation with a wind band in 1773. Small mixed ensembles appeared there during the next score of years but had a hard time of it. Some of them, as told in the records, were cat-called, vegetable-pelted, and rotten-egged when they tried to introduce Haydn symphonies. Auditors shouted for "Yankee Doodle" and other patriotic tunes. In the 1820s a philharmonic society existed which gave two concerts each year "for the aid of widows and orphans of deceased members." However progressive as New York and Boston tried to be, those future great cities were shamed by Upper Marlborough, Md., where in 1752 an orchestra was employed at a performance of Gay's "The Beggar's Opera." It should be remembered, too, that the first mention of French horns in America came from Benjamin Franklin, who wrote of the fine music in the church at Bethlehem, Pa., where flutes, oboes, French horns and trumpets were accompanied by the organ. ¶Until 1842, the Euterpean Society and the Musical Fund ("Funds" of that period were bodies that provided old-age pensions and insurance for their members) functioned as the leading orchestras of New York. The Fund, all professionals, gave a concert in 1836 with thirty-eight players (two clarinets played the oboe parts) conducted by Alfred Boucher, a 'cellist. The programme included Beethoven's "Eroica" symphony, arranged as a septet. Another commendable project was the Concordia led by Daniel Schlesinger which met in a private room at Delmonico's restaurant. ¶Ureli C. Hill, a New York violinist, studied with Spohr at Cassel, Germany, in 1836, and after his return to his native city felt that it should have an orchestra like the London Philharmonic Society. He kept on doggedly with his idea until he persuaded other New York musicians to join in it. They held a meeting at the Apollo Rooms, April 2, 1842, and organised the Philharmonic Society, with many of the Euterpeans as members. Weekly rehearsals followed until the first concert, December 7, 1842, given at Apollo Hall, a ballroom on Broadway near Canal Street. Four of the members acted as ushers, wearing white kid gloves and carrying long white wands provided by the society. The whole orchestra, except the 'cellists, stood while performing. The players numbered fifty-two. Three concerts were given in the first season, four the next year. By 1854 the membership had increased to sixty-seven, and in 1867 there were ninety-nine. The orchestra was coöperative, appointed its own manager and conductor, and profits went pro rata to the players. After the first season each one received a dividend of $25. In 1855 the amount had increased to $65. ¶Conductors of the first seven seasons of the Philharmonic were U. C. Hill, H. C. Timm, W. Alpers, G. Loder, L. Wieggers, D. G. Etienne, A. Boucher. In 1849 Theodor Eisfeld was chosen sole conductor and after 1854 alternated with Carl Bergmann until the former resigned in 1865-66. Bergmann continued to function until he was succeeded by Dr. Leopold Damrosch in 1876. The next season Theodore Thomas was appointed, Adolf Neuendorff replaced him a year later, and in 1879 Thomas returned, who directed until 1891, when the bâton fell to Anton Seidl. Emil Paur held the leader's stand up to 1902. Walter Damrosch won a single season, 1903, after which the guest-conductor system obtained during 1904-05-06 with a long list of distinguished leaders. Wassili Safonoff headed the orchestra 1906-09; Gustav Mahler 1909-11; Josef Stransky 1911-23 (the final two seasons in conjunction with Willem Mengelberg); Mengelberg, half seasons, the rest of the periods filled by Artur Bodanzky, Henry Hadley (American programmes), Willem van Hoogstraten, Ernest Schelling (children's concerts), Igor Stravinsky, Arturo Toscanini (guest, 1926), Wilhelm Furtwaengler; until in 1927-28, Toscanini began his regular connection, after which he was chief to 1935-36, with associates Mengelberg, Beecham, Molinari, Richard Strauss, Ossip Gabrilowitsch, Erich Kleiber, Bruno Walter, Issay Dobrowen, Hans Lange, Werner Janssen, Otto Klemperer, Artur Rodzinski. In 1936-37 John Barbirolli became the regular conductor, with Rodzinski, Carlos Chavez, Georges Enesco, Igor Stravinsky as associates. ¶In 1912 Joseph Pulitzer, proprietor of the New York World, bequeathed $500,000 to the Philharmonic, an endowment later said to be doubled. From 1917 the Philharmonic finances have been guaranteed by a board of directors. In 1930 the Philharmonic made a highly successful European tour with Toscanini. ¶During the course of its existence the Philharmonic has absorbed the National Symphony, City Symphony, American Orchestral Society and New York Symphony, and its concerts were held successively in Apollo Hall, Broadway Tabernacle, Assembly Rooms, Apollo Salon, Niblo's Concert Salon, Metropolitan Hall, Niblo's Garden, Academy of Music, Irving Hall, Steinway Hall, Metropolitan Opera House, and Carnegie Hall, the present location of the Philharmonic when it is not appearing in the summer at the Stadium of the College of the City of New York. ¶In 1878 Dr. Leopold Damrosch founded the New York Symphony Society in competition with Theodore Thomas' own orchestra, and the rivalry of the two groups did much to acquaint New York with the classical masterpieces and the newest creations of Europe. Damrosch and Thomas were the leading musical personalities and educators of their time, as Hill and Bergmann had been before them. After Damrosch's death, in 1885, his son Walter took over the Symphony Society and was its sole conductor until he invited Felix Weingartner as co-leader for the season of 1905-06. Thereafter the younger Damrosch resumed entire charge until he associated himself with radio activities in 1928 when his enterprise was merged with the Philharmonic whose official title became Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra. In 1920 the New York Symphony made a European tour financed by H. H. Flagler, who for ten years generously acted as the sole guarantor of the orchestra, in the amount of about $100,000 annually. Walter Damrosch's further creditable contributions to American musical development were his founding of symphony concerts for children, his devotion to the works of Wagner (when that composer still needed championing in the New World), and his prevailing upon Andrew Carnegie to build the great concert-hall named after him, for whose opening festivities Tchaikovsky was brought from Russia to conduct several programmes. ¶Theodore Thomas' personal series commenced in 1864. In 1866 he started his summer concerts at Terrace Garden; in 1877 he moved to Central Park Gardens. During the winters, Thomas toured the country with his orchestra from 1869 to 1878. Just before the turn of the century he gave several winter seasons of Sunday-evening concerts at Lenox Lyceum. ¶America had early visits from European orchestras, notably those of Joseph Gungl (1849) from Berlin, and Louis Julien (1853) from Paris, whose solo double-bass player was the celebrated Bottesini. Julien carried ninety-seven players, the largest aggregation of symphonists the United States had then experienced. He introduced the one-composer programme, devoted to Beethoven, Mozart, Mendelssohn, et al. A number of the men imported by Gungl and Julien remained in this country and joined native orchestras, thereby raising their proficiency. Many other highly competent players emigrated here after the 1848 political troubles in Europe. An American travelling orchestra was the Germania, led by the estimable Carl Bergmann. All those touring bands awakened a large part of America to orchestral appreciation and undoubtedly inspired many cities to think seriously of possessing symphonic organisations of their own. ¶During the present century New York had, aside from the orchestras mentioned, the Young Men's Symphony (conductor, Arnold Volpe), Amicitia (amateur), Russian, Symphony (Modest Altschuler), Manhattan (Henry Hadley), Seidl (Anton Seidl), which gave concerts at Brighton Beach, National (Stransky and Bodanzky), Friends of Music (Bodanzky), and numerous lesser intermittent projects of symphonic and chamber-music size. European visitors were the London Symphony (Nikisch), Paris Conservatoire (Messager), La Scala (Toscanini). Orchestras from other cities that have appeared in the metropolis for guest concerts are those of Chicago, Minneapolis, Cincinnati, Elizabeth, N. J. Philadelphia and Boston send their orchestras for regular annual series. There are also courses by the National Orchestral Association (a training medium for young professionals) led by Leon Barzin, and the Women's Symphony Orchestra under Antonia Brico. Several other major cities, too, have female orchestras. ¶The example of Boston and New York spurred their sister cities to emulation and despite high costs, groups of interested sponsors raised funds for orchestras in their own communities or arranged for visits from touring orchestras. Philadelphia had its Musical Fund Society, 1820-57, and Chicago its Philharmonic Society, 1860-68. Milwaukee supported its Musik Verein, organised in 1849-50. Cincinnati had an orchestra as early as 1856; St. Louis in 1838; reorganised in 1859. As late as 1890, however, Boston and New York boasted the only recognised permanent orchestras in the United States. ¶This running review shall not attempt to outline all the pioneer attempts to create orchestras throughout the land but must content itself with the mention of only the chief ones now existing. Chicago's eminent orchestra was founded 1891 by Theodore Thomas, with a guarantee fund raised by popular subscription. Later through the same agency and the help of wealthy Chicagoans, Orchestra Hall was built as a permanent home for the orchestra. Philadelphia's famous orchestra dates from 1890 and was incorporated in 1903. Fritz Scheel led the initial seasons. The present conductors are Leopold Stokowski and Eugene Ormandy. Cincinnati's orchestra was started 1895 (by the Ladies' Musical Club) under Michael Brand. Some later conductors were Theodore Thomas, Frank van der Stucken, Ernst Kunwald, Eugene Ysaye, Leopold Stokowski, Fritz Reiner. At present, Eugene Goossens is the director, in the orchestra's own Music Hall. St. Louis's orchestra, founded 1880, grew out of the local choral society. In 1900 it became an independent organisation. Now its head is Vladimir Golschmann. Kansas City has a Philharmonic dating from 1933 under Karl Krueger. Omaha entered the field importantly in 1924; San Francisco in 1911, with Henry Hadley and later, Alfred Hertz; present conductor, Pierre Monteux. San Francisco's was the first major symphonic body to admit women to its playing membership. Los Angeles, 1919, called Walter Rothwell to take charge of its new Philharmonic Orchestra. Present conductor, Otto Klemperer. Minneapolis entered the symphonic lists in 1903, with Emil Oberhoffer, and he led until his retirement, being succeeded by Henri Verbrugghen. Present conductor, Dimitri Mitropoulos. Washington, D. C., had abortive orchestras (one under Reginald De Koven) until 1931, when the National Symphony came under Hans Kindler, at present still its leader. Baltimore was another city early interested in orchestral practise, but a permanent body did not eventuate until 1915. Present conductor of its Symphony Orchestra is Werner Janssen. Rochester, N. Y., has two orchestras; one connected with the Eastman School of Music and under Howard Hanson; the other, the Philharmonic, founded by George Eastman in 1922. In 1936 Jose Iturbi was appointed permanent conductor with Guy Fraser Harrison as associate. Cleveland's larger orchestra began in 1918 under the auspices of the Fine Arts Association. Nikolai Sokoloff conducted for fifteen years, to be succeeded by Artur Rodzinski. The orchestra has its own home, Severance Hall, one of the finest concert auditoriums in America. ¶Others of the larger orchestras and their leaders are: Birmingham, Ala., Dorsey Whittington; Denver, Horace E. Tureman; Hartford, Conn., Jacques Gordon; Jacksonville, Fla., Clarence Carter; Atlanta, Ga., George F. Lindner; Indianapolis, Ind., Fabien Sevitzky; Des Moines, Ia., William A. Moore; New Orleans, La., Arthur Zack; Fall River, Mass., Ray Groff; Worcester, Mass., Walter Howe; Detroit, Mich., Franco Ghione and Victor Kolar; Grand Rapids, Mich., Karl Wecker; Duluth, Minn., Paul Lemay; Elizabeth, N. J., August May; Newark, N. J., Essex County Symphony, Alexander Smallens; Trenton, N. J., Guglielmo Sabatini; Buffalo, N. Y., Franco Autori; Syracuse, N. Y., André Pólah; Albany, N. Y., William Penny Hacker; Columbus, O., Earle Hopkins; Dayton, O., Paul Katz; Toledo, O., Joseph Sainton; Youngstown, O., Michael and Carmine Ficcocelli; Oklahoma City, Okla., Ralph Rose; Seattle, Wash., Nikolai Sokoloff; Erie, Pa., John R. Metcalf; Pittsburgh, Pa., Fritz Reiner; Reading, Pa., Dr. Hans Kindler; Scranton, Pa., Dr. Felix M. Gatz; Providence, R. I., Dr. Wassily Leps; Dallas, Tex., Jacques Singer; Fort Worth, Tex., Brooks Morris; Houston, Tex., Ernst Hoffman.

San Antonio, Tex., Walter Dunham; Norfolk, Va., Henry C. Whitehead; Richmond, Va., Dr. Laird Waller; Tacoma, Wash., Eugene Linden; Milwaukee, Wis., Dr. Sigfrid Parger. ¶American interest in orchestral concerts is wide and growing constantly (helped by the sale of phonograph records and radio performances), only a few large cities being without permanent orchestras supported by private guarantors or municipal funds. The number of orchestras has increased considerably during the past several years, through the activities of the Federal Music Project, in the endeavour to furnish occupation for unemployed musicians. ¶The cost of maintaining a first-class symphony orchestra is high, having risen gradually because of the players' fees demanded by their unions. According to figures revealed at a recent St. Louis meeting of orchestral managers, the total annual expenditure of thirteen major orchestras was $4,346,500. Their earned income amounted to $2,782,100, leaving a deficit of $1,564,400, met by maintenance funds, endowment income and special gifts. The largest single deficit was $178,000, and the least, $57,000. To-day some of the first-desk players receive as much as $200 per week—contrasted with the $25 for a whole season which the members got individually from the New York Philharmonic in 1842. ¶This article omits mention of orchestral developments in the fields of radio (where the National Broadcasting Company established its dignified air-orchestra under the aegis of Toscanini, December 25, 1937) and grand and light opera, subjects treated elsewhere in these pages. However, attention is called to the excellent symphony orchestras in some of the leading moving-picture theatres, the best example being Radio City Music Hall in New York, where Erno Rapee functions as chief conductor and daily lists at least one symphonic composition, frequently a movement or two from a symphony. It is estimated that nearly 4,000,000 persons constitute the annual audiences at Music Hall. ¶Add the audiences which crowd the winter concert-halls and the summer series at the New York Stadium, Boston Symphony Hall, Philadelphia Dell, Hollywood Bowl and other outdoor places, and it will be seen that an enormous proportion of the population in America is regularly devoted to the best symphonic communion. ¶In concluding review, let it be repeated that the orchestras which have done most for American musical advancement are those of Boston and New York; and that the conductors similarly to be credited are Ureli Hill, Carl Bergmann, Theodore Thomas, Wilhelm Gericke, Artur Nikisch, the two Damroschs, Anton Seidl, and Arturo Toscanini. ## ORGAN*

BY RUPERT HUGHES

THOUGH MANY INSTRUMENTS are loosely called organs (such as the mouth-organ, hand-organ, etc.), the word is generally given to the pipe-organ, a microcosmic

*A comment on the old organ is included here since so many organs over the country, still in use, were installed before the invention of electrical manuals and blowers.

wind-instrument which contains in its forest of resources almost all the powers and qualities of almost all other instruments. In the course of time while its powers have grown ever greater, their control has become always easier and more centralised. ¶The HISTORY of the organ is, in any completeness, beyond the space of this work. Its prototypes are the primeval Pan's pipes and the bagpipe. The 2d century B.C. finds it with a key-board, and pipes supplied by bellows with air compressed by water. Ctesibius (170 B.C.) invented this water-organ (Organon hydraulicon) which his pupil Heron described in Greek. There are many accounts and representations of organs from that point on. The mediæval monks used organs abundantly, the pipes being 8 to 15 in number and of no greater than 4-ft. length, the range being usually one octave from middle c' downward, the key-board consisting of lettered plates to be pressed. In the 10th century there was at Winchester, England, an organ with 2 manuals for 2 performers, 20 digitals each, and 10 pipes to each digital, 400 in all. In the 12th century the pipes began to be divided into registers or stops (q. v.). For two centuries the action became so clumsy that keys were struck with fists or elbows. Pedals were invented about 1325. Till the 15th century, reed pipes were unknown. Since that time the resources have been vastly increased, the variety of tone rendered almost illimitable, and the introduction of water, steam or electric aid to work the bellows has displaced the need of a man to serve as organ-pumper or bellows-treader. Electricity has also been called into play for bringing remote parts of the organ into convenient control, till the performer with his draw-knobs has almost as easy command as the conductor with his bâton. ¶The CONSTRUCTION of the manual organ [as distinguished from the newer type, whose operation, both as to stops and wind-supply, is largely electrical] is too complicated for detail, but many of the terms following will be found more fully explained under their separate heads. When looking at a manual organ, in a church for example, the eye is first caught by the great array of pipes. These ornamental or display-pipes (some of which may be only for show, dummy-pipes) conceal many plain pipes of wood or metal, which are of various shapes and sizes, according to the quality and pitch of the tone of the pipe (q. v.). These pipes are grouped together into registers or stops (q. v.), each being of uniform quality of tone and furnishing a complete or partially complete scale (or series of pipes of graduated lengths). Though these pipes are merely colossal flutes, oboes, trumpets, etc. (each pipe, however, sounding only one tone), they are too large to be blown by human lungs, and an elaborate mechanism is used. This is concealed from the eye, which sees only the series of key-boards for the hands and feet, and the multitude of little draw-knobs grouped within easy reach. ¶Of these key-boards the numbers vary, those for the hands, the manuals, being from 1 to 5 in number and appearing in the following order counting from below, and giving both English and foreign names:

| ENGLISH                  | GERMAN               | FRENCH          | ITALIAN                               |
|--------------------------|----------------------|-----------------|---------------------------------------|
| Choir                    | Unterwerk ( " II)    | Positif         | (2 <sup>e</sup> " ) Organo di coro.   |
| Swell (Sw.)              | Schwellwerk ( " III) | Clav. de récit  | (3 <sup>e</sup> " ) " d'expressione.  |
| Solo                     | Soloklavier ( " IV)  | " des bombardes | (4 <sup>e</sup> " ) " d'assolo.       |
| Echo                     | Echoklavier ( " V)   | " d'écho        | (5 <sup>e</sup> " ) " d'eco.          |

Each of these key-boards may be said to control a separate instrument or partial organ; and one often speaks of the choir-organ, swell organ, etc. ¶The pedal-

key-board, Pedalklavatur (pā-dāl'-klā-fi-ä-toor'), G., or clavier des pédales (klāv-yā-dā-pā-dāl') Fr., or pedallera (pā-dāl-lā'-rā), I., is worked by the feet and is also a separate instrument with stops of its own (vide PEDAL). ¶By means of couplers, any two of these key-boards (manuals or pedals) may be connected; or they may all be combined into the full-organ. The coupling-action is worked by draw-knobs. ¶The organ as a whole, then, is divided into three chief parts: (1) The action (key-boards and stops). (2) The pipe-work. (3) The wind-supply. The action we have examined. The pipes (vide PIPE and STOP) are set upright above the wind-chest, the cover of which is called the sound-board; the lower part of the pipe, passing through an upper-board, which grips its nose, sets its foot in the pipe-rack; below this is a slider (worked by a draw-knob), a thin strip of wood with a hole for each pipe of its particular stop. ¶(4) The wind is collected from the outer air by bellows and led by feeders into a storage-bellows, where it is compressed by heavy weights; it is next led by a wooden channel or wind-trunk into a wooden reservoir, or wind-chest, the top of which (the sound-board) is pierced by grooves closed by valves or pallets, and separated by bars. ¶To play the organ, we first pull out a draw-knob, which drags along a slider until its holes are beneath the feet of the pipes of its stop. This stop is now said to be on (before being brought into play it was off). Having also pulled out a draw-knob setting the wind-supply to work, we next press down one of the digitals on the key-board whose stop we have drawn: In pressing down this digital lever we raise its opposite end, which lifts an upright rod (a sticker), this in turn raising the front end of a horizontal lever (or back-fall) whose rear end is thus depressed and pulls down a thin upright strip of wood (a tracker) which in turn pulls a wire (a pull-down or pallet-wire) fastened to a valve (or pallet) which opens and lets the air (which was waiting in the groove from the wind-chest) rush up through the slider into the pipe to make it sound or speak. (Squares and roller-boards sometimes intervene between the stickers and trackers, while pneumatic or electric actions give still more direct connection between digital and pallet.) This is the mechanism by which each tone is secured. By means of a multitude of stops and couplers, what would be a simple tone or chord on another instrument may become a vast group of tones of various pitches and colours. ¶By means of the swell (q. v.) the volume of sound may be gradually increased or diminished while it is sustained. (See also "The Electric Organ," page 728.)

PHONOGRAPH MUSIC

BY R. D. DARRELL

PHONOGRAPH (literally sound-writer) and GRAMOPHONE are currently synonymous terms—favoured in American and British usage respectively—for an instrument to record and reproduce sound. Commonly the word phonograph denotes a sound-reproducing instrument only, used in conjunction with records, flat discs—usually ten or twelve inches in diameter—in the grooves of which sound tracks have been engraved. To-day the instrument is usually operated electrically, often in conjunction with a radio with which it shares an amplifying circuit and loudspeaker. For phonographic purposes the combination instrument switches out the detector circuit of the radio (employed to catch broadcast electrical impulses) and switches on a pick-up circuit in which the initial impulses are provided by a needle moving in an electrical field and actuated by the needle point tracing the sound tracks in the grooves of a record spinning on a motor-driven turntable.

HISTORY

The problem of storing up sound—that of the human voice in particular—and releasing it at will occupied man's imagination many years before Thomas Edison's tinfoil phonograph squawked its epochal "Mary had a little lamb" in 1877. But it remained in the world of fantasy (as exemplified by the frozen horn blast in one of Baron Munchausen's tall tales) or found form only in the creation of vocal automatons and music boxes, until Leon Scott's phonautograph of 1857 revealed a seminal principle—the ability of a diaphragm to translate sound waves into vibrations of an attached tracing stylus. (The phonautograph, improved by Blake, also gave Bell his first definite conception of the speaking telephone.) A French poet, Charles Cros, was the first to realise the potential reversability of the phonautograph, but no working model of his projected paleophone had been built when Edison's original talking machine indented sound tracks on tinfoil and actually played them back. ¶Appropriating the name phonograph (originally coined by an Englishman, Fenby, for a primitive sort of player-piano roll, and first used in its present sense by a friend of Cros, Abbé Lenoir), Edison created a natural sensation and had a lively box-office attraction when he put his machine on public exhibition around 1879. Other experimenters, who had been working along similar lines, followed him into the field in the next decade, most notably Alexander Graham Bell, Charles Sumner Tainter, and Emile Berliner. The first two, working together, produced the graphophone (utilising a stylus that cut rather than indented sound tracks, wax instead of tinfoil for the impressible surface, and an improved diaphragm—the mica type used for many years later); Berliner invented the gramophone, employing a disc rather than a cylinder record, and followed the phonautograph in tracing the sound track laterally (in a sinuous course like the windings of a level road, the width of the oscillations corresponding to the frequencies of the tones recorded) instead of vertically (in a series of hills and dales, the depth corresponding to the frequencies of the tones recorded—the system used by both Edison and the Bell-Tainter team). Berliner was also the first to conquer the most serious obstacle to mass production—unlimited and accurate duplication—of records. By 1892 he had evolved a satisfactory process of stamping duplicate discs from a "master" record and of manufacturing discs from a synthetic compound of shellac and mineral earths—substantially the same process and material used for nearly all records to-day. ¶With the twentieth century came a long period of technical refinements and commercial exploitation of two rival systems: (1) Vertically cut cylinders (later vertically cut discs) manufactured mainly by Edison, the early Columbia Company, and Pathé Frères in France; (2) Laterally cut discs manufactured mainly by the Victor Company (purchaser of the Berliner patents), the Gramophone Company in England, and the Columbia Company after 1908. There were affiliated companies, and as the basic patents expired many more were formed, but almost without exception the new concerns identified themselves with the second (Berliner) system. Technical developments were confined largely to minor improvements: quieter record surfaces, more effective diaphragms and amplifying horns, and the like. ¶But the introduction of the Maxfield-Harrison system of electrical recording and reproduction, in 1925, was revolutionary. Stemming from the invention of vacuum tubes and amplifying circuits first brought to public attention in the radio, the new system took over the microphone, amplifiers, and loudspeaker, and replaced the old diaphragm sound-box with an electrical pick-up. In both recording and reproduction the available frequency range became so much wider, the dynamic range was so markedly increased, and tonal fidelity was so greatly enhanced that the old acoustic (or mechanical) recording process was quickly abandoned and the old-style reproducing machine was doomed (almost the only examples produced to-day are low-price portable instruments). And since electrical recording was or seemed more easily adapted to the lateral-cut disc, the rival vertical-cut system quickly faded out of use. Edison made a few attempts at manufacturing electrical recordings, even some with lateral-cut discs, but they were half-hearted and in 1920—within two years of his own death—he gave up his recording activities entirely. (Later, however, his vertical—"hill and dale"—system was successfully adapted to electrical recording by the Bell Telephone Laboratories, but as yet no attempt has been made to exploit the vertically cut "ERPI" records commercially.)

RECORDED MUSIC

The phonograph was conceived primarily as a talking machine, but once the astonishing novelty of hearing the human voice emerge from a mechanical contrivance had worn off, that function dwindled to minor importance. The Dictaphone and similar instruments took over the application of recorded sound for business purposes, and while recent years have seen a revival of interest in "diction" records (i.e., recorded speeches, plays, poems, examples of dialects, etc.), such discs form but a small part of the recorded repertory. Even before 1900 it had become obvious that the phonographic art was to be dedicated substantially to musical entertainment. What type of entertainment was long indicated by Edison's statement of 1891: "Through the faculty with which it [the phonograph] stores up and reproduces music of all sorts, or whistling and recitations, it can be employed to furnish constant amusements to invalids, or to social assemblies, at receptions, dinners, etc." This prophecy formulated his own policy for the next decades' exploitation of his phonograph and cylinders. Sentimental and sacred songs, band and salon orchestral novelties, dance music, whistling solos, comic recitations, and a like order of vaudeville entertainment made up Edison's (and the bulk of other) catalogues for many years. The phonograph was not so much in disrepute as a musical instrument as it was never considered a truly musical medium. It was the tonal equivalent of the comic strip, and pandered to the same mob tastes that turn to-day for satisfaction to a certain and necessarily popular type of broadcast programme. ¶But soon gaudy scarlet-and-gold "celebrity" records began to appear, eventually to enjoy nearly equal popularity. These were the recorded voices of famous singers, and the so-called golden era of this type of record corresponds approximately with the recording career of the brightest in its galaxy of stars: 1902-

1921, the years of Caruso's first records and his death. But right up to the advent of the radio and much-exaggerated "death" of the phonograph it was almost exclusively a medium for popular music and famous voices—the latter esteemed of course by the degree of their celebrity rather than by what they actually sang. ¶At the same time, however, a few pioneers realised the potentialities of recorded fare of a more substantial sort. Several complete operas were attempted, and large sections of Wagnerian music dramas. The Odeon-Parlophone Company was the first to present a complete set of Beethoven symphonies on discs, Columbia experimented with chamber music and subsidised the recording of contemporary British composers, Polydor employed Richard Strauss to direct many of his larger works for the phonograph and even ventured to record the enormous "Resurrection" symphony of Mahler. A strange cult was formed of "gramophiles" or "phonomanes"; some banded together in societies to share their treasured discs; a journal, The Gramophone, was established at London by Compton Mackenzie in 1923, and three years later Axel B. Johnson started The Phonograph Monthly Review at Boston. The cult flourished largely abroad; the American "phonophile" searched the domestic lists for an occasional significant morsel, but was forced to import most of his major recorded works from Europe; and when Mr. Mackenzie compared the repertory available in the United States with that in England, one could hardly blame him for flinging one of America's own topical songs in its face, "You may be fast, but your Mama's gonna slow you down!" ¶The combined upheaval in the wake of the radio and electrical recording seemed to spell the doom of the phonograph in general as well as Edison's own instrument and records. At one stroke every existing record was antiquated and the whole repertory—the good along with the bad—was consigned with the family tintype album to the attic or junk pile. The manufacturers had a marvellous new instrument, but the public was buying radios. The new electrical records were superb, but the vocal stars were mostly dead or dimmed: that market was lost, and the market for tonal vaudeville entertainment and dance music had been preëmpted by the broadcasters. Only the gramophiles were faithful, but they were comparatively few in number and exceedingly particular in their tastes. After the stock market reached the peak of its skyrocket flight and dropped like a plummet, the Edison recording activities were brought to a close with the repeated assertion that recorded operatic and symphonic music did not represent a sound commercial proposition in America, and a melancholy prophecy (that did not seem too far-fetched in those days) that Victor, too, would soon abandon the field. ¶But these were birth and not death pangs. The phonograph was smothered in the rough embrace of radio's Gargantua, but in dying it drew on the very life blood of its conqueror to fashion a young electronic Hercules that would emerge from its sickly childhood to take an honoured place in the world beside—rather than opposed to—its father. The cultists were right and Edison was wrong. Armed with its new powers, and forced by the loss of its old markets, the phonograph turned to serious music and suddenly discovered that the combination of faithful, realistic reproduction and significant musical fare had shattered many an old prejudice. The term "canned music" lost its derogatory force (indeed it has almost been forgotten). It was sufficient that a once-derided mechanistic contraption was an Open Sesame to the world of great music. ¶The new public for recorded music was drawn in part from the old gramophiles, more extensively from musicians and concert-goers, and to no small degree from the newly music-conscious public developed by the better type of broadcasts. And it mushroomed by its own momentum. Almost without exception every musical artist of note was called upon to make records. The recorded repertory grew phenomenally, quickly encompassed the standard symphonic and concert repertories, and was driven by sheer weight of expansive force to seek relatively unfamiliar material, music previously known only to specialists: modern works, the works of Bach, his contemporaries and predecessors. From 1931 this trend gained impetus by the publication of many limited or "society" editions (the complete piano sonatas of Beethoven, Lieder by Wolf, Mozart operas, Bach's Wahltemperirte Klavier and organ works, etc.), and the establishment of independent recording organisations specialising in rare music (notably L'Anthologie Sonore, Lumen, and L'Oyseau-Lyre in Paris; Musicraft, Gamut, and Timely in the United States). ¶With the growth of important material came a growing appreciation of the artistic significance and potentialities of recorded music long obscured by the contemptuous attitude of many professional musicians, the commercial approach of most manufacturers, the lack of consistently planned direction and expert criticism. Led by The Gramophone the specialised journals have grown in number and influence; from around 1930 many leading newspapers and magazines throughout the world have published regular record reviews. The Carnegie Foundation established a fund to provide elaborate record libraries and excellent reproducing equipment for schools and colleges, and in addition to these sets many records were purchased by various educational institutions themselves. A number of public libraries (led by the Fifty-Eighth Street branch of the New York Library) established record collections. In 1936 the chaotic and uncharted jungle of multilingual, often inaccurate and inadequate manufacturers' listings of their records were comprehensively surveyed in the monumental Gramophone Shop Encyclopedia of Recorded Music, compiled by R. D. Darrell, foreword by Lawrence Gilman. Here for the first time the enormous world output of serious recorded music was listed under one cover, and systematically arranged. Its scope is indicated by the fact that nearly seven hundred composers of note are represented; the "discography" of Wagner alone runs to over twenty-seven pages.

IMPLICATIONS

The individual whose literature is restricted to the daily newspaper may be satisfied musically by the radio alone, but for him whose cultural life is not complete without books, the theatre, and the concert hall, the phonograph is essential. A favourite symphony heard first in concert or on a symphonic broadcast is given permanent domicile and frequent repetition. The advertising slogan "The music you want when you want it" is soundly based on the powerful appeal of the phonograph's salient and unique characteristic—the ability to bring music directly home to one, enabling one to choose and repeat it at will, to listen alone and undisturbed, or in informal, congenial company and surroundings. Nothing can ever take the place of making music oneself, of knowing it as it can only be known through one's own fingers or throat, but individual opportunities and executant skill are limited. (Even here the recent "Spiel mit" and "Accompo" records promise a new method of personal participation—by the help of the phonograph—in music making.) But either as an augmentation of direct participation or as an unavoidable substitute for it, recorded music opens up new and unsurmised horizons. And it may mean far more than faute de mieux substitution or escape. The shellac discs are sounded scores intelligible to everyone with ears and a mind, breathing life into the intricate hieroglyphics of notation that have had meaning only to the technically expert. The giant works of music may become one's daily bread. ¶The potential repercussions are just beginning to be felt. New artists, discovered on limited or imported records, attain a public long before they have become highly publicised concert figures. A concert in the smallest town is sure to number among its audience men and women who are not only familiar with most of the works to be played, but very likely know them through recorded performances of the world's finest artists. The professional musician must be prepared to meet a new and higher standard of ability and taste. The time is coming when his public is no longer going to be satisfied with the repertory that has served him so well for perhaps a quarter of a century; when his readings are going to be judged in comparison with those of a Schnabel, Heifetz, Szigeti, or Flagstad. Audiences will no longer be satisfied to hear the standard "masterpieces" given casual and routine performances year after year; they will demand fewer and far more carefully prepared performances of the standard works and a radical change in programme-making to embrace a more catholic and vastly expanded repertory. The success of a concert series like that of the New Friends of Music in New York City (that only a few years ago would have been damned as quixotic and highbrow), and its coöperation with a record manufacturer in making available recordings of its principal works is surely prophetic of the new musical trend of the times. ¶New music will lose much of its terrors and instinctive opposition. Heard, reheard, and studied on records, the mysterious screen of new and forbidding idioms can no longer conceal the stature of our contemporary composers; familiarity will reveal them in true perspective, whether they are pygmies or giants. At the other end of the expanding repertory the greatness of Bach and his incalculable scope is just beginning to become apparent to the musical layman. And there were giants before him, many of them scarcely more than names even to specialists, but their music lives in suspended animation, waiting only to be heard, music comparable in craftsmanship and wealth of invention even to that of Bach. The phonograph makes a wide breach in the great ice wall that has separated us from a lost musical Atlantis, opening up a strange and rich tonal world as alien to contemporary concert-goers as the civilisations of Babylonia, Egypt, and Maya, but unlike those preserved in their original ruggedness and colour—a world to be reconquered by anyone who sets the proper record spinning on a turntable. ¶Brave new and old worlds lie at the feet of the phonographic explorer. And this is the supreme irony of the instrument that began with "Mary had a little lamb" and "Cohen on the Telephone" and has not ended by bringing a Toscanini or Beecham into one's own home: that a musical world giving lip service to catholicity, snarling against the rape of the muse by the machine, should dogmatically dictate that certain works of the eighteenth, nineteenth, and twentieth centuries are all we need to know; while a derided mechanistic contrivance of wires, condensers, and vacuum tubes should be an iconoclast and the resurrector of the purest and richest tonal tradition the world has ever known.

The phonograph and recorded music have committed many sins of omission and commission, but for atonement they restore our lost heritage: the music of the Gregorian Chant, of Victoria, Byrd, Sweelinck, Lassus and many another titan, as well as countless unfamiliar works of Bach, Handel, Haydn, and Mozart—works possessing a poignance and profundity of feeling now rarely to be found in the pitifully limited concert repertory which we have drained and trampled to an exhaustion rapidly approaching complete sterility. ¶The quintessence of the meaning of the phonograph and recorded music for the individual was summed up long before the invention of the modern instrument and its coming of age by the author of The Magic Mountain, and in the quotation from Thomas Mann that served as text for the Encyclopedia of Recorded Music lies the secret of the phonograph's significance and sorcery: ¶". . . And what he felt, understood, and enjoyed, sitting there with folded hands, looking into the black slats of the jealousies whence it all issued, was the triumphant idealism of the music, of art, of the human spirit. . . . Hans Castorp's thoughts or rather his prophetic half-thoughts soared high, as he sat there in night and silence before his truncated sarcophagus of music. They soared higher than his understanding, they were alchemistically enhanced."

PIANOFORTE

BY RUPERT HUGHES

PIANOFORTE (in G. usually restricted to the square piano). The most used and most abused of instruments—a combination of the strings of the harp with a key-board system derived from the organ (in the 14th cent. there is mention of a "stringed instrument of the organ family: the Exaquir, Sp., Eschiquier d'Angleterre" i.e., "English chessboard," F. or Esquakiel, G.). ¶Its HISTORY is obscure and owes much possibly to the monochord and elaborations from it. In the monochord, the hurdygurdy, or organistrum, etc., a single string produced various tones by means of a movable bridge. So the early forms of the piano show a few strings serving for many digitals. The word monochord was kept even after the strings were increased in number, but was finally changed to clavichord (clavis = key) or clavier; the movable bridge was displaced by tangents which served both to divide the strings as with frets and to sound them. ¶Simultaneously with the fretted clavichord, in which each string served for several tones (as a guitar-string does), prospered a development from the dulcimer, a key-board dulcimer, or clavicymbal (from cymbal meaning dulcimer), called in France, clavecin; in Italy, clavi-cembalo or arpicordo; in England, harpsichord; in Germany, Flügel, Kielflügel, Steertstück or Schweinskopf. Small forms of this were the Virginal(s), the couched harp or spinet (from spina = quill), etc. In this variety there was a string for each tone, and the string was sharply plucked with a quill carried at the end of a wooden jack. In time the clavichord was also given a string to each tone and was now said to be "fret-free" (bundfrei) instead of "fretted" (gebunden). The tone was capable of a beautiful trembling effect (Bebung) and considerable virtuosity, but there was little possibility of shading from loud to soft. The appearance of the elaborate dulcimer the Pantaleon seems to have set the clavi-chordists to thinking, and Cristofori, in 1711, invented the hammer-mechanism, which he called, from its power to sound loudly or softly, piano forte, literally "loud-and-soft" (this name had been used as early as 1598). In Germany, Silbermann, the organ-builder, won Bach's approval for a Hammer-klavier of the same general idea. This idea, with many improvements in detail but little fundamental change, persists to-day in the magnificent instrument on which great gymnasts combine brute-force with legerdemain. ¶The CONSTRUCTION of the piano of our time shows the triumph of ingenuity over a total string-tension of twelve to twenty tons. A powerful cast-iron frame, usually cast in one piece and braced with trusses and cross-bars, braces the wooden sound-board below, on which is a raised bridge of hard wood, over which are stretched the strings. The strings are of steel wire, the bass strings being covered with a finely-wound copper wire. The lowest octave of the bass has one string to each tone, the next octave or more has two strings to each tone, the rest of the instrument has three strings tuned exactly alike as unisons for each note. Some of the strings are generally carried back across the others to save space; this is called overstringing. The hammer of each tone strikes all three strings at once, except when the soft pedal by shifting lets it strike only one string (hence "tre corde" and "una corda"). ¶The ACTION of the piano consists of a key-board of finger-levers or digitals (loosely called keys), the white digitals forming the scale of C major, the black digitals furnishing the necessary semitones to give the piano (by means of temperament, q. v.) a command of all the major and minor keys—the fingering differing for each key except with the Jankó (q. v.) key-board. The pressure of a digital does not, as in the old clavichord or harpsichord, immediately affect the string, but reaches it by a complicated series of levers which bring the hammer into position for a new stroke instantly, so that a tone can, in a proper action, be repeated as rapidly as the fingers can strike the digital. (This is called the repetition or double escapement—the double échappement of Erard being the origin of the many forms of escapement.) The digital carries at the inner end a vertical pilot which supports a nearly horizontal carrier, at about a right angle to which is the rod called the hopper, which fits against the hammer by a notch or projection. As soon as the hopper has forced the hammer against the string, it slips loose from the hammer and is brought instantly back (by devices hard to describe briefly) into position so that the hammer on rebounding from the strings finds the hopper ready for an immediate new stroke. The hammer is hinged at the butt; at the other end of its shank is the hammer-shaped head with a pad of felt (or leather). The action which throws the hammer against the strings, and makes it rebound instantly, lifts away from the strings the little dampers, which muffles the strings when not in use; this damper remains off the strings as long as the digital is held down. ¶By means of the dampers-pedal (commonly called the "loud pedal") all the dampers may be lifted from all the strings, thus permitting sustained tones and sympathetic vibrations while the hands play other chords. Some pianos have also a sustaining as well as a piano, or soft pedal (see PEDAL). ¶The piano has a complete chromatic scale with a compass of about seven octaves  $A_{11}-a'''$ . It is capable of a rapidity and clarity of utterance of which the organ is incapable; and no other instrument but the organ approaches its resources in chords, range, and brilliance. Except the organ, it is the only self-supporting instrument; it can furnish absorbing employment for the four hands of two performers. The chief lack is the inability to swell a sustained tone, and some method of adding this final touch of human interest will doubtless be devised in time by some of the many minds engaged upon the problem.

PIANO STUDIES

BY JAMES HUNEKER

MORE THAN A CENTURY of experience in piano pedagogy has not been fruitless; skilled masters of the instrument no longer burden their pupils with futile finger exercises, and the precious morning hours instead of being devoted to mere digital tortures are now utilised for the memorising of a répertoire and the study of especial difficulties in a composition. Since Karl Tausig, the vast and useless étude literature has been sent to Limbo; for in the music itself may be studied the precise technical difficulty to be overcome. ¶After the independence of the fingers, the scales in single and double notes, arpeggios and octaves have been thoroughly mastered, the following studies are generally employed for style, for endurance and the musical development of the scholar; Cramer—edited by Von Bülow; Clementi—edited by Tausig; Kessler—a judicious selection; Kullak's octave school; and the Chopin Etudes, opus 10 and opus 25. After these latter the studies of Liszt and Rubinstein, and Schumann's Symphonic Etudes may be essayed. Of special studies, the Toccata of Czerny, the Schumann Toccata, the Rubinstein Staccato study in C, and Thalberg's study in A minor, opus 45, repeated notes, are recommended. For beginners, Heller's studies in phrasing and later Czerny's finishing studies may be tried. But the Czerny school—with the exception of his excellent special studies for the left hand—is obsolete. ¶For the quick grasp of the Brahms technique, study his fifty-one exercises. Isidor Philipp, taking his cue from Tausig, has given us the marrow of Chopin's technique in a volume of Daily Exercises. For pure polyphony, nothing is better than Bach. For daily gymnastics, use Tausig's studies, but in frugal manner.

RADIO MUSIC

BY LAWRENCE ABBOTT

MUSICAL HISTORY has been profoundly affected by the development of radio broadcasting, and no survey of contemporary music would be complete without a consideration of radio's effect upon it.

MUSIC BROADCASTING IN ITS INFANCY

Radio, or the wireless transmission of sound, was born in 1895 at Bologna, Italy, when Guglielmo Marconi first succeeded in sending wireless signals on his father's estate. This event marked the origin of practical radiotelegraphy.

Marconi's spark transmitter, however, was incapable of accomplishing the transmission of music and speech, known technically as radiotelephony—without which modern broadcasting would be nonexistent. Eleven years elapsed before Lee De Forest invented the audion, a three-element vacuum tube, and, in an experiment conducted on December 31, 1906, transmitted speech by radio for the first time. In 1907 phonograph music was radioed from Dr. De Forest's laboratory for a distance of 12 miles. The information as to what music was broadcast is unobtainable; but the following year German engineers of the Telefunken Company, during experimental broadcasts between Sandy Hook and Bedloe's Island in New York Harbour, for the benefit of the U. S. Signal Corps, transmitted a phonograph recording of the Anvil Chorus from Verdi's "Il Trovatore." This may well have been the first operatic, or even classical music to be heard by radio. The first "live" music broadcast took place in 1909, at Lee De Forest's laboratory in New York City, when Marguerite Mazarin of Hammerstein's Manhattan Opera Company sang an aria from "Carmen." In the following January, under De Forest's auspices, a far more remarkable event in radio history occurred: in an experimental broadcast from the Metropolitan Opera House in New York, Enrico Caruso sang the rôle of "Turiddu" in "Cavalleria Rusticana" and was heard by listeners in various parts of the city as well as by at least one wireless operator at sea. During the next ten years radio remained in an experimental phase; its potential value was considered chiefly as a supplement to the telegraph and telephone, while its possibilities as a purveyor of mass entertainment remained unrecognized.

MUSIC BROADCASTING IN THE UNITED STATES, 1920-1938

Broadcasting in the modern sense—i.e., the daily transmission of speech and music to a widespread public audience in accordance with a regular published schedule—originated in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, when station KDKA, owned by the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Company, began operation. Other stations quickly came into existence. At first they were little concerned with serious music, devoting their time chiefly to news bulletins, sporting events, and novelties. Musical broadcasts were limited almost entirely to dance music, popular songs, and salon pieces; this is understandable, since the mass audience to which radio broadcasts necessarily must be directed were at first totally unfamiliar with concert music and unwilling to listen to it. Only gradually did they become educated to its capacity for giving them enjoyment, and so only gradually did radio come to occupy an important position in the field of serious music. ¶In November, 1922, listeners heard the first pick-up of an opera performance originating outside a broadcasting studio (Verdi's "Aida," performed at Kingsbridge Armoury, New York), and later in that same month the first major symphonic broadcast took place (a concert by the New York Philharmonic Orchestra, in the Hall of the College of the City of New York). The following October, Walter Damrosch pointed the way to the invaluable service radio could perform in the field of music education when a lecture recital of his on Beethoven was broadcast from Carnegie Hall, New York. Two seasons later—in January, 1926—John McCormack and Lucrezia Bori made their radio débuts in a broadcast that inspired other eminent artists to go on the air. In the autumn of 1926 Dr. Damrosch again lent his prestige to the infant radio industry by inaugurating a series of weekly radio symphonic concerts which he continued for six winter seasons. The following January a nation-wide audience heard its first broadcast of a complete opera performed in an opera house ("Faust," broadcast from the Chicago Civic Opera Auditorium). Not quite two years later a still more important milestone occurred: Dr. Damrosch's first music appreciation broadcast in October, 1928. Known the first year as the RCA Educational Hour, and since then as the NBC Music Appreciation Hour, these broadcasts have continued uninterruptedly for more than ten years, have become part of the required curriculum in many thousands of schools, and have brought musical enlightenment and understanding to untold millions of school children and adults. ¶During the last decade (1928-1938), the history of broadcast music has been less a succession of sporadic "firsts" than it has a steady increase in both the volume and quality of serious music broadcasts. During this period network broadcasting rose to its present dominating position and made possible the fullest achievement of radio's potentialities for mass entertainment and education: its ability, for example, to transmit a single memorable musical performance to a world-wide audience. The National Broadcasting Company was formed in 1926, the Columbia Broadcasting System in 1927, and the Mutual Broadcasting System in 1934. To-day broadcasting in the United States consists of these three nation-wide networks plus a number of smaller, regional networks, and many independent stations with no network affiliations. By the late 1920s, also, the American system of broadcasting had become firmly established. Under this system broadcasting is financed by the sale of time to advertisers. Programmes are either commercial (i.e., produced and paid for by firms which wish to advertise their products thereby), or sustaining (furnished by broadcasting stations or networks at their own expense in order to attract listeners and create good will). During the entire history of radio, more than two thirds of all broadcast hours have been sustaining. On the whole, commercial programmes are devoted to mass entertainment of a light nature; most cultural programmes, from which listeners derive aesthetic enjoyment, are sustaining programmes. ¶In October, 1930, the Columbia Broadcasting System brought symphonic music into new prominence when it began its weekly winter-season broadcasts of the Sunday afternoon New York Philharmonic-Symphony concerts—two-hour broadcasts which have continued each season to the present time. Two years later the National Broadcasting Company began a regular series of two-hour broadcasts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. To-day every important symphony orchestra in the country is heard by radio listeners at some time during the year. ¶In March, 1933, radio pioneered in establishing a new field of orchestral music when Frank Black, conducting what has become known as the NBC String Symphony, inaugurated a series of broadcast concerts devoted exclusively to music for strings alone. Never before had such a series been presented either on the radio or in the concert hall. Since then other string orchestras have been established for broadcast purposes, and in at least one instance (the 1937 Saratoga Spa Music Festival concerts, conducted by F. Charles Adler) the concert hall has followed in radio's footsteps. ¶In November, 1937, another important development took place when the NBC Symphony Orchestra made its début as a full-size, permanent symphony orchestra; this was the first such organisation of major calibre to be established and maintained by an American broadcasting corporation exclusively for studio broadcasts of symphonic music. During the eleven weeks when Arturo Toscanini conducted this orchestra in the winter season of 1937-38 music critics broke a long-standing precedent by treating the concerts in their reviews on a basis of equality with those of the leading symphony societies. ¶Opera became regularly accessible to radio audiences with the first complete opera broadcast from the Metropolitan Opera House ("Hänsel und Gretel," December 25, 1931). With the development of international short-wave re-broadcasting, the best European orchestras and opera companies began to be heard in the United States (the first of such broadcasts: London, Symphony Orchestra, 1930; Dresden Opera House, 1930). Chamber music received scant attention until October, 1934, when the National Broadcasting Company's NBC Music Guild inaugurated the hitherto unheard-of procedure of broadcasting four programmes of chamber music weekly, making no concessions to musical illiterates, and employing the leading string quartets of the United States and Europe. Present-day radio programme schedules include a due proportion of chamber music. ¶Among notable recent developments in educational music broadcasts are the lecture recitals of Abram Chasins, devoted to critical analysis of piano compositions illustrated by the performance first of fragments and then of compositions in their entirety (a procedure which cannot be duplicated as successfully either in the large concert hall or by means of the printed page); the NBC Home Symphony, which encourages amateur music making by broadcasting actual rehearsals in which listeners may take part, each instrumentalist adding his own part to the music of a studio orchestra which emanates from his loudspeaker; and various "schools of the air," one broadcast nationally by CBS, others on a state-wide or city-wide basis under the auspices of boards of education. ¶A recent phenomenon is the extensive broadcasting of music, serious as well as light, by "electrical transcription" (either standard phonograph records or recordings made specially for broadcast purposes). This technique has enabled small stations to broadcast many hours of symphonic and operatic music at little expense; its future, however, is somewhat clouded because of uncertainty as to the extent to which recording artists and phonograph companies can legally exercise control over the use to which records are put. ¶The extensive volume in which music of aesthetic value, both instrumental and vocal, is available to the radio public of to-day (omitting from consideration broadcasts of phonograph records) may be gauged by the fact that during 1937 the three principal networks broadcast 3,420 hours of such music—on an average, more than nine hours of it each day.

MUSIC BROADCASTING IN FOREIGN COUNTRIES .

On the whole, the development of music broadcasting in other parts of the world has paralleled that of the United States. Chelmsford, England, shares with Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, the honours of originating scheduled broadcasts. Foreign programmes of serious music to-day compare favourably with those in this country. In virtually every other nation broadcasting is operated or controlled by the government, and is usually supported by taxation. Partly as a consequence, receiving sets are found in a smaller percentage of homes; no other country equals the estimated 82 per cent of American homes which possess radio receivers.

BROADCASTING TECHNIQUE

In order that a musical performance may be transmitted to radio listeners, it must first be picked up by a microphone, which transforms the complex sound waves that reach it into electrical waves; these feeble waves must then be amplified, after which they must travel by cable to the radio station's transmitting tower or antenna; they are then sent through the ether in the form of radio waves, are picked up by the aerial of some distant receiving set, transformed again into electrical waves, amplified once more to proper volume, and through electrical vibrations set up in a sensitive loudspeaker are restored to an approximation of their original form as sound waves. The different steps of this process call for great engineering skill and constant expert supervision in order to prevent the "approximation" from being an extremely inaccurate and distorted one. ¶Various types of microphones are used. The most common one in music broadcasts is the velocity, or ribbon, microphone. It is directional—that is, it responds unequally to sounds approaching it at different angles. Unlike a camera, which "sees" its entire image with equal clarity, the velocity microphone "hears" with greatest volume the sounds that travel to it from points directly in front and with decreasing intensity the sounds which originate at points on either side. The usual type of velocity microphone is bi-directional—that is, it responds equally to sounds in front of it or behind it. One microphone is sufficient to reproduce the sound of a large orchestra or chorus; in fact, it usually does so more successfully than a battery of two or more microphones, the reason for this being that when sound waves reach two different microphones at slightly different times (as will all sound waves except those which emanate from a point equidistant from both microphones), and when the electrical waves thus formed are blended into a single circuit, "wave interference" is produced which mars, theoretically at least, the fidelity of the reproduction. These as well as other factors must be taken into consideration by the director of the broadcast in placing musicians and microphones in the correct relative positions. ¶Acoustical problems also beset the director. The music which we hear in a concert hall consists of sound waves which travel straight from the source of the music to our ears, plus other waves which reach us only after being reflected from the floor, walls, and ceiling. Reflected sound produces reverberation or room resonance. This is disconcerting when excessive; yet without it music would sound strangely flat and lifeless. Resonance within a broadcasting studio is controlled largely by the use of sound-absorbent material in the construction of walls and ceiling, and by adjustable fabric hangings. It can also be increased or decreased, however, by changing the angle at which the microphone is tilted. It is noticeably affected, incidentally, by the presence or absence of a studio audience. In the past, studio broadcasts usually permitted too little reflected sound to be heard; to-day, however, room resonance is more frequently given its due. ¶In arranging the placement of ensembles and orchestras, instruments which are least powerful in tone and highest in pitch must be placed nearest the microphone. In a string quartet the first violin must be slightly nearer and the 'cello slightly further away than the other two players. In a symphony orchestra the violins should be nearest, while it is necessary to place the brass and percussion instruments not only furthest away, but to one side. Sometimes trumpeters are directed to point the bells of their instruments away from the microphone in order to lessen the apparent volume. The placement of horns is especially important; since their bells project backwards, they must not be seated directly in front either of a highly reflecting or of a completely sound-absorbing surface. Often chamber music performers and soloists with piano accompaniment are placed on both sides of a bi-directional microphone. ¶Broadcasting experience has shown that theoretical principles can be relied upon only up to a certain point; the final arbiter must be the ear, provided it is a well-trained musical ear. Hence critical listening, during rehearsals, to the loudspeaker in the soundproof "control room" adjoining the studio is often the most important factor in the supervision of a broadcast. When a broadcast is in progress a final, flexible control over volume of tone is exercised by the studio engineer. This is necessary, since an excessive volume of sound (caused, for instance, by a sudden fortissimo roll on the kettledrum) can overload delicate transmission equipment to a point where damage to it will put the broadcast off the air. Under ideal conditions the studio engineer leaves his "gain-control" dials untouched during a concert broadcast, so that variations in dynamics are transmitted with perfect fidelity; when this is not possible, good broadcasting technic requires that alterations in the volume of amplification be made so gradually as to be imperceptible.

TONAL QUALITY OF BROADCAST MUSIC

The fidelity with which musical tones are transmitted and received in modern radio broadcasting is a subject of extreme importance. On it depends, to a large extent, the value of radio as a satisfactory medium for the presentation of music. ¶Musical tones and overtones may be scientifically described as sound waves which vibrate at frequencies, or rates of vibration which can be expressed in cycles per second. The lowest tone on the piano, for instance, vibrates at the rate of about 27 cycles per second while the highest vibrates at about 4,000 cycles per second. The oboe's A, from which orchestral musicians tune their instruments, is 440 cycles. In a symphony orchestra, the lowest frequency usually heard is the fundamental tone of the open E string of the double bass, about 40 cycles. The highest clearly audible tones are the upper harmonics of the violins and oboes, about 16,000 cycles. When music is mechanically reproduced, a considerable portion of the extremely low and high frequencies is generally lost in transmission. The omission of low frequencies is most clearly perceptible, since important bass tones are eliminated. The omission of the two upper octaves of high frequencies (4,000 to 16,000 cycles) is not so readily noticeable, since this eliminates only certain overtones; yet these overtones are what give orchestral instruments their characteristic tone quality, and their omission results in a distortion of tonal values. This simplified explanation of scientific principles may help to explain why reproduced music falls short of being an exact replica of the original performance. ¶The old-fashioned phonograph and the first radio receiving sets had an upper limit of about 2,000 cycles, while the tones under 200 cycles reproduced by it were no more than shadows of their original selves. The tone quality of such instruments was consequently far from satisfying. The last fifteen years has witnessed great strides in fidelity of reproduction, but actual results obtainable on most modern receiving sets are still far short of the ideal. The reasons are two-fold, being due to deficiencies both in transmission and in reception. Radio stations are now licensed to transmit at a specified "carrier" frequency, through a "channel" or wave band which is usually 10,000 cycles in width—in other words, extending 5,000 cycles on either side of the frequency allotted. Such a channel can accommodate musical tones which have frequencies up to 5,000 cycles. Few stations transmit frequencies much higher, and these—in theory, at least—overlap into neighbouring channels, causing, under certain conditions, a possibility of interference. In a very few instances, stations have been allocated "high-fidelity" channels of double this width; these can transmit interference-free tones up to 10,000 cycles. As yet, however, receiving sets (with a certain few exceptions) are not designed to reproduce the full range of tones now being transmitted by modern broadcasting stations. The average receiver is not noticeably responsive to frequencies below 100 cycles (G on the bottom line of the bass staff) or above 3,500 (A in the fourth octave above middle C). Midget-size receivers are, of course, limited to an even less extensive range. At present writing, engineering science is capable of building and operating both transmitters and receivers of far greater fidelity. That it is not doing so at present is partly due to public apathy towards faithfulness in the reception of broadcast music, and partly to the fact that high-fidelity transmission cannot be accomplished without a complete re-allocation of station wave lengths and a reduction in the total number of stations licensed to broadcast—steps which the public at large has at present shown no desire to take, and which, in the second instance, would involve losses as well as gains. ¶Another factor which causes radio music to sound differently from music heard in a concert hall is its lack of dimension or perspective. Technically speaking, it is monaural. This term may be best explained by a comparison with vision. We see with two eyes, and in so doing we see two slightly different images. These images, when combined by the brain, give us a sense of distance and direction. Ordinary pictures lack perspective, are two-dimensional; pictures seen through a stereoscope are extraordinarily lifelike simply because each eye is permitted to see each picture from its own particular viewpoint. Similarly, our two ears enable us to recognise the precise direction from which any given sound comes; this quality of hearing is known technically as "aural perspective." Whenever we listen to an orchestra in the concert hall our ears, as well as our eyes, give "dimension" to the orchestra. If, however, a sound-proof wall were erected halfway between us and the orchestra, having in it a single small aperture, the sounds reaching our ears would have to travel through this one point and our sense of aural perspective would be lost. This is what takes place in the transmission of radio music. All sounds are transmitted from one point (the microphone) and, again, are reproduced at one point (the loudspeaker). Successful experiments have been conducted with the binaural transmission and reproduction of music. Many obstacles, however, would have to be overcome before "binaural broadcasting" could become commercially practicable. Its successful operation would require two microphones, two independent sets of broadcasting equipment, two separate broadcasting channels, and two receiving sets with properly placed loudspeakers in every home which wished to enjoy its advantages.

SIGNIFICANCE OF RADIO MUSIC

Radio must be considered, not as a form of art, but as a means of conveying art to the multitudes. When so considered, its invention may be counted as being as important to music as the invention of printing was to literature. ¶Before the development of radio, art music—like painting, sculpture, and the drama—was the aristocratic property of an infinitesimally small fraction of the country's total population. Symphony orchestras existed in only a handful of American cities; only a tiny proportion of the residents of these cities subscribed to symphony concerts or listened to them at all regularly; even those fortunate persons heard, in most cases, not more than twenty hours of symphonic music a year, and waited, in many instances, several seasons before hearing a repetition of a favourite symphony or tone poem. Other types of vocal and instrumental music were heard by similarly limited audiences. ¶To-day music has become virtually a universal art. This revolutionary change has been wrought primarily by radio, though to some extent other technical developments—the player piano, phonograph, and motion picture—have assisted the transformation. Some indications of the almost-overnight growth of a nation-wide musical public can be observed in the following facts: Since 1928 the number of major symphony orchestras in America has risen from 10 to 17. In the same period the total number of orchestras (according to listings in Pierre Key's Music Yearbook) has increased from 60 to 286; most medium-sized cities now have their own symphony orchestras. Music courses in the public schools, almost unknown in 1920, are now not only widespread but of high calibre. The number of school orchestras in the country has grown prodigiously; it is now estimated at more than 30,000; in addition, there are more than 20,000 school bands. The business of booking concerts and recitals, as reported by leading concert bureaus, surpassed, in 1937, that of any year since 1912 (including even the prosperous year of 1929). Sales of new pianos in 1937 (exclusive of player pianos or reproducing pianos) exceeded those of 1929, as well as of the intervening years. ¶When radio first ceased to be a novelty, musicians began to fear that radio music would prove to be exceedingly harmful, both economically (by ruining the sale of musical instruments and of concert admissions), and artistically (by producing a nation of passive listeners devoid of musical intelligence and unwilling to create music themselves either as performers or composers). When Walter Damrosch first undertook to conduct symphonic broadcasts, he was begged by noted musicians not to do so; they firmly believed that if radio obtained a foothold in the realm of serious music their concert careers would be doomed. The reverse, however, has proved to be true. Radio has produced thousands of new listeners who have become acquainted with symphonies, operas, lieder, etc., and have subsequently come to the conclusion that actual performances of music by living artists provide sources of enjoyment which cannot be duplicated by reproduced music. It seems now definitely established that a permanent place exists for both radio broadcasting and the concert hall—that they are supplementary rather than competitive. ¶Radio has, as yet, developed no striking new musical techniques. A few works have been composed especially for radio performance. These include three radio operas: "The Willow Tree" by Charles Wakefield

Cadman (NBC, 1932); "Green Mansions" by Louis Gruenberg (CBS, 1937); and "The Old Maid and the Thief" by Gian-Carlo Menotti (NBC, 1938). Hans Spialek's orchestral suite, "Manhattan Water Colors" (1937), contains continuity to be read by an announcer over a musical background. In other instances radio has been found to be an especially successful medium for music composed as background to spoken narration; a noteworthy example is Frank Black's musical setting of Arthur Guiterman's poem, "Ode to Memorial Day."

¶To radio may be attributed the growing public demand for less hackneyed, more unfamiliar music. Since the advent of broadcasting, concert audiences have grown thoroughly familiar with the principal works in the literature of music, so that conductors and recitalists find it necessary to delve more and more into the works of lesser-known composers, as well as into the lesser-known compositions of the acknowledged masters, in order to avoid too-frequent repetitions of the so-called standard works. To radio may also be attributed a partial breakdown of the barrier between popular and classical music. Commercial variety programmes frequently feature famous concert artists in performances of serious music side by side with the most popular types of vaudeville entertainers. Even more significant is radio's effect upon the public's standards of performance. By acquainting audiences everywhere with the supreme artistry of such musicians as Toscanini, Heifetz, Flagstad, etc., radio has raised the public's critical standards immeasurably; as a result, mediocre musicians are no longer tolerated, young artists are experiencing increasingly keen competition, while, on the other hand, top-ranking musicians are enjoying greater success than ever before. ¶One curious aspect of modern radio deserves mention: a handicap created by the very abundance of good music which radio provides. In years gone by, when an opera performance or symphony concert was a rare treat, to be enjoyed only after the expenditure of effort and money, it was approached in a mood of keen anticipation and heard with undivided attention. Now, with similar music available at the flick of a dial, many listeners pay but scant attention to what they hear, being chiefly preoccupied with housework, card playing, or reading. Like easily won riches, music broadcasts are often grossly undervalued and unwittingly squandered. ¶Radio, as a purveyor of music, has certainly not reached its ultimate goal. Yet it has travelled amazingly far in its few years of existence. Complaints are voiced that opportunities to hear serious music on the air are too infrequent, and, conversely, that too many hours are devoted to music devoid of artistic value. Yet the proportion of concert music to light, inconsequential music on the air to-day is probably considerably greater than the proportion of good current literature to the cheap output of tabloid newspapers and pulp magazines. Under the American system of broadcasting, government authorities have no voice in the type or quantity of music broadcast to the public; their jurisdiction is limited to the technical phases of broadcasting and to the elimination of programmes that exceed limits of decency or contain fraudulent advertising. Broadcasting in the United States is based on the democratic principle that the public itself shall choose and judge. This it can do by the turn of a dial, selecting between programmes offered simultaneously by two or more competitive stations. Surveys, polls, and, to some extent, fan letters provide broadcasters with a fairly accurate means of estimating programme popularity. If, under this system, serious music occupies only a minor fraction of the time allotted to music on the air, the reason can be traced to the fact that only a small minority of the radio audience actually prefers such music. Broadcasters maintain a scrupulous regard for the rights of small minorities. It is solely because of this that they allot network time to the presentation of music of extremely limited appeal, such as Bach's complete "Kunst der Fuge" or atonal chamber music compositions by little-known contemporary composers. It can be assumed that broadcasters will continue to adjust their programmes in the future, as they have in the past, to conform to changing public tastes, and that they will increase the hours of serious music broadcasts as rapidly as the demand for them grows in volume and insistence.

THE STORY OF ORCHESTRA AND BAND INSTRUMENTS

BY H. W. SCHWARTZ

MUSIC is as old as history but the orchestra is a modern development, barely 300 years old. The germ of the orchestra was originated by Italian opera writers in the latter sixteenth and in the seventeenth centuries. Their so-called orchestras contained lutes, lyres, harpsichord, viols, flageolets, zinken, and other strange instruments now obsolete. Even the great Bach and Handel were not equal to the task of deciding what instruments were worthy of membership in the symphony orchestra. ¶Haydn is called the "Father of the Symphony" because he cleaned out these old instruments and established the classical symphony orchestra, about 1760. Other instruments were added from time to time and the modern orchestra was developed. ¶Haydn's orchestra was a small one. He built it around a well-disciplined group of strings consisting of 6 first violins, 6 second violins, 3 violas, and 3 string basses. Note that the 'cello was not admitted. To this group he added 2 trumpets and 2 tympani. The trumpets were really bugles and had no valves, because valves were not invented until 1815. He also added 2 hunting horns. These of course had no valves either. Among the wood-winds were two boxwood or cocculuswood flutes with from 3 to 6 brass keys, 2 boxwood or cocculuswood oboes with 3 to 6 keys. The famous Boehm system key mechanism for wood-winds was not invented until 1832. Two bassoons completed the wood-winds while the wind bass of the orchestra was furnished by the odd-looking instrument called the serpent. ¶In Haydn's day the orchestra was conducted from the harpsichord. Here the conductor sat and played along with the orchestra, nodding his head and occasionally waving his hand to give the beat and maintain the tempo. The harpsichord was the father of the piano, which was invented in 1709 by Cristofori of Italy but which was not used very generally for nearly a hundred years. Such an orchestra gave a performance which was simple and clear in harmonic structure but lacked solidity, variety, and colour. ¶Mozart was a pupil of Haydn but he taught the old master and all other musicians how to use the clarinets in the symphony orchestra. These instruments were made of boxwood and had about a half-dozen brass keys. It is true that Haydn used clarinets in the opera but Mozart was the first to admit them into the more exclusive ranks of the symphony orchestra. Otherwise the orchestra was the same as the Haydn orchestra. As yet there was no conductor to stand in front of the orchestra and beat time. The conductor still sat at the harpsichord. ¶Beethoven as a youth studied with the old master, Haydn, but he was too radical in his views and soon left Haydn to pursue his own ideas. Nevertheless, in his first four symphonies he used substantially the same orchestra as that used by Haydn and Mozart. However, in his celebrated Fifth Symphony, composed in 1808, he found the old classical orchestra inadequate for his musical thought. During the first three movements of this symphony he remained classical but in the fourth movement he worked himself up to such a romantic pitch that he broke the bonds of conventional instrumentation and in the statement of the opening theme he introduced 2 trombones. Haydn and Mozart had used trombones in the opera but this was the first time they had ever been used in the symphony. At the same time he wrote for the piccolo, really a high soprano flute. The piccolo had been used by Gluck, the opera writer, even before Haydn's day, but this was the début of the piccolo in the symphony. ¶The string section was also augmented by 4 'cellos. Haydn was really the first to use the 'cello in the orchestra. This he finally consented to do in 1795 in his Symphony in D, when he was sixty-three years old. The 'cello's place in the orchestra, however, was not secure until Beethoven's time. Even Beethoven did not always use it. In some of his symphonies he scored for it and in some of them he omitted it. But by the time Beethoven died, the 'cello had become accepted as a regular member of the symphony, and the string quartet gave way to the string quintet. Beethoven not only added new instruments but used more of the old instruments known to Haydn and Mozart. The string section was also increased in number of players. And as for the conductor we still find him behind the harpsichord or piano. The Beethoven orchestra added greater solidity and variety but still lacked definite colour treatment. ¶Wagner was a writer of opera but Wagner's opera music is superb orchestration and is played by the symphony orchestra more than any other music. Wagner composed but three symphonies and only one of these is ever heard and that one only seldom. ¶Beethoven wrote his music on 12 staves but Wagner increased the musical parts to such an extent that 22 staves were necessary. He added the bass trombone, made possible by an invention of Sax about 1840. This invention consisted of a thumb valve and tubing which bridged the gap in the tenor trombone from E to B $\flat$  below the staff. He wrote for bass clarinets, first used by Meyerbeer in 1836 in his "Huguenots" opera. The English horn, first used by Rossini in his "William Tell" opera, in 1828, was included in Wagner's score. ¶In 1832 Boehm invented his great mechanism for flute and this mechanism was adapted to the clarinet in 1843 by Klose. Several features of the system were also incorporated on the oboe, especially the ring keys. Therefore Wagner availed himself of the greater facilities of the new and improved wood-winds, and the old flutes, oboes, and clarinets were replaced by the modern instruments. ¶In 1815 Blümel invented the piston-valve and ten years later the rotary valve. Although these improved instruments were not immediately accepted, they had replaced to a large extent the simple trumpets and hunting horns by the time of Wagner. Instead of the bugle type of trumpet he used the improved piston-valve trumpet such as we use to-day. And instead of the old hunting horn he used the rotary valve

French horn with which we are familiar. He seldom used less than 4 of these and often used 6 or 8. He added the bass tuba and threw out the old serpent. Serpents appear for the last time in his "Rienzi" overture in 1842. The German bandmaster, Wieprecht, invented the bass tuba in 1829 and it was perfected by Sax in 1842. Wagner is noted for his treatment of the brass but much of his improved handling is due to the new resources of the instruments made possible by the addition of the valves. ¶The percussion section of Wagner's orchestra is also improved. As early as 1760 the opera composer, Gluck, had, used snare-drum, bass-drum, cymbals, and triangle, and they were also used in opera by Haydn and Mozart, but it was Wagner who established these instruments in the symphony. He also was the first to establish the use of the third tympano, although Weber had used the third tympano as early as 1807. At this time, also, the hand-tuned tympani gave way to the more efficient machine, or pedal, tympani. ¶Besides adding a variety of tonal colouring, Wagner also added to the size of the orchestra, increasing the number of stringed instruments as well as of wind-instruments. ¶With such a superb orchestra Wagner was able to paint a musical picture of which even Beethoven scarcely dreamed. He employed a full choir of wood-winds, a full choir of brass, a full choir of strings, and a large and varied percussion section. He divided these choirs into many separate parts, giving a closely integrated harmony, a wide tonal spectrum, and a great variety of orchestral effects. When his music was first heard it was called barbarous and inharmonic. This was because it was new and the ears of the time were not used to this type of music. It has since been accepted as the greatest music of its kind ever written and is probably the most popular music played by the symphony orchestra to-day. ¶By Wagner's time both the harpsichord and piano had been discarded for the bâton and conductor's podium. This custom of directing with the bâton had been made popular by Berlioz and Mendelssohn and has been common now for over a century. Adolph Sax, a Belgian instrument-maker working in Paris, invented the saxophone in 1840. It was early accepted by such French composers as Berlioz and Meyerbeer and by a few of the German composers. To-day most modern composers score for the saxophones. The saxophones serve to blend the wood-winds and the brasses together. ¶Some additional instruments used by moderns are the vibraphone and tubular chimes. The latter take the place of the giant bells of the carillon. Some ancient percussion instruments to earn their place in the symphony orchestra are the Spanish castanets and oriental tambourine. The moderns are colourists and require a wealth of tonal tints in their musical palette. ¶To-day's bands are an outgrowth of the Elizabethan bands of Shakespeare's time. They were composed of oboes, cornettos, flageolets, bugles, serpents, and other wind-instruments. After Sax invented his family of saxhorns, in 1842, the wind band was primarily of brass. There were sopranos, altos, tenors, barytones, and basses—all cup-mouthpiece instruments. This is still the typical wind band of Italy, Germany, and other European countries. ¶America has developed a new type of band although this development is recent. In Civil War days the band was substantially like the bands of Europe and Canada. Later wood-winds were used more prominently. To-day the Band is patterned in general after the symphony orchestra, clarinets and other wood-winds taking the place of the string section. There is less brass and more wood-winds. ¶An important phase of this development is the use of complete choirs of each family. We have, for instance, soprano clarinets, alto clarinets, bass clarinets, and contrabass clarinets, giving a complete range of clarinet colouring. We also have the soprano oboe, the alto oboe, or English horn, the bass oboe, or bassoon, and the contrabass oboe, or contrabass bassoon. The saxophone family is also complete throughout the entire range of the band. Only the flute family is incomplete although there has been some use of the alto and bass flute. ¶1. The Violin Family. The ancestor of the violin is the Greek kithara, the first instrument to have a sound chest with top and back separated by straight ribs. The viols developed from this instrument and were well known in the Middle Ages. The viols developed into the violin in the late fifteenth century. One Caspar Tieffenbrucker, of Italian Tyrol, is credited with making the first true violin in 1467, twenty-five years before Columbus discovered America. ¶The making of violins early centred at Brescia, a little town in Lombardy, Italy, fifty miles from the Tyrol border, about 1520. This group of craftsmen flourished for one hundred years. The most famous school, however, was the Cremona school, located about forty miles from Brescia. Here the Amati family began attracting attention about the middle of the sixteenth century. A pupil of Niccolo Amati was Antonius Stradivarius who became the most famous maker of them all. During his long lifetime (1645-1737) he made about 950 violins, besides 150 violas and 'cellos. ¶2. The Flute. The oldest wind-instrument is the flute. The most primitive is the syrinx or pipes of Pan. It is found in ancient Egyptian tombs and was a favourite instrument with the Greeks. The flute developed along two lines: those blown from the end and those blown from the side. The side-blown flute, commonly called the German flute, nosed out the end-blown flute in Europe in the fourteenth century. But the end-blown flute was popular in England until about 1700. ¶The first key ever used on a wind-instrument was invented in 1677, inventor unknown. Used to bridge the gap in the diatonic scale at the bottom where cross fingering was impossible. The second key was invented in 1726 by Quantz, flute teacher to Frederick the Great. It was used to overcome enharmonic differences but it turned out to be useless. Keys were added from time to time until Boehm's day, about one hundred years later, when the flute had 8 keys. ¶To correct the imperfections of the current flute, Boehm invented his new flute in 1832. It had 14 holes, but how could he cover these 14 holes with 9 fingers? The ring key system was Boehm's solution. This made the flute playable in all keys and revolutionised the instrument. In 1847 he came out with his cylindrical-bore flute, made of metal. This was a still further improvement, having 15 holes and 23 keys. Other improvements were the clutch and Buffet's needle springs. All flutes to-day are close copies of the Boehm flute, although many improvements have been added to the mechanism. ¶3. Double Reeds. The Crusaders brought the first oboes to Europe from the Orient nearly a thousand years ago. Even then they were extremely ancient instruments, having been known to the Egyptians for over fifty centuries. It was not until the orchestra began to bud in Italy in the late sixteenth century that they came to be used as a musical instrument. Bach was the first to use all three voices of the oboe family—the soprano oboe, the alto English horn, and the bass bassoon. This he did in his "Passion" music, composed in 1723. His English horn, however, was really the early form of alto known as the oboe da caccia, which was later crowded out by the superior English horn, invented in 1760 by Ferlandis of Bergamo. The bassoon is an extremely old instrument, its shape having been invented in 1540 by Alfranio, a Catholic priest. ¶The sarrusophone, a sort of metal bassoon, was invented by the French bandmaster Sarrus in 1856. Although built in a complete family, like the saxophone, only contrabass in Eb is used in America. ¶4. The Single Reeds. Whereas the range of all other wind-instruments was about two octaves, the chalumeau (primitive clarinet) could play only an octave. Denner in 1690 discovered the beauty in this instrument and made the clarinet a useful instrument. He found that although the chalumeau would not overblow to the octave, as did the flute and oboe, it would overblow to the twelfth when a small hole was bored into the tube up near the mouthpiece. He then added keys to bridge the gap between the first octave and the twelfth and gave the instrument a chromatic scale of over two octaves. In its key development it followed the trend of the flute and oboe. After the Boehm system was invented, Klose, a great clarinet-player of his day, had a clarinet made for his own use incorporating the Boehm system. This was in 1843 and marks the beginning of the true greatness of the clarinet, for this key system made it playable in all keys. ¶The alto clarinet was invented by Horn of Passau in Bavaria in 1770. He called it the basset horn and its key was F. Beethoven and Mendelssohn wrote for the old basset horn but after the middle of the nineteenth century its mechanism became Boehm, its pitch was changed to Eb, and it was called simply the alto clarinet. ¶The bass clarinet is generally credited to Gresner of Dresden. It was invented in 1793 but apparently nobody used it much until after Sax improved the mechanism about 1840. ¶5. Trumpet, Fluegelhorn, and Cornet. The trumpet with its cylindrical bore is as old as history. The ancestor of the fluegelhorn is the ancient bugle which had a conical bore. In the thirteenth century the cornetto, ancestor of to-day's cornet, made its appearance. It had a bore which was midway between the cylindrical bore of the trumpet and the conical bore of the bugle. It was a crude instrument made of wood and covered with leather. ¶All three of these instruments were used in the early orchestras but all three had musical limitations because of the gaps in their natural scale. This defect was not remedied until Blumel invented the piston valve in 1815. To-day the trumpet is the principal soprano of the brass choir in the orchestra, while the cornet is the principal soprano of the brass choir in the band. The fluegelhorn is an important instrument in the band and is used to bridge the tonal gap between the cornets and the horns. ¶6. The Trombone. For centuries the trombone was nothing but a big trumpet. But in the fourteenth century some genius in northern Italy discovered when working with the tuning slide of his trumpet that moving the slide changed the pitch of the instrument. He saw clearly that this presented a method of bridging the gaps in the natural scale. At first the slide was long enough to add only 4 semitones but before the middle of the sixteenth century the slide was lengthened to add the 6 semitones found on to-day's slide trombone. ¶The early composers called for the trombone, or sackbut, as it was called. They often scored for 5 trombones—2 altos, 2 tenors, and 1 bass. It was Gluck, the opera composer, who first made intelligent use of the trombone. He established the style of writing for the trombone in three parts, a style adhered to ever since. Bach, Handel, Haydn, and Mozart used the trombone in oratorios and operas but they refused to use them in the symphony. Beethoven followed their lead in his first four symphonies. But in his great Fifth Symphony, composed in 1808, he introduced the trombones because no other instrument could express his musical thought. ¶ Shortly after Blumel's invention of the piston valve, valves were added to the trombone. Strangely enough, however, the valve trombone found no wide popularity except in Italy, the birthplace of the slide. It was Sax who added the thumb valve to the bass trombone which bridged the gap between the first and second partial, making it chromatic throughout. This he did before 1850. ¶ 7. The French Horn. Oldest type of horn is the Hebrew shofar, made from ram's horn. Our French horn came from the horn used in the chase by French kings. French horns were introduced into the orchestra by Lully in 1664. In Germany the old "waldhorn," or forest horn, made its début in the orchestra in 1705, when Keiser wrote for a pair of horns in his opera "Octavia." In 1715 Handel introduced the horns into England, in his "Water Music." Six years later Bach called for two horns in his first "Brandenburg" concerto, and the place of the horns became assured. ¶ Hampl, a Dresden horn-player, invented his famous "machine horn" in 1753. This invention permitted the insertion of the crooks not in the mouthpiece but in the body of the horn and improved intonation. Hampl seven years later discovered that by stopping the horn with the hand the pitch could be raised a semitone and a full tone. This gave a whole new series of notes without the use of slides. The hand-horn became the standard horn and survived until a long time after valves were invented. ¶ In 1815 Blumel invented the piston valve. In 1827 he followed this with a rotary valve which has survived on the French horn. In spite of the superiority of the valve horn over the hand-horn, it was twenty years before it was generally called for by composers; and even then, the hand-horn was usually called for for the first and third horn parts, the second and fourth being given to the valve horn. It was not until Wagner's time that the hand-horn gave way to the valve horn, along toward the middle of the nineteenth century. ¶ 8. The Tuba Family. In 1590 Guillaume of Auxerre invented the serpent, a queer-looking instrument about eight feet long, made of wood and covered with leather. It flourished for two hundred years as an important bass instrument, but it is chiefly known for its many and varied progeny. Among these are the ophicleides, a family of six. ¶ It was from this family of ophicleides that Sax got his idea for the saxhorns, a family of cup-mouthpiece instruments with piston valves and a conical bore, invented in 1842. Not satisfied with this conical bore, Sax a few years later made another complete family of instruments which he called the saxtrombas. These were very similar to the saxhorns except that the bore was not so conical, being more nearly cylindrical. Although these instruments did not find favour in Europe and quickly died out, our own tubas are really saxtrombas. Whereas the tone of the saxhorns was round and mellow, the tone of the saxtrombas and of our tubas is more solid and on the brilliant side. Since the saxhorns and saxtrombas were not invented until the middle of the nineteenth century, Wagner, Berlioz, and their contemporaries were the first composers to profit by their use. ¶ All upright cup-mouthpiece instruments are tubas. These include the alto tuba, the tenor tuba, the barytone tuba, the euphonium, the E♭ bass tuba, and the B♭ bass tuba; but it is customary in America to use the word tuba for only the bass tubas. The Wagnerian tuben do not really belong to this family, although they are cup-mouthpiece instruments and they are in the shape of the upright tubas. They are essentially French horns built in tenor and barytone voices. ¶C. G. Conn made the first sousaphone in 1897, expressly for John Philip Sousa's band. This instrument had the upright bell and Sousa refused to use any other to the end of his days. In 1908 Conn built the first bell-front sousaphone which has superseded the original bell-up model. ¶9. The Saxophones. The saxophone was invented by Adolph Sax, a Belgian instrument-maker working in Paris; in 1840. He got his idea while trying to fit a clarinet mouthpiece to the ophicleide, an old cup-mouthpiece instrument. He liked the strange blending of the brass tone of the ophicleide with the reedy tone of the clarinet. He worked over the key mechanism of the ophicleide and this modification of the ophicleide key mechanism became the saxophone mechanism. ¶His family of saxophones included the high E $\flat$  soprano, the B $\flat$  soprano, the E $\flat$  alto, the B $\flat$  tenor, the E $\flat$  barytone, and the B $\flat$  bass. Other members which have since been added are the C soprano, the C tenor or melody, and the F mezzo soprano. Occasionally one sees the contrabass in E $\flat$ . C. G. Conn built the first saxophone ever constructed in America, in 1888. ¶10. Percussion Instruments. In this family are the instruments struck in various manners to produce sound. They are the most primitive and the oldest of all musical instruments. Divided into two classes: (1) those without musical pitch, such as drums, tomtoms, cymbals, castanets, and (2) those with musical pitch, such as tympani, chimes, bells, vibraphone. ¶The Moors brought kettle-drums to Europe in 711 A.D. Virdung, German historian of music writing, in 1511 describes the kettle-drums of his day, as does Praetorius about a hundred years later. First used in opera by Lully in seventeenth century. Bach and Handel used kettle-drums as did almost all subsequent composers. Weber first to use 3 tympani, in 1807, although Berlioz claims this distinction. Pfund, tympanist for Mendelssohn, invented the machine tympani about 1840. ¶Wagner was most prominent early user of chimes, as in "Parsifal." Also used orchestra bells, as in "Die Walküre." Saint-Saëns used xylophone to good effect in his "Danse Macabre." Tchaikowsky introduced the celesta in the symphony, in his "Casse-Noisette." Gluck introduced the drums into the orchestra about 1760. Mozart used bass-drum, cymbal, and triangle a few years later. Origin of snare-drum came from Scotch practice of whipping drum with leather thongs. Tambourine known to Greeks, Assyrians, etc. One of first uses was by Weber, in "Precosia." Castanets (word means chestnut wood) are of Spanish origin. One of most famous uses is in Bizet's "Carmen." Tamtams are a form of large gong, while tomtoms are small drums with thick leather heads. Cymbals are of Turkish origin and are popular in producing oriental effects. Haydn started the use of "effects" in his "Seasons." He started with such sounds as thunder, quail call, and gunshot. Hundreds of effects have been added since his time. (See "Orchestras and Orchestration," page 778; "Orchestras in America," page 787; "Orchestration of Theatre and Dance Music," page 780; and Dictionary of Terms entry, page 648.)

SWING MUSIC

By JAMES A. POLING

SWING is a form of music indigenous to America. Its history is vague but it is conventionally believed that swing music originated in the deep South around the first decade of this century. Certainly the first recognised great swing musician was Buddy Bolden, a black New Orleans cornetist, and, musically speaking, the grandfather of Louis Armstrong, recognised to-day as one of the greatest swing artists of all time. ¶ Swing music made its first important bid for popular approval in 1916, with the appearance at Reisenweber's restaurant in New York of The Original Dixieland Jazz Band. Ted Lewis and Paul Whiteman helped spread its popularity and they in turn were followed by Red Nichols and countless other bands until the popularity of swing became international. Swing music's popularity was climaxed in 1938 with the appearance at Carnegie Hall of Benny Goodman (the greatest clarinetist of his time) and his band in an all-swing concert. ¶ Swing differs from other music in that in other musical forms the orchestra re-creates the composer's musical ideas just as the composer conceived them. The performer is in a secondary rôle. In swing the performer appears in a more creative rôle. Through improvisation (the soul and heartblood of swing) the performer transforms the composer's fundamental melodic idea into his own conception of the theme. In other words, the swing musician does not simply convey to the listener what was original with the composer; he himself creates the musical substance his auditors hear. Hugh Panassie in his book Hot Jazz says, "To ignore the talent of the orchestra in jazz (swing) is like ignoring the talent of the composer in classical music." ¶ Swing is characterised by a musical idiom and attitude, rather than by a tempo. It is generally polyphonic music composed of melodies that support one another, as contrasted to homophonic music in which the melody is supported by chords. Ad lib variations on a simple theme; counterpoint, particularly of the fourth or syncopated variety; involved harmonies; and syncopation, in which the accent is shifted to the unstressed part of a beat or measure—these are fundamental to swing. ¶ Whether or not swing is a transient musical form is a subject of considerable debate. The answer generally given by swing addicts is the now classic statement of Louis Armstrong, greatest cornetist of them all, "Folks, take it from me—we couldn't live without a little swing now and then, mostly then."

SYNOPSIS OF NINETY OPERAS CURRENT IN PRESENT-DAY REPERTOIRES

The operas are arranged alphabetically according to title, and where there is an accepted English title it is used in preference to the original.

AFRICAINÉ, L'

Composer: GIACOMO MEYERBEER

Book by EUGÈNE SCRIBE

First performance: Opéra, Paris, April 28, 1865

5 acts.

VASCO DA GAMA, who is pledged to marry Inez, daughter of a Portuguese admiral, returns with information about a new land and two natives to prove it: Selika, an Indian queen, and Nelusko, attendant. Don Diego, father of Inez, has tried to get her to marry Don Pedro, who now throws Vasco in jail. Selika comes there to protect him from the murderous intent of the jealous Nelusko, and to tell him of her love. Don Pedro decides to find the new land for himself and takes Inez with him, also taking Selika and Nelusko as guides. The latter plans to destroy the ship—a plan which Vasco knows about. He pursues the party in a second ship to warn them. Don Pedro pays no heed and the crew is killed. Vasco's life is spared when Selika informs the natives that he is her husband. However, when Vasco finds that Inez was not killed in the massacre he leaves Selika for his old love. The Indian Queen in despair kills herself, as the faithful Nelusko does likewise, by breathing the poisonous scent of the manchineel tree.

AÏDA

Composer: GIUSEPPE VERDI

Book by ANTONIO GHISLANZONI and composer from Camille du Locle's work, and a sketch by the Egyptologist Mariette

First performance: Opera, Cairo, December 24, 1871

4 acts.

AÏDA, living as a slave to Amneris in the Pharaoh's palace at Memphis, is actually the daughter of King Amonasro, invading Ethiopian. Aïda loves Radames who has been selected to defend Egypt against King Amonasro's forces. Amneris, Aïda's mistress, is the daughter of the Pharaoh. She also loves Radames. He returns successful from the Wars and brings with him among the prisoners Amonasro. Aïda goes to her father's arms but does not reveal his rank. Radames asks that all prisoners be set free. All are, except Amonasro. On the banks of the Nile, at night, Radames is waiting to see Aïda one last time before he must marry Amneris. Amonasro persuades Aïda to get Radames to flee with her, also to give information that will help the rearming Ethiopians. She persuades Radames but in getting the information is overheard by Amneris who had gone to spend the night before her marriage in the temple of Isis in prayer. Amonasro and Aïda escape but Radames is caught and sentenced to death by suffocation for treason. Radames spurns freedom at the cost of marrying Amneris and prepares to die. In the tomb Aïda has concealed herself and dies with him.

AMORE DEI TRE RE, L'

(The Love of the Three Kings)

Composer: ITALO MONTEMEZZI

Book by SEM BENELLI

First performance: La Scala, Milan, April 20, 1913

3 acts.

A TALE of the early days when Huns still invaded Italy. Archibaldo, a Germanic, is conqueror of Altura. Fiora, beautiful native daughter, is married to Manfredo, the conqueror's son, against her own wishes, for she loves Avito, an Alturan prince. Flaminio, aid to Archibaldo, helps this romance as Avito visits the castle often during Manfredo's absences. The affair is assisted by the fact that Archibaldo is blind. Archibaldo is convinced that someone visits Fiora but though he accuses her she will tell him nothing. Manfredo leaves Fiora after a very moving scene in which she almost falls in love with him. But Avito comes immediately after Manfredo leaves and Fiora knows her heart is his. Archibaldo overhears them, Flaminio barely restraining Avito from killing the blind old man. Archibaldo questions her and when she won't tell the name of her lover, kills her. Manfredo, on his return, is overcome with grief but Archibaldo vows he will find the man who made Fiora unfaithful. He puts Fiora's body in a crypt and smears poison on her lips. Avito comes to kiss her farewell and dies, telling Manfredo, who has entered, that Fiora loved him. At this Manfredo wishes only death and kisses Fiora. When Archibaldo enters to identify the victim of his trap he realises in horror that he has destroyed the one most dear to him, his son.

ARIADNE AND BLUEBEARD

(Ariane et Barbe-Bleue)

Composer: PAUL DUKAS

Book by MAURICE MAETERLINCK

First performance: Opéra comique, Paris, May 10, 1907

3 acts.

ARIADNE is the most recent of Bluebeard's wives. She has come to his castle in spite of the warnings of the peasantry. Given six silver keys which she may use and one gold one which she may not, she takes but a cursory glance at the jewel-filled rooms which the former open and immediately uses the gold key. She hears the cries of distress of the five earlier wives of Bluebeard. She brings them out into the light, gives them the jewels and then smiles sardonically, when Bluebeard returns to his castle, bound and wounded by his enraged peasantry, for the five wives immediately serve him with new attachment. Ariadne leaves, never to return.

First performance: Zimin's Private Theatre, Moscow, May, 1910

3 acts.

A GOLDEN COCK has been set up in the council chambers of the mythical King, Dodon. The astrologer who put it there claims unusual powers for it. When the cock crows after the King has retired he discovers that the King's son has taken an army and gone out to fight. The King follows. Though he finds his son and the army dead he is relieved of suffering by the sight of the Queen of Shemaka, beautiful beyond words. She accepts his offer of marriage and back they go to his palace. The Astrologer wants to be paid for the Golden Cock and asks the Queen as his price. The King kills the Astrologer whereupon the Golden Cock attacks the King and kills him with his beak. In a dreadful storm that ensues the Queen and the bird disappear. When morning arrives the people mourn the loss of King Dodon. The Astrologer, revived, tells the audience not to worry about the situation since he and the Queen are the only people alive in the kingdom of Dodon anyhow.

COSÌ FAN TUTTE

(They All Do It)

Composer: WOLFGANG AMADEUS MOZART

Book by LORENZO DA PONTE

First performance: Burgtheater, Vienna, January 26, 1790

2 acts.

DON ALFONSO bets two young officer friends that if they leave their wives for a time, no matter how much the wives love their husbands, the ladies will be unfaithful. The husbands leave and return masquerading as merchants. At first neither wife will give in to the ardent advances of the attractive strangers, but finally each does. In the end the whole matter is cleared up happily, not without some skillful maneuvering by Don Alfonso's helper, Despina, the maid.

CYRANO

Composer: WALTER DAMROSCH

Book by W. J. HENDERSON, from Edmond Rostand's play Cyrano de Bergerac

First performance: Metropolitan Opera House, New York, February 27, 1913

4 acts.

THE LEADER of the Gascony cadets, Cyrano, loves Roxane, who in turn loves Christian de Neuville, a somewhat inarticulate friend of Cyrano's. Cyrano supplies the words for Christian's famous balcony wooing of Roxane as he (Cyrano) hides in the bushes while Christian seems to speak as one inspired. After Roxane and Christian are married she rushes to the battlefield of Arras to see her husband and perhaps die with him. The love letters from Christian to Roxane had been written, of course, by Cyrano and Christian accuses Cyrano of having pled his own rather than Christian's case in love. Rushing into the battle he is quickly brought back dead. Roxane enters a convent and it isn't until years later that she discovers the fact, even though Cyrano denies it, that Cyrano has loved her always.

DON GIOVANNI

Composer: WOLFGANG AMADEUS MOZART

Book by LORENZO DA PONTE

First performance: National Theatre, Prague, October 28, 1787

2 acts.

PATTERNED AFTER the career of the legendary Don Juan this is the story of Don Giovanni who, with his servant, Leporello, enter the house of the Commendatore of Seville to get his daughter, Donna Anna, with whom the Don for the moment is enamoured. She screams for help and in escaping the Don kills the Commendatore. As he leaves he is intercepted by Donna Elvira, a woman he has wronged. As the Don dashes away Leporello shocks her with a listing of the Don's endless affairs. Don Giovanni, meanwhile, has fallen in love with Zerlina, peasant fiancée of Masetto, and has broken up her wedding party in his attempt to seduce her. But even the party he gives at his home for peasantry and gentry alike is not successful. Donna Elvira protects the girl. Later, after asking the statue of the dead Commendatore to dine with him, he is warned by Donna Elvira, still faithful to him, of dangers about to beset him. Leporello arrives screaming that the statue of the Commendatore is about to enter the room. The Don does not flee but grasps the hand of the statue and is hurled into Hell which opens at the Commendatore's feet.

DONNE CURIOSE, LE (The Inquisitive Ladies)

Book by HUGO VON HOFMANNSTHAL, from Sophocles

First performance: Hofoper, Dresden, January 25, 1909

1 act.

NEAR THE SERVANTS' QUARTERS of the palace at Mycenae, beside the grave of King Agamemnon, is the scene of this opera. Electra, daughter of Agamemnon, wants to avenge her father's murder at the hands of her mother, Clytemnestra, now married to Aegisthus. This pair have reduced Electra and her sister, Chrysothemis, to the status of servants. Their brother Orestes has escaped. Clytemnestra is obsessed with superstitions and asks Electra to foretell her days. When Electra does so Clytemnestra screams but is comforted by news from another source that Orestes, who is fated to kill her, is dead. Electra does not believe that he is. She tries to get Chrysothemis to kill Clytemnestra but Chrysothemis is not able. Orestes appears and at first does not recognise his sister Electra. When he does he goes into the palace and kills Clytemnestra. Later he also kills Aegisthus. Wild with joy Electra dances on her father's grave while Chrysothemis screams for Orestes. There is no answer.

EMPEROR JONES, THE

Composer: LOUIS GRUENBERG

Book by the composer from Eugene O'Neill's play

First performance: Metropolitan Opera House, New York, January 7, 1933
2 acts (prologue, interlude, and 6 scenes).

BRUTUS JONES, self-termed "emperor" of the Negroes of a West Indian island, has learned from a white trader, Smithers, that the natives intend to kill him. Jones, a former Pullman porter, has risen to his rank on the island by his crafty methods. Taking five lead cartridges and one silver one (for himself, if necessary), Jones plunges into the jungle. He is beset by the visions of men he has tortured, and finally by horrible shapes conjured up by voodoo and witch doctors. He uses his five bullets and finally fires the silver sixth bullet at a Crocodile God, brought to existence by a witch doctor. In the morning he finds he has fled in a wide circle and is back at the edge of the jungle where he is easily captured.

FALSTAFF

Composer: GIUSEPPE VERDI

Book by ARRIGO BOITO, from Shakespeare

First performance: La Scala, Milan, February 9, 1893
3 acts.

SIR JOHN FALSTAFF, plotting affairs with both Mrs. Page and Mrs. Ford, wishes to make them pay out financially. The ladies themselves, however, are in on the plot, thanks to Dame Quickly, and are attempting a counterplot. Anne Page, who is in love with the threadbare Fenton, it is hoped by her parents will marry much better. Sir John accepts the invitations to a tête-à-tête sent him by Mrs. Ford and Mrs. Page. Ford himself, dressed as a man named Fontana, delivers the invitations. Sir John attired in his best wooing garments goes to the Fords' house as Fontana (Ford) follows. There, to save Sir John from discovery, after a variety of horseplay, he is tumbled out the window into the Thames. Ford's anger is eased by seeing Sir John's humiliating situation. Wine revives Sir John, however, and he is ready to fall into another trap when Mrs. Ford again invites him to a rendezvous in Windsor Forest. He is to come disguised as a hunter. He arrives and this time elaborate preparations have been made to receive him. Mrs. Ford goes as the Queen of Fairies, Mrs. Page as a nymph, Dame Quickly as a witch, and scores of children as sprites and elves. Sir John, in the moonlit forest scene, is chased and hounded by all until he admits that he has been bested. All unmask for a last chorus together, not before, however, Anne has taken part in a mock marriage ceremony with Fenton, which, it develops, was no mockery but real.

FAUST

Composer: CHARLES GOUNOD

Book by JULES BARBIER and MICHEL CARRÉ, from Faust by Goethe

First performance: Théâtre Lyrique, Paris, March 19, 1859

5 acts.

Faust accepts after Marguerite is revealed to him at her spinning wheel. Faust and Marguerite fall in love, after which Valentin, her brother, returns from the wars and fights a duel with Faust in which Valentin is killed. Faust and Mephistopheles visit Marguerite in prison where she is waiting death because she killed the child Faust has fathered. Marguerite will not go with them and she is redeemed by her appeals to Heaven. Faust and Mephistopheles disappear.

FIDELIO

Composer: LUDWIG VON BEETHOVEN

Book by JOSEPH SONNLEITHNER and GEORG FRIEDRICH TREITSCHKE from a play by Jean Nicolas Bouilly

First performance: Theater an der Wien, Vienna, November 20, 1805

2 acts.

FLORESTAN is the political prisoner of Don Pizarro and is slowly being starved to death in the deepest dungeon of the prison. Leonore, his devoted wife, is unable to explain his sudden disappearance, and finally disguised as a man (Fidelio) goes to the prison and becomes the assistant of the friendly jailor, Rocco. Marcelline, daughter of Rocco, becomes enamoured of Fidelio and invites the jealousy of Jacquino, turnkey who loves her. By encouraging this affair between herself and Marcelline, Leonore (Fidelio) is able to discover that a mysterious prisoner is being given a slow death in the dungeon. Don Pizarro, frightened by a letter from his superior, indicating a visit to the prison, instructs the watch to give a trumpet blast when Don Fernando, his superior, is sighted. He tries to bribe Rocco to kill Florestan in order to get him out of sight but Rocco will only agree to dig the grave. Rocco takes Fidelio with him into the depths of the prison to dig it. There Leonore (Fidelio) reveals herself to Florestan, and draws a pistol on Don Pizarro who arrives to murder Florestan. Don Fernando is announced by the trumpet call and Don Pizarro is lighted up to the surface where he is relieved of his position and Florestan and Leonore are happily reunited.

FLYING DUTCHMAN, THE (Der Fliegende Holländer)

Composer: RICHARD WAGNER

Book by the composer

First performance: Hoftheater, Dresden, January 2, 1843

3 acts.

BASED ON THE LEGEND of the Flying Dutchman, this is the history of Vanderdecken who vowed he could sail around the Cape of Good Hope in spite of bad weather. As payment for such a rash oath he was doomed to sail until he could find a woman who would be eternally true to him. Vanderdecken meets a Norwegian sea captain, Daland. He tells Daland about the rich cargo he is carrying and offers to pay well to stay at Daland's home which is not far from the port in which they meet. In the Daland household, meantime, Senta, the daughter, gazes at a picture of the Flying Dutchman. To her amazement his reincarnation appears in the doorway with her father. Erik, who loves her, has been in despair because of her obsession with the picture and her desire to free the man from his endless pilgrimage on the sea. After Vanderdecken and Senta are alone together she quickly accepts his offer of marriage. Later, however, Vanderdecken sees Senta pursued by Erik and decides if she would give up one man she might another. Without any warning he therefore boards his ship and sails away. Senta, rushing to the top of a cliff, screams that she has been faithful unto death and leaps into the sea. At this the ship sinks and in the background the pair can be seen mounting heavenward together.

FREISCHÜTZ, DER (The Free-Shooter)

Composer: CARL MARIA VON WEBER

Book by JOHANN FRIEDRICH KIND, from a story in the Gespensterbuch

First performance: Schauspielhaus, Berlin, June 8, 1821

3 acts.

THE DEMON ZAMIEL has persuaded Kaspar, devotee of Prince Ottokar of Bohemia, to bargain his soul for a set of magic bullets. Agathe, daughter of Kuno, the Prince's chief huntsman, loves Max and wants to marry him. Kaspar and Zamiel conspire to make Max a poor shot in the first round of competition for Kuno's position (that worthy is retiring). Max is encouraged to meet Kaspar and Zamiel where he will receive the magic bullets . . . i.e., Kaspar will be relieved of the burden of them, and Zamiel will accept Max as his new ward. Agathe receives a magic wreath from a holy hermit. At the next contest, Max shoots perfectly six times with six of the magic bullets which will do his will, but the seventh must do Zamiel's. The demon forces Max to shoot Agathe, whose magic wreath, however, saves her life, deflecting the bullet so that it kills Kaspar. Max and Agathe can now wed.

FRIEDENSTAG, DER (The Day of Peace)

Composer: RICHARD STRAUSS

Book by JOSEPH GREGOR

First performance: National Theatre, Munich, July 24, 1938

1 act.

DURING THE THIRTY YEARS' WAR a besieged town is being held by a Commander and his Catholic adherents who would rather die than give up. Outside, the besieging troops, led by Holsteiner, are pressing the town hard. A letter from the Emperor, sent by special messenger, orders the town held at all costs. The messenger sings a song of peace which instantly brings cries from the populace who want bread. They plead with the Commander to give in but he will not. The Commander tells the people that they will receive a sign before noon, at which time the gates will be opened. Intending to quiet them while he can make his preparations, the Commander goes ahead with his plan to blow up the town and kill everyone, himself as well. His wife, Maria, hears the preparations in the vaults under the city, and comes to plead with her husband. He is adamant. The enemy is sighted approaching with obvious banners of peace. The Commander cannot believe that this is other than a hoax. Finally, however, Maria, on her knees before her Commander-husband, persuades him to take the proffered hand of the enemy leader, Holsteiner. The populace breaks out into a hymn of peace.

GIANNI SCHICCHI

Composer: GIACOMO PUCCINI

Book by GIOACCHINO FORZANO

First performance: Metropolitan Opera House, New York, December 14, 1918

1 act.

THE ESTATE of Buoso Donati has been left not to his immediate relatives, but to charity. The relatives, gathered at his bedside after his death, are in a quandary to find a method of breaking the will. One member of the family, Runuccio, suggests that his prospective father-in-law, Gianni Schicchi, a gentleman of considerable guile and cleverness, be called in. He presents the only possible solution for the situation which is instantly put into action. Since no one except those in the death chamber know of Donati's demise, the body is removed and Gianni Schicchi impersonates Donati. The doctor calls and is delighted to find his patient still alive (he does not recognise the substitution). Gianni Schicchi then calls for legal support and dictates a new will. When the relieved relatives read the will they discover to their horror that he has willed the major part of the estate to Gianni Schicchi! And no one can contest it since each has been a part of the first criminal action.

GIOCONDA, LA (The Smiling One)

Composer: AMILCARE PONCHIELLI

Book by TOBIA GORRIO (Arrigo Boito) from Victor Hugo's play Angelo, tyran de Padoue

First performance: La Scala, Milan, April 8, 1876

4 acts.

ENZO GRIMALDO, a pirate in the Adriatic, loves Laura Adorno who is married to Alvise Badoero, an inquisitor. La Gioconda is in love with Enzo even though she is a street singer, and he of noble birth. She supports her blind mother, La Cieca. Barnaba, a spy, wants to possess La Gioconda. In a wild scene before the Doges' Palace in Venice Barnaba arranges for Enzo and Laura to meet on an island. He advises Alvise that the meeting will take place. La Gioconda also learns of this rendezvous. Previously, La Cieca has been accused of witchcraft and would have been killed had it not been for the intervention of Laura to whom La Cieca gave her rosary. On the island Enzo and Barnaba arrive, as do shortly Laura and, finally, La Gioconda. The latter is about to stab Laura when she sees her mother's rosary and desists. Alvise is about to arrive on a vessel when Laura and Gioconda leave the island while Enzo burns his ship. Back in Venice Alvise is bent on avenging his honour and arranges to have Laura drink poison. La Gioconda substitutes a sleeping potion so that later at a ball when Alvise draws aside a curtain he reveals a sleeping, though apparently dead, Laura. Enzo is arrested for denouncing Barnaba and, in the general mêlée, La Cieca is taken off by Barnaba. La Gioconda cries that she will give herself to Barnaba if he will but spare Enzo's life. In the last act Enzo comes to La Gioconda and tells her that he only wants to die on Laura's bier. La Gioconda then tells him that Laura, who has been brought in still apparently dead, is only sleeping. She awakens and attests her love for Enzo. La Gioconda helps the two depart in safety to Illyria while she waits to stab herself as Barnaba enters to collect on the bargain they made to free Enzo. To partially avenge himself in losing La Gioconda, Barnaba screams that he has killed La Cieca, but La Gioconda does not hear. She is dead.

GIOIELLI DELLA MADONNA, I

See The Jewels of the Madonna

GIRL OF THE GOLDEN WEST, THE (La Fanciulla Del West)

Composer: GIACOMO PUCCINI

Book by GUELFO CIVINI and CARLO ZANGARINI from David Belasco's play of the same name

First performance: Metropolitan Opera House, New York, December 10, 1910

3 acts.

IN THE CALIFORNIA of 1849 Minnie owns a saloon to which Sheriff Rance comes repeatedly to propose marriage. She is not interested but is attracted to a newcomer, Dick Johnson. When the Sheriff and men leave as a posse to search for the outlaw, Ramerrez, Minnie invites Johnson to her cabin for a tête-à-tête. During their love scene the Sheriff knocks and enters, not before Johnson has been hidden above the rafters, however. When Rance has left Johnson admits he is the outlaw, and Minnie tells him to leave. He is later wounded and returns. She repents, hides him again, and almost convinces Rance who has returned that Johnson (Ramerrez) is not there. But blood dropping from the rafters gives Johnson away and Minnie plays poker for his life: Johnson to go free if she wins, and she herself to marry Rance if she loses. She cheats and wins. In the final scene Johnson has been captured and is about to be hung but Minnie intercedes, and the crowd gives him up to her so that the pair can go off to begin a new life together.

3 scenes.

HÄNSEL AND GRETEL are sent into the woods to pick berries. They get lost, and when they are sleepy lie down to rest. Angels come down to protect them, and they spend a peaceful night only to be caught in the morning by the Witch of the forest who loves to eat children. The alert children contrive to lock her in the oven that has been prepared for them. Her death brings to life all the children who have been lost before. The parents of Hänsel and Gretel arrive to take the children home.

HÉRODIADE

(Herodias)

Composer: JULES MASSENET

Book by PAUL MILLIET and HENRI GRÉMONT (Italian version by A. Zanardini)

First performance: Théâtre de la Monnaie, Brussels, December 19, 1881
4 acts.

IN JERUSALEM of 30 A.D. Salome is searching for the prophet John who once was kind to her. She does not know that Herodias is her mother. Herod is madly in love with Salome. His wife, Herodias, demands that John lose his head because he cursed her. Herod is afraid to issue this order since the people believe in John. Salome offers John her love but he tells her to seek God. Herodias, in consulting Phaniel, a soothsayer, discovers that Salome is her own child. When Herod finds that Salome loves John, he orders the prophet beheaded. Salome immediately assumes this to be the work of Herodias, and draws a dagger to kill her. Herodias stays the girl's hand when she cries that she (Herodias) is Salome's mother. Salome, aghast at this revelation, stabs herself.

HEURE ESPAGNOLE, L'

(Spanish Time)

Composer: MAURICE RAVEL

Book by FRANC NOHAIN

First performance: Opéra comique, Paris, May 19, 1911
1 act.

IN TOLEDO during the eighteenth century lived Concepcion, beautiful but inconstant wife of Torquemada, clock-maker. She has come upon the happy method of hiding her lovers by putting them in grandfather's-clock cases. Ramiro, a giant henchman, lugs these from room to room, and up and down-stairs to suit Concepcion's taste and requirements. However, she becomes so interested in the engaging muscles of the mighty Ramiro that she invites him to her rooms, and forgets about the poet in one clock case and the banker in another. Torquemada returns and humanely releases them, also selling each a clock! Finally, with Concepcion and Ramiro, they all sing an engaging quintet.

HUGUENOTS, LES

Composer: GIACOMO MEYERBEER

Book by EUGÈNE SCRIBE and ÉMILE DESCHAMPS

First performance: Opéra, Paris, February 29, 1836

5 acts.

RAOUL DE NANGIS, popular Huguenot, is requested by Marguerite, Queen of Navarre, to come blindfolded to meet the woman she wishes him to marry, Valentine. This beautiful young lady is one Raoul had fallen in love with years before and earlier in this same evening had seen with her affianced, De Nevers, a man from whom she was trying to escape. When the Queen reveals Valentine, Raoul assumes the meeting he chanced to see with De Nevers was an assignation, and cries that he wouldn't think of marrying Valentine. Marguerite later prevents open warfare between the Huguenots and Catholics over this slight. Raoul, still in love with Valentine, watches her step aboard the wedding barge De Nevers has provided. He appears in her room later, and learns the truth as someone enters. Hiding behind a curtain he overhears the whole plan for the St. Bartholomew's Day massacre. When he emerges, Raoul and Valentine sing a passionate love song. In the Italian version it is at this point that they are shot down from offstage and the opera ends. In the fifth act ending, Valentine and Raoul, both Huguenots now, are shot by her father's soldiers not before they have been married, however.

INQUISITIVE WOMEN, THE

JEWELS OF THE MADONNA, THE

(I Gioielli della Madonna)

Composer: ERMANNO WOLF-FERRARI

Book by the composer, verses by Carlo Zangarini and Enrico Golisciani

First performance: Kurfürstenoper, Berlin, December 2, 1911

3 acts.

MALIELLA is a girl free with her favours, whose foster parent, Carmela, has a son Gennaro who is very much in love with her. She loves Rafaele, a lad of rash statements but cool actions. When he offers to steal the jewels of the Madonna for Maliella she is delighted at the shocking bravery of even a suggestion of such action. When Gennaro is taunted by Maliella, the young man takes her seriously, goes out into the moonlight to bring back the jewels. Maliella, once she sees them, is so struck with their beauty that she gives herself to him, and happily dons the precious gems. To a meeting of Camorristi at the edge of Naples Maliella comes dressed in clothes held close about her. When she mentions Gennaro's name Rafaele is enraged and hurls her to the floor whereupon her shawl falls open, and reveals the jewels. Rushing off to the sea the hysterical Maliella disappears, as do all the Camorristi who are afraid of being accused of the theft. Gennaro has in the meantime arrived. He asks the Holy Virgin's forgiveness, and stabs himself as the Camorristi return to punish him.

JUGGLER OF NOTRE DAME, THE (Le Jongleur de Nôtre-dame)

Composer: JULES MASSENET

Book by MAURICE LÉNA, from Anatole France's story

First performance: Théâtre Monte Carlo, February 18, 1902

3 acts.

A CROWD is making fun of Jean, a poor juggler, whose bag of tricks the crowd ridicules. The Prior of the abbey in front of which this action has taken place clears the square, and reproves Jean for his profession. He does, however, invite him into the abbey. There Jean finds the monks extolling their various arts, and trying to win him to one of them. Jean is unhappy because of his own lack of learning but the cook, Boniface, later points out that it is not necessary to be a scholar to worship. This pleases Jean who goes into the chapel in his juggler outfit, and does his pitiful routine as a humble offering to the Virgin. Just when the enraged Prior and monks are about to throw him out, the Virgin raises her hands in benediction over the boy as he dies.

JUIVE, LA (The Jewess)

Composer: FROMENTAL HALÉVY

5 acts.

IN 1414 IN CONSTANCE, Rachel, the supposed daughter of the wealthy Jewish merchant, Eleazar, is loved by Prince Leopold, a man she knows only as Samuel, an artist. When she discovers that Samuel is not only Prince Leopold but has a wife, Eudoxia, as well, she is overwhelmed, and accuses him publicly. Cardinal Brogni imprisons all three, also excommunicating the Prince. Rachel finally recalls her accusation at the behest of Princess Eudoxia, whereupon Eleazar and Rachel are accused of plotting against a Christian. Before they are to die in boiling oil, Eleazar points out that Rachel is not his daughter but the Cardinal's, a child he had saved from the Cardinal's palace when it burned.

KING'S HENCHMAN, THE

Composer: DEEMS TAYLOR

Book by EDNA ST. VINCENT MILLAY

First performance: Metropolitan Opera House, New York, February 17, 1927

3 acts.

ENGLAND in the tenth century is the scene of this opera in which King Eadgar declares his intention of marrying Aelfrida, rumoured as the extremely beautiful daughter of a thane of Devon. Aethelwold, best friend of the King, is asked to go and present the King's invitation of marriage. Aethelwold has no interest in the ladies but as an act of friendship agrees to do so. In a misty forest of Devonshire on Allhallow Eve Aethelwold lies asleep when Aelfrida approaches reciting an invocation which is to find her a true lover. As though by divine intervention the mist rises, and reveals Aethelwold to Aelfrida. They immediately fall in love. Aethelwold discovers that Aelfrida is the woman he has been sent to find, and departs in order to put temptation behind him. But he returns when she calls him. Without telling her of the King's invitation to marriage, Aethelwold sends word back to King Eadgar that Aelfrida is too homely for a King, and begs leave to marry her himself. They live happily for months until the King sends word that he is coming to visit his faithful servant, and meet his wife. When Aelfrida hears of Aethelwold's duplicity she first agrees to make herself homely, but when the King arrives she appears looking her most beautiful. Aethelwold kills himself as the King mourns his best friend.

KÖNIGSKINDER, DIE

(The King's Children)

Composer: ENGELBERT HUMPERDINCK

Book by ERNST ROSMER (Elsa Bernstein)

First performance (operatic version): Metropolitan Opera House, New York, December 28, 1910

3 acts.

THE KING'S SON on seeing a Goose Girl realises he has found the woman who will be his Queen. She, unfortunately, is under a spell from which he cannot free her. When the people of Hellabrunn, who have been expecting their own King, see the King's Son (a lackey at the Inn) bow before the Goose Girl as she comes into the market place they will have nothing to do with the pair as royalty, and drive them out of the city, along with the Fiddler who has accompanied the Goose Girl. One child, alone, believes that they truly are royal. Wandering in the snow the pair come to the Witch's house. She is dead and the Fiddler lives there, though he is out hunting for them. The King's Son is given, in error, a poison loaf left by the Witch. He innocently gives it to the Goose Girl as well as eating of it himself. The children of Hellabrunn find them dead . . . the royal pair that the world has not recognised.

LAKMÉ

LAKMÉ is the daughter of Nilakantha, a fanatic hater of foreigners. She meets Gerald in the temple grounds, trespassing upon which means death for infidels. When the Hindu priest, Nilakantha, sees footprints he demands the man's name of Lakmé, but she will not reveal it. At a village square meeting he has Lakmé sing the Bell Song, and his cunning is rewarded for Gerald reveals himself. Nilakantha instantly stabs him. Lakmé has him spirited off to the forest where she cures him. She leaves to make a love potion for the love which has blossomed between them. When she returns Gerald is leaving, having been urged by a friend to return to his duties as an officer. Lakmé drinks poison, and dies in Gerald's arms.

LOHENGRIN

Composer: RICHARD WAGNER

Book by the composer

First performance: Hoftheater, Weimar, Germany, August 28, 1850

3 acts.

AT ANTWERP, Gottfried, the young Duke of Brabant, has disappeared. Count Telramund accuses Elsa, Gottfried's sister, of murdering him. King Henry calls Elsa beneath the oak of justice. Elsa tells of a dream she has had of a knight who will come to protect her, and marry her. Elsa prays, and the boat drawn by a swan appears with the Knight in the prow. He declares himself Elsa's champion on the condition that she never ask his name or origin. He bests Telramund in battle, but spares his life. Telramund and his heathen wife, Ortrud, plan vengeance. As Elsa is entering the church about to marry the Knight Ortrud tells Elsa she should know her husband's name. After the ceremony in the bridal chamber Elsa, her curiosity aroused, asks her husband's name. Telramund enters with drawn sword, and is killed by the Knight. Because of Elsa's question her husband now leaves her, and, before King Henry, he tells his story and that his name is Lohengrin. He kneels to pray, and the swan leading his boat sinks, Gottfried appearing in his place. A dove pilots Lohengrin's boat down the river out of sight as Elsa falls dead in her brother's arms.

LOUISE

Composer: GUSTAVE CHARPENTIER

First performance: Teatro Regio, Turin, February 1, 1893

4 acts.

THE FIRST MEETING and elopement of Manon and Des Grieux is essentially the same as in Massenet's opera (produced in 1884). In the succeeding act Manon is the expensive mistress of Gérard de Rivoire in Paris. Des Grieux finds her, and they are about to run away for the second time when they are halted by Gérard. Manon catches up her jewels only to be arrested as a thief. Later Manon is sentenced to exile in Louisiana and is leaving on a ship filled with others of her kind. Des Grieux accompanies the boat as a member of the crew. Manon dies near New Orleans with the faithful Des Grieux at her side.

MAN WITHOUT A COUNTRY, THE

Composer: WALTER DAMROSCH

Book adapted by the composer from Edward Everett Hale's famous novel; done in verse by Arthur Guiterman

First performance: Metropolitan Opera House, New York, May 12, 1937
2 acts (5 scenes).

WHEN AARON BURR tried to form a new republic in the Southwest he drew into his conspiracy Philip Nolan. The opera opens on the island of Blennerhassett where the Ohio joins the Mississippi. Mary Rutledge is present at a party to which Philip Nolan comes to declare his love. When Burr and his party have left for Natchez (he fears arrest) Nolan lingers behind to say good-bye to Mary, and is captured by United States soldiers. Tried at Charleston he is sentenced to never see, or touch foot on, his native soil because, desperate after being plagued with so many questions, he screamed: "Damn, damn the United States! I never wish to hear the cursed name again." Aboard the frigate Guerrière Nolan has spent months and years while Mary works for a pardon in Washington. She goes to Gibraltar and comes aboard his ship. He is overjoyed to see her, but asks her to leave since the frigate will shortly pursue pirates. He pleads to be allowed to fight with the Guerrière men against the pirates. Mary succeeds in getting the permission, and he dies after killing the Admiral of the enemy ships. Commodore Decatur drawing his own sword lays it in Nolan's arms.

MÂROUF, SAVETIER DU CAIRE
(Mârrouf, The Cobbler of Cairo)

Composer: HENRI RABAUD

Book by LUCIEN NEPOTY, from the Arabian Nights

First performance: Opéra comique, Paris, May 15, 1914
5 acts.

TO KHAÏTAN, MÂROUF, the cobbler of Cairo, has come to change his luck, having grown tired of his nagging wife. Mârrouf follows the advice of Ali, and creates a fictitious caravan boasting of its early arrival in the city. This talk interests the Sultan and Vizier who overhear him. He is invited to the palace, and finally offered the hand of the Sultan's daughter in marriage. The treasury is opened to Mârrouf who gives freely to the people. When the daughter is unveiled Mârrouf discovers that he loves her, and that she loves him. But the caravan fails to arrive and the Vizier grows suspicious. To the Sultan's questions Mârrouf is evasive, but he breaks down and tells the Sultan's daughter about his true state. She suggests that they flee the city which they do.

They come upon a man ploughing in a field, and ask him for food. While he is gone to get it Mârouf ploughs, and unearths a ring which marks the opening of a treasure cave. The Princess rubs the ring whereupon the workman reappears as a Djinn. Mârouf instantly wishes for his caravan, and none too soon, for the Sultan and Vizier arrive, and propose to execute Mârouf. In the nick of time an endless caravan arrives, and Mârouf and his bride are borne off triumphant while Vizier is given a beating for his pessimism.

MARRIAGE OF FIGARO, THE

(Le Nozze di Figaro)

Composer: WOLFGANG AMADEUS MOZART

Book by LORENZO DA PONTE, from Beaumarchais' comedy Le Mariage de Figaro

First performance: Burgtheater, Vienna, May 1, 1786

2 acts.

FIGARO, valet to Count Almaviva, is to marry Susanna, maid to the Countess. Cherubino, a page, is in love with the Countess. When Cherubino asks Susanna's help the Count arrives to pay her court, and Cherubino hides behind a chair, only to be quickly succeeded there by the Count himself when the music master, Don Basilio, arrives. The knowledge of intended infidelity of each on the part of another keeps both silent. The Countess, mildly unhappy about the Count's unfaithfulness, is aided by Susanna, Figaro, and Cherubino in an attempt to mend his ways. Cherubino is to dress as Susanna. This is not accomplished before the Count is heard arriving, and Cherubino hides in a closet. The Count hears him, goes for something with which to pry open the door, only to find Susanna in the closet, Cherubino having leaped out the window. Marcellina, a duenna, arrives with a promise made by Figaro to marry her daughter in payment of an old debt. This to the Count eliminates Figaro, and makes the winning of Susanna easy. But Marcellina turns out to be Figaro's mother. In a new intrigue, the Countess and Susanna exchange costumes. In the final resolution the Count and the Countess are reunited, and Figaro and Susanna will be married, at last.

However, it develops that Lionel is actually the heir to the Earl of Derby's title. A ring left by the man who had masqueraded as Lionel's father proves the young man's rightful heritage. Lady Harriet, who had had him thrown in prison when he threw himself at her feet during the royal hunt, now suddenly ceases to scorn him, and marries him.

MEFISTOFELE

(Mephistopheles)

Composer: ARRIGO BOITO

Book by composer, based on Goethe's Faust

First performance: La Scala, Milan, March 5, 1868

Prologue, 4 acts, and epilogue.

MEPHISTOPHELES, having made a defiant boast to God that he can break a soul, pursues the young student Faust and, in exchange for supernatural aid, receives Faust's agreement to go with him. Faust makes love to Marguerite as Mephistopheles pays attention to her mother, Martha. Marguerite is visited in prison by Faust where she is to be executed for the murder of her child. She will not flee with him, and is redeemed by her penitence. Faust is then taken by Mephistopheles to ancient Thessaly where he meets Helen of Troy and hears her story. She permits herself to be attracted to Faust. Finally, in the epilogue, Faust has grown ancient, and seems to have lost interest in the world Mephistopheles has provided for him. Though the Evil One conjures up new enticements, Faust dies with the Bible in his hands.

MEISTERSINGER, DIE

(The Master-Singers)

Composer: RICHARD WAGNER

Book by the composer

First performance: Hof-und-National-Theater, Munich, June 21, 1868

3 acts.

VEIT POGNER, a rich goldsmith, has promised to give the hand of his daughter, Eva, to the winner of the singing contest on St. John's day. Walther von Stolzing, a knight, has seen Eva in church, and fallen in love with her. Walther applies to the Mastersingers to compete in the contest. Beckmesser, a writer, and rival for Eva's hand, tries to discredit Walther by marking down all his mistakes at the tryout. Walther stays at the house of Hans Sachs, and Eva contrives to see him, betraying their love to the kind old cobbler. Walther, while sleeping, dreams of a prize song, and the next day sings it to Sachs who writes it down. Beckmesser enters the shop and steals the song. Just before the competition Walther composes another verse. At the contest Beckmesser sings the song he has stolen very poorly, and is laughed down. When he tells them Hans Sachs wrote it Hans denies it, and asks Walther to sing. Walther sings all the verses of his song, and is acclaimed by the Guild. Walther receives the hand of Eva as his reward.

Composer: VINCENZO BELLINI

Book by GIUSEPPE FELICE ROMANI, based on a story by Alexander Soumet and Louis Belmontet

First performance: La Scala, Milan, December 26, 1831

2 acts.

NORMA, high priestess of the Druids, secretly loves and has had two children by Pollione, a proconsul of the invading Romans. Because of her love for Pollione she persuades the Druids not to fight the Romans. Pollione, meanwhile, has become enamoured of Adalgisa, a young, virgin priestess, and wants her to return to Rome with him. Adalgisa confesses her love for Pollione to Norma who reveals her own passion for him. They join in denouncing him. Because of Norma's suffering, Adalgisa pleads with Pollione to return to her. He refuses and, instead, plans to abduct Adalgisa. Norma, learning this, sounds the call of War on the Romans. Norma gives him the choice of death or exile. He refuses both and Norma, angered, calls the Druids, and tells them a virgin priestess has broken her vows, and must die by fire as punishment. Pollione, thinking she means Adalgisa, begs her not to do it. But instead of condemning Adalgisa Norma tells the Druids it is she, herself, who has transgressed. Pollione, realising the greatness of Norma, ascends the funeral pyre with her.

First performance: Hofburgtheater, Vienna, October 5, 1762

4 acts.

ORPHEUS, who has mourned the loss of Eurydice, wishes to go into the underworld to look for her. He is warned that he must not look back at her. He finds her at last in the Elysian Fields, after having passed safely through Hades. He leads her back, but she pleads him not to look at her. Accidentally he turns to her, and she disappears, returning to the Elysian Fields. Orpheus is in despair until Amor assures him that the gods have relented, and Eurydice will rejoin him again. They meet in the Temple of Love.

OTELLO

Composer: GIUSEPPE VERDI

Book by ARRIGO BOITO, after Shakespeare

First performance: La Scala, Milan, February 5, 1887

4 acts.

OTHELLO arrives at Cyprus, and announces that the Turkish fleet has been annihilated. Iago begins to plot against Othello because the latter has promoted Cassio over Iago's head. Roderigo is in love with Desdemona, recently married to Othello. Cassio wounds Montano in a brawl incited by Iago. Othello relieves Cassio of his commission. Desdemona is prevailed upon by Cassio to intercede for him. She accidentally drops a handkerchief which Iago's wife, Emilia, picks up. Iago builds Othello's jealousy of Cassio by showing Othello the handkerchief. Othello, infuriated, decides to poison Desdemona, but Iago counsels smothering her. He himself will take care of Cassio. Othello promotes Iago. The head of the Venetian embassy appears to read an order removing Othello, and placing Cassio in his place. Desdemona who has interceded before this for Cassio is insulted by Othello. Later Othello enters Desdemona's bedroom and strangles her. Before she is quite dead Emilia arrives saying that Roderigo has killed Cassio. Though Desdemona says with her last breath that she died by her own hand, Othello maintains he killed her because she was mistress to Cassio. Emilia then explains the whole handkerchief business, and as she does Montano comes in to report that Roderigo in dying has told of Iago's plot. Iago escapes and Othello, seeing how he has wronged Desdemona, stabs himself.

2 acts.

IN THE FAMOUS PROLOGUE Tonio tells the villagers that actors are but human. A small company of strolling players have arrived in Calabria, and set up their booth. Nedda, wife of Canio who loves her madly, is carrying on an affair with a villager, Silvio. She is also desired by Tonio, the clown, but him she will not tolerate. In revenge Tonio leads Canio to the place where Silvio and Nedda are trysting. Canio tries to kill Silvio but he escapes. Canio then turns on Nedda but she is protected by members of the troupe. That night the actors present a play from their stage, and its action is essentially the drama of the lives of Canio, Silvio, and Nedda. Desperate, Canio finally drops his part in the play and demands of Nedda her lover's name. When she won't tell him he stabs her. Silvio leaps to the stage to protect her, and is in turn killed. Canio turns to the audience and speaks: "The comedy is ended."

PARSIFAL

Composer: RICHARD WAGNER

Book by the composer

First performance: Festspielhaus, Bayreuth, July 26, 1882

3 acts.

THE ACTION which has taken place before the play concerns the Spanish Pyrenees where the Knights of the Holy Grail live, guarding two sacred relics: the Spear with which the side of Christ was pierced, and the Cup of the Last Supper which also caught the blood from His side. They have refused Klingsor entry to their order. In a garden which he has created to tempt the Knights he contrives to ensnare Amfortas, King of the Grail, through the agencies of the fascinating Kundry. Amfortas is wounded by the Spear and can find no way to heal his wound. He must find an Innocent Fool, a man who can resist all temptation, and win back the Spear with which to cure Amfortas. He, then, will become the new King. The opera action opens at this point. Parsifal, a boy of the forest, is captured by the Knights for killing a swan. Gurnemanz believes this innocent lad may be the Fool for whom they are waiting. He shows no understanding of the service of the Eucharist which further convinces Gurnemanz. In the castle of Klingsor, Kundry is called to practice her wiles on Parsifal. He resists all temptations and finally, when Klingsor in anger hurls the Spear at him, Parsifal makes the sign of the Cross which protects himself, and destroys the garden. He wanders for some time until he gets back to the castle of the Holy Grail where he is received by Kundry who has repented and is now a servant of the Grail. With the Spear he heals Amfortas' wound. As Amfortas kneels before the new King, Kundry dies. Parsifal has become the Saviour of the Order of the Holy Grail.

PELLÉAS AND MÉLISANDE

(Pelléas et Mélisande)

Composer: CLAUDE DEBUSSY

Poem by MAURICE MAETERLINCK

First performance: Opéra comique, Paris, April 30, 1902

5 acts (12 scenes).

MÉLISANDE is met in the forest by Golaud who has gone there to hunt. He wishes her for his bride, and asks his half-brother, Pelléas, to make the intricate arrangements necessary to please his grandfather, King Arkel of Allemonde. Pelléas is immediately attracted to Mélisande. Golaud is jealous, particularly when the wedding ring, which she has lost in a pool, becomes the centre of suspicion. He spies upon Pelléas and Mélisande, even to holding his child up to see what the pair are doing in her room. Once when she leans out the window to speak to Pelléas her hair falls about his head, and he caresses it as Golaud enters. Finally, his suspicions having driven him mad, he kills Pelléas. When Mélisande lies dying in childbirth, she tells him that she loved Pelléas, but innocently. She dies, leaving him still tormented by doubts.

PETER IBBETSON

Composer: DEEMS TAYLOR

Book by composer and CONSTANCE COLLIER, after her play version of Du Maurier's novel

First performance: Metropolitan Opera House, New York, February 7, 1931
3 acts.

YOUNG PETER IBBETSON, nephew and ward of pompous Colonel Ibbetson, meets Mary, Duchess of Towers, at a London gathering. He doesn't realise that she is the sweetheart of his youth. Peter angers his uncle and leaves to visit France where he spent his childhood. He falls asleep at an inn and dreams of a quarrel between his mother and his uncle. He awakens to find Mary at the inn. They recognise each other and find they are still in love. Mary tells him they must not meet again. Peter returns to London and, in a heated dispute with his uncle, kills him. Sentenced to life imprisonment he is consoled by a message from Mary that they will always be together in their dreams. Forty years later Peter, an old man, hears of Mary's death and sees her in a dream beckoning to him. He dies to meet her in Eternity.

PRINCE IGOR

Composer: ALEXANDER BORODIN

Book by the composer and VLADIMIR STASSOV from the Russian tale
The Epic of the Army of Igor

First performance: Imperial Opera House, St. Petersburg, October 23, 1890

Prologue and 4 acts.

PRINCE IGOR of Severski, in the twelfth century, gives his wife, Yaroslovna, into the keeping of his brother-in-law, Prince Galitsky, and leaves to fight the Polovtses, enemy tribes from the East. He is accompanied by his son, Vladimir. While Prince Igor is away Prince Galitsky seizes the government. His moral will to do so is strengthened by a report that Prince Igor and Vladimir have been captured by the Polovtses. In the meantime, Prince Igor and Vladimir are enjoying the hospitality of Khan Konchak who treats his prisoners like gentlemen. Vladimir refuses to escape when the means is provided by Ovlour, a native convert to Christianity, because he has fallen in love with the Khan's daughter, Konchakovna. He regrets that he didn't take the offer later, for the Polovtsians have pillaged his own native city, and returned with their loot. Vladimir, Igor and Ovlour escape, and return in time to oust Prince Galitsky. Vladimir, recaptured, is saved from execution by Konchakovna.

PROPHETE, LE

Composer: GIACOMO MEYERBEER

Book by EUGÈNE SCRIBE

First performance: Opéra, Paris, April 26, 1849

5 acts.

JOHN, an Anabaptist of Germany, wishes to marry Bertha, vassal of Count Oberthal who will not give his consent because she is so beautiful. Bertha, seeking concealment from the Count, is finally given as a hostage to spare the life of Fidès, John's mother, whom the Count holds captive, and will kill if Bertha is not relinquished. John then gives in to the Anabaptists who have wanted him for their leader, and leads a revolt, disguised as the Prophet. Fidès, now a beggar, tells Bertha that John is dead. Bertha assumes that the Prophet has killed him. Fidès is imprisoned as an imposter when she recognises her son as the Prophet. Afraid of advancing enemy forces, the Anabaptists decide to give up John, as Bertha enters to avenge the supposed death of John by killing the Prophet. When she sees that the Prophet is John she kills herself instead. John and his mother are burned in the flames of the palace.

RIENZI, THE LAST OF THE TRIBUNES

(Rienzi, Der Letzte der Tribunen)

Composer: RICHARD WAGNER

Book by the composer from Bulwer-Lytton's novel of the same name

First performance: Hoftheater, Dresden, October 20, 1842

5 acts.

BASED on the character of Rienzi, the Roman tribune of the fourteenth century, this is the story of the abduction of Irene, sister of Cola di Rienzi. Paolo Orsini, a noble, has captured her. His right to her is contested by Steffano Colonna. Adriano, Colonna's son, protects Irene from the warring factions. When Rienzi decides to overthrow the nobles and save the people, Adriano gives him his support. When this is an accomplished fact the nobles come to the Capitol to submit to his rule. Adriano is convinced that foul work is afoot, and warns Rienzi who prepares himself so that, when Orsini leaps upon him with a dagger, hidden armour protects him. Adriano's pleas for the release of his father, after all the nobles have been condemned to death, leads Rienzi to free them all. The nobles immediately betray their pardon, and battle the people. They are defeated, but Adriano's father, Colonna, is killed. Adriano serves warrant on Rienzi that the death must be avenged. Rienzi is Coronated and, almost immediately, it is rumoured that he is a partisan of the Emperor's. Adriano tries to assassinate him and, unsuccessful, goes to Irene and tells her of the danger Rienzi is in. He asks her to flee with him but she won't. She goes to the Capitol, and finds Rienzi in prayer. He pleads with her to leave with Adriano. She will not go, but stays with her brother in the Capitol, perishing with him. Adriano, who wants to be with her, dies in the flames trying to get to her.

RIGOLETTO

Composer: GIUSEPPE VERDI

Book by FRANCESCO MARIO PIAVE, from Victor Hugo's Le Roi s'amuse

First performance: Teatro la Fenice, Venice, March 11, 1851

4 acts.

RIGOLETTO, the hump-backed court jester of the Prince of Mantua, laughs at the noblemen of the court for allowing the Prince to be attentive to their wives.

They plot vengeance on him, and Count Monterone curses him. The Prince disguised as a student has been courting Gilda, Rigoletto's daughter, at church. The noblemen abduct her thinking she is Rigoletto's mistress. Rigoletto finds Gilda at the palace with the Prince. He admits she is his daughter, and takes her away. Rigoletto goes to an inn where the Prince is staying, and plans his death with the aid of Sparafucile, a bandit. Maddalena, Sparafucile's sister, begs him not to kill the Prince. Sparafucile promises not to if another comes to the inn before midnight. Gilda overhears this and, dressed as a man, enters the inn. Rigoletto comes at midnight, and is given a body tied in a bag. He is about to throw the bag in the river when he hears the Prince singing in the inn. In a frenzy he unties the bag, and finds Gilda who with her dying breath says she is happy to die for her lover. Rigoletto realises that the curse of Count Monterone has been fulfilled.

Ring of the Nibelung
RHEINGOLD, DAS
(The Rhinegold)

Composer: RICHARD WAGNER

Book by the composer

First performance: Hof-und-National-Theater, Munich, September 22, 1869
4 scenes.

THE RHINE MAIDENS, Woglinde, Wellgunde, and Flosshilde guard the Rhinegold in the depths of the Rhine. After telling Alberich, a Nibelung, that anyone able to forge a ring from the gold will possess the world and all its power, he steals the gold from them. Wotan, King of the Gods, and Fricka, his wife, are sleeping before the Valhalla, new home of the Gods, built by the Giants Fafner and Fasolt in return for Freia, the Goddess of Youth and Love. Loge, the God of Fire, tells Wotan of the ring Alberich has made from the Rhinegold. The Giants and Wotan both want the ring, and the Giants take Freia away saying that they will release her if Wotan gets them the gold and the ring before evening. The Gods lose their youth when Freia departs. Wotan and Loge descend beneath the earth, and by trickery obtain the Nibelung treasure, the ring and the Tarnhelm (a magic helmet which enables the wearer to make himself invisible or change his form). Wotan refuses the Giants the ring but gives it up when Erda, the Goddess of Earthly Wisdom, warns him against it, and predicts the fall of the Gods. The curse of the ring is wrought on Fasolt, the first wearer, who is killed by Fafner in a quarrel over it. Wotan leads the Gods to Valhalla over a rainbow bridge which appeared when Donner struck away the clouds.

WALKÜRE, DIE (The Valkyr)

Composer: RICHARD WAGNER

Book by the composer

First performance: Hof-und-National-Theater, Munich, June 26, 1870

3 acts.

WOTAN, King of the Gods, begets Siegmund and Sieglinde in a union with a mortal woman. Separated at birth Sieglinde is unhappily married to Hunding, a savage fighter. She gives a stranger shelter in her house. Suspecting him to be Siegmund, her lost brother, she secretly tells him of a sword, Nothung, Wotan their father placed in a tree for Siegmund to use in his hour of need. The stranger pulls the sword from the tree, proving himself her brother. They embrace in love and flee to the forest, Hunding pursuing. Wotan tells Brünnhilde, one of the nine Walküre Maidens he created by a union with Erda the Earth Goddess, to protect Siegmund against Hunding. Fricka, his wife and Goddess of Marriage, makes Wotan reverse his order and protect Hunding, punishing Siegmund for uniting with Sieglinde in love. Brünnhilde disobeys and protects Siegmund. Fricka forces Wotan to interfere on Hunding's behalf, and he breaks Siegmund's sword, Nothung, with his spear. Hunding slays Siegmund, and for this Wotan kills him in return. Brünnhilde sends Sieglinde to the forest to bear the child of her lover. Wotan, angry at Brünnhilde's disobedience, punishes her by putting her to sleep on a rock surrounded by fire which only a fearless hero can penetrate, and who only with a kiss can awaken her.

SIEGFRIED

Composer: RICHARD WAGNER

Book by the composer

First performance: Festspielhaus, Bayreuth, August 16, 1876

3 acts.

SIEGFRIED, son of Siegmund and Sieglinde, has grown to manhood in the forest. His mother, who died at his birth, had given him the broken sword, Nothung. Mime, the brother of Alberich, who cares for him, tries to forge the sword together but fails. Siegfried succeeds and, led by Mime, goes to the cave where Fafner, in the form of a dragon, guards the Rhinegold. Siegfried kills Fafner with his sword, and accidentally tastes the dragon's blood which enables him to understand the birds. They tell him of the ring, the Rhinegold, and the Tarnhelm in the cave. He obtains these, and kills Mime who tries to make him drink a poison potion. The birds then tell him of Brünnhilde, sleeping on a rock surrounded by fire. Siegfried sets out for her, and is stopped by Wotan, disguised as a wanderer. Siegfried breaks Wotan's spear with his sword, Nothung, thereby demonstrating that man had broken the might of the Gods. He advances to the rock, surmounts the fiery wall, and wakes Brünnhilde with a kiss.

GÖTTERDÄMMERUNG

(Dusk of the Gods)

Composer: RICHARD WAGNER

Book by the composer

First performance: Festspielhaus, Bayreuth, August 17, 1876

Prologue and 3 acts.

THE THREE NORNS (Fates of Northern mythology) break the golden rope of destiny as they pass it to one another. The Gods, seeing in this their doom, go down into the earth to their mother Erda. Brünnhilde sends Siegfried forth on a journey to the Rhine. Before he leaves he places the ring on her finger to give her strength. By the Rhine is the family of the Gibichungs, Gunther, head of the tribe, Gutrune, his sister, and Hagen, their half-brother. Hagen plans to unite Gunther and Brünnhilde, and Gutrune and Siegfried in marriage. Siegfried enters and, after drinking a potion which blots out his memory of Brünnhilde, he marries Gutrune, and sets out to bring Brünnhilde for Gunther. Brünnhilde refuses to give up Siegfried's ring to Wotan to save the Gods from destruction. Siegfried, disguised as Gunther, comes and takes the ring from Brünnhilde, and tells her she must be his wife. Siegfried returns to Gutrune, and they begin to celebrate a wedding feast. Gunther enters with Brünnhilde who is wild with anger when she sees Siegfried married to Gutrune. She and Hagen plan Siegfried's death and enlist Gunther's aid. She tells Hagen of the vulnerable spot in Siegfried's back. On a hunt Siegfried passes the Rhine, and the Maidens ask for his ring. When he refuses they predict his death. When the potion wears off and Siegfried regains his memory, he relates the story of his life and his love for Brünnhilde. Hagen stabs him in the back, and they bring him to Gutrune. Hagen and Gunther fight over the ring, and Gunther is killed. When Hagen tries to wrench it from Siegfried's finger the dead man raises his hand in warning. Brünnhilde enters, and takes the ring saying it will be restored to the Rhine Maidens after it has been purified by the fire that will burn Siegfried and herself. She lights the funeral pyre of Siegfried and mounted on her horse, Grane, rides into the flames. The Rhine overflows and extinguishes the fire. The Rhine Maidens catch the ring when Brünnhilde flings it to them. Hagen drowns in the waters, and in the distance the Valhalla burns destroying the Gods.

ROMEO AND JULIET

(Roméo et Juliette)

Composer: CHARLES GOUNOD

Book by JULES BARBIER and MICHEL CARRÉ, from Shakespeare's play

First performance: Théâtre Lyrique, Paris, April 27, 1867

5 acts.

JULIET, of the house of Capulet, meets Romeo at a masked ball given in her home. In spite of the age-old feud between the houses of Capulet and Montagu (of which Romeo is a member), they are married in Friar Lawrence's cell. Romeo is banished by the Duke for having killed Tybalt who had previously killed Mercutio. Juliet, after being secretly visited by Romeo in the night, is approached by Capulet who says she must marry Count Paris. Friar Lawrence gives Juliet a potion to drink which will make her appear dead, though she is only asleep. When Romeo hears of her supposed death he buys poison for himself, and comes to the tomb to die beside her. He meets Count Paris, and kills him. Romeo then drinks the poison, and dies himself. When Friar Lawrence comes to awaken Juliet he finds swords and blood. He therefore tries to induce Juliet to flee but she will not. She stabs herself, and dies beside her husband.

RONDINE, LA

(The Swallow)

Composer: GIACOMO PUCCINI

Book by GIUSEPPE ADAMI

First performance: Monte Carlo, March 27, 1917

3 acts.

IN THE SALON of Magda, mistress of Rambaldo, a young poet, Prunière voices the opinion that love and marriage are coming back into favour. He is laughed at but Magda considers seriously what he has said. Later in the evening, Ruggero, a young, innocent country lad, is introduced. When he expresses an interest in seeing night life Rambaldo offers to show him. Magda and her maid follow the men to the Bal Bullier. There she falls in love with him, and leaves Rambaldo. In their villa retreat in Antibes Magda is happy with him but Ruggero wants to marry her. He writes for his mother's consent and she gives it, provided the girl's past is immaculate. Magda philosophically leaves Ruggero to a safe girl of his mother's choice, and returns to Paris and Rambaldo.

ROSENKAVALIER, DER (The Knight of the Rose)

Composer: RICHARD STRAUSS

Book by HUGO VON HOFMANNSTHAL

First performance: Hofoper, Dresden, January 26, 1911

3 acts.

OCTAVIAN, lover of the Princess von Werdenberg, is embracing her in her boudoir when she thinks she hears her husband returning. Octavian quickly disguises himself as a lady's maid only to have the Baron Ochs, a cousin of the Princess, come in to ask her advice about getting a token of love to Sophie, the girl of his choice, daughter of wealthy Faninal. In the course of this arrangement, however, he contrives to make a date with the maid (Octavian). When all are gone except Octavian the Princess becomes blue about the possible fading of her beauty, and when he fails to kiss her good-bye she calls him back to be the messenger with the rose for the Baron. Octavian delivers the rose, and both he and Sophie instantly fall in love. Her father will have no nonsense about her marrying Octavian, particularly after the boy picks a quarrel with the dignified Baron. Sophie must marry the Baron or become a nun. Octavian again assumes his maid's disguise, and keeps his date with the Baron at a country tavern. Here the Baron is subjected to all sorts of indignities and foolishness. When a woman comes in to claim him as her husband, Sophie has her father's permission not to marry the Baron. The Princess arrives to end the trouble, and Sophie leaves with Octavian, not before Octavian has given the Princess one last affectionate look as a token of their past love.

ROSSIGNOL, LE (The Nightingale)

Composer: IGOR STRAVINSKY

Book by the composer and S. MITROUSOV, from a story by Hans Christian Andersen

First performance: Opéra, Paris, May 26, 1914

3 acts.

THE EMPEROR OF CHINA is so disheartened that his life is despaired of. Finally a nightingale is brought to him. It sings so sweetly that the Emperor is completely restored, and grants the bird any wish. The nightingale considers itself sufficiently repaid by the Emperor's humility, and asks no more. A mechanical nightingale is then delivered to the Emperor as a gift from the Emperor of Japan. The live nightingale is so outraged at the singing of this imitation that it flies away in disgust. The Emperor immediately grows ill, and curses the live nightingale for leaving him. Finally, the live nightingale takes pity, and returns to bring the Emperor back to health.

SALOME

Composer: RICHARD STRAUSS

Poem by OSCAR WILDE (adapted in German by Hedwig Lachmann)

First performance: Hofoper, Dresden, December 9, 1905

1 act.

THE SCENE is outside the banquet hall of the palace of the Tetrarch, Herod Antipas. The captain of the guard, Narraboth, watches Salome with fascination as she sits in the great hall. In a cistern can be heard the voice of Jokanaan (John the Baptist) prophesying the coming of the Lord. Salome comes out of the banquet hall and, on hearing Jokanaan's voice, asks that he be brought up so that she can speak to him. When he emerges, tawny and strong, he denounces Herodias, wife of Herod and mother of Salome. Salome, fascinated by this strange man, wants to kiss him. Narraboth, horrified, stabs himself. Jokanaan, uttering a curse, returns to the cistern. Herod and Herodias come into the court from the banquet hall and are annoyed by the presence of the blood of Narraboth. Herod, restless, finally asks Salome to dance for him. She won't until Herod promises to give her what she asks. He promises, and she dances the dance of the seven veils at the conclusion of which she asks for Jokanaan's head on a silver plate. Herod pleads for anything else, but finally consents as Herodias approves the girl's request. When the head is brought from the cistern, Salome takes the plate, and kisses the mouth of Jokanaan. Herod, revolted, orders his soldiers to kill her.

SCHWANDA DER DUDELSACKPFEIFER (Schwanda the Bagpiper)

Composer: JAROMIR WEINBERGER

Book by MILOS KARES

First performance: National Theatre, Prague, April 27, 1927

2 acts.

IN CZECHOSLOVAKIA, Schwanda is a famous bagpiper to whose home comes the famous bandit, Babinsky. He falls in love with Dorota, Schwanda's wife. He tries to interest Schwanda in the court of Queen Ice-Heart to which Schwanda decides to go with Babinsky. They go, leaving Dorota in the house. At the court the Queen is so pleased with Schwanda's playing that she wants to marry him, but when Dorota bursts in to announce that he is hers, Queen Ice-Heart orders him executed. Schwanda's bagpipes cannot be found when he asks to play them just before his execution, an event which never takes place since Babinsky has substituted a broom for the headman's axe. The pipes are finally found and Schwanda plays everyone into a good humour. Babinsky makes Schwanda utter a curse which sends him to Hell. Babinsky now assumes his way clear to marry Dorota but she wants only Schwanda and, finally, Babinsky has to go to Hell and play cards with the Devil to win Schwanda back, which he does. Returned to earth Schwanda discovers he has been gone twenty minutes instead of twenty years as it had seemed.

Book by FRANCESCO MARIA PIAVE (revised by Arrigo Boito) from a play by Antonio Garcia Gutierrez

First performance: Teatro la Fenice, Venice, March 12, 1857

Prologue and 3 acts.

BY POPULAR ACCLAIM of workmen Simon Boccanegra is elevated to the estate of a Doge from his position as corsair. Among those who assist in this fourteenth-century conspiracy are Paolo and Pietro. Simon happens upon the house of Grimaldi and discovers that Amelia Grimaldi is in reality his own lost daughter. She is to marry Gabriele Adorno, of Genoa. Paolo, by reason of his assistance to Simon, asks her hand in marriage and is refused. Paolo and Pietro decide to avenge themselves by unseating Simon. They begin by having Amelia kidnapped. Simon is accused of this act by Amelia's tutor, Andrea, and Gabriele. Gabriele tries to stab Simon on his coronation day but Amelia stays him. Andrea and Gabriele are imprisoned. Pietro and Paolo are not successful in persuading them to kill Simon. [One of the several inconsistencies of the libretto.] Gabriele overhears a conversation between Simon and Amelia whereupon he again tries to stab her father. Again she averts the tragedy. When Gabriele finds who Simon is he asks his pardon, and swears to be his defender. But his defense cannot save Simon from the poison that Paolo has given the Doge. Simon dies as he blesses Amelia and Gabriele before their wedding feast.

Mizgyr jilts his fiancée, Koupava, in favour of Snegourotchka whereupon the loser, Koupava, appeals to the Czar. He decrees that since the Snow Maiden seems pure, who shall ever be able to win her heart by morning shall have her. Snegourotchka immediately appeals to her mother for the right to love as humans do. Granted, she discovers that she loves Mizgyr. But even as she discovers the fact the sun comes out to melt her. Mizgyr, overwhelmed with grief, commits suicide.

SONNAMBULA, LA

(The Sleep-walker)

Composer: VINCENZO BELLINI

Book by GIUSEPPE FELICE ROMANI

First performance: Teatro Carcano, Milan, March 6, 1831

2 acts.

AMINA, who will shortly marry Elvino, a wealthy countryman, is addicted to sleepwalking and one night in her sleep walks into the chambers of Rodolfo, who is staying at the inn, and enjoying at the moment Amina arrives the attentions of Lisa, the inn's mistress. Rodolfo, observing Amina's condition, courteously leaves the room to her as she lies down in his bed. Lisa, who has been the loser in the competition for Elvino, spreads the news that Amina has been indiscreet with Rodolfo. A highly curious group, including an incredulous Elvino, come to the inn to see her sleeping in Rodolfo's bed. All is resolved in the end when a handkerchief of Lisa's is found in Rodolfo's room, and when the somnambulism is dramatically proved real as Amino walks a dangerous plank across the mill wheel, and is awakened by Elvino himself as he takes her in his arms.

SPANISH HOUR, THE

See L'Heure Espagnole

TALES OF HOFFMANN, THE

(Les Contes D'Hoffmann)

Composer: JACQUES OFFENBACH

Book by JULES BARBIER and MICHEL CARRÉ from three tales by E. T. A. Hoffmann

First performance: Opéra Comique, Paris, February 10, 1881

Prologue, 3 acts, and an epilogue.

HOFFMANN is telling his drinking companions, particularly his friend Nicklausse, in Luther's Inn about his three disillusioning love affairs. In the first instance he fell in love with Olympia, a beautiful doll, created by Dr. Spalanzani. By equipping Hoffmann with special glasses the doctor has duped him into believing she is real. She sings and dances with Hoffmann though she does not answer his pleas to marry him. When Olympia's inner mechanism begins to play out she dances out of the ballroom leaving Hoffmann the butt of laughter. Outside a crash is heard as Dr. Coppelius smashes Olympia because Spalanzani had given him a worthless check for his share in the doll. Next Hoffmann is disillusioned in Venice where he falls in love with Giulietta, beauty of renown. Compelled to fight a duel with Giulietta's lover, Schlemihl, Hoffmann kills the man only to have Giulietta run off with another lover. Hoffmann is barely saved from arrest by the faithful Nicklausse. In the final instance Hoffmann has fallen in love with Antonia, the daughter of Crespel, a musician whose wife had died mysteriously years before. Antonia has a beautiful voice, but because of bad health has been instructed not to sing. Dr. Miracle, bent on killing Antonia as he did her mother, contrives finally to make Antonia sing herself to death. Dr. Miracle disappears, and Hoffmann is accused of killing the girl. Returning to Luther's Inn, Nicklausse consols Hoffmann as two characters, Stella and Lindorf, are introduced to little more than extend the opera.

TANNHÄUSER

Composer: RICHARD WAGNER

Book by the composer

First performance: Hoftheater, Dresden, October 19, 1845

3 acts.

TANNHÄUSER, a minstrel and singer, has deserted Wartburg, his native village, for Venusberg, on a near-by hill where the Goddess Venus holds him with her charms. When his desires are satisfied he longs to return to his home. He breaks Venus' hold on him when he mentions the Virgin Mary. He is found on the road by the singers of Wartburg, and his friend Wolfram tells him that Elizabeth, pious niece of Herrmann the Landgrave, loves him. He returns with them to Wartburg to sing in the prize contest. Elizabeth is to grant any wish of the winner. Wolfram sings of ideal love which incenses Tannhäuser who has known the sensual love of Venus. He answers with a hymn to Venus. The others uphold Wolfram, and draw swords on Tannhäuser, but Elizabeth protects him. Her father tells him to join the Pilgrimage to Rome to obtain forgiveness from the Pope. When the Pilgrims return Elizabeth asks for Tannhäuser, but he isn't among them. Wolfram realises she is about to die. Tannhäuser comes back without the forgiveness of the Pope and calls for Venus. She appears but Wolfram shows him the funeral train of Elizabeth, and Tannhäuser, overcome, throws himself upon her bier. Messengers arrive from Rome to tell of the Pope's forgiveness, and Tannhäuser dies beside Elizabeth, saved from damnation.

THAÏS

Book by LOUIS GALLET, from the novel by Anatole France

First performance: Opéra, Paris, March 16, 1894

3 acts.

ATHANAËL, a young monk in a desert fasting place, has a vision of Thaïs, whom he is convinced he must save. She is a popular courtesan of Alexandria to which city he goes to save her soul. She is attracted to this handsome young man, and is gradually won over to confession. Athanaël takes her to Albine, another desert holy soul, mother of the White Sisterhood. However, he has begun to fall in love with Thaïs who has now turned aside from fleshly love. Athanaël, in his desert fasting place, has a vision of her dying, and hurries to the convent when in anguish he hears her last words as she cries that she has seen the Holy One.

TOSCA

Composer: GIACOMO PUCCINI

Book by GIUSEPPE GIACOSA and LUIGI ILlica, from Victorien Sardou's play La Tosca

First performance: Teatro Costanzi, Rome, January 4, 1900

3 acts.

TOSCA, a beautiful singer, is the jealous lover of Mario Cavaradossi, a religious artist. Angelotti, an escaped prisoner, hides in the church in which Mario is painting. Mario helps him escape. Scarpia, chief of Roman police, enters the church and, not finding Angelotti, arrests Mario as an accomplice, and orders him shot. Desiring Tosca for himself, Scarpia promises her lover's liberty in return for her favours. Tosca agrees and Scarpia orders a fake execution of Mario. When Scarpia returns to claim her she stabs him. At dawn the pretended execution of Mario takes place. Tosca hurries to the prone figure of her lover, after the firing, to find he is dead. Hearing noise of approaching soldiers, she realises her murder of Scarpia has been discovered. Climbing the prison wall she leaps to her death.

TRAVIATA, LA (The Lost One)

Composer: GIUSEPPE VERDI

Book by FRANCESCO MARIA PIAVE, from Alexandre Dumas' La Dame aux Camélias

First performance: Teatro la Fenice, Venice, March 6, 1853

3 acts.

ALFREDO GERMONT has fallen in love with Violetta Valéry (Camille), a beautiful courtesan who has only a short time to live and wishes to make the most of it. She refuses Alfredo's offer of marriage because she wants to spend the short months remaining to her in gaiety. Finally she goes to live with Alfredo but his father pleads with her to give him up since their liaison is creating a scandal that makes it hard for Alfredo's sister to marry. Violetta agrees. In a gambling house Alfredo sees her, and suspects in his unhappiness that she has left him for an old lover, Baron Douphol. Seizing this as the easiest way out, Violetta lies in admitting it. Alfredo wins at the tables and throws his winnings at her in disgust. His father pleads with him not to behave thus with any woman. In the end as Violetta dies the father has become reconciled, and Alfredo knows that Violetta loved him.

TRISTAN AND ISOLDE

Composer: RICHARD WAGNER

Book by the composer

First performance: Hof-und-National-Theater, Munich, June 10, 1865

3 acts.

ON A SHIP Isolde is being brought from Ireland to Cornwall by Tristan to be the bride of King Mark. Isolde plans to poison Tristan because he once killed her lover in battle. Instead of a poison her maid, Brangäne, prepares a love potion. Both Tristan and Isolde drink of it, and fall into each other's arms. At the King's castle Mark has gone hunting. Tristan and Isolde meet secretly, but are betrayed to King Mark by a traitor, Melot. Tristan is mortally wounded in fighting Melot. He is taken to his castle in Brittany by Kurwenal. When Tristan is dying Kurwenal sends for Isolde hoping she will help him. When she arrives Tristan rips off his bandages, and tries to go to her. He calls her by name, and falls back dead in her arms. Isolde, overcome with grief, dies beside him. King Mark, who has followed the pair to give them his blessing, prays beside their bodies.

TROVATORE, IL (The Troubadour)

Composer: GIUSEPPE VERDI

Book by SALVATORE CAMMARANO, from a play by Antonio Garcia Gutierrez

First performance: Teatro Apollo, Rome, January 19, 1853

4 acts.

IN THE FIFTEENTH CENTURY in Aragon the Count di Luna has burned a woman at the stake for bewitching one of his sons. Azucena, the gypsy's daughter, wishes to avenge her mother by killing the Count's son, but kills her own in error. She kidnaps the Count's boy, and takes him to raise as her own. The young Count di Luna, years after these events, is in love with Leonora and jealous of Manrico, a troubadour whom Leonora loves. Leonora is informed falsely that Manrico is dead and decides to become a nun. Manrico snatches her from the altar, a kidnapping that Count di Luna intended to do but Manrico's men beat off those of the Count. Near Castellor, where Manrico has taken Leonora, the Count's guard capture Azucena, and she is condemned to be burned at the stake. Manrico rushes to his mother's rescue. Manrico is captured, and is to be executed with his mother. Leonora offers herself to the Count if he will let Manrico free. She takes a slow poison when this offer is accepted. Azucena is enraged because her mother's death will go unavenged. Leonora dies saying farewell to Manrico, and the Count, breaking his promise, sends Manrico to be executed. Azucena then has her revenge by pointing out to the Count that he has just killed his brother.

TURANDOT

Composer: GIACOMO PUCCINI

Book by GIUSEPPE ADAMI and RENATO SIMONI

First performance: La Scala, Milan, April 25, 1926

3 acts.

TURANDOT, in Peking, is a coldly beautiful Princess who offers to marry anyone who can answer three questions she asks. If unsuccessful the young man must lose his head. A young Persian is about to be executed when the unidentified Prince, Calaf, comes into the square and recognises his old father, a Tartar King. Timur, the father, has fallen in the dust and Liù, his servant girl, has stayed with him for years because she once fell in love with Calaf. The beautiful Princess is beseeched to free the young Persian but she is adamant. Then Calaf shouts that he will try to answer the questions, and, to the Princess' dismay, does so successfully. She then wishes to go back on her bargain but her father insists she marry Calaf. Calaf relents, and will require nothing of her if she can learn his identity by dawn. Overjoyed, the Princess gives an order that everyone must spend the night learning his name, or the whole populace will be executed. Liù stabs herself rather than tell. Finally Calaf himself reveals the truth. Turandot suddenly realises that she has finally truly fallen in love, and goes to his arms.

WERTHER

Composer: JULES MASSENET

Book by ÉDOUARD BLAU, PAUL MILLIET, and GEORGES HARTMAN, from Goethe's novel The Sorrows of Werther

First performance: Hofoper, Vienna, February 16, 1892

4 acts.

THE DAUGHTER of the bailiff has taken care of her brothers and sisters since her mother's death. She is waiting to go to the ball with Albert, a young man to whom she has become engaged at her mother's wish. Charlotte loves Werther rather than Albert, but marries as her mother wished her to. Months later Werther, having been sent away, returns to retell his love for Charlotte. Her affection has not died either, but she insists he must leave because nothing can ever change her present married status. Werther then says he is going on a long journey and asks to borrow Albert's pistols. Albert complies without questioning, but Charlotte, when she hears of it, is frightened, and hurries to find him only to arrive too late. He dies in her arms.

WILLIAM TELL

(Guillaume Tell)

Composer: GIOACCHINO ROSSINI

Book by ÉTIENNE DE JOUY and HIPPOLYTE BIS, from Schiller's play

First performance: Opéra, Paris, August 3, 1829

4 acts.

NEAR LAKE LUCERNE in the fourteenth century the Swiss hate their Governor, Gessler, for his killing of Melchtal because Leuthold had killed one of Gessler's men for insulting Leuthold's daughter. Gessler's son, Arnold, joins William Tell and Leuthold, whom Tell has helped to escape. Arnold loves Mathilde, an Austrian Princess, who may someday rule him and his people. Tell organises the Swiss against Gessler a man who has forced indignities on the people which Tell won't stand. Tell's punishment is to shoot an apple off his son's head which he does. When a second arrow falls out of his shirt Tell boldly tells Gessler it was for the Governor's heart if he (Tell) had hit the child. Tell and son are imprisoned but Tell escapes over a wild sea, and kills Gessler. Arnold and Mathilde are united.

WOZZECK

Composer: ALBAN BERG

Book by the composer from Georg Büchner's play

First performance: Staatsoper, Berlin, December 14, 1925

3 acts (15 scenes).

WOZZECK, a downtrodden soldier of Germany, imposed upon by all and respected by few, is particularly the object of contempt of his Captain. Wozzeck's mistress, Marie, who has given him a son, is something of a toast of the regiment, and has offered her charms to many beside Wozzeck. The beginning of the action, after these points are well established, is an affair between the handsome Drum Major and Marie. Wozzeck is whipped by the Drum Major in a fight, and begins to see more clearly his lowly place among his fellows, as well as in Marie's esteem. Wozzeck, having slowly fanned his flame of vengeance, stabs Marie to death near a pond into which his weapon falls. In trying to retrieve it he is drowned. An ironic twist concludes the opera—the son of Wozzeck rides his hobbyhorse onto the scene.

Though variously spelled they are reducible to four vowel sounds pronounced, as we say, "through the nose," though actually with closed nasal passages. If one will pronounce or rather snort the word "wrong" without producing the final g at all, one will have exactly the French on (1); the word "thank" similarly sounded without the k will give the French an (2); the word "trunk" without the k gives the French un (3); the word "donkey" (not pronounced like monkey) contains the French en (4). These four are indicated in this book by (1) dh; (2) dh; (3) dh; (4) dh. The French nasals may be grouped as follows : Those pronounced like (1) are om, on, and oon after g; like (2) im, in, aim, ain, ein and also en as an ending; like (3) ün, un and een; like (4) am, an, can, cen, con and en at the beginning of words. These letters m and n, however, lose their nasal quality when doubled or when preceding a vowel; onne is pronounced as one in done, ome or omme as in come, eme as in em in them, etc. |
| as in stone.                  |                                                                   | No. 2.—French u (which is the same as the German u when long) is easily pronounced if one will pucker his lips to say oo, as in moon; and keeping them strongly puckered, say e as in bean. Those who have eaten green persimmons, or had their lips distended with peach fuzz, have the correct position for this e sound. There is really no oo sound in the French u at all, and if one cannot say the u correctly he will come much nearer the truth if he uses a plain English long e, as in bean, rather than the sound of u, as the spelling might suggest. The German u when short is formed by keeping the lips puckered and saying i as in fit, instead of e in serene. The other German modified (or unlauded) vowels are (2) ä, pronounced, when long, almost like a in sale, but verging on a in care (it is marked here simply as ä); when short much like e in pet; (3) ö when long can be secured by puckering the lips for a round, full o, as in note and then saying e as in sale (it is marked in this book simply as ö to avoid the danger of saying a plain o); when it is short the lips should be puckered for the round o, and a short e as in pet then pronounced. The caution must be emphasised that in the experiments the lips must be firmly kept in the first, or puckered position, in spite of the temptation to alter it.                                        |

Our sound th as in think will be found if prolonged to be produced by the simple device of holding the tip of the tongue lightly between the teeth and then breathing. The German ch results from pressing the two sides of the tongue firmly against the bicuspid teeth (the two upper teeth on each side back of the canine or eye teeth) and leaving the tip of the tongue free, then breathing the necessary vowel as in ach, ich, etc. German g is much the same but even softer. Both are indicated in this book by kh.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   |

Bohemian d, n and i are given this d'y and i'y sound when followed by d or i or by an apostrophe as d', n' or i'. Many Bohemian combinations of consonants seem unspeakable because they are spelt with no vowels between.
